Fourth one in doubt.

St. Paul, Minn., March 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—According to returns today, Senator A. B. Cummins of Iowa swept the Minnesota Republican primaries yesterday and will have a solid delegation of twenty-four Cummins men from this state, going to Chicago. Heading the delegation will be two former governors, S. R. Van Sant and A. O. Eberhart, and another forensic veteran, J. F. Jacobson of Madison. The fourth delegate-at-large is in doubt, with Fred C. Stevens, A. A. D. Rahn and James Manahan all possibilities.

Cummins delegates won in all the districts, it is believed. Henry D. Estabrook made a fair showing in Minneapolis, but elsewhere was distanced 4 or 5 to 1. In the Fifth district returns indicate the election of Alderman Josiah H. Chase and Ernest Lundeen as delegates.

Lynch Was Victorious.

With Woodrow Wilson alone on the Democratic ballot the interest centered on the choice of delegates friendly or opposed to Fred B. Lynch, national committeeman. Returns indicate that the conference slate, friendly to Lynch, has won out nearly all along the line. In St. Paul, the anti-Lynch men, John Wagener and Thomas R. Kane, have evidently won for district delegates, but in the Fifth district, Minneapolis, E. J. Conroy and Fred E. Wheaton are leading and they are Lynch men. The Lynch delegates-at-large are leading on general returns, but Z. H. Austin of

DEMOCRATIC VOTERS OUTNUMBER THOSE OF G. O. P. IN PRIMARIES

President Wilson Gets More Votes Than All Republican Candidates.

Conference Chosen Democrats Elected to National Convention.

Weiss Leads Delegates-at-Large in Totals for City.

Minnesota's first presidential primary failed to bring out much of a vote, for the lethargy that prevailed all through the talk of candidates continued up to the date of choosing the delegates to the national conventions. The vote in Duluth was in keeping with that in other parts of the state, the total number cast being only 3,965, the lightest vote cast on any proposition in Duluth for many years.

The feature of the primary was the preponderance of the Democracy and the outstanding thing in that was the very evident popularity of President Wilson among those who went to the polls and expressed their choice. In the presidential vote President Wilson received 753 more votes than the three Republican candidates—Cummins, Estabrook and Webster—combined. He received 1,790 votes and the Republican candidates received the following: Cummins, 552; Estabrook, 441, and Webster, 44.

There is a great difference shown between the total vote cast and that cast for the presidential preference. It is evident that the Democrats observed the presidential preference more strictly than did the Republicans and the reason probably was that the Republicans did not take much interest in the matter of candidates, feeling that none of those whose names were on the ballot stood much show, anyway, the only important thing about the whole matter being the delegates, which comes down to a question of their personality in the final analysis.

TURNS OVER CONSULATE

Torreon, Mex., March 15.—The American consul, A. L. Williams, has on the advice of his government to use his own judgment in the matter, turned over the American consulate at Torreon to the British vice consul. Meantime, a party of more than forty Americans are gathering here, waiting to leave on the train which has been held up for a day by a wreck on the Monterey road.

Carranza officials maintain that Americans are safe.

"We are gentlemen and Americans have no need to fear as we will escort them over the border and give them every protection, no matter what happens," said Gen. Francisco Gonzales today.

Officials Puzzled.

Washington, March 15.—State department officials are puzzled by the departure of Consul Williams from Torreon. They have given him no instructions to leave and have no reports of any disorders in that region; still they realize that the consul must have some good reason for leaving. They are reluctant to believe that the consulate is in danger.

Thief Walks Into West Duluth Residence During Lunch Hour.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Henriksen Shot During Struggle With Intruder.

Thief Followed Henriksen Home for Purpose of Robbing Him.

Mrs. Alexander Henriksen, 625 North Fifty-sixth avenue west, is at the Duluth hospital with a dangerous wound at the base of the skull, and Mr. Henriksen, better known in West Duluth as "Sandy Henriksen" has a bad scalp wound and a bullet wound in the wrist, as a result of one of the boldest attempted robberies in the history of the city, which occurred at their residence at 12:05 p. m. today.

The burglar entered the house through the back door just as Mr. and Mrs. Henriksen were about to sit down to the noon meal. He had evidently followed Mr. Henriksen home after seeing him cash some checks in the saloon. This is payday on the Northern Pacific and Mr. Henriksen had a large sum of money. He ordered them to hold up their hands and the request not being complied with he immediately fired. The first bullet grazed Mr. Henriksen's scalp. Mr. Henriksen then grappled with the thief and the second bullet struck his wrist. The third shot struck Mrs. Henriksen in the back of the head. She had meanwhile come to her husband's assistance.

The robber tore loose, leaving his mackinaw in Mrs. Henriksen's grasp, and rushed out through the back door and through the alley to Fifty-seventh avenue. In his hurry to get away he left his hat, the revolver and several unused cartridges. In his mackinaw was found a note book containing the name of William Erickson, aged 26. The description given the police of the man was to the effect that he was about five feet seven inches tall, was Handy, city comptroller, were shown to be the candidates for mayor of St. Paul in the May 2 election. Mayor Winn Powers crowded Handy for second place, but was defeated by 600 votes.

SOLDIERS ARE EQUIPPED FOR LONG MARCH

Men in Complete Readiness at Columbus and Hachita, N. M.

Military Censors Prohibit All Information of Actual Start.

Gen. Gavira Says Permission From Carranza Is Only Awaited.

NO MOVEMENT YET.

San Antonio, Tex., March 15.—Maj.-Gen. Funston said this afternoon that if there had been any movement of American troops in Mexico he had not been informed of it. He said he felt certain that if Gen. Pershing had ordered an advance he would have notified Southern department headquarters here immediately.

El Paso, Tex., March 15.—United States troops with camps broken, were under marching equipment along the Mexican border west of here at daylight today in at least two positions. Military censors prohibited transmission of any information of actual movements throughout the first half of the day. The troops in readiness were at Columbus and Hachita, N. M.

Gen. Gavira, commandant at Juarez, said today he had received information that American troops had not yet crossed the border and that they were awaiting permission from Carranza before doing so. Gavira said he believed Carranza's reply would be favorable.

Hurry to Border.

Despite the censorship, news of important military preparations all night passed through the New Mexico border through travelers going in all directions. By morning, would-be spectators of the movement were hurrying to the international boundary and giving circumstantial statements about the hour when the columns might move.

Late in the forenoon, however, the usual routine messages began arriving here by wire from Columbus and they cast considerable doubt upon reports that advance guards were in Mexico.

Up to a late hour in the forenoon, nothing had come from the Mexican side of the border to indicate unusual excitement there or any Mexican troop movements.

ATTITUDE OF SOLDIERS OF GEN. CARRANZA STILL A QUESTION

Reports of Serious Disaffection Among Troops Near Border May Indicate Trouble When Americans Cross Into Mexico.

El Paso, Tex., March 15.—The border awoke today to the conviction that before another twenty-four hours had passed United States troops would be across the Mexican frontier at Columbus to bring Pancho Villa to account for his crimes.

The one question on everyone's lips was as to what part would be played in the approaching drama by the large bodies of troops under Carranza commanders gathered in the region through which the expeditionary force is expected to pass.

Reports of Disaffection.

Reports of serious disaffection among the Carranza soldiers near the Arizona border under the command of Gen. Calles culminated today in a story from Presidio, Tex., that the Carranza garrison at Ojinaga has revolted and murdered its commander, Gen. Rojas.

Stories brought from the interior of Mexico by American refugees served to confirm the impression that at least a section of the Carranza soldiery was far from unfriendly to Villa and was decidedly hostile to the American expedition.

At the same time other Americans, especially those who came from Sonora and the western part of Mexico, declared that conditions in those parts were quiet and that they had experienced no display of animosity towards Americans.

Difficulties in Catching Villa.

One of the difficulties in catching Villa as pointed out by these Americans, was the superiority of the horses his men ride over the other mounts available in Northern Mexico. Villa's horses were described as "race horses." The fugitive has made a practice of seizing or buying the finest horses available. Another problem the Americans said lay in the fact that through fear or ignorance the Mexicans residing in country regions of Chihuahua give considerable allegiance to Villa.

Another development today was the tightening of the censorship over the sending of American telegrams into Mexico by the Carranza authorities.

A conference of staff officers was held in Columbus late yesterday, lasting until after dark. Persons who passed through Columbus late yesterday said the troops there were breaking camp.

THIRD PHASE OF BATTLE FOR VERDUN YIELDS BUT LITTLE TO THE GERMANS

Gain Footing in French Lines at Two Points Near Bethincourt.

French Recapture Part of Trenches in Fierce Counter-Attack.

Paris, March 15.—The renewal of the fighting west of the Meuse, after three days' pause, is regarded as heralding the opening of the third phase of the battle of Verdun. The defenders have profited by the period of relative inaction to strengthen further weak points in their armor and they await events with full confidence.

"Now I know where I stand. I am certain of final success," said Gen. Petain, who is in charge of the French operations at Verdun, to Messrs Lauraine and Pate, members of the chamber of deputies, who returned to Paris yesterday from an inspection of the supply arrangements at the fortress and who declare themselves edified by all they saw.

The first appearance of the German infantry yesterday, after the usual intense bombardment, occurred at 4 o'clock in the afternoon and the fighting lasted for three and a half hours. They attacked along the whole line from Bethincourt to the crest of Cumieres, a distance of about four miles. There was every indication, according to latest advices, that the struggle would be resumed during the night.

Heaviest Fighting.

The heaviest fighting was around Dead Man hill, the Germans debouching in masses from Corbeaux and other smaller woods to the west. They were obliged to cross open ground and a

SUMMARY OF THE WAR NEWS

The French have turned to the aggressive in the desperate struggle now in progress northwest of Verdun and have recaptured a part of the ground gained by the Germans in the renewal of their drive west of the Meuse, Paris announces today.

Yesterday, in a two and a half hours' battle the crown prince's armies, by delivering massed attacks, succeeded in gaining a footing in the French lines at two points between Bethincourt and Dead Man's hill, the dominating height which is the immediate object of the present German drive.

Last night the French launched heavy counter-attacks and by using the bayonet and hand grenades freely were able to recapture portions of the trenches the Germans had taken.

The Germans made heavy sacrifices in attempting to cut the French line and obtain possession of Dead Man's hill, Paris advices declare. Possession of this height has enabled the French to sweep with their artillery the territory over which the Germans were endeavoring to advance against the fortress.

Berlin, officially denies rumors that the new German submarine campaign under which armed merchantmen are regarded as warships, has been abandoned or postponed. On the contrary, it is now in full swing, it is declared.

Following the recent declaration of war on Portugal by Germany, Austria has severed diplomatic relations with the Portuguese government, a Geneva dispatch states.

BIG YEAR HAD BAD BEGINNING

Calumet & Arizona Mining Company Report for 1915 Is Favorable.

Handsome Balance After Expenses and Four Dividends Are Taken Out.

Prosperity was reflected in the annual report of the Calumet & Arizona Mining company for the year ended Dec. 31, 1915, just issued.

The company's revenue for the year derived from sales of copper, silver and gold metals and $34,890.70 from interest was reported at $11,683,724.12, as compared with $8,518,990.34 in the previous year. Expenditures, including mining and smelting, freights, refining, marketing, salaries, office expenses and state and Federal taxes, came to $6,229,842.62, leaving a net balance of $5,453,881.51, as against $3,085,535.50 in 1914.

From that, four dividends amounting to $2,006,557, were paid during the year, leaving a handsome balance of $3,447,324.51 to be carried forward.

The metal production for the year was reported by the president, Charles Briggs, at 65,268,910 pounds of copper, 1,381,077.58 ounces of silver and 35,263 ounces of gold. All the copper mined is treated electrolythically.

Gratifying Results.

The results attained were considered most gratifying, especially in view of the fact that the year began with a curtailment of 50 per cent in production, which continued through the first quarter and part of the second, but it ended with a remarkable demand for copper metal at a high price and the highest rate of production in the history of the company. The prospects for 1916 are thought very bright, as contracts for metal covering a long period at good prices have been entered into.

It was reported that arrangements have been made to push development work on the New Cornelia Copper company's property, controlled by the Calumet & Arizona, and it is expected that it will become a producer by the fall of 1917. With the object of buying equipment and financing work on that property, a bond issue of $4,000,000 was floated, of which its proportion $3,100,000 was subscribed by the Calumet & Arizona company and the balance, $900,000, by individual shareholders.

Ore Reserves Increased.

John C. Greenway, the general manager of the company, said, in his report, that ore reserves at the mine were increased 366,551 tons during the year, 93,788.5 feet of development work being done as compared with 72,793 feet in 1914.

Officers and directors of the Calumet & Arizona Mining company are as follows: Charles Briggs, president; James Hoatson, vice president; Thomas Hoatson, second vice president; Gordon R. Campbell, secretary; Peter Ruppe, treasurer; Henry B. Paull, auditor. Directors—Charles Briggs, Calumet; Gordon R. Campbell, Calumet; Thomas F. Cole, Duluth; Chester A. Congdon, Duluth; William E. Corey, New York city; Charles d'Autremont, Jr., Duluth; James Hoatson, Calumet; Henry R. Rea, Pittsburgh; Peter Ruppe, Calumet, and George E. Tener, Pittsburgh.

East Grand Forks, Minn., March 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mayor C. J. Chief of Police Albert Hurst delivered the message and he now has a force of men at work to see that it is enforced.

WHAT DULUTH IS READING

The Herald's Weekly Review of New Books in the Public Library and the Books That Are Most in Demand.

That the theaters in Duluth have a great influence upon the mental and moral development of their patrons is shown at the public library. Requests for books are being based constantly on the attractions at the various playhouses. The influence of the photoplay, especially when noted dramas or works of fiction are shown, is ever on the increase.

Last week Mr. and Mrs. Charles Coburn presented "The Yellow Jacket" in Duluth, and there was a steady call for this work at the library. A run on Cervante's "Don Quixote," now being shown in photoplay, is expected, although the voluminous detail of this famous novelist will undoubtedly scare away some of the less brave of fiction readers.

There is also a new trend in reading now increasing daily. This includes the books on architecture, gardening and poultry-raising. This shows that the residents of the city are planning extensive building in houses, and are also endeavoring to reduce the high cost of living by raising garden truck and poultry.

Fortunately for Duluthians, the library is well stocked with the best and latest books along these lines, and their popularity has been growing from year to year. Winter is hanging on late this year, but the agricultural spirit is asserting itself despite all handicaps.

The big collection of about 2,100 juvenile books is being catalogued, and distributed daily and the work is now almost completed. Books for boys from about 10 to 15 years of age are now receiving the attention of the librarians. Hundreds of these books, written by the best authors of boys' literature, are on the tables. They include a little of everything in the way of good fiction, fairy tales, history and verse, and many of the books are beautifully illustrated. Among the best of these books are the following:

"The Log of a Cowboy," Andy Adams.
"Jack in the Rockies," George Bird Grinnell.
"The Wrecking Master," Ralph D. Paine.
"The Story of a Bad Boy," Thomas Bailey Aldrich.
"The Boy Scouts on the Lost Trail," Thornton W. Burgess.
"Tales of Laughter," Kate Douglas Wiggin and Nore Archibald Smith.
"The Fairy Ring," ditto.
"Short Stories for Short People," Alicia Aspinwall.
"The Master of the Strong Hearts," a story of Custer's last rally, Eldridge S. Brooks.
"The Scouts Beyond the Sea," Lieut.-Gen. Sir Robert Baden-Powell.
"Christmas in Legend and Story," Elva D. Smith and Alice I. Hazelton.
"The Story of the Trapper," A. C. Laut.

FOR ROAD INSIGNIA.

National Park Highway Association Favors Such Idea.

Fargo, N. D., March 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The National Parks Highway association will adopt an insigna which will be used in blazing the trans-continental highway from New York to Seattle and an effort will be made to secure legislation in each state through which the route passes to prevent the obliterating of these trail marks.

This matter was placed in the hands of the ways and means committee named at the annual meeting of the association here. This committee, which recommended the adoption of an insigna, will also attempt to secure road dragging laws, similar to those in force in North Dakota, at the present time. The law of this state provides for paying farmers for dragging the roads, bounding their land for which they receive pay.

Plans were considered for holding the annual frontier day at the same time as the dedication. Medora having a reputation for wildwest productions or the original kind on frontier day.

The new officers of the association are: W. W. Smith, Fargo, president; W. J. Ray, Medora, first vice president; J. P. Hardy, Fargo, secretary and John Orchard, Dickinson, treasurer.

best county officials of the state and has an exceptionally wide acquaintance.

Prior to beconing county auditor, Mr. Brown was a farmer and livestock breeder in this county and still maintains his interests.

The other candidates for state auditor are the present incumbent, Carl O. Jorgenson, and Secretary Kositzky of the state tax commission. The friends of Mr. Brown feel that with Jorgenson from the southern part of the state, Kositzky from the central, he stands a good show and will get a large vote in the northern counties.

WHERE THE RACE FALLS SHORT.

S. W. Strauss of Chicago in Leslie's Weekly: Do you know that in the United States sixty-six out of every 100 people that die leave no estate whatever? Do you know that out of the remaining thirty-four only nine leave estates larger than $5,000, and that the average of the balance of twenty-five is a little less than $1,300? Do you know that at the age of 65, ninety-seven out of every 100 in America are partly or wholly dependent upon relatives, friends or the public for their daily bread, for their clothing, and a roof under which to sleep?

We all know that the one safeguard against pauperism by the countries of Europe has been thrift. France, Germany, Belgium, Holland and Switzerland have been the leaders in thrift. Do you realize that according to recent government statistics, 98 per cent of the American people are living from day to day on their wages, and that a loss of employment would mean pauperism for all but two of us in every hundred of our people?

MEN SCARCE FOR U. S. NAVY

Labor Famine Exists All Over Country, Says Lieut. Wille.

The scarcity of men is greatly handicapping the recruiting officers of the United States navy all over the country, according to Lieut. F. J. Wille, Minneapolis, who is in Duluth today inspecting the local office at the postoffice building and also receiving applicants for the navy and naval reserve. Lieut. Wille has been in North Dakota and on the range inspecting the offices, and the same conditions exist everywhere, he said.

"There has been a marked falling off in enlistments ever since the first of the year," he said. "The labor situation is undoubtedly a large factor in handicapping enlistments. Many foreign reservists have returned to Europe to fight, and left their positions vacant here for regular Americans to fill. Few men are available anywhere in the country."

Yesterday Lieut. Wille was on the range and enlisted two men for the naval reserve. He said the same conditions as to labor existed on the range as in Duluth.

Renewed activity in the recruiting of men for the United States army has begun, said Lieut. Wille, and this is probably taking a number of men that would otherwise enlist in the navy. The Mexican situation is thought to be causing a good many to enlist in the army as the applicants believe they may have a chance to go into Mexico.

Three applicants for the regular naval service were received by Lieut. Wille and one applicant for the reserve. Dr. Iden was not here today, and so the applicants will be sent to Minneapolis for a final examination.

Mr. Wille will return to Minneapolis tonight. He expects to return to this part of the state about April 1.

TO TEACH ANALYSIS OF CHARACTER

Joseph Blumenthal Will Give Course at Duluth Y. M. C. A.

Joseph Blumenthal of Minneapolis has been secured by the Duluth Y. M. C. A. to give a course in character analysis similar to the one which he gave here last fall.

Every employer of labor, skilled or unskilled, is continually annoyed by the difficulty of finding the right man for a particular piece of work. It is at this point that the work of Mr. Blumenthal fits into an organization.

The old method of "hiring and firing" with a hope that finally through the long and expensive process of sifting, the right man will some time be found, still prevails in many cases. Statistics show that the average factory today, employing 6,000 men, engages at least 2,000 new employes every year. In other words, it changes the entire personnel every three years.

His first lecture in the course will be given tomorrow at 12:15. It is open to any man interested in his own advancement or in the better organization of the institution with which he is connected.

MEASLES EPIDEMIC TAKING TOLL AMONG THE BABIES

Eight Children Die Within Few Days From the Disease.

Health Director Declares It Difficult to Check.

Warns Parents Against Carelessness or Delay; Cases Concealed.

Eight children, four of whom lived in one building, have died within a little more than a week as a result of the measles epidemic which is sweeping the city.

Health department records today showed that seven infants died during the week of March 5 and one death was reported on March 2.

Despite the most rigorous care and the extraordinary efforts on the part of physicians, four children living at the Children's home, Fifteenth avenue east and Fifth street, died between March 7 and March 13. In each case measles was the principal or contributory cause of death, with bronchial pneumonia developments.

Children Who Were Victims.

The children are:

Stella Meyers, aged 2, died March 13.

Robert Rogers, aged 1½, died March 11.

Erwin Smith, aged 1, died March 7.

Mary C. Erickson, aged 10 months, died March 7.

The four others, whose deaths have been ascribed to the epidemic, are:

Freda E. Erickson, aged 1½, 6 North Thirty-ninth avenue west, on March 13.

Elmer Korte, aged 2½, 1015 Garfield avenue, on March 5.

Hazel Erickson, aged 2, 2113 West Fourth street, on March 2.

Difficult to Combat.

Health Director E. W. Fahey said that while the latest reports from inspectors were encouraging, the epidemic would have to run its course, because the nature of the disease made it very difficult to combat.

Inspectors ordinarily occupied with other lines of work have been taken from their regular duties, and assigned to districts where they are checking up the measles cases, Dr. Fahey said. Five men are doing this work now.

"Parents so often think that a child must have measles, and so it is best to have them and get through with it," said Dr. Fahey. "That is a bad mistake. Measles is a serious disease, particularly at this time of the year, when it is shown that so many develop into pneumonia. If they would not hesitate to call upon physicians when the child shows symptoms it wouldn't be so bad."

Health department officials had 257 cases on their records this morning. Many other cases, known to exist, have not been located.

WILL URGE NEW DULUTH EXTENSION

Commercial Club of Suburb Will Confer With City Commissioners.

Fourteen New Duluth business men will confer with the city commissioners this afternoon regarding street car line extensions for that suburb. They comprise a committee from the New Duluth Commercial club.

Commissioner Fred Voss, of the finance division, was asked to attend the conference this morning, and to notify other commissioners that the committee would wait upon them.

"Aside from the fact that the conference will concern the street car line extensions, which are preposed, I don't know what the meeting will bring up," said Commissioner Voss.

New Duluth citizens recently started an agitation to have the street car company extend its lines to New Duluth next summer, and have been active in an attempt to have plans altered, since learning that the company proposed to put their line through the model city of the steel corporation, leaving out New Duluth.

THE INDISPENSABLE MEN.

Philadelphia Public Ledger: Never was a greater folly uttered than this: "No man is indispensable."

Of course the world can go on living without an Alexander Hamilton, a Samuel Morse, a Beethoven or a Shakespeare, but as Jefferson told the French: "I merely succeed Franklin. Nobody can take his place."

Nobody has yet taken E. H. Harriman's place. We will know twenty years hence if anybody in all really took the place of Rockefeller, Rogers, Flagler and Harkness, or only succeeded them.

Who will match the elder Cramp in giving us something proportionately great in ship yards? Who is the next Mathias Baldwin? What little Philadelphia boy is the future A. J. Drexel, who shall not only be a banker but a world known force in banking?

Edison cannot go on forever. What legal brain can do what John G. Johnson has done? Ask Williams college if it has ever replaced old Mark Hopkins. He was worth more to any college than ten dormitories.

Forward looking leaders are a town's most precious capital.

Men to match my boundless plains,

She may not know how to think "great thoughts" herself—comparatively few people do—but through a book she may live with some master mind until his thoughts become a part of her very life. "HAMMONS SHOT SAARI," SHOUTS M. F. HASTINGS Gives Lie to Story Told By Matt Niemi, an Eye-Witness.

LIFE IMPRISONMENT MAY BE HIS FATE.

Life imprisonment in Stillwater penitentiary is the fate that hangs by a slender thread over the head of Michael F. Hastings, charged with the murder of William Saari, Brookston homesteader, on Oct. 26, last.

Hastings has admitted his presence at the scene of the crime on the lonely stretch of tote road three miles south of Brookston, but, disputing Matt Niemi, eye witness to the shooting, denies that he killed Saari and accuses his alleged accomplice, Max Hammons.

The case was given to the jury this afternoon shortly after 2:30 o'clock. The morning session of Judge Cant's court today was given over to the closing arguments. County Attorney Greene presented the case for the state and Walter F. Dacey summed up for the defendant.

Hammons' case will be disposed of next.

"Hammons did it. I never had the gun."

Michael F. Hastings, on trial in district court for the murder of William Saari, homesteader, near Brookston on Oct. 26, last, surprised a crowded courtroom yesterday afternoon when he broke the silence he has maintained since last fall and pointed an accusing finger at his alleged accomplice, Max Hammons, 20-year-old boy, jointly charged with the crime.

It was a bold stroke. Bold, because it upset every theory which had been advanced for Hastings' defense and bold because it gave the lie to the story of the shooting as told by Matt Niemi, an eye witness, and who was unshaken in his testimony that it was Hastings, and not Hammons, who fired the shots which killed Saari, his friend and neighbor.

Again and again, Hastings had been referred to by the eye witness, Niemi, as the "shooter." Niemi's story has always been that Hastings, the smaller of the two men who accosted Saari and himself on a lonely road, three miles out of Brookston on the day of the killing, was the one who fired the shots that killed his "partner, Billy Saari."

Accused Hastings.

At the coroner's inquest, Niemi accused Hastings of the shooting, stating that the "little fellow" did the shooting and that the "big one" tried to pull him away by the coat. Hastings, Niemi said, wore no mask, and Hammons, the "big fellow," had a red bandanna handkerchief tied across his mouth. The same story was told before the grand jury and was repeated in the court room last Friday when he related the details of the Saari murder.

Hammons was not in the court room when Hastings first took the stand. It had been agreed that the two defendants should tell their stories separately, unless one should attempt to incriminate the other. But when there came a parting of the ways yesterday afternoon, Judge Cant stopped proceedings and sent an officer to the sheriff's office after Hammons.

Hastings had told the story of his early life. He said that he had come from Clinton, Mass., where his parents now lived, but that he had made Clinton his home for the last seven years. He had drifted around the country from one place to another until last fall he came to the Dakota harvest fields. There, he said, he met Hammons. They decided to go to Minnesota to work in the lumber camps.

Gave Hammons Money.

Hastings admitted furnishing Hammons the money with which to buy a gun. He said that Hammons told him before they started for Minnesota that they were going through a "rough country" and that they had better take along a revolver. He would not, however, positively identify the gun which had been introduced in evidence as the firearm found in the woods near Brookston where he and Hammons were arrested after the shooting.

Hastings said that they left Brookston about 11 o'clock and were in search of work. He admitted that he met Saari and Niemi on the road, and in this regard corroborated Niemi's heretofore unsupported testimony. Then came the break between Hastings and his alleged accomplice.

"Hammons Did It."

"When we were near Saari and Niemi," he said, "Hammons jerked out his gun—commanded the other men to throw up their hands and fired one shot into the ground—I told him that it was a fool trick—and as Saari came towards Hammons with a stick raised over him as if to strike him, Hammons leveled the gun at the man again and I grabbed his coat to pull him back and turned away—I heard the second shot fired. Hammons did it. I never had the gun."

Every eye in the courtroom watched the 20-year-old boy who sat by his attorney, E. J. Kenny, listening to the accusation made by his alleged partner in crime. There was a smile on his face, which played over his countenance while Hastings told his story. When the witness had finished, Hammons laughed. He shook his head and laughed again.

"Story Is Lie."

Hammons, evidently taken by surprise at the defense interposed by Hastings, will fight his battle alone. "Certainly Hasting's story is a lie," said Hammons and it was the first time that he had made any statement with reference to the shooting. Hammons has never been accused of the shooting and the theory is not in accordance with the testimony of the eye witness, Matt Niemi, who was positive in his identification of the two men and who picked Hastings out as "the shooter."

When Walter F. Dacey, attorney for the defense, opened his case to the jury yesterday afternoon, he intimated that the defense was to be that of mistaken identity and he followed this theory of the case out along certain lines. When Hastings took the stand, however, the mistaken identity theory vanished in thin air by the prisoner's own admissions that he was there. Hastings is resting his case on his unsupported testimony that he did not do the shooting.

THIRD PHASE OF BATTLE FOR VERDUN YIELDS BUT LITTLE TO THE GERMANS

well-directed fire from the French did fearful execution among them. Their ranks quickly filled up, however, and although they were stopped again, they ended by getting a footing in advanced French trenches at two points.

Dead Man hill, which is now being contended for, is a fine artillery position and nothing more, the military critics say. It is a plateau whose base is limited on its four faces by four ravines, and it rises only at the east, dominating there the present German positions. The crown prince's plan is evidently to make a breach in the French line between Bethincourt and Dead Man hill to enable his troops to advance in a southerly direction toward Chattancourt and envelope the French left there, while German forces from Regneville and Cumieres try to turn the French positions between Cumieres and Dead Man hill.

It is announced that Gen. Gallieni, minister of war, is still indisposed and unable to attend to his duties.

French Statement.

Paris, March 15, 2:30 p. m.—The Germans last night made no further aggressive movement to the west of the River Meuse, according to announcement this afternoon by the French war office.

French counter-attacks between Bethincourt and Cumieres resulted in the reoccupation of certain trenches captured by the Germans yesterday.

French troops still hold the height of Mort Homme.

The artillery exchanges have been active between Bethincourt and Cumieres, but elsewhere the night passed with relative quiet.

The text of the statement follows:

"To the west of the River Meuse the enemy made no further endeavor to advance last night.

"Along our front between Bethincourt and Cumieres counter-attacks with the bayonet and with hand grenades made it possible for us to reoccupy a portion of the trenches captured yesterday by the enemy in the direction of Hill No. 265.

"We now hold Bethincourt, the height of Mort Homme, the southern boundary of the wood of Cumieres and the village of Cumieres.

"The bombardment has continued with intensity in all this sector and the fire of the enemy has been answered with energy by our artillery.

"There has been nothing of importance to report from the right bank of the Meuse nor in the Woevre district, where the artillery exchanges have been intermittent.

"The night passed quietly on the remainder of the front."

German Statement.

Berlin, March 15, via London, 3:50 p. m.—Important gains for the Germans in the Verdun fighting west of the Meuse were announced today by the war office. It is said the Germans pushed forward their lines west of Corbeaux wood and on the height of Le Mort Homme, capturing more than 1,000 prisoners.

NEW DULUTH ROAD TO START LAYING TRACK DURING PRESENT YEAR

and Charles Wolfe, Wahpeton, N. D., secretary.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road is said to be the real promoter of the new road.

A. J. Earling, president of the Milwaukee, is in Pasadena, Cal. None of the local employes of the company have any information available, but it is known that a number of the persons interested, as well as some of the officers, either were formerly or are now in the employ of the Milwaukee.

G. W. Morrow was formerly townsite agent for the road at Spokane. W. D. Morrow is still connected with the Milwaukee in that capacity.

The officers of the company as officially given out are said to be dummy officials acting on the advice and under instructions of the Milwaukee road officials.

Practical Railroaders.

All of the officers are well known in railroad circles as practical railroad men. The president, vice president and townsite agent, W. D. Morrow, are expert right of way and location men.

The line will extend for 600 miles from Duluth to Wahpeton, in a southwesterly direction across the state. It will cross the Great Northern tracks at Menagha, Minn., and the Northern Pacific tracks near Brainerd, Minn. The road will connect with the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul near the North and South Dakota line. This will give the Milwaukee a strategic position among the railways of the Northwest.

At present the Milwaukee is competing strenuously with the Great Northern as a transcontinental line. During the last six months, the earnings of the road have been the greatest in its history. The company is in excellent condition, and the next step planned is said to be an invasion of the territory formerly considered tributary to Great Northern and Northern Pacific.

Big Buyer of Rails.

The Milwaukee has been one of the heaviest purchasers of rails and equipment in the railroad world during the last four months.

Order after order of steel rails, tie bolts, fish plates, and binders have been sent to the steel mills and railway equipment plants. The road is now in the market for locomotives and box cars.

The president and vice president of the Duluth, Huron & Southern railway have been in St. Paul all winter, conducting their operations from here.

Bids will be opened, according to those in close touch with the company, next week in St. Paul.

The officers of the company refuse to make any other statement than that they are engaged in preparing for the building of a railway, but have confided a large portion of their plans to former fellow workers in the Milwaukee road system.

One of the plans announced is that an additional track may be laid from Duluth into the iron range country. Thus the Milwaukee will have both an increased grain and ore tonnage.

OUTLOOK FOR COAL PRICES

Possibility of Advance Instead of Usual Reduction on April 1.

Change in Sizes of Anthracite May Be the Alternative.

That consumers may expect an advance in coal prices after April 1, that they may expect a change in the sizes of coal and that they need not expect the customary reduction in prices of hard coal on April 1 are three of the warnings given by the coal dealers.

None of them are certain, but all are probable.

Some of the dealers believe that as a result of the advance in wages and the reduction in hours given the coal miners in the recent agreement reached, prices of coal will be raised and the increase will fall chiefly on anthracite. As much as 25 to 35 cents a ton has been predicted as the amount of the advance. Others do not think that such an advance will occur, but nearly all of them believe that some advance will result.

May Hold Down Rates.

The proposed changing of the sizes of coal may tend toward holding down or even preventing the advance.

The operators are suggesting the changed sizes, but are having the dealers feel out the consumers before taking final action in the matter.

As to the chances of reducing the prices on April 1, which has been the custom for years, it is not expected that this will occur at this time for the reason that with the recent settlement of the miners' demands the operators have not yet got their affairs adjusted and will probably not make a change until they do.

Changes in Size.

The proposals of a change in the sizes of coal are as follows:

Broken coal to replace the furnace size, through a 4½ over a 3-inch screen, for use in large hot-air furnaces.

Furnace size, taking the place of some egg and all stove, through a 3-inch over a 1½-inch screen, for small hot-air furnaces or large hot-water furnaces.

Range size, practically the same as now, through a 1½-inch over a 11-16 screen.

Heater size, taking the place of both pea and buckwheat sizes, through 11-16 over 5-16 screen.

Under the present scale of prices the broken coal size would be $8.10 a ton; the furnace size, $8.10 a ton; the range size, $8.35 a ton, and the heater size, $6 a ton.

SECOND LIST OF PRIZES AWARDED

Zenith Artists Are Given Awards for Their Art Offerings.

The second distribution of prizes to be made this year by the Zenith, the Central high school annual, was made yesterday, the recipients being the artists whose work had been the best submitted.

Miss Carey, head of the school art department, is in charge of all drawing work for the Zenith this year, and she made the awards yesterday. A total of $30 was divided among the four artists, who had done the best work, Jack Rideout, taking first with $13, Roswell King, second, with $9, Veronica Irvine, third, with $6, and Alice Nyman, fourth, with $2.

One of the big features of the Zenith this year is to be the unusual departures in art work. It is expected that the drawings this year will surpass anything that has ever been attempted in previous annuals and should make the book by far the most attractive artistically that has ever been put out. Some new features are to be embodied in the makeup of the book in regard to the drawings and they are expected to make a big hit with the students.

Every effort is being made to conserve the equipment and keep all available cars in this territory, however.

Over 29,000,000 bushels of grain have been shipped over the Dakota division of the Great Northern since Aug. 1, 1915, establishing a new record for heavy shipments.

Popular Science Monthly: Hawaiian soil is being used to build up the small coral island in the Pacific ocean known as the Midway and used as a relay station by a trans-Pacific cable company. A quantity of earth is taken there every three months by the schooner that is sent with food supplies for the operators. The task of building the island has progressed so far that it is now possible to keep a cow on the pasture.

PHOHIBITS FOREIGNERS FROM ACQUIRING TITLES

Galveston, Tex., March 15.—Salvador Alvarado, governor of the state of Yucatan, has issued a decree prohibiting foreigners from acquiring title to real estate in Yucatan, according to La Vos de la Revoluccion, the official publication of Merida, copies of which have reached here. It is explained that the decree was issued because of the activity of foreigners in efforts to unsettle the money market.

Governor Alvarado promises to remove the decree when the conditions which prompted it have been remedied.

The newspaper also reports that large numbers of Zapata followers who have been taken prisoners, have been brought into Yucatan and given their liberty on condition that they go to work on the Henequin plantations.

TROOPS KILL COMMANDER

Col. Rojas, in Charge at Ojinaga, Shot By Carranza Soldiers.

Trying to Stop Men Who Threatened to Invade United States.

Marfa, Tex., March 15.—The reported death of Col. Rojas, Carranza commander at Ojinaga, at the hands of his own men, who attempted to mutiny last night, was confirmed by telephone advices here today. Rojas was trying to control his men, who were drinking and threatening to invade the United States when he was shot from the crowd, according to the report.

Close Watch on Refugees.

Nogales, Ariz., March 15.—With the time for the dispatch of the American punitive exposition into Chihuahua to capture Francisco Villa, Mexican bandit, drawing near, a closer watch was being maintained by American troops upon the 500 Villa refugees in Nogales. This is being done, it was asserted, to prevent any trouble which might result from Mexican expeditions of sympathy for their outlaw countrymen.

Military patrols about the city have been doubled and strangers in the city are being scrutinized closely. Today no evidences of unusual activity were apparent either in this city or in Nogales, Sonora, just across the border. It was reported, however, that the Carranza garrison on the Mexican side, which yesterday consisted of about fifty men, was increased today by the arrival of about 1,000 men from the interior of the state, bound for Chihuahua. Information concerning the troops, however, was not given out officially.

WANTS DAMAGES FOR HUSBAND'S DEATH

Fargo Widow Sues Man Driving Auto for $25,000.

Fargo, N. D., March 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. Ethel M. Leturmy of this city has brought suit for $25,000 against C. I. Gross of Fargo and Dwight M. Baldwin, Jr., of St. Paul for damages alleged to have been sustained through the death of her husband, W. H. Leturmy, who was killed at night in November by an automobile owned by Mr. Baldwin and driven by Mr. Gross.

Leturmy, engaged in the messenger service here, was riding south on Ninth street north. As he neared the intersection of the street with Second avenue the automobile driven by Mr. Gross came around the corner and struck the bicyclist, throwing him into the wind shield, which was shattered by the impact. Leturmy died before reaching the hospital.

Driving at Fast Pace.

At the coroner's inquest some witnesses testified that Mr. Gross was driving at such a high rate of speed as he was going west on Second avenue north that it was impossible for him to turn onto Ninth street without swinging to the left side of the street, where the body of Leturmy was found. Some of this testimony was reversed by other witnesses, the coroner's jury bringing in a verdict that while Mr. Gross was driving carelessly, there was not sufficient evidence to show criminal negligence on his part.

Mr. Gross is representative of the Baldwin mills in this part of the state and was formerly manager of the Baldwin mill at Moorhead, Minn., before that plant was burned. The car in which Mr. Gross was riding was owned by the milling concern.

BURNETT WOULD BLOCK ADVANCE OF ARMY BILL

Washington, March 15.—Prospects of advancing the army bill in the house over the immigration bill were endangered today when Chairman Burnett of the immigration committee declined to yield from his agreement with Speaker Clark for recognition as soon as the free sugar bill is passed.

"I won't yield my place to the army bill or any other measure, not even if the president requests it," said Mr. Burnett. "The speaker has promised to recognize me as soon as the free sugar bill is disposed of and I expect him to do it."

The rules sub-committee which is working to advance the army bill, however, has not lost hope. It is believed the army bill will be reached early next week at the latest.

As there are some 200 car owners in this city it is thought that the Warren organization will be one of the strongest in the Red River valley. Dr. G. S. Wattam is the president and C. E. Grinder, secretary.

A Timely Word on Wash Materials

Regardless of the fact that the cotton goods market has shown large advances in price, doubtless due to the large demands from the South American countries, coupled with the scarcity of yarns and dyes. We are at this time showing one of the best and largest stocks of the best goods made today. Ginghams, Percales, Madras, Voiles and Dimities; also including many new wash fabrics never shown before this season. The coloring and dyes are as usual guaranteed the best.

While in a few instances we have been obliged to advance our prices slightly, yet the advances we are quoting you today is much lower than the quotations some of the mills are asking at present. One point we wish to emphasize is "buy now" as prices later are sure to advance as the warm weather approaches. Just a little bit of advise: Look around next time you are in our wash goods section and you'll be surprised at the showing.

Society • Women's Clubs • Music • Drama

THE state D. A. R. committee on markers for the historic spots of Minnesota is eager that the two Duluth chapters, Daughters of Liberty and Greysolon du Lhut, preserve the few remaining boards of the Astor house that was used by the earliest traders at what is now Fond du Lac. The committee, of which Mrs. T. J. Davis of Daughters of Liberty chapter is a member, suggested that the remains of the building be placed in one of the Duluth parks and be suitably marked. The reports of the committee on markers and other committees that were given at the state D. A. R. meeting, which was held in St. Paul last month, were given this afternoon by Mrs. A. E. Walker at the meeting of Daughters of Liberty chapter which was held at the residence of Mrs. A. B. Siewert, 9 East Third street. Mrs. C. F. How, Sr., spoke on "The Effects of War on Social Reforms", and the chapter continued its Red Cross work.

Mrs. Walker, who was a delegate to the state meeting, said that the report from Sibley house was gratifying. Mrs. George C. Squires of St. Paul, the state president, was indorsed for the office of president general, and Mrs. Charles Russell Davis of St. Peter, a member of the St. Paul chapter, was nominated for re-election as vice president for Minnesota. As state officers will be elected at the next meeting, a nominating committee was appointed at the meeting last month. Mrs. W. H. Burris of the Greysolon du Lhut chapter is a member of the committee.

On the elms that border the driveway at Sibley house markers will be placed to commemorate Gen. Sibley and other persons who were prominent in the early days of Minnesota.

The officers and visiting delegates at the state meeting were invited to May Irwin's "33 Washington Square." Thirty attended in a body.

EVENTS OF TONIGHT AND TOMORROW.

The Duluth Teachers' association will hold a regular meeting at 7:30 o'clock tonight in the assembly hall of the Y. W. C. A.

The Woodland Mothers' club will meet at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the E. R. Cobb school.

The West Duluth W. C. T. U. will meet at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the West Duluth library.

Damrosch Number on Orchestra Program

Among the numbers to be played by the New York Symphony orchestra at their appearance here March 28, is "Iphigenia in Aulis," one of the recent Damrosch works, the incidental music to which was written for Miss Margaret Anglin's productions of this Greek tragedy at the University of California last summer. While the opinions of the critics are always interesting the viewpoint of the composer, himself, is here set down so that first hand knowledge of the whys and wherefores may be had in the language of the man who has exerted such a wide influence on music in America. Says Mr. Damrosch: "I am not a slave to the archaic. I think it is folly for a modern composer, appealing to modern tastes, to ignore the marvelous development in the art of music, and turning his back on the modern orchestra, to try to reproduce the ancient Greek scales. If such a practice in the music were to be logically operative in modern presentations of Greek drama, then the star herself would not appear, but a masked and stilted gentleman would asume the roles which Miss Anglin makes marvelous. No, I only employed one of the forms of the Greek scale, incidentally and meagerly, as, for instance, when I wanted a priests' march or to suggest an ancient ceremonial. I did not seek to out-Strauss Strauss in my instrumentation. There is no suggestion of the horror in the music of Strauss' orchestra when John the Baptist's head is cut off."

Club Department to Have Miscellaneous Program

At the meeting of the department of education and home of the Twentieth Century club, to be held at 2:30 o'clock Friday afternoon in the library clubroom, Dr. Mary Conrad will tell of the history and uses of pewter, Mrs. Martin will sketch the life and works of some of the leading American women writers, Mrs. T. K. Hicks will give a travel talk and Mrs. George S. Clements will take St. Patrick's day as her topic.

"After Baby Week."

Under the head "After Baby Week," the Springfield Republican prints the following:

"Between the dark and the daylight, when the night is beginning to lower, comes a pause in the day's occupation that you might call the children's hour. You hear on the sidewalk below you the patter of little feet; but the voices that shout from the corner aren't just what you'd call soft and sweet; (perhaps they'd be softer and sweeter if they hadn't been working all day); and somehow they don't seem appealing like nice little children at play. From your window you see in the twilight, just crossing the broad white street, pert Kashka and sullen Fireta and Jorgus with dragging feet. A chuckle and then a silence, and you know from the sounds upstairs that your warm little Johnnie and Susie are starting their bedtime prayers. You turn from the window politely and offer the stranger a chair. No, your wife doesn't wish for the ballot; the children take all of her care."

Efficient Housekeeping

BY Henrietta D Graul

"Somethin' to Think On"

I FEEL truly sorry for those young women who complain they dislike washing dishes. I say "young," because older women seldom talk much about the matter. Either they accept the duty as something unavoidable, like taxes and baby's colic, else they shift the work to the youngsters in the household.

It never can be pleasant work, from the very nature of it, but after years of doing the same thing again and again it becomes mechanical, so your mind can go wool-gathering or castle-building though your fingers are in the suds.

Pansy, author of "Esther Reid," "Wise and Otherwise," and dozens of helpful books, always said she thought out her stories when busy at the homeliest of tasks. One of the sweetest singers I know has a repertoire of 200 songs. There is not an old Gospel hymn, a popular melody or an operatic aria that she cannot give words and music to at a moment's notice, yet she is a busy big sister in a house full of boys. She does not have an hour a week for piano practice, but carries her music about with her. A song book is propped above the ironing board, another is over the kitchen sink and a sheet of music lies on the basket of stockings to be darned.

Our old darky washer woman used to stick her head into the breakfast room every Tuesday morning on the way to her tubs and ask mother "for somethin' to think on today, please, missus." And mother would tell her some pleasant bit of news or gossip, knowing that, unable to read, the poor creature would weave the knowledge into a philosophy of her own and pass it on to her family after it had made her happy for the day.

But the dishes are waiting. Have plenty of hot water; wash the tins and iron things first and put them away. Use fresh hot water for the glasses, dry and polish them at once, for if they stand they will be streaked and hard to finish nicely. Next wash the silver; if it is elaborate use a brush as well as the washing cloth. Keep out the pieces that need polishing—it is not likely that it will all need cleaning every day and you will find it easier to keep it in order constantly than to let it go until every piece needs attention.

For the dishes you need only a slight suds. For the sake of your hands as well as the china use soap-powder or good white kitchen soap. A dish mop is a help; it cleans the dishes as well as the time-honored cloth and saves your fingers. Scald dishes with water as hot as possible. This sterilizes them and keeps dishwashing from being what it has been accused of being—"a smear." Besides, thorough scalding makes the wiping of china dishes a pleasure, they dry so quickly and gleam so beautifully.

When you have glass globes to wash you will find that a little washing soda will remove the smoke stains and make them as clear as when new. This same washing soda is an excellent thing to use in the water for washing sinks and all scrubbing; it makes cleaning easy and its cost is so low anyone may have it in quantity.

Bed Time Tales

Yellow Puffs' Adventure

YELLOW PUFF and two of his brothers were picking up choice bits of grain from the barn floor as their mother had carefully taught them to do.

"I think we are very silly," remarked Yellow Puff, between bits. "We stay right here in this old barn just as though we were little baby chicks! We great, big fellows—three weeks old!" (How his mother would have chuckled if she could have heard him call a chick 3 weeks old a "great, big fellow!")

"Well, what else would you have us do?" asked Downy White, who, to tell the truth, was not as ambitious as his brother. "I'm perfectly suited with this barn and I find plenty to eat. Why not stay here?"

"But think of the world outside!" exclaimed Yellow Puff, with a flourish of his head toward the big barn door.

"Ugh! Not for me!" cried Downy White. "Didn't you hear our mother tell us that there was cold, and snow, and danger out there?"

"That's just the reason I want to go there," said Yellow Puff. "And I think you are a baby-stay-at-home not to come out, too!"

But Downy White didn't mind that! He would rather be called a dozen hard names than run into the dangers his mother had told him existed outside the barn!

Yellow Puff was not so wise. He wandered over toward the barn door and, finding it open a crack, he peeped out. "Why, that's not an ugly world!" he cried when he saw the fresh white snow. "That's a more beautiful world than this old barn! I wonder why my mother didn't want us to see it? Well, I'm big now, and I mean to explore!" Glancing behind to see that he was not observed, he sidled through the crack in the door and went out into the snow.

Dear me, but that snow was cold! He had not been out there 10 minutes till his toes were almost frozen and he could hardly walk!

Just as he dropped over, half dead, into a heap of snow, Tommy Tittlemouse stuck his head out of a crack in the barn wall and saw him. "Yellow Puff," cried Tommy, "is that you? What are you doing out here in the snow? Does your mother know you are here?"

He sidled through the crack in the door and went out into the snow.

"No, she does not," answered Yellow Puff very feebly, for he could hardly talk, he was so cold. "She told me not to come out, but I came anyway!"

"Then I'll call her," said Tommy, and how he did hustle back into that barn for Mrs. Hen!

Luckily, she was right near; she came and helped poor little Yellow Puff into the barn; tucked him tight under her feathers and warmed him with the heat from her body. So Yellow Puff lived through his first adventure—but he had to thank Tommy for his life!

Peggy Peabody's Observations

City and Country Women

A city-bred woman was pitying women who live in the country. She stood in the hallway of her city home and exchanged civilities with the woman to whom she pays rent. "I would rather live in an attic than in the country," she remarked, and the other agreed with her.

This woman's sister lives in the country and occupies an entire house and is most comfortable. She would not think of changing places with her city-bred sister. But the city sister had this to say, with which I agree: "It is almost impossible to get the average woman who lives in the suburbs or the country out of her house except for a necessary visit to the city when clothing and supplies must be purchased, or on state occasions when she goes calling or attends some social function."

The country woman does not run out for an hour or so every afternoon, as is the habit of the greater number of women who live in the city. The latter make it a part of their daily curriculum. Thus, the city woman gets the air and, what is almost, if not quite, as important, mingles a little with the world, sees new faces and new things, and keeps in touch with matters that appeal to her. This has a beneficial effect upon her health and spirits, and keeps her feeling young.

I do not mean to say that all women who live in the country or suburbs are stay-at-homes. Some whom I know are regular gadabouts and make their trips to town just as regularly as the greater number of women city-dwellers do theirs to the center of their joys, the shopping district and the bargain counter. But there are women who live outside the city where fresh air and exercise of the right kind are to be had for the asking, who remain indoors a good part of their time.

The idea of a city woman who lives in one small room feeling sorry for the woman who lives in the country because she does not get out into the world and see things is preposterous. There is no one who has a better chance than the suburbanite, if she could be prevailed upon to take advantage of the many blessings that are hers. What the city woman says about her not getting out enough is true in many cases, and in that much the city woman is better off. Her cramped surroundings drive her out into the air and sunshine, which are life-giving and life-prolonging.

HOW often do you hear someone speak of the fine old Walnut bedroom suite or odd piece of furniture in their possession that has been handed down from grandmother's days. Such a possession, regardless now of the crudity of its design, is highly prized on account of its age and associations.

No wood is more desirable for fine furniture than is our own American Walnut. The beds shown herewith are a part of a suite made in handsomely figured American Walnut by the Berkey & Gay Furniture Company of Grand Rapids, Mich.

In design this suite is a decided contrast to suites made in this country a century ago. Designers now are catering to a more intelligent demand, to a better understanding of what really constitutes beauty. Manufacturing on a large scale enables us to offer this and many other American Walnut suites at remarkably low prices.

Class of 1915 Would Furnish Restroom for Central School

Initial steps for the establishment of a restroom at Central high school were taken last night at a meeting of more than 100 graduate members of the class of 1915, when they decided that the big surplus, which they still have in the bank to their credit, would go towards the furnishing of such a room.

Considerable agitation has been raised recently by prominent women of the city to have a girls' and teachers' restroom or emergency hospital established at the local institution. The plan has not met with much response and for a time it was thought that the idea would have to be abandoned.

The class of 1915, which was graduated last spring, still has $240.80 in the bank to its credit and the meeting last night at the Central library was held to determine what should be done with the money. Other classes have left pieces of statuary, pictures, stage curtains and other things, but the 1915 "grads," if their plan is carried through, will have made one of the best gifts to the school that it has ever received. As a result of the meeting it was the unanimous opinion of the graduates present that they would spend their money carefully to buy furniture and other equipment for a girls' restroom if the authorities of the school agreed to furnish them the necessary space. It is planned to furnish a temporary restroom in the very near future and next year the necessary room will probably be available with the opening of the new junior high schools. It is planned to furnish two rooms for the purpose, one to be used merely as an emergency hospital, and the other, when not in use as a restroom, to be used as a reception room for the various school and class committees, clubs and societies.

Miss Margaret Taylor, who acted as adviser to the class of 1915 throughout its four years of high school life, suggested the plan last night and it met with a hearty response. Several parents and prominent women of the city, when advised of the meeting, told Miss Taylor that they thought a restroom would be the very best thing which the money could be spent for. It was due to the big efforts of the Zenith board that the class finished with such a large surplus, a feat which has not been duplicated in the history of the school.

Boy Pianist Features B'nai B'rith "Open House" Program

Master Louis Roos Gomberg's piano selections proved the distinct hit of the second monthly "open house" entertainment given by Covenant lodge, Independent Order of B'nai B'rith, at the Temple Emanuel vestry rooms last evening. The assembly room was filled to its capacity long before the program began at 8 o'clock, proving the popularity of this young pianist with the members of the fraternity and their friends.

Master Gomberg is but 9 years old, and to enable him to use the pedals of the piano, it is necessary for his teacher, Mrs. D. H. Day, to supply pedal extensions. His program of last evening follows:

FIRST PART.

"Avalanche" .....Heller
"Sonata" .....Haydn
"Errinerung" .....Schumann
"The Spinning Song".....Burgmuller

SECOND PART.

"Allegro" from Sonata Op. 13..... .....Beethoven
"Scherzo" .....Schubert
"To a Wild Rose".....MacDowell
"Will o' the Wisp".....MacDowell
"Prelude No. 6".....Chopin
"The Chase" .....Rheinburger

Work of Order Explained.

The entertainment began at 8 o'clock with an opening talk by A. B. Kapplin, president of the lodge, who presided during the evening. He explained the objects of the B'nai B'rith order, stating that during the last five years this organization has spent $2,500,000 for benevolent and charitable purposes throughout the world. The speaker also outlined the work of the fraternity in this country, and its present program of maintaining the orphan asylums in Cleveland, Ohio; Atlanta, Ga.; Erie, Pa., and New York city, the national Jewish hospital for consumptives at Denver, Colo.; the home for the aged and infirm at Yonkers, N. Y.; the home for widows at New Orleans, La., and the Leo N. Levy Memorial hospital at Hot Springs, Ark.

E. A. Silberstein and Mrs. Sol Goldberg followed with short discussions on the subject, "How to Bring Jews Back to Judaism?" The former handled the subject from a man's viewpoint, while Mrs. Goldberg's suggestions for

SIDE TALKS

Wrong Pride

NOT long ago I heard of a woman who, when her husband died, was left with a heavily mortgaged farm and a family of three small children to provide for. Her needs were desperate; she took desperate measures to meet them, donning overalls and working about the farm herself, as hard and as long as a day laborer.

The first year she managed to pay the interest on the mortgage and feed her family. The second year, with courage and determination renewed, she began to specialize in chickens and strawberries. She worked harder than ever; her hands grew rough, her complexion coarse. But she wrung victory from defeat. The mortgage was lifted, she achieved a balance in the bank. As the children grew older she managed to send them each in turn, to college. By that time, of course, she had men to relieve her from the drudgery of farm work.

Isn't her record one to be proud of? Wouldn't you think that those children—two girls and a boy—would be proud of their mother and make their every act an expression of gratitude to her for all they had received from her?

She Was Ashamed of Her Mother's Sacrifice.

I surely thought they would feel that way until, by chance, I met the elder daughter. I spoke to her of her mother and how much I admired her. I thought this would please the daughter, but it didn't. Instead, she froze up, saying hastily:

"Oh, that is quite exaggerated. Mother never did such things. She really never worked hard at all."

I thought, naturally, that I had made a mistake. But a friend of the mother explained the mystery to me.

"Oh, the children are all ashamed of the fact that their mother worked as she did. You see they have been away to college and they have new friends and new ideas, and they do the best they can to keep people from knowing that their mother really worked like a man on the farm."

She Probably Finds Excuses for Her Children.

I do not know how the mother feels. I imagine that she finds excuses for her children, as mothers do. But I cannot. The mother was a heroine if one ever lived; her children are despicable. To be ashamed of such a mother!

The case is an extreme one, perhaps; but I wonder how many other parents there are who have worked unflaggingly through all their married life to give their children better things than they knew and whose only reward is the consciousness that the children are in their hearts, if not outspokenly, ashamed of them!

Here Is a Man Who Is Proud of His Mother's Struggles.

Consider the contrast offered by the case of a young man whom I knew only as a very successful young specialist, with a growing, increasingly profitable practice. I spoke of his success to him, as something he must take pride in.

"I owe it to my mother," he said, promptly. "She kept a boarding-house and worked like a slave to send me through college. We were always on the narrow edge, but she never gave up. I wanted to quit but she wouldn't hear of it. Once, I remember, she became sick and the bills piled up, but her courage was never shaken. She didn't know what the word quit meant."

Was I shocked by hearing what his mother had done? Hardly. Instead I felt that splendid thrill in my heart that hearing of heroism of any kind always gives one.

WHAT CAUSES COLDS?

This question is asked every day. A cold is really a fever, not always caused by the weather but often due to disordered blood or lack of important food-elements. In changing seasons fat-foods are essential because they distribute heat by enriching the blood and so render the system better able to withstand the varying elements. This is the important reason why Scott's Emulsion should always be taken for colds, and it does more—builds strength to prevent sickness.

Scott's Emulsion contains Nature's rare strength-building fats, so skillfully blended that the blood profits from every drop. It is free from harmful drugs or alcohol. Sold at drug stores—always get the genuine.

a remedy dealt with matters pertaining to the home and local surroundings of Jewish children.

Between the first and second parts of Master Gomberg's concert, Miss Zaidee Gittleson rendered several recitations that were well received.

Bridge Contest.

At the close of the program the officers of the lodge held a bridge contest, while the younger people danced, music being furnished by Miss Esther Gomberg. During the card contest a light supper was served by the Temple Aid society.

Dr. Samuel Gross, chairman of the literary committee, and Ben Blumenthal, chairman of the social committee, arranged the program last evening. It was announced by President Kapplin during the evening that an "open house" entertainment would be held every month during this year for the members of Covenant lodge and their friends. In April it is planned to stage the annual spring ceremonial, with the initiation of a class of twenty-five candidates.

FIGHT ON "DOPE" TRAFFIC SHOWN IN ORPHEUM FILM

LYDIA PURCHASING THE OPIUM.

Tonight the Bluebird picture of the enchanting legend "Undine" will be presented for the last time. Tomorrow and continuing for four days another Bluebird production will be offered by the Orpheum-Strand theater. This sensational picture is built around the thrilling fight of the government to keep opium out of this country, and is called "Hop, the Devil's Brew."

The rapid spread of the use of habit-forming drugs has finally aroused a nation-wide crusade.

For many years, little by little, the use of narcotics has spread. Like many other undesirable customs, creatures of the underworld have originally indulged in the use of habit-forming drugs.

At all events, so appalling had become the use of drugs, and so dreadful the possibilities of its effect upon its victims, that public-spirited citizens throughout the country ultimately began a crusade which finally has amounted to a nation-wide determination to rid the country of drug fiends.

The battle of the government to keep opium out of the United States has been made the subject of this thrilling photoplay.

In producing this film for Bluebird Photoplays, Inc., the government officials in the custom service co-operated to make the scenes and incidents authentic. While the photoplay is intended largely to illustrate the baneful influence of habit-forming drugs, there is an interesting story to lend attractiveness to the production. The film is interspersed with exciting incidents on land and sea. There are picturesque and authentic views of San Francisco's Chinatown, and many realistic scenes along the wharves and water front which depict the battle between the officials and the opium smugglers.

MANY STARS IN TRIANGLE PHOTOPLAY AT THE REX

Motion pictures, as shown in Triangle productions, the latest combination of producing talent, enable audiences to view more real stars in one play than the speaking stage can afford to offer. When David W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett, those giants of the motion picture world, combined their forces, they set out to employ the greatest talent available, and this they appear to have done.

Because one picture is duplicated many times and shown in different theaters the country over at one time, several stars can be paid high salaries to appear in the same production, as for example, "The Last Act," announced for a three-day run at the Rex, with Miss Bessie Barriscale, Harry C. Keenan, Clara Williams and other able associates. This picture, with this latest favorite of the theater public, Bessie Barriscale, is to be seen first at the Rex tomorrow.

The story is one of a woman's sacrifice of her married lover to the wife who had befriended her. Those who have learned to admire Bessie Barriscale can easily imagine to what heights of emotion such a play permits this gifted woman to reach.

Miss Barriscale will come again to the Rex along with other notable Triangle stars from time to time, but Eastern critics who have seen this, her latest picture, urge their patrons not to fail to see "The Last Act." Special music for the $10,000 pipe organ and selected orchestra at the Rex is arranged for all these Triangle "triumphs."

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—"The Mischief Makers," burlesque.
ORPHEUM-STRAND—Ida Schnall in "Undine," photoplay.
NEW GRAND—Vaudeville and photoplay.
REX — De Wolf Hopper in "Don Quixote," photoplay.
LYRIC—Miss Florence Rockwell in "He Fell in Love With His Wife," photoplay.

Theater Gossip.

All artists are temperamental, and a leading woman or prima donna who has not some marked idiosyncrasy is considered odd if a male star, however, has similar weaknesses, his manager generally regards him as a "nut."

It has always been the boast of Florence Stone, who will be seen at the Lyceum on St. Patrick's day, March 17, in "The Marriage Game," that she is possessed of no foibles, save perhaps, her affection for two dogs, both by the way, over 15 years of age. For years her manager, Mr. Bainbridge, and others of her company, watched Miss Stone, for evidences of some vagary, but in vain.

Recently, however, one was found, and when cornered, Miss Stone 'fessed up, and admitted it. The well known actress "hears" with her hands, although she has no auricular affection. The disclosure came the other day in St. Paul, where Miss Stone and a party of friends sat in a box at the Auditorium, watching a matinee performance of the "Ballet Russe."

The wonderful Russian dancers are accompanied by an orchestra of seventy-two musicians. Miss Stone is passionately fond of symphony music. The moment the music commenced Miss Stone promptly removed her gloves, and although thus departing from fashion's stern decree, she sat through the long performance, barehanded. Manager Bainbridge, who had often noticed that in important roles his leading woman invariably removed her gloves after her first stage entrance, demanded the reason.

"Well," laughed the actress, "now that you have noticed it, I suppose I may as well tell. I can't hear with gloves on; further, I can not play an important role with my hands covered. It seems that I have got to 'feel' what is being said to me by the other actors. The same is true when I hear a big orchestra, or a big band. Some way, I have to 'feel' it, and that sense of feeling comes through my hands. Odd, I admit, but I can't help it. My aunt, the late Fannie Davenport, was the same way. I have an actress friend, who can not memorize a line of her part with her shoes on. She sits in her room barefooted when she studies. No, it is not I? but if it was I wouldn't tell, and you could never find out."

screen star, Robert Edeson, in a stirring and romantic five-part production, "The Cave Man."

Robert Edeson's versatility as an actor is well known to Duluthians. His first screen success was that gripping drama, "Mortaln," which was shown in this city some time ago.

The story of "The Cave Man" tells how a coalheaver, Haulick Smagg (Robert Edeson), suddenly becomes rich and is lured into the snare of a society coquette, who, after playing with him as she likes, spurns his love that he declares for her.

He leaves in a terrible rage, vowing revenge on her. How he falls into her coils again, and how he uses cave-man methods to win her, is told in five thrilling and exciting parts that will hold the attention of its audience throughout. The regular Hearst-Vitagraph Weekly, depicting current events of the world, will also be shown.

name of the play that comes to the Lyric today and tomorrow, with Miss Florence Rockwell as the star. It is an excellent story of country life with all the pathos, tragedy and activity necessary to make it attractive to city folk as well. It is a real drama, the plot and story are realistic, although startling in conception, and a real surprise is in store for theater-goers, for the picture and play are out of the ordinary—"something different."

Those who have seen the picture say that Miss Rockwell does well by her part, as she always does, and that she will lose none of her popularity, but gain by her strong work.

What is probably the biggest vaudeville hit of the season at the New Grand are the Boudini Brothers on the present bill, which closes with today's performances. These two boys have been rightly termed "wizards of the accordion" for the music they get from these beautifully toned instruments is remarkable. Their repertoire ranges from popular selections from grand opera to the latest ragtime numbers. Louie London in character songs; Amoros and Mulvey, offering a singing, talking and dancing diversion, and Eller's Novelty circus make up the remainder of the vaudeville program.

GRAND SHOW CLOSING ENGAGEMENT

One of the popular Stingaree stories, "La Paloma," a three-reel subject featuring Mary Anderson; Sis Hopkins in "A Leap Year Wooing" and "A Song From the Heart," a drama, complete the bill.

Tomorrow honors are divided between the vaudeville program and Charlie Chaplin in his latest fun festival, "A Night at the Show." Marguerite Francis and partner in a novelty introducing comic tumbling on stilts; Dale and Boyle in a tuneful swaying bit; Brown and Jackson in a comedy talking and singing diversion, "The Club Man" and "The Suffragette," and the Three Bartos, athletes, are on vaudeville program. The Selig-Tribune News pictorial and a routine of excellent photoplays balance up the program.

TODAY IN HISTORY.

Andrew Jackson born, 1767.

This American general and seventh president of the United States was born in South Carolina of Scotch-Irish stock, rugged though poor in purse. He participated in the latter part of the Revolution, though but 8 years old when Lexington was fought. Orphaned, he worked at the saddlery trade, studied law, with horse-racing and cock-fighting as diversions; appointed public prosecutor in the wilds of Tennessee, 1788; congressman, 1796; United States senator, 1796, resigning 1798; judge of Tennessee supreme court 1798-1804; in business, 1804-1811; put down several Indian uprisings and became a popular hero by winning the battle of New Orleans Jan. 8, 1815; two weeks after the peace treaty had been signed at Ghent. Fighting the Creeks and Seminoles, he invaded Spanish Florida without authority. Became governor of Florida when it was ceded, 1821. United States senator again 1823; unsuccessful presidential candidate, 1824; president, 1829-1837, naming his successor, Van Buren.

THE WILSON TIDE IS STRONG.

Though there was at least the semblance of a contest on the Republican presidential ticket and none whatever on the Democratic, President Wilson standing alone, for the first time in the history of the primary in this city the Democratic vote yesterday was far greater than the Republican. The Wilson vote was far in excess of the combined Republican vote.

Moreover, hundreds of voters who have hitherto voted the Republican ticket asked for and voted the "Wilson" ticket. This was reported from every precinct in the city.

This is at once a fine showing of the public confidence in the president and a significant indication of which way the political wind is blowing.

So far as the contest for delegates is concerned, both tickets were on the same basis, there being rather warm contests in both parties. The Democratic candidates recommended by the St. Paul conference won out by an overwhelming vote in Duluth and the surrounding country, as well as in the state at large.

Hundreds upon hundreds of voters in Duluth went to the polls and asked for Democratic ballots simply because they have confidence in the president, because they approve his policies, and because they want him to be re-elected. In a presidential primary offering so little attraction to the indifferent voter who has to be tempted out by a sharp contest for important offices, the showing of yesterday's vote is a splendid tribute to the president, and as the election officials in every precinct can testify, very largely a non-partisan tribute.

On the other hand, the small Republican vote shows a languid condition in the party rank and file, and an absolute lack of interest in the party's future on the part of the great mass of voters who are citizens first and partisans second, if at all—increasingly, partisans not at all.

There is great comfort and assurance in yesterday's vote for the friends of the president, and little of either for those who hope to defeat him on the empty rallying cry of Republican partisanship.

The presidential primary campaign might almost be called a smokeless battle.

SIKES.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer complains because some good old Anglo-Saxon words have gone out of use when they are still needed, and among others it cites the word "sike." "A sike," it says—and the dictionary bears it out except that instead of being a neglected Anglo-Saxon word it is obsolete Scottish and English dialect, "is a brook or rill that makes a handsome showing in spring and autumn but which is quite dry in midsummer. It requires a dozen words or more to tell what a sike really is. And yet 'sike' has been permitted to go by the board while needless superfluities have retained places of honor in the language."

There truly is a real need for the word, and it is a pity it is lost. But on second thought it seems much more valuable for figurative uses than for literal use.

For instance, there is the religion which makes a handsome showing" on Sunday and then is packed away in cotton wool for the rest of the week, while its exceptionally careful owner goes about his nefarious business unhampered by conscience or the dictates of religion. The word "sike" ought to be available to describe that kind of religion.

And then there's the kind of public spirit a good many people have. It "makes a handsome showing" when their country is at war or when there is a hot election campaign on; but in between, when there is quite as much need of interest in public affairs and of patriotism, it runs quite dry while thieves break into the public treasury and steal, and insidious privilege undermines the foundations of freedom. That surely is a "sikish" patriotism that needs a short, sharp word to describe it.

By all means, if it is possible to revive "sike," let's do it.

And yet there are those who wonder why people don't like to cash checks for strangers.

THE HUGHES ATTITUDE.

Though the nomination of Roosevelt at Chicago seems virtually a foregone conclusion, still there is renewed talk of Justice Hughes, and it is putting him into an exceedingly awkward and dangerous position.

The New Republic is entirely right when it says, in an editorial reproduced on this page, that he should at once declare himself positively and finally, one way or another.

Justice Hughes has spoken several times on his relationship to the presidency, but always in an ambiguous way. He says that he is "not in politics," but so has many a man who has covertly been seeking office. He declares that he is not seeking the nomination, and that is obvious; but so does Roosevelt declare that he is not seeking the nomination. Never has he said that he would not accept a nomination if it were tendered him; and so he has left those who seek his nomination free to work for it as hard as they please.

He knows that efforts to contrive his nomination at Chicago are under way. He knows that there is a possibility that the Republicans will turn to him if a few ballots fail to show a choice among those who are definitely in the field. He must know that not one of those now actually in the field stands the remotest show of nomination, and that the nomination now lies between himself and Col. Roosevelt.

If Justice Hughes has it in his mind to accept a nomination if it is tendered him, then he should at once resign from the supreme bench and announce his views on the issues of the day. Every issue that will figure in this campaign is new since the last time Justice Hughes expressed himself upon a national question. Nobody knows how he stands on any of these issues; and it is a pathetic commentary on the poverty of the Republican party that so many of its members, in desperate hope of victory, are willing to take him "sight unseen," and without the smallest knowledge of his views. For all they know he may hold views squarely in accord with those of President Wilson.

It is his duty to himself, to the Republican party, to the dignity of the supreme court of the United States, and to the country, to resolve all doubts. If he is willing to run if he is nominated, then he should leave the supreme bench now, and thus avoid all possibility of the charge that the supreme court of the United States has been used in a party intrigue to gain the presidency.

On the other hand, if he is not willing to accept a nomination, he should say so, and thus simplify the Republican situation. When men like Senator Nelson are writing home from Washington to say that they believe Justice Hughes will run, his position is made intolerably ambiguous, and he should immediately remove all ambiguity from the situation by a positive declaration one way or another.

The fact that German-American influences are being exercised in his behalf in Minnesota as against Roosevelt increases the delicacy of the situation.

The demand that this be done does not, as the New Republic truly says, come either from Republicans anxious to "smoke him out" or from Democrats who fear his nomination, "but from his admirers and friends who feel that the ambiguity of his position today is injuring the presidency, the court and Mr. Hughes himself."

It is pitiful to think how some of the Texas cowboys would hate to take part in the expedition after Villa.

THE NEEDS OF AGRICULTURE.

If the needs of agriculture in this country have been better put than they are in this compact statement by F. D. Coburn of Kansas in the New York Annalist, we never have happened to see it:

> The betterment of agriculture, as I see it, calls for more careful selection of seed, more thorough tillage of the land—putting the same or more labor on a reduced acreage—giving increased attention to some line or lines of animal husbandry, producing on the farm more of what is consumed in the home instead of depending on "the store," and a closely organized co-operation in buying and selling.

A ponderous volume might have been written without saying more or saying it half so well.

Most ex-mayors are simply put on the shelf, whether that is in a cabinet or not.

At that it is perfectly logical that the Shakespeare-Bacon controversy should bob up so near the stockyards.

Now Rochester, N. Y., is to have a place where they will treat dyspeptics. What is there about that name "Rochester," anyway?

Harvard authorities say "damn" is not swearing. But maybe, at Harvard, they pronounce it with the "a" having the same sound as in "rah."

Let Justice Hughes Declare Himself

Editorial in the New Republic.

Justice Hughes is being placed in an extraordinarily difficult position, caught, so to speak, between two very respectable traditions. There is the tradition of the supreme court, which says that a man entering it must give up all thought of any other position. It is summed up in the aphorism that "a justice of the supreme court who seeks the presidency is fit neither for the office he holds nor the one to which he aspires." But there is another tradition deep in American feeling which says that no man has the right to refuse a call from the people. Out of this conflict arises the dilemma in which Justice Hughes finds himself. This does not mean that there are not more human considerations entering into his decision. Mr. Hughes being a man is probably not moved by "traditions" alone; the conflict between his love of the bench and his sense of the opportunity that belongs to the president no doubt plays a role in his thinking.

But the conflict of tradition is sufficient to explain the ambiguity of his present attitude. For it is ambiguous. He has not withdrawn his name as unmistakably as Mr. Garrison did. Justice Hughes knows that there is a lively movement on foot to nominate him at Chicago. He knows that he could stop that movement completely if he wished to. But he has not chosen to do that. Instead he has made it perfectly clear that he is not seeking the nomination, and that personally he is "not in politics." But he is permitting his friends to go ahead on the assumption that if the convention calls him he will accept. In other words he is sincerely trying to abide by both traditions—refusing to seek the office and refusing to make it impossible for the office to seek him.

It would be a dull person who didn't appreciate his difficulty. But there is something greater at stake in this election than personal feeling or historic tradition. The country has a right to demand that the views of the candidates on all great questions be made perfectly clear. It cannot wait till after the nomination to find out what the nominee thinks about the issues of the day. For in this election Americans dare not choose in the dark.

Justice Hughes should declare himself in the next few weeks. He should either stop the agitation for him, or announce his candidacy and resign from the bench. He owes that to the nation. It is a demand which comes not alone from his political enemies trying to "smoke him out," but from his admirers and friends who feel that the ambiguity of his position today is injuring the presidency, the court and Mr. Hughes himself.

The Boston Petitioners

Concerning the Boston petition against Brandeis, the New Republic says:

"Among the petitioners there were a few 'outsiders,' but the overwhelming majority were men more closely connected with one another by economic, social and family ties than existed in the case of any other similar community in the country. For the most part they transact the same kind of business in the same neighborhood; they belong to the same clubs; they are bound together by a most complicated system of relationships by blood and marriage.

"They come of a proud line and are jealous of a noble tradition; but they cannot expect to escape the penalty of uniting so much mutual intimacy with so much exclusiveness. The penalty is that of being peculiarly subject to group influences and judgments. They form an essentially ingrowing community. Very few outsiders make more than a superficial impression on their business and social behavior, and the insiders act and react most intensely on one another. For this reason they count for very much less than their intelligence, education and economic power entitle them to count in American public affairs.

"Ordinarily a community of this kind can lead its own exclusive life without provoking criticism; but when it acts aggressively in public practically as a unit, its members challenge public attention and should not resent public scrutiny. The contra-Brandeis petitioners started on a deadly errand. They undertook to destroy the reputation of a man, to prevent a public servant from using his great abilities to the best public advantage. They have exhibited only their own disqualification to draw an indictment."

The Meaning of American Citizenship.

Agnes Repplier in the Atlantic: The main thing to be borne in mind is that Americanization does not mean only an increase of opportunity for the alien, an effort toward his permanent well-being. It means also service and sacrifice on his part. This is what citizenship entails, although voters and those who clamor for the vote seldom take into account such an inexorable truth. The process of assimilation must go deeper than the polling booth and the trade union can carry it. Democracy forever teases us with the contrast between its ideals and its realities, between its heroic possibilities and its sorry achievements. But it is our appointed road, and the stones over which we perpetually stumble deny us the drowsy perils of content.

Burial Parties in the Trenches.

James Norman Hall in the Atlantic: Rarely a night passed without its burial parties. "Digging in the garden," Tommy calls the gravemaking. The bodies, wrapped in blankets or waterproof ground sheets, are lifted over the parados and carried back a convenient twenty yards or more. The desolation of that garden was indescribable. It was strewn with wreckage, gaping with shell holes, billowing with numberless nameless graves, a waste land speechlessly pathetic. The poplars and willow hedges had been blasted and splintered by shell fire. Tommy calls these "Kaiser Bill's flowers." Coming from England, he feels more deeply than he would care to admit the crimes done to trees in the name of war.

Rippling Rhymes

By Walt Mason

Spring at Hand.

Old Winter's on the downward grade, he soon will cease to blow; so burnish up the good old spade, and grind the trusty hoe; O grind the trusty hoe, my friends, and make it gleam like glass, for when the stormy winter ends, we plant our garden sass. The birds will soon be winging back from sunny Southern climes; they'll build their nests around your shack, and sing to beat the chimes; they'll sing to beat the chimes, my boys, among the swaying trees, and while they raise their cheerful noise, we'll plant our beans and peas. The Frost King soon will lose his grip, the frozen brooks run free, and lambs and colts and calves will skip around in frantic glee; they'll skip in frantic glee, my dears, for all young things are brash; and when the snowdrift disappears, we'll sow our succotash.

Talks on Thrift

Issued by the American Bankers' Association.

Whisky's Decreasing Tax on Thrift.

Whatever may be the consensus of opinion as to the necessity for and desirability of alcoholic liquors as beverages, no thinking man will deny that drinking is an expensive habit, costly both to the individual and to the state. A dollar can be spent quicker and with less to show for it at the bar than in any other way, and the man who is a "good spender" and keeps pace with the crowd around the social glass must keep a pace that kills.

Of late years the production and consumption of liquors and beer has increased enormously, and from observation one would conclude that everybody drinks a little and most people too much. The resultant evils are widespread and far-reaching, even to the third and four generation, for the cost does not end with the waiter's check, but with the bills for police, almshouses, prisons and potter's fields.

The man who indulges this habit must realize that he is putting a self-imposed tax upon his thrift, as well as a tax upon his energies. Of what avail to work hard and then spend to no useful end? Why work for the man who stands behind the bar? Why spend a day's wages in half an hour and get nothing for it but a thrill? If the state should put the same tax upon his income that he puts upon himself, he would rebel. Then, too, he who spends his money thus must realize that he is simply putting money in the bank for the other fellow. It may take a circuitous route to get there, but eventually it will find lodgment in some bank, where it will work for somebody, perhaps harder than he worked for it. And the easiest way to get it in a bank quick—to the other fellow's account—is to buy the drinks for the crowd.

Cheering news along this line comes from government reports on the consumption of liquor for the past year. Alcohol is lessening its tax upon thrift. The consumption of liquor in 1913 was 143,220,056 gallons. In 1914 it was 139,138,501 gallons, while in 1915 it was 125,155,178 gallons, a net decrease of 18,000,000 gallons in two years. Likewise in the matter of tobacco. In 1915 we burned up 600,000,000 less cigars than heretofore in a single year, and the government's tobacco revenues decreased $2,500,000. One hundred and eight distilleries went out of business in 1915 and forty-one breweries ceased to brew. Forty per cent of our government revenues have been derived from liquor taxes, and in 1915 these revenues fell off over $22,000,000.

Whatever may be the cause for this commendable showing—whether because of the thoughts of war and what it might mean, or whether as a people we are beginning to realize that this is a tax; or whether it is because in many places you can't get a lawful drink, the fact remains that we are drinking less and saving more.

Whether a man figures that drinking is expensive, or harmful, matters little as long as he stops. This conclusion is very apt to fatten his pocketbook somewhat and pad his pay envelope and make him a better citizen. When he concludes that indulgence in any form of extravagance can get him nowhere but downwards, and thrift will surely get him upwards, he has chosen well; for thrift consists not only in doing some things, but refraining from doing others, the chief of which is that habit which takes your all and gives nothing in return but regret, and regrets are costly emotions.

The Vagabonds.

We are two travelers, Roger and I.
Roger's my dog—come here, you scamp!
Jump for the gentleman—mind your eye!
Over the table—look out for the lamp!
The rogue is growing a little old;
Five years we've tramped through wind and weather,
And slept outdoors when nights were cold,
And ate and drank—and starved—together.

We've learned what comfort is, I tell you!
A bed on the floor, a bit of rosin,
A fire to thaw our thumbs (poor fellow!
The paw he holds up there's been frozen),
Plenty of catgut for my fiddle
(This outdoor business is bad for strings),
Then a few hot buckwheats hot from the griddle,
And Roger and I set up for kings!

No, thank you, sir—I never drink;
Roger and I are exceedingly moral—
Aren't we, Roger—see him wink!
Well, something hot, then, we won't quarrel,
He's thirsty, too, see him nod his head?
What a pity, sir, that dogs can't talk!
He understands every word that's said,
And he knows good milk from water and chalk.

The truth is, sir, now I reflect,
I've been so sadly given to grog,
I wonder I've not lost the respect
(Here's to you, sir!) even of my dog.
But he sticks by, through thick and thin;
And this old coat, with its empty pockets,
And rags that smell of tobacco and gin,
He'll follow while he has eyes in his sockets.

There isn't another creature living
Would do it, and prove, through every disaster,
So fond, so faithful and so forgiving,
To such a miserable, thankless master!
No, sir! see him wag his tail and grin!
By George, it makes my old eyes water!
That is, there is something in this gin
That chokes a fellow. But no matter.

Another glass, and strong, to deaden
This pain, then Roger and I will start,
I wonder has he such a lumpish, leaden
Aching thing in place of a heart?
He is sad sometimes, and would weep, if he could,
No doubt remembering things that were—
A virtuous kennel, with plenty of food,
And himself a sober, respectable cur.

I'm better now; that glass was warming—
You rascal! limber your lazy feet!
We must be fiddling and performing
For supper and bed, or starve in the street—
Not a very gay life to lead, you think?
But soon we shall go where lodgings are free,
And the sleepers need neither victuals nor drink—
The sooner the better for Roger and me!

Filling the Lonesome Hours.

The Country Gentleman: Less than a third of the people in the average American neighborhood are natives. In thousands of cases practically all the population was born elsewhere. So why stand off when someone moves in from another section? Why be niggard with neighborliness?

Of course one may make an occasional mistake, but for every undesirable acquaintance we find several good people worth knowing. You, your neighbor and the newcomer are problems of your community, and as each of you may be the other two, the problem ought to be simple.

If you are an older resident greet the newcomer. There is a double blessing in a welcome. In giving you get.

If you are the newcomer—well, your duty was never better stated than in these words of Ruskin:

> It is a good and safe rule to sojourn in any place as if you meant to spend your life there, never omitting an opportunity of doing a kindness or speaking a true word or making a friend.

The way to fill the lonesome hours is to be friendly.

Nothing Unusual.

"Yes, about three hundred manuscripts."

Political Straws in the Minnesota Breezes

Campaign Subjects Discussed by Minnesota Editors.

As to Iverson and the Candidacy.

Princeton Union: Some people seem to think that Samuel G. Iverson has no right to remain in the field as a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor. Why not? There is no better qualified man in the state for the position of governor than Mr. Iverson, and if he thinks he has a reasonable chance of winning there is no reason why he should withdraw from the race. While we may doubt Mr. Iverson's judgment we admire his staying qualities.

Why Not Try the Want Ads?

Coleraine Iron News: Northern Minnesota needs a Republican daily—a real Republican daily.

Keeping an Eye on Sam.

Waseca Herald: The Republican machine is trying hard to get Sam Iverson out of the race for governor. But during his political career Sam has run counter to the wishes of some machine politicians and won out, and he may decide to do so again.

A Case of Bull.

Dawson Sentinel: Roosevelt's friends are busy "bulling" his presidential stock. Which undoubtedly makes the colonel "feel bully."

Kellogg and the Petition.

Preston Times: Certain friends of Clapp and Eberhart are disposed to criticize those of the editors who signed the petition calling upon Frank Kellogg to become a candidate for United States senator, and are seeking in every way to belittle the movement. Anyway, the editors in question but exercised the rights accorded every American citizen—the right to petition—and the incident demonstrated the fact that Mr. Kellogg has a positive strength which the other candidates lack.

Roosevelt's Chances.

Sandstone Courier: It now looks very much as though the Republican party is to take Roosevelt back into the fold, in order to combine forces against Wilson; but Roosevelt is too anxious to get into war to please the majority of the people in this peace-loving nation.

"Playing Politics."

Brainerd Tribune: The Duluth News Tribune in a recent editorial refers to Roosevelt's "refusal to play politics." When did this happen? It will indeed be news to the public to learn that Roosevelt, rated as the most unscrupulous and conscienceless as well as the shrewdest politician in the country, has ever ceased "playing politics." He has done nothing but "play politics" and pose for the spotlight in his ambition to get back into public office since he vacated the presidential chair—as he did before he reached it. Roosevelt is the most successful as well as the most shameless demagogue in American political history.

"His disregard of his own fortunes and the seemly deliberate placing of himself without the pale of politics, has captured a large share of popular enthusiasm," says the News Tribune.

And every word he has uttered, every line he has written, was coolly and deliberately calculated and made public at the opportune moment for the express purpose of capturing "popular enthusiasm." Doesn't his past record as a candidate and his demagogical efforts to attract the attention of the people prove it?

Michigan Musings

Brief Paragraphs From the Wolverine State Press.

Passing Justice Along.

Marquette Chronicle: After getting thoroughly mad at their partners whose mistakes lost the prize at the bridge parties, some women are just angry enough to go home and wallop their boys for playing marbles for keeps.

Now Watch It Multiply.

Marquette Mining Journal: You can't stop a town that once gets the virus of progress in its blood. Menominee has purchased an adding machine.

An Entering Wedge of Hope.

Detroit Free Press: The New Jersey board of education has ruled that a boy is not compelled to wear a collar to school. Now if he can only get dispensation for his ears.

Cheering William Along.

Iron Mountain Press: William G. Simpson of Detroit would be president of the United States and has filed his petition for the Republican nomination with the secretary of state. Never heard of Simpson? Neither did The Press until he filed his petition. We can now state that he is a former Bull Mooser. In addition Mr. Simpson has the distinction of having run for alderman in Detroit and not receiving a single vote. He was sick in a hospital and couldn't vote for himself. However, our primary law accords Simpson the right to run for president at a very considerable expense to the dear people. Simpson say he will at least have one vote in the primary—if sickness does not prevent.

And All Quite As Active.

Jackson Citizen Press: If things keep up, Michigan will be as full of presidential candidates as a dog is full of fleas.

Quick, Watson, the Slapstick!

Detroit Times: May we observe that the Detroit man who shot himself four times and then asked for snuff, seems to have been bound and determined to blow his head off?

Same As Every Other Week.

Marquette Chronicle: "Baby Week" brought out a lot of splendid advice from people who never had one.

They Guessed Right This Time.

Hancock Copper Journal: At last the railroads have become convinced that the present wave of prosperity is not a temporary phenomenon, but is here to stay for a while. And railroad men are generally pretty good judges of business conditions.

Sacrifice and Solidarity

Life: America wants world peace. America is coming to see clearly that this means world organization. America has not yet reached the willingness to make the necessary sacrifices for world organization and world peace.

When the colonies were banded together to form the United States, the larger and more prosperous colonies yielded much to the weaker. Today Nevada wields as much power in the national senate as New York with 111 times Nevada's population. And so when the nations unite to form a world government, the large and prosperous nations must expect to make some sacrifices. If we have an international lower chamber on the basis of population (or perhaps literate population), we must have an international upper chamber on the basis of nationality.

Nor can we consistently move for a world government if we frame our tariffs and our immigration laws solely for our own ease and enrichment. It is an essential of our national government that persons and goods shall move freely among the states. It is equally an essential of international government that persons and goods shall move freely among the nations. We cannot have solidarity without some measure of sacrifice.

America wants world peace. Some day she will gladly pay the price.

A "Hero" Seeks a Job

Editorial in the Washington Star (Republican).

This is Mr. Roosevelt's latest announcement:

> "I will not enter into any fight for the nomination, and I will not permit any factional fight to be made in my behalf.
> "Indeed, I will go further, and say that it would be a mistake to nominate me unless the country has in its mood something of the heroic, unless it feels not only like devoting itself to ideals, but to the purpose measurably to realize those ideals in action."

Modest? Let us call it characteristic. "You want to do something heroic, and you need a hero to lead you. The hero? Behold him!" Which is a twentieth century rendering of the famous pronunciamento of the French king, "The state? It is I!"

Undoubtedly Mr. Roosevelt believes this. And why not? The men who surround him do. They can see nothing else to the situation. In their opinion, it is Roosevelt or chaos. In the Democratic party they observe nothing but failure; in the Republican party nothing but incapacity. Why choose between the two? Why not reject both? Why not call to power the new party led by a popular favorite and headed for a new goal?

Hearing this sentiment so often from those near and dear to him, and wanting to believe it, what more natural than for Mr. Roosevelt to stand for it over his own signature?

The country is in the mood for something heroic, but for nothing seriocomic. It wants to strengthen itself in every way against any and every emergency the startling world conditions suggest. It needs an adequate national defense. It should have a new tariff law. An American merchant marine is absolutely essential to the realization of the national plan for a much larger foreign trade. But this can be accomplished without bluster, or attitudinizing, or putting a chip on Uncle Sam's shoulder. There is a heroism in quiet advancement to a great end.

Mr. Roosevelt has no tariff record. If he has ever had a plan for an American merchant marine the country has never been advised of it. As for a larger army and navy, he is not in advance of the Republican leaders, and is no more an authority than any one of a dozen who can be mentioned and yet are asking no special consideration on that score. His service in the navy department covered less than a year, and in the army only a few months. Should we listen to him with bated breath on the details of preparedness? Welcome as his support is, it does not, considered singly, entitle him to leadership.

Much as he and his supporters think so, he is not the indispensable man at this time. We have not yet reached the indispensable stage. And if we ever do reach it, we shall not call the man president, but by some title confessing popular government a failure.

Just a Moment

Daily Strength and Cheer.

Compiled by John G. Quinlan, the Sunshine Man.

"If thou shalt hearken unto the voice of the Lord thy God, blessed shalt thou be in the city."—Deut. xxviii, 2, 3.

The city is full of care, and he who has to go there from day to day finds it to be a place of great wear and tear. It is full of noise, and stir, and bustle, and soro travail: many are its temptations, losses and worries. But to go there with the divine blessing takes off the edge of its difficulty; to remain there with that blessing is to find pleasure in its duties, and strength equal to its demands.

A blessing in the city may not make us great, but it will keep us good; it may not make us rich, but it will preserve us honest. Whether we are porters, or clerks, or managers, or merchants, or magistrates, the city will afford us opportunities for usefulness. It is good fishing where there are shoals of fish, and it is hopeful to work for our Lord amid the thronging crowds. We might prefer the quiet of a country life; but if called to town, we may certainly prefer it because there is room for our energies.

Today let us expect good things because of this promise, and let our care be to have an open ear to the voice of the Lord, and a ready hand to execute his bidding. Obedience brings the blessing. "In keeping His commandments there is great reward."—C. H. Spurgeon.

Know Not "Impossible."

Carlyle: Know that "impossible," where truth and mercy and the everlasting voice of Nature order, has no place in the brave man's dictionary. That when all men have said "Impossible," and tumbled noisily elsewhither, and thou alone art left, then first thy time and possibility have come. It is for thee now; do thou that, and ask no man's counsel, but thy own only and God's. Brother, thou hast possibility in thee for much; the possibility of writing on the eternal skies the record of a heroic life.

The complaint is sworn to by Andreas R. Merritt and charges that Stratton caused the Merritts by false representations in May, 1892, to purchase $450,000 of stock in the Monarch Coal and Coke company by claiming this company had sole mineral rights to 50,000 acres of coal lands in Kentucky. Col. T. F. Singiser, who was associated with Stratton in the deal, is out of the jurisdiction of this state, being in Kentucky, but an effort will be made to get him. DOES ANYBODY KNOW THIS WALTER COLE?

To the Editor of The Herald:

In February, 1915, my son, Walter Cole, left Gilbert, Minn., for Minneapolis, and in July, 1915, I had word from him that he was leaving for South Dakota to do carpenter work there. Since then I have not heard from him.

If any reader of your paper knows his whereabouts it would be doing me a great favor if they would let me know his present address. Will you kindly publish this in your Open Court and oblige. Yours truly,

WELCOMES RECRUITS.

To the Editor of The Herald:

So the breweries are going to refuse to sell liquor to so-called "blind-pigs," thereby assisting in enforcing the liquor laws.

Great Guns! Have they got converted, or are they only kiddin' us? Arrogant and powerful, the liquor traffic has long defied regulation and control. Trampling upon the sovereignty of the electors, it has continuously shipped liquor into dry territory, nullifying the expressed will of the people, and then brazenly told us, "Prohibition don't prohibit," "can't be enforced," etc.

Until that glad day when there "ain't goin' to be no breweries," we welcome the brewers into the ranks of the great reform.

THE HOME TOWN PEOPLE AND CATALOGUE HOUSES

To the Editor of The Herald:

I have been a reader of The Herald for fourteen years and never had any occasion to get into the Open Court, but I would like to say just a few words in regard to a little article I saw published in the Pine Knot, paper published in Cloquet, in regard to citizens sending their money to mail order houses out of their own town and not spending it at home to help their own town. The writer of the article thought it hurt our town. All very well and good, but he forgot to say anything about the married men who had to leave their families to go somewhere else to earn money to support their families.

I see by The Herald that Chief of Police McKercher says they must go; there is no excuse, as there is lots of work, and they must get out of town, get a job or go to jail. Well, if McKercher would come over to Cloquet I can show him lots of hard-working married men, true-blue American citizens, who have no job and cannot get one. McKercher can drive the bums over here and they will give them work before they will a married man who lives here. "Single men and outsiders first" is the way Cloquet does it.

If there is anyone that doubts my word, come to me and I will prove it. I live here. I own my own home. I worked for 19 cents per hour and took care of my family and paid for my home. Can any one beat it? And I have worked four weeks in our booming city in sixteen months. I may not be any good, but I can get $3 and $4 a day outside of the city.

There is something wrong here. I am not alone. There are hundreds of married men who are not working here. I do not believe the managers of these institutions know of this or they would not let this kind of work go on.

Now Cloquet has a Commercial club and I think it is its duty to place it before the managers of these institutions and see that married men have work before outsiders and single men. Our merchants belong to the club; they trust these men. How can the men pay if they can't get work? It is up to the storekeepers to do something to see they get work. If they can work the storekeeper could throw his books away.

Now I think it is the married man and the taxpayer who keep up our city, and not the floater who drops in for a few days' work and then dangles. Get down to business and see that every man in Cloquet—married man—has work, and then you will have a good city.

Thanking you for this space, I remain, yours truly,

CHARLES BROWER.

"THE HEATHEN'S PRAYER."

To the Editor of The Herald:

I noticed in the Open Court of March 13 a request for "The Heathen's Prayer." I will enclose the same, expecting to see it in the Open Court. Am thanking you in advance. E. P.

West Duluth, March 14.

The Heathen's Prayer.

"O Mumbo Jumbo, god of stone, we kneel in terror at thy throne! Save, O save us, if you can, from the clutches of the Christian man! Save us from kaiser, king and czar—and, worse than all, from fierce T. R.! We sit in darkness, so they say—O Mumbo, keep us there, we pray! The only thing we heathen fear is that the Christians may come here! Hold back these creatures from our shores, and save us from their bloody wars! They'd confiscate our native soil, and doom us all to lives of toil; the more they made us slave and sweat, the more they'd have us in their debt; and every blooming cocoanut tree would soon belong to some John D.—and if we ever should rebel, he'd have us heathen shot to h——! Good Mumbo Jumbo, god of stone, make the Christians leave us alone! Amen."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

This department does not pretend to be infallible. It will endeavor, however, to answer questions sent to it by readers of The Herald to the best of its ability, reserving the right to ignore all that are trifling or of concern only to the questioner, or that ask for advice on legal or medical questions.

To receive attention, every inquiry must bear the name and address of the person sending it. This is not wanted for publication, but as an evidence of good faith.

"Inquirer," Cloquet, Minn.: (1) In what year did "Home, Sweet Home" come out? (2) Also "Alice, Where Art Thou?" (3) How often is the "Congressional Record" published? (4) Who are entitled to receive it and what is the cost to the recipient?

Ans.: (1) 1823. (2) Perhaps some reader of The Herald can answer this. (3) Daily during the sessions of congress. (4) Free copies are distributed only as follows: To the vice president and each senator, 88; to the secretary and sergeant-at-arms of the senate, 20 each, and to the secretary, for office use, 10 copies; to each representative and delegate, 60; to the clerk and doorkeeper of the house, each 20, and to the clerk for office use, 10 copies, and for the use of representatives, 50 copies; to the sergeant-at-arms of the senate for the use of the senate, 20 copies. Subscriptions are accepted during the present session at the following rates: By mail postpaid, $8 for the session or $1.50 per month, payable in advance; single copies of 24 pages or less, 3 cents; each additional 8 pages, 1 cent extra. Remit by money order payable to Cornelius Ford, Public Printer, Washington, D. C.

"A Reader," International Falls, Minn.: The game is schafskopf. (1) How many points would a player make who holds both black queens if he takes every trick? (2) How many if the other three players take one trick? (3) How many if the other three players make snider? (4) If a player renounces one black queen and plays alone against the other three players, how many points does he make if he takes every trick? (5) How many if he loses one trick? (6) How many if the other three players make snider? (7) If a player renounces both black queens and the other three players do not make snider, how many points should he have? (8) How many if the other three players make snider? (9) How many points each should the three players get if they make game in all the above questions?

Ans.: There are nine different games of schafskopf, but apparently you play the game known as "two, four, six," with diamonds always trump and the two black queens and all four jacks the highest trump cards. If this is the game you play, the following are the scores made under the different conditions you name: (1) Six. (2) Four (unless they make snider in that one trick, which is unusual). (3) Two. (4) Six. (5) Four (unless that one trick makes snider). (6) Two. (7) Eight. (8) Four. (9) This is too vague to answer.

"A Subscriber," New Duluth: Which of the two ports ships more ore—Two Harbors or Escanaba? (2) What are the rest of the iron ore ports and what did they ship the last season?

"V. N.," Duluth: (1) How many representatives does Duluth elect, and what are their names? (2) How many senators are elected from Duluth, and who are they? (3) For how long are they elected?

DEATH TAKES B. F. SHIVELY

United States Senator From Indiana Passes Away at Washington.

Known as Expert in Tariff Legislation and Foreign Affairs.

Washington, March 15.—Benjamin F. Shively, senator from Indiana, and for years a prominent figure in congress, died late yesterday at a hospital here. He had been ill many months from a complication of diseases, and for more than a year had been unable to perform actively his official duties. He was 58 years old.

During three terms in the house and the seven years he has been in the senate Senator Shively had devoted his activities particularly to foreign affairs and tariff legislation. At the time of his death he was ranking Democratic member of the foreign relations committee, of which he had been acting chairman during the critical period preceding and following the American occupation of Vera Cruz.

In the house he has been regarded as a tariff expert, serving conspicuously on the ways and means committee, and later as a member of an important sub-committee of the senate finance committee, exerted a powerful influence in the framing of the Underwood-Simmons tariff law.

The announcement of Mr. Shively's death was received with many manifestations of sorrow in both the senate and house. Senator Kern, his colleague, in announcing it in the senate, said he was performing the saddest duty of his official life. Both there and in the house resolutions of regret were adopted, committees were appointed to attend the funeral and adjournment was taken as a further mark of respect.

Suffered From Diabetes.

Senator Shively had suffered from diabetes for nearly fifteen years, and resulting cancerous growths in the throat confined him in his bed February of last year. He improved with radium treatment, but was not able to attend the present session of congress, except on the day he took the oath of office for his second term. His condition became more critical Monday night, but toward morning he rallied. Yesterday he suffered another relapse, and Mrs. Shively and a son and a daughter were in the sick room during his last hours.

The body will be taken to South Bend, Ind., for burial. Vice President Marshall appointed Senators Kern, Smith of Georgia, Williams, Clapp, Johnson of Maine, Kenyon, Swanson, James, Sutherland, Martine, Phelan and Smith of Arizona to act as a guard of honor at the funeral.

Speaker Clark appointed the thirteen Indiana representatives and Representatives Igoe, Treadway, Austin, Lafean, J. H. C. Smith, Dunn and Tilson to attend for the house.

During his illness Senator Shively was visited several times by President Wilson, who regarded him as a warm personal friend. Tonight the president sent this letter of condolence to Mrs. Shively:

"My dear Mrs. Shively: I have just learned with the deepest sorrow of the death of your husband. Your own loss is tragical, and my heart goes out to you in deep and sincere sympathy. The loss of the country is very great, for he was moved as a public servant by high motives of duty to his state and the nation, and I join with his colleagues in deploring his death, as creating a vacancy in the highest councils of the country which cannot easily be filled. May God sustain you in this moment of your supreme sorrow. With great respect, your friend.

"WOODROW WILSON."

Born on Farm.

Benjamin Franklin Shively, born on a farm in St. Joseph county, Ind., on March 20, 1857, the son of the Rev. Joel Shively, a preacher-farmer, had been prominent in the political history of that state since 1884, when he was first elected to congress. He was sent to Washington then for the unexpired term of Maj. William H. Calkins, who resigned to accept the Republican nomination for governor. He was re-elected in 1886, 1888 and 1890, and declined to be a candidate in 1892.

When he left the house after these four terms, Mr. Shively returned to the practice of law at South Bend, and became one of the leading lawyers of Indiana.

The Democrats paid Mr. Shively the honor of giving him their party's complimentary vote for United States senator in 1903 and again in 1905 and elected him to the office on Jan. 14, 1909. He won over John Worth Kern, who later also became a United States senator, on the twentieth ballot, in the Democratic caucus. He was re-elected in 1914, by the direct vote of the people, the first senator to receive his election in this way in Indiana.

During his early life Mr. Shively had seriously considered becoming a carpenter, but when he learned that some of his chums were making $40 a month as teachers, he decided to be an educator and entered the Northern Indiana normal school.

After he became a member of congress he took up the study of law, and received his degree in that profession at the University of Michigan in 1886.

The newspaper profession at one time also almost won the senator. After teaching school for five years, during which time he saved some money, Mr. Shively invested his earnings in the Era, a country journal. For three years he struggled along, setting type, writing editorials, as well as news, and hustling for advertising. He gave up the profession of journalism in 1883 and devoted his time largely to politics. He was regarded as a strong and fighting leader and it was said of him that he never conducted a defensive campaign but was always aggressive.

Senator Shively, ever since he turned his back on the carpenter trade to become a school teacher, had taken a deep interest in education and for many years was a member of the board of trustees of Indiana university. He was president of the board for several years.

In 1889, Mr. Shively was married to Miss Laura Jenks, daughter of George A. Jenks of Pennsylvania, who was solicitor general in the first administration of Grover Cleveland. He is survived by his widow and three children, George Jenks, John Joel and Mary.

MEXICAN PAPER AT EL PASO SUPPRESSED

El Paso, Tex., March 15.—Fernando Gamiochipi, editor and proprietor of the El Paso Del Norte, official organ here of the Carranza government, was arrested last night and the edition of the paper which was to have been put on the streets today, confiscated. The direct cause of the action was an inflammatory article in which Gamiochipi called on all to prepare to defend themselves against "the common enemy" and predicted that all factions would unite if the Americans crossed the border.

"The Americans are prepared, the Mexicans must prepare," was one sentence.

Shortly after Gamiochipi was arrested, Andres Garcia, the Mexican consul here hurried to police headquarters and asked for the release of the prisoner. The police refused his request.

Two papers devoted to the interest of the Diazistas have recently been suppressed by the police.

Be Careful in Using Soap on Your Hair

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for it is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.—Advertisement.

RETURNING TO COLORS

Veteran of Three Wars Will Again Fight for England.

Was Wounded at Battle of Marne and Again Last August.

Deploring war as the greatest of all crimes and the present European conflict as nothing but wholesale murder, Donald Graham, veteran of the African and Boer wars and up to a year ago on the French front with the British army, last evening left for Fort Frances, Ont., where he will join the next Canadian contingent to leave for the European war zone.

"I know it is wrong to kill my brothers, for we all are brothers after all," declared the veteran warrior, "but it is my duty to fight for the colors and I have enlisted again. I only pray that the war will end very soon."

Graham says he is 50 years of age, but his experiences in three wars, have whitened his thin hair and he looks like a man of 60. He told his story at The Herald office yesterday afternoon.

On the day Germany declared war against Great Britain nearly twenty months ago, Graham was among the first to enlist again for the British cause. He was living just outside of London and he was a member of the first regiment to leave for France. He was a member of the battalion that held out against the Germans during the rush for Paris and was wounded at the battle of the Marne, by the explosion of shrapnel near his head. For several weeks he was at the hospital, later rejoining his regiment, although he saw but very little fighting up to last August, when he was again in a heavy encounter. This time he was struck in the head with a bullet and was allowed to go back to England. In October he came to America and after wandering about the country for several weeks, decided to go back to the front. He got into communication with recruiting officers at Fort Frances and last week at Cadillac, Mich., received a ticket for the Canadian city and instructions to leave at once. He came to Duluth yesterday morning from Grand Rapids and left in the evening on the Canadian Northern for Fort Frances.

Graham was born in India and still speaks with a very strong British accent. He joined the colors when the African war broke out in 1876, although but a youngster at the time, and received a bad bullet wound in the side. He also participated in the Boer war, but escaped injury throughout the conflict.

About three years ago Graham went to England to reside, his home being about four miles from London. He has a brother living in India.

Scherer Elected President.

New Orleans, March 15.—George Scherer of Minneapolis last night was elected president of the National Outdoor Advertising association, which began its annual convention here yesterday. Other officers were: George Glieser, San Francisco; Harry Walker, Detroit, and E. W. Lloyd, Dallas, vice presidents; George Fitch, Albany, N. Y., secretary, and Sam Pratt, New York, treasurer.

King's Stallion for Canada.

St. John, N. B., March 15.—The king's stallion Anmer, whose career in the derby of 1913 was suddenly stopped when Miss Davidson, a suffragette, clutched his bridle on the race track and was killed, arrived here yesterday from England. He has been given to the Canadian government by King George, for breeding re-mounts.

Joy Changed to Sorrow.

Albany, N. Y., March 15.—Jubilation on the part of supporters of woman suffrage, who thronged the capital yesterday, was changed to disappointment last night. Early yesterday afternoon the assembly by a vote of 109 to 30 passed the bill designed to provide for a suffrage referendum at the 1917 election, but six hours later, announcement was made that the senate judiciary committee had indefinitely postponed action on the measure.

LYNCH FORCES VICTORIOUS

the anti-Lynch slate is running up close to the others.

The Lynch candidates for district delegates were elected in the Tenth district.

Returns from Hennepin and other counties show that A. C. Weiss of Duluth is leading the Democratic candidates for delegates-at-large, and Daniel W. Lawler of St. Paul, B. F. Nelson of Minneapolis and W. A. Just of Rapidan, all Lynch men, are also probably elected.

The Prohibition party's contest is still uncertain, neither Eugene N. Foss of Massachusetts nor William Sulzer of New York having a decisive lead.

District Results.

Indications this afternoon are that the two Republican delegates from the Tenth congressional district are Henry Rines of Mora, former speaker of the Minnesota house, and L. E. Jepson, candidate for congress in the Tenth at the last election.

Returns from other districts in some cases make it quite apparent who the winners are, and in others the results are in doubt.

First district, ten precincts complete —R. L. Johnson, 346; F. A. Duxbury, 225; David C. McKenzie, 225.

Second district, thirty-five precincts —C. H. Christopherson, 594; Thomas Tonneson, 451; A. J. Gebhard, 428; J. D. Arp, 359; L. P. Johnson, 323.

Third district—J. J. Rachac, 1,236; H. L. Simons, 1,097; George H. Sullivan, 905.

Fourth district, Ramsey county—Not counted.

Sixth district, twenty-nine precincts—George E. Hanscom, 597; C. A. Allbright, 466; P. O. Scow, 290; Charles Hayden, 200.

Seventh district, thirteen precincts—Thomas Davis, 537; E. L. Thonton, 468; E. B. Johnson, 295; Sam Lewison, 134; Dar F. Hall, 110.

Eighth district, ten precincts—Mille Bunnell, 258; Daniel C. Gunn, 295.

Tenth district, seven county and thirty-nine Hennepin precincts—L. E. Jopson, 754; Henry Rines, 623; Fred B. Wright, 454; William Henry Eustis, 355; D. C. Holst, 138.

In the Democratic fight the Lynch men appeared this afternoon to have won all down the line.

So far as present returns indicate, no Estabrook delegate has been elected, though Rome G. Brown, candidate in the Tenth district, has given them all a good race.

FINAL MEETING FOR BAZAR COMMITTEES

Continuous Program Will Be Feature of Teuton Fair.

A meeting of all the women's committees of the Red Cross and war relief bazar, which will be held at the Duluth auditorium from March 23 to March 25, will take place tonight at 8 o'clock at the Moose hall, 224 West First street. President M. Binheim urges all women to attend this meeting, as it will be the last one before the bazar. Tonight the women will be assigned their booths and will be given final instructions as to their duties during the three days of the fair. The management requests all the women to turn in their contribution lists at once and to bring to the office lists of all goods that will have to be called for between now and the opening of the fair.

There will be a continuous entertainment during the three days from 2 p. m. until midnight, and the final program will be announced within a few days. So far it has been decided that instrumental and vocal numbers will be rendered in the afternoon, while the bazar orchestra, children's mass chorus and athletic exhibitions will feature the evening program.

All German and Austro-Hungarian societies and clubs have promised to attend the fair and all American societies, clubs and lodges have been invited to attend.

Different street corners will be illuminated during bazar week and the halls and booths will be decorated with the national colors and flags of Germany, Austria and Hungary. The American flag will be beautifully illuminated over each booth.

There is a Real Difference

Cream of tartar, derived from grapes, is used in Royal Baking Powder because it is the best and most healthful ingredient known for the purpose.

Phosphate and alum, which are derived from mineral sources, are used in some baking powders, instead of cream of tartar, because they are cheaper.

If you have been induced to use baking powders made from alum or phosphate, use Royal Baking Powder instead. You will be pleased with the results and the difference in the quality of the food.

WILL RETURN TO HIS FORMER HOME

Joseph W. Cumming Again to Be Resident of West End.

Joseph W. Cumming, former resident of the West end, but who for the past two years has been making his home at Lakeside, will again reside in this end of the city. He intends moving his family back to his former "stamping ground" about May 1.

Mr. Cumming has under construction a handsome residence at Twenty-eighth avenue west and Sixth street, which will be completed the latter part of next month.

"There is no place like the West end to live in," said Mr. Cumming yesterday, discussing his intention of moving back. "I resided in the West end so long that I really have felt lost away from there."

Mr. Cumming was prominent in politics in the West end for many years and was county commissioner at one time. He said that he has given up all thought of politics for the future.

QUESTIONS BEFORE COMMERCIAL CLUB

Milk Ordinance, Branch Police Station and Piedmont Grade Come Up.

The proposed milk ordinance will again be the subject of discussion at the meeting of the West End Commercial club, to be held at Simonson's hall, Twenty-first avenue west and Superior street, tomorrow evening. It is probable that the club will go on record for or against the proposed measure.

Other matters of interest to the community, including the desired branch police station, will be taken up. The present quarters for the West end police are said to be unfit for the officers as well as for prisoners who are taken there.

The club will also take steps to assist the residents of the hillside to procure a lowering of the grade on Piedmont avenue this summer. The residents above Tenth street want the grade lowered there in order that an extension of the street railway line on Piedmont avenue may be made.

PREACHES ON LIFE.

Pastor Porter, in Revival Sermon, Says "Eat, Drink and Be Merry" With Limitations.

"Endless Life" was the subject of the sermon last night, by Rev. J. Emmett Porter, pastor of Grace Methodist church, Twenty-second avenue west and Third street, in the revivals being held there. The individual, he declared, must prepare for the eternal life.

The pastor said that one should eat, drink and be merry but with limitations, for upon these limitations, he said, depend whether one could live or die the next day. The life on earth, he declared, left its individual mark on each soul.

BUSINESS MEN TO MEET.

Committee Arranges Gathering for Plans for Spring Opening.

Charles J. Lindquist and Ben F. Schweiger, members of the West end business men's committee in charge of the next get-together meeting of the merchants, have arranged for a meeting of the business men to be held early next week. At this gathering, plans for some entertainment feature to be held in connection with the spring opening celebration to be held by the Duluth Retail Merchants' association on April 3, 4 and 5, will be made.

It had been intended to have the meeting this week but owing to the committee being unable to engage the lunch rooms of the Rex hotel for the date wanted, the meeting has been postponed, said Mr. Lindquist today. It is probable that a week from tonight will be decided on as the time of the meeting.

BILL POSTERS RESTRAIN TRADE

International Association Held to Be Illegal Combination.

Chicago, March 15.—The Associated Bill Posters of the United States and Canada was held to be a combination in restraint of trade by Federal Judge Landis yesterday.

The ruling was given in the government suit asking dissolution of the association filed in August, 1912.

"The rule of 'reasonable restraint' has no application here," said Judge Landis, "for the reason that this is not a case of mere restraint but of total exclusion."

The court ruled that the injunctions asked by the government to restrain the bill posters from carrying on their business as an organization would not go into effect for sixty days to permit an appeal to the supreme court.

The complaint charged that ever since its organization in 1891 the Associated Bill Posters had sought to crush competition. It was alleged in support of the dissolution suit that membership in the organization was limited to one member in each town; that its members were barred from accepting work from any advertiser who furnished business to non-advertisers; that a schedule of prices was adopted for all parts of the country; that competitors were bought off and that members were prohibited from accepting work from solicitors not licensed by the organization.

Frick Buys Painting.

New York, March 15.—Henry C. Frick authorized the statement here last night that he had purchased the famous Gainsborough painting, "The Mall," soon to be brought to this country. The price paid by Mr. Frick, while not definitely stated, is said to have been between $250,000 and $300,000. The picture originally in the possession of a lifelong friend of the artist, was painted in 1876, and is said to be the finest of the Gainsborough landscapes. It is a scene in St. James park, London—an imaginative, impressionistic picture.

SAYS OFFENSE WAS SLIGHT

Federal Official Urges All Possible Leniency for Seven Woodsmen.

Their Violation of Liquor Laws Was Unintentional, Says Wharton.

United States officials will probably make an effort to secure as light punishment as possible for the seven woodsmen, who have been arrested for carrying a "bottle on the hip" when going to logging camps within Indian territory. It is believed that the offenders were unaware of the fact that the camps were within Indian territory and that they simply took a bottle of whisky along as usual with no intention of "introducing" it to anybody except themselves. This is the substance of a statement made today by United States Commissioner James A. Wharton, who placed John Lindgren under bail of $250 to await sentence. Lindgren admitted his technical guilt.

Lindgren was arrested for introducing liquor on the Fond du Lac Indian reservation, and was turned over to Deputy United States Marshal George J. Mallory. Six other woodsmen have been arrested on a similar charge. The lightest sentence that can be imposed under the law is sixty days in prison and a fine of $100.

Under ordinary circumstances the men might be held here until the July term of the Federal court, but it is expected that they will be transferred to the Minneapolis division so that they may begin their sentences right after the meeting of the federal court there on April 4. Either Judge Booth or Judge Morris will preside.

After disposing of the Lindgren case, Commissioner Wharton severely scored the employment agents for neglecting to warn these men against taking whisky into Indian territory. He said that he did not believe the "lumberjacks" knew they were going into restricted territory, and were innocent of any intentional violation of the liquor laws.

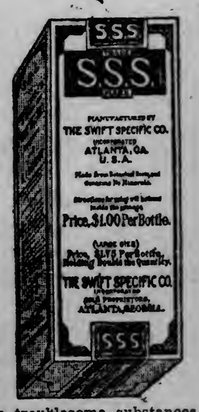
Here's A 'Tip' On Rheumatism. Follow It

AN ACCURATE DESCRIPTION



When your arm or your leg feels "all knotted" with rheumatism, when you feel as though your muscles were "tied up with a rope," you are really describing your pains accurately. Rheumatism is a condition of the body when acids and other deposits of impurities are actually "tieing up" the strands of muscles in your body, or strangling the nerves and thus producing the awful shooting pains of sciatica, lumbago, etc. Medical authorities agree that these acid deposits are carried and deposited by the blood in the various parts of the body. It stands to reason, therefore, that local applications such as rubbing with so-called remedies can't do any permanent good. At best they can relieve the pain a little and only for a little while. The only way to effect a real cure is to attack the real cause—the blood. It is cleansed from the troublesome deposits by S. S. S., the reliable blood purifier that is now easing the pains and healing the ills of the third generation. S. S. S. "goes after" the impurities in the blood as relentlessly, as eagerly and as thoroughly as a ferret goes after rats; pursuing the poison into every vein and artery, into every nook and corner of the body, and chasing the troublesome substances out of the system. The blood thus cleansed, carries off the acid and other injurious deposits and "filters" them out of the body through the kidneys. S. S. S. is not a drug. It is a purely vegetable blood purifier. You can get S. S. S. at every drug store. But if in addition you should like to have the advice of the doctors in charge of our laboratory, do not hesitate to write us. You will receive free, conscientious and confidential advice. This is in line with our policy to make every effort to insure the best results from S. S. S. to every sufferer. Get a bottle at your druggist's today. If you wish special advice, write to Medical Department, Room 45, Swift Specific Company, Atlanta, Georgia.

OPPONENTS GROWING SCARCE FOR PHANTOM GIBBONS

Should Jeff Smith Fail in Beating the St. Paul Crack, Who Is There Left? Beell Training for Joe Stecher—Great Hockey Contest Looked for Between Universals and Northerns.

BY BRUCE.

IF JESS SMITH doesn't give Mike Gibbons a great battle on the large and lurid evening of March 17 his failure will make it bad financial going for the other middleweights of the country. Who, pray tell, will there be left for the wonderful Phantom to meet?

If the war wasn't on, now, Louie Dow would have two great cards in sight, providing Mike wanted to take on big game in the person of Georges Carpentier. But the war in Europe has enlisted the service of the famous French boxer as well as tied up Les Darcy, insofar as American ring engagements are concerned.

Smith went twenty rounds with the great Carpentier, so he must be a real fighter. Ahearn was hailed as one of the greatest of all the middles, and what Mike did to the pride of the McKetrick stable, is too recent and too painful to warrant even a scant reference. If Smith proves pugilistic putty in the masterly hands of Gibbons, matchmakers will scan the horizon in vain in the effort to secure a fit opponent for the king of the middleweights.

Mike Gibbons is one of the few boxers of the present day who can be compared to the great boys of a decade or two ago. Ryan, McCoy and Gans had everything in the boxing line. These great boys could feint an opponent into knots, or could flash a punch through the first opening. Their footwork bordered on the miraculous. Gibbons is a great feinter, is a marvel at moving in and out, and seems to hit equally well with either hand. His slipping of punches is something that appeals to the true lover of scientific boxing. Combining, like Joe Gans, the extreme cleverness of boxing skill and the rugged qualities of a boxer—over the short route at least—it would seem that there is not a fighter of the present day left who can be expected to beat Mike over the ten-round route, unless Jefferson Smith lives up to the lavish advance dope that has been spread in his behalf, and creates a 1916 ring sensation by beating a boxer generally held to be invincible.

What of Stecher's Future.

JOE STECHER is but 22 years of age. When Gotch was that age he was known only as a fair wrestler—a promising heavyweight, who had been scarcely heard of out of his native state of Iowa. Right now the greatest problem Joe Hetmanek, manager of Stecher, is confronted with, is that of finding opponents to give Stecher even a decent run.

Strange to say, the promoters over the country have gone back to the old and truly great school of grapplers and selected a man invincible in his day, to try the mettle of the Nebraska sensation. This man is none other than Freddy Beell.

When Beell is trained for a contest, these followers of the game say, he can beat most of the heavyweights of the present day. The little Wisconsin farmer has not been going through the arduous work of getting in shape for mere pastime. If Kansas City or Chicago promoters lure Beell back to the padded mat and Joe Stecher is the man chosen to meet him, this contest will create more real interest than any contest since huge Charley Cutler lost a lot of his own money and a lot more of his friends', in the attempt to prove that Stecher was merely a big boob.

Some Game Is Looked For.

WHILE hockey fans regret that the members of the Big Duluth hockey team saw fit to call off their game with the Universal septet, nevertheless there is a lot of interest in the contest that is scheduled for tomorrow evening between the flour makers and the Northerns.

Dave Larson's hardware men have played a strong and consistent game throughout the season. Besides that, the last game in the curling rink whetted the appetite of the fans for just one more game. The brand of hockey played that evening was of big league quality and the contest did not lag a single minute. Contests of that kind cause the followers of the sport to yearn excessively for more, like Oliver Twist, so the final game of the year is being looked forward to with considerable interest.

The statement published in The Herald that a first class hockey coach would be secured for the league, was a welcome one to the Duluth followers of the puck sport. During the present season some real hockey has been played. The game was rough in spots, to be sure, and the players lacked the finish and expertness of some of the members of last year's curling club team—yet the home boys are rapidly acquiring the fine points of play and learning team play, which is by far the most important feature of any contest. A coach and another year's experience will serve to make the Duluth teams real rivals of the best of the country—and when that time arrives, a long awaited hockey accomplishment will be set down to the credit of those who have long and faithfully worked in the interests of Duluth sport.

SMITH TELLING PALZER HOW HE'LL BEAT GIBBONS

JEFF SMITH AND AL PALZER.

FINNEGAN DIDN'T THINK THE OARSMEN WERE MAKING THE SPEED THEY SHOULD

Finnegan strolled into the thirst-quenching emporium, operated by Mr. Regan, in an aimless manner. Mr. Regan caught his eye and beckoning to him, offered a chair at his favorite table; then said:

"Well, Finnegan, how are ye comin' on wit' th' effort t' make th' crew? As ye've not been around fer a few days I prasoom ye've been tryin' th' rowin' machine."

"Not on your life, I aint," answered Finnegan. "Mr. Regan, what fer did ye try t' put wan like that over on me for?"

"Put wan over on ye!" exclaimed Mr. Regan. "What d'ye mane, put wan over?"

"Why," said Finnegan, "ye told me t' go see Ike an' tell him I was out t' make th' crew, did ye not?"

"Sure I did," replied Mr. Regan. "Did ye see him?"

"I did not," answered Finnegan. "I wint t' th' Y wan night an' looked around but didn't see no Ike nor anythin' that looked like an Ike. I rubbered around some, fer I'd niver been there befoor, an' I see a bunch av lads pullin' oars strong enough t' pull a mud scow. Th' sweat was rollin' off thim fer fair, but th' thing they was rowin' in wasn't gainin' an inch, an' if a felly rows as hard as thim lads was rowin' an' couldn't make th' boat go ahead none there aint no use in me tryin' t' row in a race. When I seen thim felly's rowin' their hearts out an' not makin' no headway, I give up all idea av becomin' an oarsman. 'Tis too much work for th' rasults they git."

"Ye are an observin' lad, an' a bright wan, too," said Mr. Regan, sarcastically. "Here ye are, a fine built young felly, five foot tin, an' weighin' a hundred sevinty, or near ut, an' ye'd make a fine bow oar in a champeen crew wit' a lot av coachin' an' some practice, an' here ye be, gittin' cold feet befoor iver ye git into a shell. Did ye t'ink a rowin' machine was a shell or whativer?"

"Aint that what ut is?" asked Finnegan. "I t'o't was was th' same as th' other. What makes thim diffrunt?"

"Perhaps th' bist way t' ixplain ut t' ye," replied Mr. Regan, "is t' tell ye that a machine don't move, an' a shell does. What ye saw th' lads workin' in was a rowin' machine. All wan does in wan av thim is t' learn th' stroke an' whin t' take ut, an' maibbe work off a little fat befoor th' ice goes out; thin whin he gits in a shell fer th' first time he aint as green as he looks. I was pretty green mesilf wanst."

"Did ye iver row in wan av thim shells?" asked Finnegan.

"I did," replied Mr. Regan: "wanst. But t' end av th' sweep was too long an' 'twould hit me a punch in th' abdomin ivery wanst in a while, or mebbe oftener, an' th' coach wouldn't saw anny av ut off, so I quit. 'Twas a good oarsman was lost t' th' club at that very time. Mebbe had I had th' advantage av rowin' first in a machine 'twould have been diffrunt. Ye niver can tell."

"If that's th' trut' I'll go up an' make a try at ut," said Finnegan. "Th' lads looked good t' me. Some av thim I've known fer years, an' fine lads they be, but ' t'o't if they couldn't row in a race anny faster than they was doin' there 'twas an even bet they'd be lift at th' post."

"Ye go there again, an' if no Ikes is there just tell wan av your frinds what ye want, an' he'll see ye are given a trial. An' by th' way, Finnegan, ye'd better be askin' some wan there t' show ye wan av thim Ikes, fer I have a suspicion mebbe they don't look much like th' Ikes ye're ixpectin' t' see," said Mr. Regan.

FRANK GOTCH TOSSES TRIO OF OPPONENTS.

San Diego, Cal., March 15.—Frank Gotch, world's undefeated champion wrestler, came back in good form yesterday and easily defeated Herman Strech, army and navy champion; Sam Clapham, the "British Lion," and Jack White of San Francisco. Strech grappled with Gotch first. Fourteen minutes and thirty seconds after the start the champion secured a scissors hold and put him to the mat. Clapham put up a game battle, but Gotch increased his speed and took the first fall in nine minutes. White lasted but seven minutes and thirty seconds.

NATIONAL BASKET BALL CHAMPIONSHIP STAKE

In the opening matches the Columbian A. C. of St. Louis meets the Central Independents of Chicago; the Brandeis five of Omaha plays the Englewood Christians, Chicago; the Osage (Iowa) team meets the I. A. C. five; the Oakland Y. M. C. A. quintet takes on the First regiment, and Ripon college plays the Grand Junction (Iowa) A. C.

Shreveport, La., March 15.—The Shreveport (Texas league) team defeated the Cincinnati Nationals yesterday, 6 to 3, by bunching hits off Caparulo, a recruit pitcher. Andrews pitched six innings for Shreveport, allowing two hits, and struck out six men.

DULUTH FIVE-MEN TEAM ROLLS INTO SECOND PLACE

Fitzgerald and Winchesters Hang Up Good Score in Northern Bowling Tournament Play—Local Pin Men Fail to Score Heavily in Singles and Doubles Events.

Duluth five-man teams had their innings on the schedule of the Northern league bowling tournament last evening. While the record of the Fiats of Minneapolis was not even seriously threatened, the Fitzgerald & Winchester team of Duluth rolled into second place, topping the four outside teams that have so far rolled in this event.

The Fiats easily retain the lead in the five-man event, their mark being over 100 points in excess of the score of 2,724 hung up on the late shift last night by the Fitzgerald & Winchester team. The Empress team is anchored in fourth place.

Server and Root of Duluth are tied for fourth place with Young and Perela of Minneapolis in the two-man event. To date, Duluth bowlers have not fared very well in this event.

Singles Prove Tame.

In the singles, Stauss is the only Duluth man represented in the high score division. Stauss is in fifth place with a mark of 590. Lovocat's score, made last Sunday, still stands in the singles.

Last night's play in the singles failed to bring out any good scores. A. J. Kampmann of Superior was high man in the play, with a mark of 556, which is far below the mark set by the St. Paul bowler earlier in the week.

Insofar as Duluth bowlers were concerned, the redeeming feature of last night's play, was that of the Fitzgerald & Winchester five.

Below will be found the high marks to date and the complete details of yesterday afternoon's and last night's play:

TRAINING GOSSIP OF THE BIG LEAGUE TEAMS

Cincinnati—Word comes up from Shreveport, where the Reds are doing their spring training, that a diet of raw meat has been adopted by several husky athletes. Bill Rodgers, the second baseman, is credited with introducing the idea and Mollwitz and several others have taken it up. Judging from reports the raw meat menu is becoming popular with the entire squad, and Manager Herzog is quoted as being decidedly worried, openly admitting that he does not know the ef-

Omaha—Beginning March 15 and continuing until April 16, the new municipal umpires' school will give instruction to all young men who may wish to perfect themselves in the rules of baseball with a view to presiding over amateur games played on the dozen or more municipal diamonds during the coming season. George Clarke, a former Western league umpire, is chief supervisor of baseball. His corps of instructors will include Jack Haskell, former American and Western league umpire; Jack Van Syckle, former Federal and Western league umpire; W. A. Rourke, president of the Omaha Western league club; Marty Krug, manager of the Omaha club, and William Earle, a former big league catcher.

It is the intention of the city commissioners to encourage amateur baseball by furnishing grounds and umpires for the use of all regularly organized clubs. It is expected that the Omaha Amateur Baseball association will join with the city in paying the umpires for their work.

Indianapolis—Manager Jack Hendricks of the Indianapolis American Association Baseball club, who recently underwent a minor operation, is able to be about again.

"The doctors may call it a minor operation," said Manager Hendricks, "but I think it was of major league caliber."

Manager Hendricks says he will be in good shape to accompany his team when it starts for Albany, Ga., on March 20 for its spring training.

Kansas City—Danny Shay is in complete control of the Kansas City American Association Baseball club, according to an announcement today by Tebeau, owner of the local team.

"I've given Manager Shay the reins," said Tebeau. "He holds the purse. 'Get the ball players' are my only instructions to him."

Shay says he'll follow his boss' command.

Cincinnati—Ty Cobb paid a forced visit to this city recently. Cobb was on his way from Detroit to his home in Georgia and was within six miles of Cincinnati when he adjourned to the washroom of the Pullman. While washing his hands, a $600 diamond ring slipped off of his finger He allowed it to remain in the bowl until he finished washing and then pulled the plug before he remembered that the ring was in the bowl. The result was that the ring went through the drain pipe and onto the roadbed. Cobb lost no time on his arrival at the station to get an auto and hurry to some spot near where he thought the diamond lay. He walked five miles up the railroad track and then back again but failed to find the ring. He offered a reward for the return of the jewel, addressed the mass meeting of the National Baseball federation, the amateur organization, and then wended his way on south.

CHAMPION PLAYS IN TITLE-WINNING FORM

Chicago, March 15.—Champion Benny Allen of Kansas City broke the high-run record of the present pocket billiard tournament yesterday with a spurt of 58. This performance came in the tenth inning of his match with Joe Concannon of Jersey City and was enough to round out Allen's century, else he might have scored more, judging from the form he showed. Concannon managed to count 42 points, but Allen previously had a run of 29. Ralph Greenleaf, Monmouth, Ill., defeated M. Petrie, Chicago, 100 to 83, thereby taking the lead in the tournament.

Former Northland Golf Instructor Is Engaged By Copper City Players; Won Pacific Coast Championship.

Country club golf players may be interested in knowing that Willie Leith, former instructor of the club, has been engaged as professional instructor of the Butte Country club. The advent of Willie in the copper city is heralded by a large double column picture and a glowing account of the prowess of the man who made his home here for several years. After leaving Duluth Leith went to the Tacoma Country club, remaining there until he received the offer of the Butte club. Since leaving the Northland Country club Willie has annexed the professional golf championship of the Pacific coast and in addition has made a remarkable showing in several of the Florida winter tournaments.

Cyril Schreyer, an expert golfer, will assist Leith at the Butte club.

HEAVY MEN ARE NEEDED

Majority of Rowing Crew Candidates Are Rather Under Weight.

Ned Ten Eyck was on the crew-candidate coaching job yesterday. After giving the candidates a workout on the machines, Ned hustled the boys out for a run on the road, this despite the fact that the thermometer was wavering around the zero regions.

Some new candidates reported yesterday and some of the old men came out. While there are some of the old men, "insurgents," they are called, still holding out, the members of the rowing committee hope to have all of the old men out and a larger number of new crew candidates lined up before the training season is very much older.

"The material looks good," said Ten Eyck, after getting his first good look at the men who are at the present time trying for places on the crew, "but we need some heavy men. The majority of the candidates are rather light. To make a great showing more weight is needed. I hope to see some large men out for the crews. We can use them."

Members of the rowing committee are on the still hunt for big men. It is expected there will be a number of new candidates out by the first part of next week. All those intending to try for the crews are urged to get out early, as the work will increase by gradual stages and those joining the squad late in the preliminary training season will have work to make up.

BOTH TEAMS FIT FOR HARD GAME

Universals and Northerns Expected to Play Hard and Close Contest.

It is expected that tomorrow night's game between the Universal hockey team, champions of the Duluth Amateur league, and the Northern team, will prove one of the best contests that has been played here this season.

Members of the Northern septet have expressed the opinion that they will defeat the flour makers and thus prove a moral claim to the league championship.

Roy Deetz has been secured to referee the contest.

Members of both teams have been practicing for the final game of the season. The Northerns have been a thorn in the side of the Universals during the present season, and it is expected that the farewell game of the present season will be marked with real rivalry and will also prove a close and hard fought game from start to finish.

Mobilization Stops Games.

Athens, Greece, March 14, via Paris.—The Pan-Hellenic Olympian games have been canceled owing to the mobilization of the Greek army.

Kentuckians Kill Boxing.

Frankfort, Ky., March 15.—The bill to license boxing exhibitions and providing for a state athletic board of control, was defeated in the senate late yesterday, 16 to 12. The proposed measure previously had passed the lower house and it was thought it had an excellent chance to pass in the senate. It was proposed to permit fifteen-round bouts.

Cubs Trim College Nine.

Tampa, Fla., March 15.—The Chicago Nationals defeated the Southern college nine here yesterday, 21 to 5. Mann and Flack, formerly with the Chicago Federals, batted out home runs for the Cubs.

Bantams Fight Draw.

Atlanta, Ga., March 15.—Pal Moore and Jimmy Pappas, bantamweights, fought ten rounds to a draw here last night.

Dillon Beats Gunboat.

New York, March 15.—Jack Dillon of Indianapolis outfought Gunboat Smith in a ten-round bout in Brooklyn last night. Dillon's punches, however, did not appear to have their usual effectiveness. Dillon weighed 170½ pounds and Smith 180½.

BETTER BUSINESS ON WEST COAST

New Boats Are Being Built Rapidly to Meet Demand.

Improvement of business conditions on the Pacific coast within the last three months is reported by Henry C. Turrish, Duluth lumberman, who has returned to the city from a six weeks' business trip. Mr. Turrish declares that although the coast has been seriously handicapped by the blocking of the Panama canal and the absence of boats for the export lumber trade, the outlook is now much brighter.

"Twelve new boats are now under construction at Pacific coast shipyards," he said, "and as soon as they are completed, the situation will be immensely relieved. One of these boats is almost completed already, and the others will be turned out by the shipyards in quick succession.

"As an indication of the situation that has been confronting the lumbermen on the coast, there are now 10,000,000 feet of railroad ties lying in the Columbia river which were bought and paid for by England six months ago, but which cannot be moved owing to the impossibility of obtaining boats. The few boats along the coast have been in such demand that the traffic rates have become exorbitantly high, but regardless of rates, there has not been nearly enough vessel capacity to supply the demand."

Hot Mustard Paste

WILLIAM BRADY M.D.

Sometimes, writes a schoolma'am of parts, I think you are a little too hard on the grandmothers and old-fashioned people. You are certainly an iconoclast, and your ridicule of these old ideas borders on the discourteous. A good doctor was called to attend a case of the grip, and the first thing he did was to order a mustard paste applied. And an old grandmother applied it, with the happiest effect!

All of which is good and true.

Haven't we openly apologized to grandma right here in cold type for our slurs? Haven't we admitted that her good old flaxseed meal poultice beats any canned mud ever invented? Hasn't scientific investigation shown that one of grandma's flaxseed meal poultices retains the heat longer, gives greater relief, and is a whole lot cleaner than the modern medicated clay imitations? Haven't we harped right along on the same old tune—how grandma's old-time cough "seerup," boneset, catnip, camomile and other "yarb" teas are the only kind of home remedies we want to take when we are sick?

No, teacher, you can't stir up a quarrel between this department and grandma. We just wish you could read some of the letters we receive from grandmas 80 and more years young, and see how old-fashioned they are. Few people attain common sense until they reach the grandma era of life.

Now, a mustard paste properly made, and watched to see that it doesn't raise a blister—one part of mustard flour to four of wheat flour, cold water and just a wee bit of white of egg (our own grandma insists on this, to prevent blistering, she says), the paste to be removed as soon as the skin reddens up—there isn't a better painkiller or a more effective local antidote for internal inflammation in the whole materia medica.

If the young school teachers and housekeepers and merchants and workers would listen to grandma, and not run off to the drugstore for some nicely flavored dope every time you have anything wrong, we doctors wouldn't have so much practice to swell our heads.

When we speak of the "grandmothers" we generally refer to those who are grandmothers in conduct only—most of 'em wear trousers.

We need more militant grandmas, and less audacious nostrum-mongers. A household blessed with a real live grandma who won't be ignored is very fortunate indeed.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Kerosene for Chilblains.

The self-same teacher who started the above harangue asks us to publish a remedy which she states she has used with unfailing benefit for chilblains, frostbite. She says it is better than rubbing on snow. The remedy is kerosene. We pass it on without any personal knowledge about it.

Nevus on Face.

Our baby, 9 months old, has a raised, purplish mark on one cheek, as big as a dime, with what looks like little veins running out into the skin around it. It appeared right after birth, and seems to be getting a little larger. What is it, and is there any remedy?

Answer—Nevus. After the second year electrolysis or surgical removal is necessary.

The Tobacco Habit.

A correspondent, S. D. F. G., asks for some advice for the cure of the tobacco habit. I hold a monograph upon the subject which I shall be glad to send him upon receipt of a stamped, addressed envelope.

Dr. Brady will answer all signed letters pertaining to health. If your question is of general interest it will be answered through these columns; if not it will be answered personally if stamped, addressed envelope is enclosed. AIM IN LIFE IS LACKING

Where Public School System Has Failed, Says Michigan Man.

Teachers Know Too Little of World Round About Them.

Des Moines, Iowa, March 15.—School teachers "know too little of the world round about them," said Jesse B. Davis, president of the National Vocational Guidance association, in an address before the Des Moines Teachers' Institute. Few of them are equipped to counsel students on the choice of life work, he said, because the average teacher goes through an academic cycle, first as a student in normal school or college and then back into the school system as a teacher.

"If I had my way," said Mr. Davis, "I should demand of every teacher as a part of his or her preparation for life work, that he spend at least one year in some occupation other than teaching in order that he might know more about the world into which the majority of his boys and girls must go."

Mr. Davis, who is principal of the Central high school at Grand Rapids, Mich., attended the institute here as the first stop of a trip through Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Illinois, in which he is to address educators at various gatherings on "Vocational and Moral Guidance a Function of the Public Schools." In addition to his discussion of the subject here he is to appear at teachers' institutes at Council Bluffs, Iowa, today, and at St. Joseph, Mo., March 16. On March 17 and 18 he will appear at the University of Kansas and then go to Illinois to deliver a lecture at the university of that state at Urbana. He may also speak at Decatur and Springfield, Ill.

Imperfectly Prepared.

"Much of the failure and disappointment in life and possibly much of the crime, may be attributed to the fact that so large a proportion of our youth go out from our public schools imperfectly prepared to meet the demands of the world," said Mr. Davis. "Accepting as sufficient the elementary training that the law may force upon them, a vast army of children, several million strong, drop out of our schools every year to enter the field of unskilled labor.

"Drifting about from one occupation to another, they seem to mix themselves up about as unsatisfactorily as if some superhuman power had shaken them in a mighty deal box and thrown them in every direction. Thoughtful people are seeing that our public school system, efficient as it may be today, is under some obligation to this vast throng of unfortunates who may be considered, in part at least, as victims of its neglect.

Due to Chance.

"The great majority of men outside the professions, who are past middle life, will testify that they came into their present occupations almost entirely by chance. The history of the average man is one of drifting—drifting part way through school and afterwards from one thing to another until some fortune, good or bad, fixed him at one occupation for the remainder of his days.

"The main cause for this great economic loss may be laid at the door of our public schools. We have failed to inspire our youth with the necessity for an aim in life."

PEACE ADVOCATE SCORES AT HOME

Ford Carries Out His Ideas Among Families of Employes.

Chicago, March 15.—Henry Ford, who tried to bring about peace in Europe, and failed, has carried the Oscar II idea into the home of his employes, according to revelations made yesterday before Judge Denis E. Sullivan of the superior court.

The peace leader's rules provide that employes and their wives must "get out of the trenches" and hoist the white flag, obtain divorces or quit the service of the company, and lose their $5 a day job.

Henry Carter, a porter who is paid $5 a day by the company, received a divorce from his wife here on a charge of desertion, and his witness was Walter G. May of Evanston, formerly superintendent of the sociological department of the Ford works.

May revealed the idea of the manufacturer that the workman who quarrels with his wife in the morning, makes a poor workman all the day. He was questioned by Carter's attorney.

"Will you tell whether or not you made an investigation of Mr. Carter, regarding his family, and domestic relations, and what you found them to be?" the lawyer asked.

Called on Families.

"It was quite necessary that we should get them together," the witness answered, "from the policies that Mr. Ford adopted under this sociological plan. So I had to call, occasionally, to see that husband and wife were living together, and to see what they were doing, to see that they did not drink or things of that sort, and complied with the rules of Mr. Ford, to draw the salary of $5 a day. In Mr. Carter's case, I was unable to find his wife, so we wrote letters to her. Mr. Carter was considered a very fine workman, and we didn't want to lose him and we did everything possible to get them together, without results.

"Does the Ford Motor company visit the homes of all employes?" Judge Sullivan asked.

"Every employe," May replied. "I had to visit their homes just as often as I could, and if I couldn't get to their homes during the week, I would have to go and see them on Sunday."

"As I understand, from the rules of the company, a man that is in the predicament that Mr. Carter is in now, will lose his position, unless he is able to separate himself from his wife?" the lawyer asked.

"Exactly," May said.

"I'll give him a decree," Judge Sullivan said.

Bemidji, Minn., March 15.—At a meeting of the Men's Civic league of Bemidji, held at the Baptist church, it was decided to launch a movement for a county option election immediately, if sentiment favors the movement. It is planned to hold the election the last week in July or August.

J. J. Trask was elected vice president of the league and Dr. E. A. Shannon treasurer. A constitution was adopted.

PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN FOR INDIGESTION OR AN UPSET STOMACH

Instant Relief from Pain, Sourness, Gases, Acidity, Heartburn and Dyspepsia--No Waiting!

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin and in a few moments you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps the stomach regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, and most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Try it!—Advertisement.

BURKE MAY TAKE HAND

Former North Dakota Governor Liable to Get Into Campaign.

Takes Exception to Omaha Man's Recent Address at Fargo Banquet.

Fargo, N. D., March 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—In a letter to F. W. McLean, secretary of the Democratic state central committee, United States Treasurer John Burke criticizes the alleged efforts of John Bruegger and his followers to secure a Bryan delegation to the national convention.

The letter is an answer to certain remarks made by J. I. Dunn of Omaha at the Democratic "achievement" banquet here recently in which the administration's preparedness program was bitterly assailed and which caused some of the members of the party present to speak right out in meeting. The letter indicates that the former governor of North Dakota is not favorable to a plan of sacrificing a Wilson delegation in this state merely in the interests of a national committeemanship and strongly resents the misrepresentations growing out of the achievement banquet fiasco.

Treasurer Burke informed Secretary McLean that he would come to North Dakota on a speech-making tour if it were thought necessary and it may be that this will be resorted to if conditions do not change in the near future.

Mr. Burke calls attention to the fact that the president has always been for an adequate navy and refers to the fact that the platform of 1912 contained a plank for a definite naval program and states that "Mr. Bryan probably had more to do with the platform than any other man in the Baltimore convention."

Many say that the fight between Bruegger and H. H. Perry for national committeeman is really a fight of whether North Dakota is going to send a Bryan or a Wilson delegation to the national convention. This was said to be the real object in bringing the Omaha speaker to the banquet here, who was invited by D. H. McArthur, Bruegger's campaign manager.

Montana Wool 32 Cents.

Great Falls, Mont., March 15.—Thirty-two cents a pound, delivered at Boston, or approximately 29 cents net, is the figure P. H. Buckley of Sweet Grass, one of the best known sheepmen in Montana, gets for his 1915 clip of wool. The wool has been in storage at Chicago. This is 8 cents a pound more, net, than Buckley had ever received for wool before and is 2 cents a pound more than he was offered at any time in 1915.

DYSPEPSIA OF WOMEN

Special Treatment Required.

Many women suffer from a form of indigestion or dyspepsia which does not yield to ordinary treatment. While the symptoms are similar to those of ordinary indigestion, yet the medicines usually prescribed do not restore the patient's normal condition.

There seems to be a kind of dyspepsia caused by derangement of the female organism. While this appears to be the same as ordinary indigestion it can be relieved only by a medicine which, besides acting as a stomach tonic, is good for female ailments. Read what such a medicine did for Mrs. Williams :—

She says:— "Before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was troubled with dyspepsia and bearing down pains in my back and sides, and after my meals my stomach would bloat up till I could scarcely get my breath. At times I was so weak I could hardly stand on my feet and I looked hollow-eyed and my skin was yellow. Now I have a good color, have gained in every way and can do my work without any pains. I think it is the best medicine on earth for stomach troubles of women."—Mrs. NELLIE WILLIAMS, 31 West 3d Street, New Albany, Ind.

MOTOR TRUCKS FOR MEXICAN SERVICE

Kenosha, Wis., Plant Works All Night to Fill Rush Order.

Kenosha, Wis., March 15.—Two thousand employes of a big automobile company were leaving the plant last evening, when a foreman came rushing after them.

"Come on back, boys. Uncle Sam has put in a rush order for motor trucks."

Accordingly, the plant was ablaze with light last night, and it was promised that the twenty-seven trucks ordered would be on a train for El Paso by noon today.

LOGGING EXPENSES UNUSUALLY HEAVY

Sawyer County, Wis., Lumbermen Blame Heavy Snow for High Cost.

Couderay, Wis., March 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Logging camps in this section are breaking up and trains are loaded with homeward-bound lumberjacks. The lumber companies say the cost of logging this year was the highest ever known, on account of the deep snow. A number of accidents occurred which were due to the deep snow, which is over three feet in the woods and like the old-time winters.

It has been a hard winter on both men and horses, and very unprofitable to the small contract loggers. During the next ten days several thousand men and over 1,000 head of horses will be shipped out from Southern Sawyer county. MANY CASES OF RHEUMATISM NOW

Says We Must Keep Feet Dry, Avoid Exposure and Eat Less Meat.

Stay off the damp ground, avoid exposure, keep feet dry, eat less meat, drink lots of water and above all take a spoonful of salts occasionally to keep down uric acid.

Rheumatism is caused by poisonous toxin, called uric acid, which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine. The pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.—Advertisement.

LAW IS DEAD LETTER.

Badger Act Closing Delicatessens on Sunday Is Not Popular.

Milwaukee, Wis., March 15.—Public sentiment has made the Wisconsin Sunday closing law of delicatessen stores a dead letter.

There will be no more prosecutions under the law but an amendment will be sought to the so-called "blue laws" at the next session of the legislature. This information came to light during arguments in district court on a motion to set aside the verdict of a jury in a recent case which held the defendant "technically" guilty.

While it was known that District Attorney Zabel has not been in sympathy with the law, he decided to give it a sincere and vigorous test with the result that in four cases, one jury acquitted the defendant, two juries disagreed and the last jury returned a verdict of conviction in which neither side could claim a victory.

Coming to Glendive with young Johnson to arrange for placing her children in a state home, she met her husband, who jumped from his rig and turned Johnson's horses around, at the same time, according to the evidence, threatening to kill them.

EVEN CROSS, SICK CHILDREN LOVE SYRUP OF FIGS

Look at Tongue! If Feverish, Bilious, Constipated, Take No Chances.

"California Syrup of Figs" Can't Harm Tender Stomach, Liver, Bowels.

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, indigestion, diarrhoea, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative," and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, Mother! A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.—Advertisement.

ON THE IRON RANGES

POWER WINS IN HIBBING; WEBBER CARRIES CHISHOLM

Present Hibbing Administration Wins Out By 569 Majority.

Lively Contest at Chisholm Results in Town Ticket Winning Out.

Hibbing, Minn., March 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The liveliest election held in Hibbing in years yesterday resulted in Victor Power being re-elected president or mayor and a victory for the balance of the so-called Progressive ticket made up of other present village officers by large majorities over the ticket headed by Former Village President Peter McHardy.

Mayor Power wins by a majority of 569. The total vote was 1,721.

B. J. Burrows led the field in the fight for the trustee position with a vote of 989 votes. Peter McHardy led his ticket.

L. L. Kugler for mayor received eight votes. Rupert Swinnerton and J. Curran were the other successful trustee candidates. The Good Citizens' ticket showed little strength, and the fight was between the business men and Progressive tickets.

Haley is Re-elected.

D. D. Haley was re-elected recorder, receiving a majority of 442 votes. Robert Geiselman defeated F. McComber by 335 votes.

Last evening the voters celebrated the victory by parades and band concerts. Hundreds of Hibbing and other range people thronged the streets and held a general celebration. The victory, although expected by the Progressive ticket, was surprising in the fact that men on the opposite ticket who were figured in the running showed little strength in precincts conceded to them.

In every ward the Power ticket carried, and only in the Laura location was there any real fight.

Trouble in One Precinct.

One fight marked the entire day's vote. In the Fifth precinct a little disturbance was settled by cool-headed parties who brought peace about. A challenger who persisted in interfering with the judges was the center of a little fight that quickly subsided when the police were called into action.

Mayor Power was extended congratulations by the head of the defeated party, Peter McHardy, and there were no ill feelings on the part of either side. "I am certain," stated Mayor Power, "that the vote of confidence given myself and the Progressive party today shows that the will of the people is the only rule, and that our administration has met with the approval of the citizens of Hibbing."

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Attractiveness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a 50-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Advertisement.

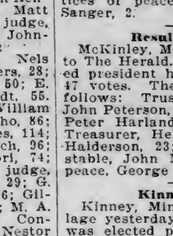
SNOW



Maybe the presidential primary had something to do with it, but Duluth actually is scoring two bright and beautiful days in succession. Today is well nigh perfect, if the cold would only quit the job. Everybody is expecting the break in the weather, but it fails to materialize.

A year ago today was fine. The sun rose this morning at 6:19 and will set this evening at 6:15, giving eleven hours and fifty-five minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"Snow or rain fell during Tuesday or last night over the southern lake region, Ohio and Lower Mississippi valleys and North Atlantic states in connection with the barometric depression centered off the Virginia and North Carolina coasts. Heavy rain fell at Louisville, Ky. The high pressure overlying the region between the Rocky mountains and the Mississippi valley has caused colder weather in all districts east of the Rockies except in extreme South Atlantic states. The temperature has fallen decidedly over the Ohio and Lower Mississippi valleys. Temperatures are rising somewhat in the far West and extreme Northwest."

HEALTH DEPARTMENT IS NOT SUSTAINED

Eveleth, Minn., March 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—That the health department is not getting the proper support from the municipal court of Eveleth is the charge made by Dr. Louis F. Hullman, the city's new health commissioner, who states that in the future all cases arising from complaints made by the health department will be brought before a special judge instead of before W. E. Moylan, judge of the municipal court.

Dr. Hullman reached this decision following the action of the court last week in remitting the fine of Valentine Champa, after he had been brought into court on a charge of slaughtering within the city limits in violation of a city ordinance. Champa pleaded guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of $5 and costs or serve 20 days. He was given until the following day to pay the fine and the sentence was then suspended.

URGES EVERYONE TO QUICKLY GET ON WATER WAGON

Drink Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast to Wash Out Poisons.

To see the tinge of healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headache, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside bathing every morning for one week.

Before breakfast each day, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It clears out all the sour fermentations, gases and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanse, sweeten and freshen the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the blood and internal organs. Those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, rheumatic twinges, also those whose skin is sallow and complexion pallid, are assured that one week of inside bathing will have them both looking and feeling better in every way.—Advertisement.

LICENSE TRANSFER IS TURNED DOWN

Virginia Council Denies Request Made By Edward Finch.

Virginia, Minn., March 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The city council last night denied the application of Edward Finch for a transfer of his liquor license so that the retail cigar store he conducts in the front of his buffet might be operated after 11 o'clock at night and on Sundays. The council voted to deny his application for the transfer 3 to 6, but subsequently instructed the ordinance committee to submit an ordinance permitting cigar stores to run on Sunday so long as a clear view of the bar was given and the room in which cigars are sold is effectually separated from the bar room.

Chairman Polrier of the police and fire commission stated the commission did not want to ruin anybody's business, but did insist on the law covering 11 o'clock and Sunday closing being strictly adhered to.

Alderman Murray's ordinance cutting the number of saloons in the city to twenty-five was given its second reading.

Administrators of the estate of Lida B. Otto, served notice of a suit for $7,000 damages against the city. Mrs. Otto was asphyxiated at her home in this city by gas early in December.

Peers Makes Claim.

R. A. Peers served notice of a claim for $349.50 against the city for expenses incurred in litigation forced upon him by the council's investigation some time ago of the alleged meat combine, when Peers was placed in the custody of an officer on a charge of contempt, growing out of his refusal to bring his books and invoices before the council to show the price he paid for meat. At that time he was involved in litigation which continued through the district court to the supreme court and was ended with a decision in his favor a few months ago. Peers' claim was referred to the city attorney.

VIRGINIA WOMAN HAS MUCH TROUBLE

Virginia, Minn., March 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—A relentless fate which seems to bring to her more than the average of sorrow pursues Mrs. C. Caccini, resident of the Higgins location. Yesterday she wept by the little white casket of her only child, born in Italy, whose father was killed in a mine accident while his wife and baby were crossing the Atlantic to make their home in America. Mrs. Caccini and the baby arrived in time to attend his funeral, which was conducted by a local Italian society. During the last year her father and only two brothers have fallen in the Italian army, fighting against the Austrians on the plains of Isonzo. Last week the baby developed pneumonia and Sunday he died. Mrs. Caccini is without relatives in America, but she has become the special charge of the local Italian colony who are extending themselves to assist her in winning a livelihood in America.

IF YOU WORRY, READ THIS

Worry never brought any good to anybody. But, you say, "I don't worry because I want to, I worry because I can't help it." Or, "I worry because I have so much to worry about."

We all have our troubles and worry, of course, makes matters worse. The patient generally recognizes this fact without being influenced in any way by it.

The doctor who could meet this nervous condition and cure it would be the most popular medical man alive. But he can not do it because the form of nervous exhaustion known as neurasthenia, of which worry is a characteristic symptom, must be cured by the patient himself. That is why you should write today for the book "Diseases of the Nervous System" and read the chapter on "Neurasthenia." So many people have read it and written back, "This hits my case exactly, I am giving the treatment a trial and being benefited," that the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. has had a lot of these books printed and will send you a copy free on request. Ask for a diet book also if your stomach is off.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a non-alcoholic tonic, particularly suited for nervous, neurasthenic people. Your druggist sells them or they will be mailed postpaid on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50.

The capital stock of the concern is $50,000, divided into 500 shares of $100 each. The company's principal place of business will be in Duluth.

Would Administer Estate.

Mrs. Mary Borland petitioned the probate court today for letters of administration on the estate of her husband, R. G. Borland, who died in this city on Dec. 19, 1915, aged 57, leaving personal property valued at $965. Besides the widow, one daughter is also an heir.

Attorney McManus alleges that he handled certain litigation over insurance matters for Michael and that he was not compensated for his services.

G. O. P. STRONG FOR THE COLONEL

Gains Favor in Many States, Says Mill City Man.

Magnus Martinson of Minneapolis is in Duluth today, after a political jaunt through some sixteen states, east, west and south, and he declared that Theodore Roosevelt was rapidly gaining strength among Republicans in most of the states he visited, and also that it is his belief that the Republican party will present a united front in the Chicago convention.

"Weeks and McCall are practically out of the presidential race insofar as Massachusetts is concerned," said Mr. Martinson. "In that state I discovered that men who were bitterly opposed to Roosevelt some time ago are today strongly in favor of the colonel.

"Kentucky is for Fairbanks and will probably send delegates instructed to vote for the Indiana man. But then Fairbanks has always had a rather strong following in Kentucky. But I was really surprised to find the sentiment favoring Roosevelt in Kentucky, though, as I said, Fairbanks will probably remain first choice.

"West Virginia appears to be strong for Roosevelt. There is no doubt in my mind that Roosevelt will carry West Virginia by a large majority. I also believe, after making some investigations, that the colonel will carry Michigan."

Mr. Martinson declared that he was here to see some of the Duluth Republicans, but that no special significance was attached to his visit. Until the first of the year Mr. Martinson was connected with the anti-saloon movement.

What About The Teeth?

Statistics show that only about 14 out of every 500 New York City school children have sound teeth. Probably similar conditions prevail elsewhere.

There's a Reason! And it lies to a great extent in the demineralized foods that make up the usual diet of children. The body must have its quota of mineral elements—lime for the teeth, iron for the blood, phosphate of potash for the nerves, etc.—or disaster is pretty sure to follow. Many foods—especially white bread—are woefully lacking in these vital mineral elements.

The famous food,

is rich in these elements. It is made of whole wheat and malted barley, retaining the mineral salts so abundantly stored in the grain by Nature.

Grape-Nuts is easily digested, appetizing, and highly nourishing. Along with other food, a daily ration of Grape-Nuts does much toward correcting dietetic faults in both children and adults.

DENIES THAT SHE ELOPED

Wife Brings Counter Charge of Cruelty Against Husband.

Divorce Cases Again Occupy Attention of District Judges.

Denying that she eloped with another man and took $800 belonging to her husband with her, Mrs. Stoja Vukadinovich yesterday afternoon filed in district court a cross bill in the divorce suit started by Eli Vukadinovich, Gary wood dealer, charging him with extreme cruelty.

Vukadinovich accuses his wife of having eloped with $800 of his money and Jove Ugnenovich, and claims that she also committed adultery. This she strenuously denies.

They were married Dec. 15, 1900, in Croatia and have lived in this country for the last few years. Mrs. Vukadinovich charges that on many occasions her husband has beaten her and kicked her. Last November, she says, he struck her with a broom handle and broke the bones of her hand.

Vukadinovich is cited to appear in court Saturday and show cause why he should not pay his wife temporary alimony and attorney's fees. She asks for $50 a month for herself and $50 with which to prosecute her case against him.

The Vukadinovichs are parents of three children. He is 40 and she 36.

Alida Halverson, 24, yesterday afternoon started divorce proceedings against Jacob Halverson, 30, whom she married in Minneapolis on Dec. 28, 1907, and who is the father of her two children. She charges him with being an habitual drunkard and says that he has been abusive toward her. Mr. Halverson is now a baker and resides at Benton, Minn.

Judge Fesler has signed divorce findings in favor of Edith Wood, 38, who sued her husband, Ernest I. Wood, 39, for divorce on the grounds of desertion. They were married Sept. 27, 1900, and he left her less than two years later.

Ole Bergwick, 32, claims that his wife, Inga Bergwick, 30, abandoned him on Oct. 27, 1913, just three months after they were married at Stanley, N. D. The court has signed an order limiting the time in which Mrs. Bergwick may answer the complaint to April 15, 1916. Papers were served on her in North Dakota, where she now resides.

Desertion is the ground on which Catherine Capen Gunn, 20, is seeking a legal separation from Stephen M. Gunn, 30. They were married in Eveleth on Aug. 11, 1913, and lived together until July 5, 1914, when, she claims, he left her.

HAS YOUR SCHOOL ANY ELEPHANTS, TOO?

When Robert Bruce was gathering material for his book on rural schools he met a lady who had occasion to make her first visit to her son's school. It was just the average school in the average country section. The lady carried with her her little 5-year-old daughter, who had recently been to the circus. As soon as the child entered the schoolroom she asked where the elephant was. Her mother assured her that there was no elephant.

"But I know there is," the child insisted, "I can't see him, but I can smell him."

And this may be the kind of air that the average child, your child, sits in, breathes in, studies in, and grows dull in—for five, six or seven hours a day, for five days out of the week. Have you ever made a visit to the schoolhouse, to see for yourself?

At least ninety-nine out of every 100 mothers are not aware of the hygienic and sanitary conditions under which their children are educated, says Elise Ward Morris in Farm and Home. They may provide their little ones with individual cups to be sure that the water they drink is not contaminated by other lips, and remain unaware of the fact that Paul and Annie and John are drinking in air at every breath that has been cast off over and over again from fifty other little lungs. Then they wonder why the children do not keep up to the mark in their studies! They provide substantial lunches for the little hungry stomachs, and remain unaware of the fact that the children are sitting in a room with the temperature above summer heat, clothed in heavy woolen undergarments that would be discarded as torturesome in June weather. Then the mothers wonder why the children catch cold so easily!

ASKS HEAVY DAMAGE FROM FATHER-IN-LAW

MRS. RALPH G. CARPENTER.

A sensational suit has been brought against her father-in-law, George A. Carpenter, of the Copley-Plaza hotel, Boston, by Mrs. Marguerite Paul Carpenter, who says that he alienated from her the affections of his son Ralph. Mrs. Carpenter belongs to a well-known Back bay family. Her son, 8 years old, was kidnaped by his father last September, and the husband brought suit for divorce shortly after, naming two co-respondents. Mrs. Carpenter now asks $250,000 from her father-in-law and has attached his property.

CURATIVE VALUE OF WHEAT BRAN

Perhaps if ordinary wheat bran, which anyone can secure for a few pennies, were put up in fancy pound packages as a valuable laxative, and a fancy price charged for it, more people would use it. Like so many other things in the world, because it is cheap, people fail to place a proper valuation to it.

As a laxative wheat bran has few equals, writes Dr. A. M. Hughes in Farm and Home. It leaves no bad results if taken properly, and seldom fails to relieve constipation and the very many ailments that result directly and indirectly from constipation.

Bran, taken properly, will clear up the so-called "liver-spotted" skin, remove the ordinary indigestion, remedy dry skin, and, it is claimed by many, prove a help in anemia.

Nothing comes in boxes, jars, or bottles, that is much a skin beautifier as wheat bran. A poor skin, as most people know now, is due to impure blood, and impure blood is generally a stomach condition. Constipation, indigestion and other ailments cause sallow, blotched, pimply and otherwise unlovely complexions. The use of wheat bran will help to correct these, relieve the constipation, improve the blood, and, this done, the skin becomes once more good to look upon. No beauty doctor can begin to work such a miracle of beautifying the skin with mere cosmetics and instruments. It is especially good for skin eruptions, noted so frequently with young people. One good way to take it is to stir it in a glass of cold — not ice water, and drink it.

If the children, or adults for that matter, dislike to take it in this manner, mix it with the morning cereal.

For children, invalids or anyone else who likes it that way, mix a good quantity of bran with marmalade, honey or some other syrup, and spread it on bread.

Or it may be eaten clear, as a cereal, with cream and a little sugar.

As to the quantity, it all depends upon your need of a laxative. Anywhere from one to five heaping tablespoons may be taken daily. The morning is a good time to take this, as it is not a severe physic when handled properly.

CHICKENS BEAT A GARDEN.

Ottawa, Kan., Journal: When Fred Stoltz retired from the cigar business here, he decided to experiment on chickens. He had always had a garden in his back yard, but he thought the fowls might make a better return for the money invested. On Nov. 9, 1914, he bought twenty-four hens for a practical demonstration. He kept a close record for a year, at the end of which time he had netted $1.29 in money, the use of eggs to the amount of $12.04, and eight chickens which he ate, which he estimates as worth 50 cents each, or a total of $4. Besides this he has increased his stock by eight pullets and he has two hens that laid 250 eggs each in the year.

"I wanted to experiment on chickens to determine whether or not I could get more out of the space in the back yard from chickens or a garden," Mr. Stoltz said. "And I believe, considering all things, the fowls are the better investment. The garden only produced a few vegetables during the summer months, and the ground was idle the remainder of the time."

"Where Everybody Goes"

BIG HAUL FOR SMOOTH CROOK

"Otto Becker" Secures Nearly $1,000 By Victimizing Business Men.

Duluth Stenographer Is Innocent Accomplice in Check Cashing.

Fifteen or twenty business men in the central section of Duluth are "out" sums varying from $25 to $45 as a result of one of the cleverest and most successful swindles Duluth has seen in recent years. A total of between $600 and $1,000 was secured, police admitted last night, when details of the affair were made public.

A smooth young man, known here as Otto Becker, "resident engineer" of the "Chicago Northwestern Construction company," leased offices in a large Superior street building, near Fourth avenue west, and engaged a stenographer, several days ago.

On Saturday, March 4, Becker told his stenographer to make out the payroll, and when it was finished, he took the checks, saying:

"These fellows who work for us are a rough gang, and I don't want them coming up here. They'll probably be trying to cash these checks in the saloons this afternoon, so if anyone calls up to ask about them, you can tell them that the checks are all right.

"I'm going down now and meet the train that they're coming in on, and I'll pay them off as they come."

The telephone rang all afternoon, and each time the stenographer, who is a Duluth girl and entirely innocent of the affair, said:

"Yes, this is the Northwestern Construction company. Yes, the check is all right, we have that name on our books."

Worked Alone.

As far as police have been able to learn, Becker worked single-handed, except for the unwitting help given him by his stenographer. His principal stock in trade was a large book of checks, printed in Duluth, and very impressive.

The checks bore the name of the Northwestern Construction company, and were on various banks, including the First National Bank of St. Paul and the City National bank of New York.

The lower left hand corner of each check bore the name of the firm in red ink, and there was a blank for signing the name "G. W. Weber," above the printed title of his position "Resident engineer." The stenographer signed Weber's name, acting on instructions from Becker, who said Weber was in charge of the active work the company was doing at Kettle River, Minn.

Late Saturday afternoon Becker telephoned the office, saying that there was trouble at the Kettle River job, and that he must make a trip to that point.

"You don't need to come down Monday," he added.

On Tuesday he failed to appear, and on Wednesday the girl, growing suspicious, telephoned police. Detectives are looking for smooth-faced, good-looking man, about five feet, seven inches in height, who weighs about 170 pounds.

Worthless Checks for Rent.

It has since developed that Becker paid his office rent with a worthless check, which was to be held by the building managers until the head office of the construction firm had examined the lease and approved of it.

The furniture and office equipment was rented from the janitor of the building, police said, and for stationery (including the checks) Becker paid cash.

Becker registered at the Hotel Superior Feb. 28, and checked out at 7 p. m. on the evening of March 4, police learned. He claimed to represent the Chicago & Northwestern Railway Construction company, and the Chicago Northwestern Construction company, the second being a subsidiary concern.

Drafts and checks which he had printed bore both names, police said.

CLEAN-UP BEFORE NAVIGATION OPENS

Safety Head to Co-operate With Harbormaster in the Work.

Duluth's bay front will be cleaned up before the 1916 navigation season opens.

Commissioner Silberstein of the public safety division this morning announced that he would confer with Capt. W. E. Hoy, harbor master, this afternoon, and go over details of a plan to destroy sunken vessel hulks which clog several of the slips.

"The slip at Thirteenth avenue west, near the public incinerator, is badly clogged," said the commissioner. "My attention was called to it yesterday and I have taken up the matter with Capt. Hoy.

"Owners of the property will be notified that the slips must be cleaned up thoroughly, and if they refuse to take any steps in that direction within a reasonable length of time, the city will do the work and charge it up to them."

After the commissioner's attention was directed to the condition of the Thirteenth avenue slip, he learned that similar conditions prevailed at other points along the bay and harbor front.

"We want the Duluth side of the harbor to look its best," he said, "and I believe that we can improve appearances materially by a little work. An untidy harbor front gives every visitor who arrives on a passenger boat a bad impression, and we don't want that."

Brainerd Five Loses.

HOUSING PLAN IS ANNOUNCED

Steel Plant Employes to Take Leases on Morgan Park Houses.

Improvements to Be Made Soon; Store and Garage Will Open.

In a communication to the residents of Morgan Park, circulated by John M. Davidson, manager of the Morgan Park company, which is the controlling company that will handle the residential property of the Minnesota Steel company, the plans to be carried out in regard to residences and methods under which the company will work, are outlined. The communication, which is the first of a series which will be issued from time to time, gives an outline of what the people of the district are to expect from their landlord.

Up to this time the people living in the park have been renting the houses or apartments from month to month. In the future the tenants are expected to take leases on these buildings or apartments. These leases are to be submitted within a short time for signatures. The letter states that every request for a change of apartments that can be made in reason will be granted.

Decorations of the interior walls are soon to be made in all of the houses. A list of the material to be used and the colors of the standard coatings selected will be on file at the company's office, House No. 20. If some special color scheme or style is wanted, the tenants will be asked to pay the extra cost of the work.

The letter stated that the company's Lake View store will be opened the later part of next month. This is to be a fully equipped department store, including stocks of groceries, meats, drugs and an ice-making plant. The building will provide for independent shops, and rooms for a dentist's office, a barber shop, shoe repairing shop, millinery, newsstand, circulating library and meeting rooms.

Garage Building.

The garage is to be completed within a few days. It will provide accommodations for forty-two automobiles. It is fireproof and steamheated. As yet the company has no decided whether to lease the building to an independent manager or not, but the residents are informed that the rates are to be based on the lowest possible cost consistent with good management.

The rooming houses, which are now just about completed, will be operated under the management of Mrs. H. B. Hutchinson. The buildings have 40, 20, 10 and 8 sleeping rooms, respectively, with dining rooms and recreation rooms in connection. The four buildings will be known as the Nenovan club. It is planned to have certain groups of the rooms set aside for men who desire special accommodations in one or more of the buildings.

Until such time as the Morgan Park clubhouse has been constructed one or more of the houses will be set aside as club quarters for the men. House No. 58 has already been assigned for this purpose and will be equipped with suitable furniture if the rooms prove to be suitable for the purpose.

The Morgan Park school will be completed in time for the opening of school next fall and will have accommodations for 700 pupils. The letter states that this school will be operated upon the Gary or Wirt system.

SUES TO RECOVER ON MACHINE WORK

Imperial Iron Works Wants Pay for Making Flax Breaker.

Trial of an action brought by the Imperial Iron works against Karl Wessel to recover $3,200 as the balance due for material and labor furnished in constructing a flax-breaking machine for use in the factory of he Western Rug company of West Duluth, was begun before Judge Fesler and a district court jury today.

Mr. Wessel, one of the promoters of the rug company, it is claimed, asked the Imperial Iron works to develop a machine in their plant. No drawings were furnished and no price was specified, the only agreement being that Mr. Wessel was to pay a reasonable amount for the labor and material furnished.

The machine was developed as desired in February, 1914. It was a forty-roller flax-breaker, was 44 feet long and 8 feet wide and weighed 42 tons. As it was the first machine of its kind ever built, Mr. Wessel applied for a patent.

The plaintiff concern put in a bill for $7,500, and Wessel paid them all but $3,200. Suit was sarted to collect the balance. George H. Spear is appearing as attorney for the plaintiff and Elmer F. Blu represents Mr. Wessel.

ARRESTED FOR LOOTING SCOW

Two Held Pending Issuance of Complaint Charging Burglary.

Tony Ontinovich, 27, and Mike Senich, 55, were arrested last night by Theodore Amonson, watchman for the Northern Dredge & Dock company at the foot of Forty-first avenue west while in the act of taking some of the machinery in one of the scows. The men are being held at the West Duluth police station pending the issuing of a complaint charging them with burglary.

The watchman has been on the lookout for burglars for some time. About a week ago some one stole some clothing from his shanty while he was making the rounds about the dock. Numerous small thefts also took place in the neighborhood, but up to last evening, the lone watchman was unable to catch the thieves.

CHARGED WITH DISORDERLY CONDUCT

Emil Linnander, aged 44, is alleged to have made a nuisance of himself while riding to West Duluth on a street car. The conductor attempted to quell the noise, but received a blow on the chest, according to the story he told the police. When the car arrived at Central avenue, Conductor O. L. Grinden turned the man over to Patrolman Peterson, and Linnander was taken to the police station, where he was charged with disorderly conduct. In police court this morning he pleaded not guilty, and trial was set for March 22 at 2 p. m.

LORIMER IN HIGH FINANCE

Former Senator Borrowed $303,000 From La Salle Bank.

State's Attorney Tells of the Dealings of His Construction Companies.

Chicago, March 15.—William Lorimer, as president of the Lorimer & Gallagher company, and J. P. Gallagher, its secretary, borrowed $303,000 from the La Salle Street Trust & Savings bank and its subsidiaries, William H. Holly, assistant state's attorney, today told the jury trying the former senator on charges connected with the bank's failure.

"This was not the only construction concern in which Mr. Lorimer was interested," said Mr. Holly in resuming his opening statement. "There was the Federal Construction company and the Lorimer & Gallagher Construction company. The Lorimer & Gallagher company was organized in 1901 with a capital stock of $50,000, but only $2,500 was aid. Mr. Lorimer was a politician at that time and it was easy for a politician to get contracts. The company, in 1906, got the contract to build the Southern Traction company and the capital stock was increased to $1,500,000 and a bond issue of $1,500,000 authorized. In 1907 a contract was let to H. B. Nepham for building the road, but very little was done by him except to incur debts aggregating $250,000, mostly in bonds of the Southern Traction company.

Capital Advanced.

"The capital of the road was then advanced to $7,500,000 and Mr. Nepham made a sub-contract with Mr. Lorimer whereby the Lorimer & Gallagher company was to build a road from East St. Louis to Belleview and to equip it with $250,000 worth of rolling stock in addition to paying all expenses in connection with the road's construction.

"The Southern Traction company had no money; in fact it had nothing but its franchise but it agreed to give the Lorimer & Gallagher company stock in payment, $100 worth of stock for every $60 expended.

"When the road was finished, the Lorimer & Gallagher company was to get 15 per cent of the contract and to get this, the traction company induced the Ethelberger syndicate, an English corporation to agree to buy $2,000,000 worth of stock when the road was completed and in operation.

No Money Until Completed.

"Therefore the Lorimer & Gallagher company which already was indebted to the La Salle Street bank for $143,000 took a contract on which the company was to get no money until the road was completed.

"The Lorimer & Gallagher company had no money, and to get it, where did its officers go? To the bank which Mr. Lorimer controlled. The company borrowed $168,000 from the bank to construct the road, making a total of more than $300,000, which the Lorimer & Gallagher company owed the La Salle Street institution. In security for this $500,000 worth of Southern Traction company stock was put in the bank. This was the stock that the Lorimer & Gallagher company got at 60 cents on the dollar but it was put into the bank at 77 and 30 cents on the dollar."

SUPERIOR

Debate on Local Option.

A debate between the "wet" and "dry" forces of Superior will take place within a short time. A challenge was issued by members of the latter party at the mass meeting held last night by the "wets" at the Tower hall. Rev. E. H. Gelvin challenged to debate the issue with Paul S. Conwell of Kansas City, who is in Superior to assist in keeping the city in the wet column.

Tri-State Fair.

Plans for a tri-state fair to be held at the Douglas county fair grounds were discussed at a meeting of the directors of the association held yesterday afternoon.

BREITUNG WOULD PURCHASE SHIPS

Detroit, Mich., March 15.—Edward N. Breitung, a wealthy mining man of Marquette, Mich., and New York, declared here today that he is one of several persons who are attempting to promote a gigantic shipping corporation to purchase interned German and Austrian merchant vessels. Mr. Breitung said estimates show there are 4,800 German and Austrian ships interned throughout the world.

FORMER EVELETHIAN SNOWSLIDE VICTIM

Eveleth, Minn., March 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—News has been received here of the death of August Ostberg, a former resident of this city, in a snow slide in Colorado. Few details of the affair has been received.

Ostberg resided in Eveleth for several years, leaving about five years ago for Colorado. While here he was employed in the mines. Last fall he was in the city for about a month.

Ostberg is survived by his wife and six small children. He was a member of the Workman lodge of this city.

Bloodshed at Strike.

Chicago, March 15.—Bloodshed attended the strike of employes at the Corn Products company in Argo today. George Mademos, a striker, was shot and seriously wounded by a company watchman or one of the 150 private detectives guarding the plant, it was claimed.

Judge Worthington Dead.

Peoria, Ill., March 15.—Judge F. N. Worthington, former member of congress and member of the Pullman commission appointed by President Cleveland, to settle the Chicago railroad strike, is dead at his home here today. He was 85 years old, and had been on the circuit court bench for twenty-four years, retiring in 1914 on account of ill health which terminated in his death last night. The funeral will be held tomorrow.

DEMANDS CARTRIDGES CONSIGNED TO CALLES

Douglas, Ariz., March 15.—Ives G. Lelevier, Carranza consul here demanded today that the local express agent turn over to him three hundred thousand cartridges consigned to Gen. F. Elias Calles and ordered held last night by the American military authorities. His request was refused.

Consul Lelevier then telegraphed to Elesio Arredondo, representative of the de facto government at Washington, asking him to secure permission of President Wilson for delivery of the cartridges. Consul Lelevier said that Gen. Calles had been instructed by Gen. Alvaro Obregon, Carranza's minister of war to co-operate with American troops in pursuit of Villa and that he could not do so without this ammunition.

LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF POLICE COURT

GOES GUNNING FOR TROUBLE

Frank Shirley "Argifies" With a Gat; Four in Jail.

A barefooted negro woman in a night gown and an angry consort defended their castle at 232 South First avenue east last night when enemies stormed it with beer bottles.

This noon the besiegers returned and one of them carried a long, blue-barreled revolver that almost did some damage to the valiant defenders before police reached the scene in response to a riot call.

The "castle," occupied by William and Eva Austin, has two or three more bullet holes this afternoon, and Mr. Austin is recovering from the effects of a bad scare while he gazes through the bars in headquarters.

In an adjoining cell is Frank Shirley, 35, the gun "toter," who police refused to release on $100 bail. Upstairs in the woman's division are Eva Austin and Stella Shirley. Just how the trouble started nobody knows.

"Somebody called somebody a name and then somebody broke a window—that was last night," explained Police Captain A. G. Fiskett.

"Shirley didn't like that, so he went visiting, with his gun beneath his coat. He dared Austin to come outside and 'fight like a man,' but when the latter poked his nose out the door, Shirley fired at him."

Charges of disorderly conduct were placed against all four of them, but more serious counts probably will be lodged against Shirley, at least.

DENIES FORGERY CHARGE.

Ludwig Jenson Held for Passing "Bogus" Paper on Saloon Keeper.

Ludwig Jenson, alias Louis Jenson, who was arrested recently in Chicago and held for the Duluth authorities, was arraigned this morning before District Judge Cant under an indictment returned by the March grand jury charging him with forgery in the second degree. Jenson entered a plea of not guilty to the charge. The police claim that he passed a forged check for $36.80 on John Anderson, saloon keeper, on Dec. 31 last. Jenson is alleged to have signed the name of A. Hedenberg to the paper.

JAPANESE STEAMER POSTED AS OVERDUE

Feared Hokoku Maru Has Fallen Victim to Submarine.

London, March 15.—The Japanese steamer Hokoku Maru has been posted at Lloyds as overdue. She left Portland, Or., Nov. 8 for the United Kingdom ports and was last reported as leaving Singapore on Dec. 20.

Disaster Feared.

Tokio, March 15.—The Hokoku Maru had on board a cargo of 4,100 tons of wheat, which was from Portland, Or. Shipping circles in Kobe, where the vessel is owned, fear disaster from a submarine.

Shortly after leaving Singapore the captain of the ship sent a wireless message to the owner advising him that in consequence of submarine activity he would take the route around the Cape of Good Hope. The vessel was due at Durban about Jan. 10, but has failed to put in an appearance. Her fate is much a mystery as that of the Japanese steamer Senju Maru, which disappeared in the Mediterranean several months ago.

The Hokoku Maru is insured for $225,000 and the cargo for about $150,000. She was of 6,000 tons register and was built in England in 1890.

Chinese Rebels Active.

Washington, March 15.—Continued activity among revolutionists in China was reported by Admiral Winterhalter, commanding the Pacific fleet. Revolutionary forces were preparing to attack Luchow, Szesuan province, the dispatches said, and were operating generally in Huan province. Government troops were reported to have captured Suifu, which had been occupied by rebel forces.

Opinion Reversed.

Madison, Wis., March 15.—The attorney general's office has reversed itself in an opinion given to the Madison city clerk a week ago, wherein it was held by Assistant Attorney General Messerschmidt that independent candidates could run for office after the primaries. In an opinion today, Attorney General Owen does not agree with Messerschmidt, and holds that only the two candidates receiving the highest indorsement at the primaries can legally be candidates.

Capt. Hickey Offers Services.

Appleton, Wis., March 15.—Capt. Hickey of Sheboyan is the first of the retired officers of the second infantry to offer his services in case of a call for troops.

Confesses to Robbing Mail.

Green Bay, Wis., March 15.—Arrested when trying to dispose of a pair of women's high boots at a ridiculously low price, John Buth, baggage master for the Green Bay & Western Railroad company, confessed to rifling mail bags and taking parcel post packages.

Forger Brought Back.

Green Bay, Wis., March 15.—Grover C. Bice, former employe of the Wisconsin Public Service company, was brought from West Virginia today by a detective, on a charge of forging a check on that company for $35.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S HEARING WAS POOR

From "Our Nation in the Building," by Helen Nicolay in the Century magazine: The training of Washington's entire life had been toward self-mastery. Lessons of obedience in early military life, the loneliness of supreme command and the great stake for which he played—all tended to that end.

He had been born with no talent for the trivialities of life, no grace of wit or social ease, and he was occupied with engrossing cares. His deafness, moreover, made it impossible for him to take part in general conversation even at his own table, a circumstance that has unfortunately added to the gloom of the mental portrait bequeathed to posterity. We think of him as a man of stately presence, a little slow in his mental processes, but very just and very sure; a man almost dull in the monotony of his virtue, who lived on a plane of conscious benevolence, holding resentments and kindly impulses alike in leash, ready to turn them in the direction of his country's good.

Yet there are hints that under this chilling calm glowed a furnace of emotions. In the intimacy of a portrait sitting he confessed to Gilbert Stuart that he was "passionate by nature," and he was really the person best fitted to know.

The little girl who lived opposite, anad saw him daily with his two aides, all very correct in their laced hats and well-brushed coats, cross the street and start on their customary constitutional, wondered if the great man ever spoke or smiled; but Senator Ross, blundering upon a domestic scene soon after Edmund Randolph was dismissed from the cabinet in disgrace, found Nelly Custis cowering "like a partridge" in a corner and the president's wife "awe-struck," while he thundered, in answer to the question whether he had yet seen Randolph's pamphlet of vindication: "Yes, sir; I have read every word, every letter of it, and a——er scoundrel God Almighty, never permitted to disgrace humanity!"

In writing home about one of the depressing presidential dinners, which were indeed rather terrifying festivals, owing to the host's deafness and the demeanor of most of the guests, who seemed to feel that they were assisting at some sort of national funeral, Mrs. Adams showed a gentler side of his nature. She told how Washington, with awkward and unavailing kindness, tried to dispel the gloom for her at least by asking minutely after the health of members of her family; and then, picking the plums from a cake, sent them with his compliments to "Master John."

The chief detective of a New York hotel worked hard and earnestly on a stolen watch "case," and finally recovered the missing article. As a reward the owner of the watch, a woman, named her dog after the nice man.

LEMUEL E. QUIGG.

Lemuel E. Quigg, a well-known lawyer and politician, testified before the Thompson legislative committee in New York city concerning money received by him from the Gillespie firm of contractors in Pittsburgh. The committee's counsel believes that this had something to do with possible grafting in connection with contracts of the Interborough company but Quigg testified that the work he did for the Gillespies was in connection with a garbage contract.

ASTOUNDING ADVANCES ARE REPORTED IN EVERY LINE OF MERCHANDISE

Demands of Belligerent Nations Create Famine in Raw Materials.

Activity of Munitions Plants Causes Rapid Advance in Wages.

Manufacturers in East Are Now Facing Serious Situation.

Rapid, almost astounding advances in the prices of merchandise of every description—clothing, shoes, gloves, woolens, silks, cottons, rugs, paper, linens, matches and so on down to the insignificant pin—are keeping Duluth store managers busy explaining to their patrons why the cost of living is fast assuming such proportions.

"It's all due to the European war," explained one merchant today, who declared that every mail brought him notice from manufacturers of advances in prices. "It is simply the price that Americans must pay for the great conflict which is raging abroad. The people of the warring countries are not the only ones who must bear the burden.

Hardships in America.

"As the war continues, Americans will come to realize that the greatest conflict in history will leave the traces of hardship in this country.

"The famine in dyestuffs, contrary to the popular idea, is not responsible for the big advances along certain lines of merchandise," said a buyer for one of the larger retail stores today. "True it is, that the scarcity of dyes has boosted prices of certain commodities, but the more substantial advances affecting the general public are brought about through the inability of manufacturers to secure the raw materials and to meet the labor situation.

"In the big textile mills of the East, manufacturers are facing a serious situation. They have been forced to compete with the munition factories in paying operatives practically twice the wages paid heretofore, and this additional cost, the ultimate consumer, of course, has to stand. The manufacturer has no desire to raise the price, but has been forced to in order to supply the market and make his profit. The distributor and retailer find themselves in the same situation. Buyers are continually side-stepping to keep pace with prices, and the future is anything but optimistic.

"Munition factories are now paying operatives who formerly worked in the textile mills as high as $5 a day and upwards. Before the war, they were paid $2.50 and upwards. This has depleted the supply of skilled workers in the woolen and textile mills and forced manufacturers to pay more for their labor.

Foreign Demand Heavy.

"But neither the scarcity in dyes nor the labor situation is the greatest factor. The enormous demand of the warring nations abroad for all kinds of commodities has created a scarcity in the supply market at home which manufacturers are finding it very difficult to meet. For instance, take the cheap cotton batting. This has been made from 'linters,' the fuzzy portion which is scraped off the cotton stem. Now it has been gobbled up by the gun cotton manufacturers, and people who buy cotton comforts next winter will have to pay some fancy prices. There is practically none of the so-called cheap cotton batting to be had.

"Then there are enormous advances in woolens. Why? Because thousands and thousands of sheepskins and woolen blankets, etc., have been sent to Europe to meet the demand for the warring nations. The consumption is enormous. And the time will soon come when cowhide will even be cheaper than sheepskin, although it is a matter of common knowledge that the latter is much inferior. Leather goods are also going up in leaps and bounds. The leather manufacturers are furnishing great lots of harnesses for horses used by the cavalry of belligerent nations and when a horse falls in battle, its harness falls with it. There is no salvage corps to save the leather. The effect of the enormous consumption of leather goods will soon be felt here.

Shoes Will Soar.

"The prices of shoes will be substantially boosted. One shoe man declared the other day that he would be actually ashamed to sell a $5 pair of shoes by next July. He would prefer to show his customers a better line of goods.

"Linens have taken a substantial advance, gloves have increased about 25 per cent, and merchants here are placing their orders on gloves with manufacturers who will quote them no prices, but who will agree to fill their orders at the prices prevailing at the time the shipment is made. Hosiery, underwear, dress goods and silks have also gone up in price. The advance on wool yarn alone has been from 25 to 40 per cent within the last three months.

"The time will soon be here when a five-cent box of matches will be considerably smaller than it now is. People will also begin to talk about the day when they could buy a cheap galvanized pail for 'two bits.' The price will be doubled. Then take the household pin, insignificant as it is. Its price must also be boosted. Packages which one might buy for five cents a few weeks ago, now bring seven. The cost of metal has advanced and the pin consumer must stand his share.

"Many of the manufacturers are taking orders conditionally subject to getting the materials. They have notified merchants that they will make every possible effort to protect their interests and make prices as low as is consistent with reason, but that they are greatly handicaped on account of the prevailing conditions in the supply market of commodities of many sorts. Take the shoe manufacturer, for instance. He finds a shortage in the supply market of leather, threads, inks, stains, cement and all materials used in shoemaking and an advance of prices is absolutely forced in the manufacturer of shoes. Because of the shortages of hides and dye-stuffs, it is practically impossible to get certain leathers."

MARINE

GIVING SAILORS PUREST OF WATER

Lake Carriers' President Issues Instructions for Strict Care on Ships.

In accordance with the action taken at the recent annual convention of the Lake Carriers' association, President Livingstone recently issued a circular to members that a separate system should be installed aboard the vessels enrolled in the association for filling the drinking and cooking tanks—the system to include an independent seacock, independent pump and piping with steam jet connection to the seacock for sterilizing purposes.

Instructions were given to the engineers to take all measurements and see that all necessary piping and fittings were placed aboard for installation by the engine department before the season opened. In a number of instances this has already been done, as several of the companies are making an early fit-out.

President Livingstone has also repeated the instructions of the sanitation committee of the association that the tanks must be filled only from the lake areas which have been proved by government analyses to be absolutely pure and that one man alone must be signed aboard ship for this purpose. Moreover it is made the duty of this one man to see that the tanks are thoroughly cleaned and flushed out with a solution of chloride of lime before they are filled.

With the separate installation and with these instructions faithfully observed, it is believed that the crews aboard ship will be served with a far sweeter and purer water than is to be obtained in any of the cities bordering on the lakes.

In a notice just issued, the United States hydrographic department makes the following announcement concerning Duluth harbor for the coming season:

"On the opening of navigation in 1916 the following changes will be made in the lighting of St. Louis bay and river:

"South Channel Light No. 9 will be established on a pile in about eighteen feet of water in lieu of South Channel Buoy 9, which will then be discontinued. The light will be fixed white, of 60 candle power, twelve feet above the water.

"St. Louis river rear range light will be moved back on the range to a point on the bluff 355 yards from the front light and established, about thirty feet above the water and five feet above the ground, in front of a white daymark.

"St. Louis River Light No. 1 will be established on a pile on the eastern point of the island abreast of the approach to the Zenith Furnace company's coal dock. The light will be fixed white, of 60 candle power, twelve feet above the water."

THIEF RIVER TEAM SECURES TROPHY

Thief River Falls, March 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—The championship trophy won by the Thief River Falls hockey team at the recent outdoor sports carnival at St. Paul, has been received. It is magnificent silver cup, mounted on an ornate ebony base and standing almost two feet in height. In order for it to become permanent property of the local team it must be won twice more in competition at the carnival.

OSBORNE ACQUITTED BY ORDER OF JUDGE

Indictment Against Former Warden of Sing Sing Is Dismissed.

White Plains, N. Y., March 15.—Thomas Mott Osborne, prison reformer, Harvard graduate, twice mayor of Auburn, N. Y., and former warden of Sing Sing, was acquitted of the charge of perjury by direction of Justice Arthur S. Tompkins to a jury in the supreme court here today.

Justice Tompkins, in a long opinion, held that Dr. Rudolph Diedling, a state prison commissioner, was without authority, under the state prison law, when he investigated, single-handed, Osborne's administration of Sing Sing. It was before Dr. Diedling that Osborne last October committed the alleged perjury by swearing, as charged, that he was without knowledge of certain cases of immorality.

Justice Tompkins held there was no perjury committed by Osborne, inasmuch as the warden had the right to keep inviolate the pledges given convicts who had confessed their immorality to him.

BOYS HAD CHARGE.

Thief River Falls Junior Commercial Club Being Copied.

Thief River Falls, Minn., March 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—A novel and unique feature of the last "stand-up" feed of the Commercial club here was that the entire program was in charge of the recently organized Junior Commercial club, composed of boys between the ages of 12 and 20. The club is taking a prominent pioneering part in this progressive movement, how to handle the boys, and inquiries are pouring in asking Secretary Lincoln for information regarding the method in vogue here. The younger members of the club have become imbued with civic spirit and are gaining a thorough knowledge of the scope of the club's activities and are assisting as much as possible. At the last meeting they served the dinner, several of the members read papers on community matters of great interest and a glee club that they formed furnished the music.

RAISING COLLEGE FUND.

Subscriptions Being Secured for North Star College at Warren.

Warren, Minn., March 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—North Star college of this city is engaged in a strenuous campaign to raise funds to pay off its standing indebtedness. Approximately $36,000 is needed. So far the school authorities have met with very much success. J. J. Hill donated $9,000 to the fund and the residents of the valley and the state at large have raised all but about $4,000 of the remainder. That the institution will win out is the feeling of the school authorities, as during this week subscriptions are coming in at a very encouraging rate. The campaign closes on March 18, at which date all the money must be in in order to secure Mr. Hill's donation.

MARKET HAS GOOD BULGE

Wheat Advances Sharply With Buying on Crop Damage Reports.

Flaxseed Breaks on Burst of Selling; Crushers Buy at Bottom.

Duluth Board of Trade, March 15.—The market was strong at the close with continued active buying.

May wheat closed 1⅜c up, and July 1⅜c up.

May durum closed 1c up, and July 1c up.

Oats closed ⅞c up at 41¾@42¼c for on the track; rye unchanged at from 63 to 71c, and barley unchanged at 88@89c.

At Winnipeg, May oats closed ⅝c up at 42⅝c.

At St. Louis, May wheat closed at $1.07¼, and July at $1.05⅝.

At Kansas City, May wheat closed at $1.02⅝, and July at $1.02¼.

Puts on Minneapolis wheat closed at $1.09⅞, and calls at $1.13½.

The unexpected again happened in the wheat market today. Quotations were advanced around 1c above yesterday's close, whereas on the basis of the general "dope" a reaction was looked for.

After selling off ⅞c at the start, on lower Liverpool cables, shorts rushed to cover on the spreading of reports of damage to the winter wheat crop over sections of the territory. To aid the bulls in their operations, there were estimates of a greatly reduced acreage likely to be sown to wheat in the Canadian Northwest on account of the large amount of spring plowing to be done and the scarcity of labor. The acreage in Russia will also be reduced by 25 per cent, it is thought, and surplus stocks carried in that country are considered to be much less than generally figured upon.

At the outset bear operations were aided by reported liberal reselling by British importers at the seaboard and the demoralization of the cargo market at Liverpool. That selling was denied later, and on the contrary it was stated that there were seaboard inquiries for some cash wheat. The wheat freight rate to Liverpool now stands at 50c a bu, whereas it had been up to 52c. From that and the fact that clearances were more liberal today at 1,138,000 bu of wheat and flour, conditions were judged to be better. The raising of the embargo against grain shipments to the East yesterday had a good sentimental market effect.

The elevators handling bonded grain were helped out yesterday in shipments of around 30 cars of oats and wheat all-rail to the seaboard. Unless the railway situation tightens up again, elevator men are now more hopeful of being able to work through, as the probabilities are for decreased receipts at the terminals here between now and the opening of navigation.

May wheat opened ⅜c off at $1.09⅜, eased off ⅛c more, and then bulged up to $1.11⅛ till the noon hour on persistent buying. July opened ¼c off at $1.11, broke ⅝c and then advanced to $1.11⅝.

Durum was about as active as spring wheat. May durum opened ½c off at $1.04½, broke ½c more, and later bulged 1⅛c. July opened ⅛c off at $1.05½, eased off ⅜c more, and then moved up to $1.06½.

Break in Flaxseed.

Operators on the long side of flaxseed were treated to a trying time. There was a burst of selling shortly after the opening following a break at Winnipeg and lower cables. Buenos Aires closed off 2⅜c at $1.36, and London 4¼c off at $2.70½. It was noted, however, that buying by crushers came in at the low points, and that led to recoveries of around 1c.

May flax opened unchanged at $2.29, and closed 2½c off at $2.26½ asked. July opened unchanged at $2.29, and closed 2½c off at $2.26½ asked.

At Winnipeg, May flax closed 1¾c off at $2.06¼.

MARKET GOSSIP.

Price Current says: "The extent of the winter killing of wheat, which is soon to be revealed, is apt to be quite excessive, especially in those sections where there were heavy rains last fall followed by sleet storms. The larger part of Kansas and all of Nebraska seems to be the only important area which escaped damage. Revival of the green bug infestation is to be expected. The ravages of the Hessian fly will not be observable before the middle of April or the early part of May. Dry weather in the Southwest is a source of apprehension to the wheat grower in that region."

There was a good inquiry for nice milling wheat on the Duluth market today, but the lower grades were dragging. Cash No. 1 northern sold at from ½c under to 2c over the May price. Cash No. 1 durum sold at ½c under May with the off grades a drug on the market.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool: "Wheat opened under pressure of free Manitoba offers and increasing arrivals. Cargo market was weak, winters and Plates 9d lower and Manitobas one shilling lower. American statistics exert an important influence. Native offers are liberal and the movement free. Consumption is reduced. Parcels are 3d lower. Argentine offers are lower to affect sales. Australian weather is favorable. Holders are reserved, and actual shipments so far this week disappointing.

At Minneapolis cash wheat was dull and weak. Blue stem No. 1 northern sold at ½ to 4c over May, and velvet chaff at ½ to 1c over. Mills are pretty well plugged up and elevators are in the market again. Some mills reported better flour sales, and some say the market is dull.

Russell's News, New York, said: "There was no evidence of export buying of wheat early, but a few exporters said that they had offers to resell wheat. Most of these offerings are from English interests. It is understood that the asking prices on these reselling orders were close to a working basis. There was some selling of May and July futures at Chicago for foreign account this morning."

CHICAGO MARKET.

Chicago, March 15.—Crop damage reports from Illinois and Missouri rallied the price of wheat today after a display of weakness at the start. In some places the damage was estimated as averaging 20 to 30 per cent, chiefly the result of winter-killing. Assertions from Liverpool that British millers were reselling, had considerable to do with the early weakness here. Opening prices, which ranged from ⅝c to 1c lower, with May at $1.07½ to $1.08 and July at $1.06¼ to $1.06⅝ were followed by a rise to well above yesterday's finish.

A sharp break in Liverpool quotations led afterward to a material setback but not of a lasting sort. Adverse weather in Canada had a bullish effect. The close was steady, 1⅝c to 1¾@1⅞c net higher, with May at $1.10¼@1.10⅜ and July at $1.08¾.

Corn swayed with wheat. Trade was light. After opening unchanged to ¼c lower, the market scored a moderate general advance.

Scantiness of receipts led subsequently to further gains. The close was unsettled at ½@⅝c to ⅝c net advance.

Oats showed strength independent of other grain. The reason was the prospect of a big reduction soon in the Chicago stock.

Weakness in the hog market lowered provisions. Pork led the decline.

Chicago Livestock.

Chicago, March 15.—Hog values were depressed today by liberal receipts throughout the West and by a large leftover supply here. Packers and shippers showed unusual caution in buying cattle. ACTIVITY IS CONTINUED

Reading Takes the Leading Place in the Stock Market.

Seasoned Shares Show Uncertainty Late and Close Is Irregular.

New York, March 15.—Activity and general strength were again the dominant features of today's early market, yesterday's buying movement being resumed on a broad scale. Gains of a point or more were registered by American Locomotive, American Can, American Zinc, Chino Copper, Mexican Petroleum and Westinghouse. The latter opened with a sale of 6,000 shares at 70 to 70¼, against yesterday's final quotation of 69⅜. Canadian Pacific led the rails with a rise of 1¼, while Reading rose over a point. Specialists yielded as much as a point on secondary offerings.

Reading assumed first place soon after the opening of the stock market today, leading the active trading for the forenoon. The stock rose 2¾ to 89⅝, its advance being accompanied by various rumors, among others that Rockefeller interests were buying control. Color was given to this report by the strength of Western Maryland, a Rockefeller property, which rose 3⅜ to 32¾. Other strong features included Lehigh Valley, Norfolk & Western, United Fruit and Zinc, the latter adding 2 points to its initial gain. Bethlehem Steel, selling minus its first quarterly dividend of 7½, fell to 520, an overnight loss of 21½ points. Cuban-American Sugar rose 21½ to 236. Bonds were steady.

Crucible and Baldwin became heavy at midday, but greater strength was shown by the general list. New York Central, Smelting, Mexican Petroleum, Westinghouse, Goodrich, United Railways and Philadelphia company were in special demand.

Petroleum, Smelting and Zinc were the conspicuous features of the final hour, seasoned shares showing some uncertainty. The closing was irregular.

—TALK TO GILIUSON—

He will put you wise to a great many things you should know in selecting a piano. Do not be deceived by misleading advertisements, offering something for nothing. Remember, it is characteristic with some firm to have a so-called piano sales, advertising big discounts, made possible only by inflating the original prices.

There are no such methods used in selling the Raudenbush piano, which is sold direct to the public (by the manufacturers) at an actual saving of at least $100. If this statement is hard to believe, call and investigate.

MANAHAN MAY DEFEAT FRED STEVENS IN THE RACE FOR DELEGATES

Country Towns Are Rapidly Cutting Down the Stevens Lead.

Democratic Race Mixed and King One of Four Leaders.

George Sullivan Probable Victor in the Third District Fight.

St. Paul, Minn., March 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fred C. Stevens of St. Paul, at first thought to be one of the four Republican delegates-at-large from Minnesota, is probably nosed out for a place by his townsman, James Manahan, according to the latest country returns which have cut the Stevens lead and apparently will soon wipe it out.

More complete returns today also show Senator George H. Sullivan of Stillwater leading in the three-cornered Third district contest, where Sullivan fought Congressman C. R. Davis' machine single-handed, and is expected to oppose Davis for congress either this year or in 1918. Henry L. Simons, one of the Davis ticket, seems to have won, while J. J. Rachac of Faribault is the hindmost. The vote of 98 precincts gives Sullivan, 2,780; Simons, 2,650, and Rachac, 2,414.

Many Precincts Unreported.

A. B. Cummins got a Republican indorsement by full 5 to 1 over Henry D. Estabrook. With 772 country precincts reporting and the Twin Cities practically complete, Cummins has 20,-

IRISH SITUATION IS CONSIDERED SERIOUS

Vigorous Campaign Against Recruiting Is Being Carried On.

London, March 16.—The Post publishes a long article in regard to what it characterizes as the serious situation in Ireland on account of activity on the part of the Sinn Fein society. It says:

"From motives of patriotism English newspapers hitherto have refrained from commenting on the situation in Ireland but it is developing with such rapidity and gravity that silence is no longer possible.

"Through the south and west a vigorous organized campaign against recruiting is being carried out without serious hindrance. Within a few weeks several persons have been indicted and tried in Dublin, but in every case acquitted by the jury amid tumultuous applause from those in the court room. All these trials took place before ordinary juries and we await with impatience the time when the authorities will utilize their powers to have such cases tried before special juries or military tribunals.

"In Cork a committee recently appointed to organize the St. Patrick's day celebrations was offered the use of several companies of Irish soldiers, but the committee refused to all of them to participate stating in reply: 'The British army is in hostile occupation of Ireland and it would be as absurd for Belgians to invite a contingent from the German army to participate in a Belgian national celebration.'"

All Americans Leave Torreon.

Washington, March 16.—Consul General Hanna at Monterey forwarded to the state department today a delayed message from Consular Agent Williams at Torreon, saying that all Americans had left Torreon for the United States. It contained no further information. Consul Williams yesterday reported he had turned the consulate over to the British consul.

Does Not Signify Modification of Submarine Program, Says Berlin.

Berlin, March 16, via London.—A change in the head of the ministry of marine is now an accepted fact. It is officially stated that in order to avoid misunderstanding and wrong conclusions, it must be noted that this change does not signify any modification in the submarine policy of the German government which is based on the memorandum of Feb. 2, last, issued by the foreign office to neutral powers regarding the government's intention to destroy armed merchant vessels of enemy countries; nor is there any intention to change or weaken its policy in any respect. It may be said, however, that no sharpening of the submarine warfare may be expected, and that efforts which have been made to have the submarine warfare extended to neutral shipping bound to and from enemy ports have no chance of success.

Von Tirpitz Retires.

London, March 16.—A dispatch to the Exchange agency from Copenhagen says the Wolff bureau, the German semi-official news agency, announces that Admiral Alfred von Tirpitz, German minister of the navy, has retired, and that Admiral von Capelle, director of the administration department of the admiralty, has been appointed his successor.

Retires With Honors.

Amsterdam via London, March 16.—A semi-official statement issued in Berlin says:

"The withdrawal of Admiral Von Tirpitz from the naval ministry takes place with all honors. His resignation is generally regretted in view of his great services in making of the German fleet the highly valuable instrument which it has proved to be during the course of the war. The choice shown in the selection of his successor

DUTCH LINER IS TORPEDOED; NO WARNING

Big Steamship Turbantia Sinks Near Noordhinder Lightship.

Number of Americans Aboard; Passengers and Crew All Saved.

London, March 16.—A wireless dispatch sent from the Tubantia last night, as given by Reuter's correspondent at Ymuiden, Holland, says the steamship was torpedoed. The correspondent asserts there were Americans on board.

Lloyd's reports that the Tubantia has gone down and that all the passengers and crew are safe.

It is learned that a number of Americans intended to board the Tubantia at Falmouth, but it is not known whether any Americans were on board when she left Amsterdam.

"It is now certain that the Tubantia was torpedoed without warning," telegraphs the Amsterdam correspondent of the Central News. "There were three Americans on board. They were Richard Schilling, an American consul; Emma Schilling and Carmen Schilling."

All Passengers Taken Off.

London, March 16.—A Reuter dispatch from the Hook of Holland says that a wireless message has been received there stating that the large Dutch passenger steamship Tubantia, outward bound from Amsterdam to the River Plate has been torpedoed and is in a sinking condition near the Noordhinder lightship. All passengers have been taken off on boats.

Torpedoed or Struck Mine.

London, March 16.—The London agents of the steamship Tubantia, which is owned by the Holland-Lloyd of Amsterdam, have received a message saying the vessel struck a mine and is sinking. Another dispatch says the Tubantia was torpedoed.

The steamship, which is 15,000 tons gross, left Amsterdam yesterday for Buenos Aires. She was to have stopped at Falmouth and peninsular ports, where the majority of the passengers were to have been taken aboard.

A life-saving boat has left the Hook of Holland to search for the sinking vessel and Dutch torpedo boats are leaving Flushing to hurry to the rescue of the ship's passengers in the lifeboats.

The Tubantia was built at Glasgow in 1913 and is 540 feet long and 65 feet beam. She left Buenos Aires on Feb. 4 for Amsterdam and was reported as having passed Fernando Noronha on Feb. 14.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE DIRECTORS IN SESSION

Kansas City., Mo., March 16.—Directors of the chamber of commerce of the United States gathered in Kansas City today for a two-day meeting. Among the matters to be disposed of were an official canvass of the votes cast in the seamen's act referendum, the suspension of certain provisions of which were recommended by the committee of the national chamber early this year, and the election of a chairman of the executive committee to succeed R. Goodwyn Rhett of Charleston, S. C., who recently was made president of the national chamber.

CLASH WITH MEXICAN BANDITS NOT EXPECTED FOR SEVERAL DAYS YET

Carranza Troops Working With Americans in Pursuit of Villa.

Only Fear of Trouble Based on Insubordination of De Facto Men.

Many Americans in Interior States Leaving for the Border.

Washington, March 16.—President Wilson and officials of the war department turned expectantly toward Mexico today for news of developments following the movement of American troops across the international boundary line yesterday in pursuit of Villa and his bandits. Word of an actual clash between the two forces, however, is not expected for several days.

Official word that American forces had crossed the border was flashed to the war department last night by Maj.-Gen. Funston, commanding the border troops. The hour of the entry is understood to have been about noon yesterday.

Secretary Baker said the dispatch showed that the Carranza forces not only did not oppose the movement but apparently were co-operating.

This information served to relieve official anxiety that the Carranza forces might attempt to oppose the entry of the Americans. The only remaining fears of trouble between the American and Carranza forces are based on the possibility of insubordination or mistaken identity.

Disposition of Villa, in event of his capture was being informally discussed here today. It is believed that if taken alive he will be turned over to the Carranza authorities for prompt execution.

PLANT OPENED WITH STRIKE-BREAKERS

Corn Products Company Resumes Work at Argo With New Men.

Chicago, March 16.—The Corn Products Refining company plant at Argo, Ill., a suburb, resumed operations with strike-breakers today after having been closed several days by a strike of employes who demand increased pay. It is said there are 500 men in the factory and that the company has a large number of guards within and about the plant.

F. L. Jeffries, general superintendent of the company has declined to discuss wages with the strikers, but said he would take back men who applied for work today.

CANADIAN WHO OPPOSES SENDING MORE MEN TO WAR

SENATOR CHOQUETTE.

Senator Choquette has created a sensation in the Canadian parliament by opposing the sending of more men and money to Europe to aid in the war. He believes that England is partly responsible for the war and holds that when England is at war Canada is not necessarily at war, too.

FRENCH CENSURED FOR FAILURE TO FIGHT

Every Troop Which Retreats Will Be Fired on, Says General.

Berlin, March 16, wireless to Sayville.—An official communication made public here, contains a French army order issued by Gen. De Baselaire, commander of the sector on the left bank of the Meuse river, concerning the engagement of March 7. The order which was found in the woods of the Crows (Bois Des Corbeaux) northwest of Verdun, follows:

"To the commanders of subordinate sectors east and west—Order:

"Your forces did not offer the resistance which was to be expected. Until further information, I infer that the commander of that section failed in his duty. Therefore he will be courtmartialed.

"It is necessary to offer resistance to the utmost limits. We must be inspired at this moment only with one reason—either to victoriously hold up the enemy or to die. Artillery and machine guns will fire on every troop which retreats.

SHIFTY MEXICAN IS APPARENTLY BEYOND THE MORMON COLONY

Casas Grandes, Where Americans Were in Danger, Is About 100 Miles South of Mexican Border.

Gen. Pershing Makes First Report, Telling of First Day's March and Disposition of U. S. Troops.

El Paso, Tex., March 16.—Villa, since the pursuit of the American army started, has aparently passed beyond the American Mormon colony about Casas Grandes, and reliable dispatches today indicated that these 500 Americans now are safe. These dispatches gave credit also to Carranza forces about Casas Grandes for putting up a front which stopped Villa from making his proposed raid on the Americans.

Today's information indicated strongly that the shifty bandit leader, with his supply of swift horses, is again on the move. Information about the nature of his movements was closely guarded.

Casas Grandes is about 100 miles due south of the point where the column of Gen. Pershing entered Mexico yesterday.

First Report From Pershing.

San Antonio, Tex., March 16.—The first report from Brig.-Gen. Pershing, commanding the expeditionary forces into Mexico, to Maj.-Gen. Funston, stating that all was going well, was received at Fort Sam Houston this morning. The report dealt with the strength of Gen. Pershing's command, the disposition of the various units and the officers, the distance of the first day's march and the movements of the Carranza troops.

All these matters come under the censorship, however, and were not given out.

Gen. Funston today arranged a direct government wire to Columbus, N. M. At the same time it was announced that Gen. Pershing might make frequent trips between the field forces and Columbus. In this way the commander of the expeditionary forces can keep in close touch with the head of the Southern department.

Penetrate Ten Miles.

El Paso, Tex., March 16.—The American expeditionary force, which has started to capture Pancho Villa "alive or dead," had penetrated about ten miles into Mexico, according to the most reliable reports received here today.

The military censorship permitted practically nothing but rumors to escape, but it was fairly well established that the advance corps of the American expedition had camped last night in the heart of the desert which lies between the point of entry and the foothills of the Sierra Madres, in the fastnesses of which mountains Villa is believed to have taken refuge.

PRISONERS PETITION FOR PROHIBITION BILL

Ex-Convict Appears at Hearing on N. Y. State-Wide Measure.

Albany, N. Y., March 16.—Petitions said to contain the names of 1,000 inmates of Sing Sing, Auburn and Dannemora state prisons were filed with legislative committees yesterday by an ex-convict, who appeared at a hearing in support of the Wilson-Fullagar state-wide prohibition bill. The former prisoner, whose name was not disclosed, was introduced as No. 11221. He said that if the future of the bill lay with prison inmates, it would be enacted into law in ten minutes.

"Most of the men have known of the effect of intemperance," he declared. "They knew it was intemperance, largely, that put them where they are."

Lorimer Trial Again Postponed.

Chicago, March 16.—Illness of Attorney Albert Fink, counsel for William Lorimer, today caused a postponement in the trial of the former president of the La Salle Street Trust & Savings bank, charged with conspiracy in wrecking the institution, until tomorrow morning.

TO FLOAT LARGE LOAN FOR CANADA

American Bankers Are to Handle Dominion Bonds for $75,000,000.

New York, March 16.—A group of American bankers, headed by J. P. Morgan & Co., are negotiating with the Canadian government for the flotation of a new Canadian loan, according to a statement issued by the Morgan firm today. The amount has not been finally determined, but it was intimated that it would be in the neighborhood of $75,000,000.

J. P. Morgan & Co. issued the following statement:

"A group headed by J. P. Morgan & Co., Brown Bros. & Co. and Harris, Forbes & Co., has been in negotiation with dominion authorities covering a proposed issue of Dominion of Canada bonds, subject to legislative consent. The group referred to will probably organize a syndicate in the near future for the purpose of handling such securities.

"It is expected that the issue, the total amount of which has not yet finally been determined upon, will be divided into equal maturities running from five, ten and fifteen years."

GETTING SCARED OF HIS SHADOW.

SUMMARY OF THE WAR NEWS

Dispatches from London Report the Dutch steamer Tubantia of 15,000 tons, from Amsterdam for South America, in a sinking condition off the Netherlands coast. Whether she struck a mine or was torpedoed has not been determined. The passengers and crew escaped in boats.

One of the frequent pauses which have characterized the German campaign for Verdun is again in evidence.

After having made their gains of Tuesday to the west of the Meuse in the direction of Dead Man's hill, the crown prince's forces have not again advanced to the attack. Speedy resumption of the drive in this sector is not indicated as probable, as a slackening in the intensity of the bombardment has been reported.

Apparently there is anticipation on the part of the French that the next German movement may be made to the southeast of the fortress, in a flanking operation, as the French guns have been extremely active along the heights of the Meuse overlooking the Woevre plain.

It is officially declared in Berlin that the change in the head of the ministry of marine, involving the retirement of Admiral von Tirpitz, who is succeeded by Admiral von Capelle, signifies no change in the German government's submarine policy.

Today's German official statement conforms with that from Paris as to the unchanged situation north of Verdun. Its text, however, apparently indicates that possession of Dead Man's hill on which the Germans yesterday reported an advance, is claimed by the German war office. The statement speaks of further attempts by the French "to dispute our possession of the height of Le Homme Mort (Dead Man) and our positions in the wood to the north."

These attempts are declared to have failed.

Apart from the Verdun region there has been little infantry activity on the western front except in the Champagne. There the French made several attacks on the German position near St. Souplet, west of the Souain-Somme-Py road which Berlin claims were without success, the French losing more than 150 men taken prisoner besides two machine guns.

INFANTRY ATTACKS NORTH OF VERDUN HAVE AGAIN CEASED

Artillery Bombardment Continues With Varying Degrees of Intensity; Germans Claim to Have Repulsed Assaults By French Troops.

Paris, March 16, 2:30 p. m.—There has been no further infantry action in the region to the north of Verdun, according to the announcement made by the French war office this afternoon.

The bombardment has continued but with varying intensity.

The text of the communication given out by the French war office reads:

"In Belgium, French patrols have been able to ascertain that the destructive fire directed by our artillery yesterday evening against the German forces at La Plage, in the region of Nieuport, resulted in the complete destruction of the German communication trenches and killed a number of the enemy.

"In the region to the north of Verdun there has been reported no infantry engagement during the course of the night. The bombardment has continued, but not very strongly on the left bank of the River Meuse; it has been more intense on the right bank.

"In the regions of Haudremont and of Damloup our artillery has cannonaded violently the country to the west of Douaumont, where the enemy was engaged in perfecting defense works.

"In the Woevre we have bombarded several provision trains of the enemy.

"To the east of the forest of Apremont a surprise attack against a German trench resulted in our inflicting some losses on the enemy and of bringing in some prisoners.

"In the Vosges the Germans delivered an attack against our positions near Burnhaupt. Checked by our curtain of fire the enemy found it impossible to set foot in our trenches."

German Statement.

Berlin, March 16, via London, 3:35 p. m.—A number of unsuccessful attacks have been made by the French on the German lines south of St. Souplet, west of the Somme-Py road in the Champagne region, German army headquarters announced today. The Germans took two officers and 150 men prisoners and captured two machine guns.

Today's official statement seems to indicate that the Germans claim possession of Dead Man's Hill, the dominating height west of the Meuse on which they reported an advance movement yesterday.

FORMER DULUTH BOY ADMITS HE IS "BEARDED BANDIT"

Arrested in Los Angeles, He Confesses Minneapolis Crimes.

Terrorized California Cities After Leaving Minnesota; Broke Parole Here.

CLIFFORD J. DWYER.

Minneapolis' notorious "bearded bandit," who terrorized that city and on June 27, 1914, killed John E. Erickson, grocer, whom he attempted to hold up, and then escaped after one of the most sensational series of crimes in the history of the Northwest, was Clifford J. Dwyer of Duluth, if a report of his confession received today is true.

Dwyer, under the alias of Jack Disberry, was sentenced to serve twenty years in the California state penitentiary today at Los Angeles, and is said to have confessed to being the "bearded bandit" of Minnesota fame.

Dwyer, or Disberry, has had a checkered career, and has served time in Stillwater, as well as at Green Bay, Wis. He was arrested early in 1915 at Los Angeles, together with Ray Disberry, who said he was Dwyer's brother, and Mrs. Miriam Disberry, who said she was Dwyer's wife.

Los Angeles police caught the three on the blind baggage of a train, and upon returning to their rooms, found various costumes and a large false beard, which Dwyer wore when committing various holdups to which he admitted.

This makeup earned for him the title of the "bearded bandit" in San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego, where he was active for several weeks, holding up a score of persons at the point of a gun and terrorizing the cities as he had terrorized Minneapolis. Although police had many descriptions, desperate attempts to effect his capture failed for a long time.

In Minneapolis the "bearded bandit," as he was called, was the most spectacular criminal ever called to police attention, authorities said.

Resided in Duluth.

Dwyer was raised in Duluth, and his mother now lives here. On April 14, 1907, he was sentenced to the Wisconsin state reformatory at Green Bay under the name of Ray Disberry.

Later, on Aug. 1, 1911, he burglarized the Johnson & Peterson Hardware store at 1918 West Superior street with an accomplice, George H. Oven. Both men escaped, but were captured a month later at Detroit, Mich., and brought back for trial. For this they were given indeterminate sentences at Stillwater.

On Sept. 8, 1914, Dwyer broke his parole by marrying Miriam H. Garnett of St. Paul, a mulatto, and leaving the state. Minnesota police have been looking for him since that time.

If his alleged confessions to being the "bearded bandit" of Minneapolis are true, Dwyer terrorized that city while on parole from the state penitentiary, and then went West. He is 26 years old, according to Duluth police records.

Before starting out on his career of crime, he was under suspicion in connection with various cases, and twice was arrested for petit larceny.

WILL VOTE TO GIVE CONTRACT TO DAHL

Three Commissioners Favor Local Man in Paving Fight.

Three of the city commissioners favor awarding the East Superior street paving contract to E. A. Dahl, the lowest bidder.

As a result, they declared yesterday that they will oppose the resolution awarding the contract to the General Contracting Company of Minneapolis on its bid of $49,473.60 for a Trinidad Lake asphalt pavement, when that measure comes up for a vote at the council meeting next Monday. It was introduced last Monday by Commissioner Farrell.

Mayor Prince and Commissioners Voss and Silberstein are of the opinion that E. A. Dahl should be awarded the contract on his low bid of $47,559, despite the fact that there is some doubt as to whether or not the Barber Asphalt company will furnish him with Trinidad Lake asphalt, the material specified by the works division.

At the council meeting last Monday Commissioner Farrell, after introducing the resolution awarding the contract to the Minneapolis company, explained that the Barber company has refused to sell Mr. Dahl the Lake Trinidad asphalt on the grounds that the local contractor does not own the proper equipment.

"The owners insist on this material," said the works head, "and the only way to get it is to award the contract to the General Contracting company. This situation will never happen again and the Barber company will be barred from the city, if it endeavors to tie up improvements in such a manner."

Mr. Dahl insists that he can buy the asphalt specified, and the three commissioners say that he should be given the chance to prove it, since the property owners will be protected by a bond.

KAISER DETERMINED TO AVOID A BREAK

Policy Not to Provoke U. S. Results in Downfall of Von Tirpitz.

Washington, March 16.—Emperor William's determination not to provoke a break with the United States in the new submarine campaign, even though it involves a factional contest in the German reichstag, has already brought about the downfall of Grand Admiral von Tirpitz himself, as indicated in today's Berlin dispatches.

The tone of these dispatches from the German capital, although guarded and veiled, is taken here to prove the supremecy of the emperor, Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg, Foreign Minister von Jagow and the army which has been opposing the plan of Admiral Tirpitz and the navy party to carry the submarine campaign to a merciless destruction of all neutral shipping to enemy ports.

The Importance of Healthy Kidneys

In the removal of waste material from the body, the kidneys are called upon to perform a very important duty. The failure of these marvelous and delicately constructed organs to properly do their work means retention in the system of poisonous matter. This poisons the system, and if permitted to remain results in severe backache, headache, torpid liver, constipation, and eventually Bright's disease.

About 40 years ago Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy, a combination of herbs and other healthful ingredients was discovered; its value in strengthening the kidneys and liver was at once appreciated. And today it stands as one of the standard remedies in the treatment of diseases of the kidneys and liver. Many persons suffer from diseases of the kidneys unknowingly. The use of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy will invariably improve your health, and make you feel that life is really worth the living.

It is sold by all druggists in 50c and $1.00 sizes. A sample free if you write Warner's Safe Remedies Co., Dept. 375, Rochester, N. Y.

WILL EXTEND TERMINALS

Soo Procures Property on Rice's Point and at Other Places.

Officials of Railway Are Not Ready to Announce Plans.

That the Soo Line is preparing to extend its Duluth terminal facilities is attested in the transfer to that railroad corporation yesterday of two large blocks of water frontage.

From Charles E. Wales a part of Rice's Point and of an unplatted tract in government lots 3 and 4, section 3, 49-14, were transferred. A deed was also recorded from the Duluth & Thunder Bay Railroad company of a block of property beginning at a point of intersection of the northwesterly line of Pine avenue with the northeasterly line of Arthur avenue, thence southeasterly along the northeasterly line of Arthur avenue, a distance of 575 feet to the northwesterly line of Spruce avenue.

Duluth officials of the Soo Line aver that they have not as yet received any definite information regarding the yard extensions and improvements that are planned here. They have been given to understand, though that considerable improvements are to be carried through during the coming summer that will entail heavy capital outlays. It is admitted that the present terminals are inadequate to cope with the freight traffic being developed here by the Soo road. A visit of the road's high officials is expected to the Head of the Lakes within the next few weeks, and it is likely that some definite announcements will be made then.

PREDICTS GOOD YEAR FOR CANADA

Men Will Be in Great Demand, Says Calgary Man.

Alfred W. Miller of Calgary, Alta., who is at the Spalding today, declared that despite war conditions, there would be an extremely insistent demand for laboring men in Western Canada during the coming year.

"The remarkable grain crop of last year and the general betterment in industrial conditions on the other side of the line, assure good times in Canada," said he. "Higher wages will be paid in Canada during the coming season than has been the case during the last two years. Figures issued by the immigration department tend to show an extraordinarily large number of men will be needed for general farm work. A year ago Canada was in a rather bad way as the result of the war and the stringent times that came on just previous to the declaration of war. There has been a remarkable change, and a very prosperous year is expected. Because of the large number of men enlisted in the service, and because of the great amount of work that is assured, it looks as if men seeking employment would find all they want in the Dominion."

CLEAN UP DAILY AT POSTOFFICE

Additional Man Employed By Department to Care for Building.

Cleanup will be a regular daily affair at the Duluth postoffice from now on and the building has already undergone a change in appearance.

Following a request made some time ago by Postmaster William E. McEwen, the department at Washington has allowed the local office an additional man to do necessary work at the building. The floors are to be scrubbed until they glisten and the writing tables, pens and all wood work in the lobby will be kept immaculately clean for Uncle Sam's patrons.

Mr. McEwen said today that an extra man had been needed for a long time because of the great amount of work that the janitor has had to do.

Worker Shot.

Chicago, March 16.—A strike of 100 laborers at the joint of the Patent Vulcanite Roofing company led to the shooting of W. R. Winn, 24 years old, when he attempted to go to work for the company today. One arrest was made.

LESS ICE IN GREAT LAKES

Field Is Smaller Than a Week Ago, But Still Heavy.

Not Ready for Ice-Breaking Yet; Government Report.

That the ice conditions at this end of Lake Superior are improving is the burden of a report just issued by the weather bureau. It is announced that, while at present the ice field, 15 inches thick, at this end of the lake, extended beyond vision on March 8, on the fourteenth it was only about fifteen miles in extent. The ice in the harbor is 35 inches thick.

Two Harbors reported that there is some broken ice in the harbor, and that a large field, which moved in last week, moved over to the Wisconsin shore a few days ago; that ice is visible to the south, about ten miles out, that being, evidently the field extending out from here; but that there is open water to the east beyond vision, and to the west up to the ice field at this port. South shore harbors report solid and thick ice and Port Arthur is also ice-bound. At the Sault, the harbor ice is 24.5 inches thick and is covered with a heavy blanket of snow. Hay lake is 29 inches thick at Six Mile Point.

Not Ready for Ice-Breaking.

The ice breakers at Port Arthur and Fort William are ready for the word to break ice, but the right kind of weather has not arrived yet. The same condition exists in this harbor. It is down to a waiting game, and nothing is expected to be done until melting weather of sufficient extent has been experienced, after which the tugs will probably be started on the work of breaking up the ice in the harbor.

The ice remains about the same in Lake St. Clair, and the Detroit river is only partly open. Buffalo is still closed.

The government ice report gives the following comment:

"The reports from the regular and display stations of the weather bureau and the meteorological service of Canada indicate that the ice is heavier over extreme Western Superior, with extensive fields from Keweenaw Point east to Whitefish Bay. There has been no material change in St. Mary's river. In Lake Michigan the fields have about disappeared over the central and southern portion, while extensive fields cover the northern portion, and at the Straits the ice averages about 16 inches and is not windrowed. In Lake Huron, the fields cover the northern portion, along the east shore and south portion and much open water south of Thunder Bay island. The St. Clair and Detroit rivers remain closed, although in the latter the ice has moved down to Fighting island. In Lake Erie extensive fields cover the western and eastern portion and along the south shore; over the western portion the fields are moving with the winds.

"In comparison with same period last year there is less ice, but heavier over extreme Western Superior and more over the central and eastern portion; St. Mary's river averages about 6 inches more ice than the ten year normal. About the same amount in Green Bay and Lake Michigan. At the Straits the ice is heavier and not windrowed. There is less ice reported over northern Huron, and more over central and southern portions. In Lake Erie there is somewhat more ice."

CLOQUET AUTO CLUB PLANNING ROAD WORK

Enthusiastic Meeting Held and Steps Taken to Improve Highways.

Cloquet, Minn., March 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Cloquet Automobile club held a rousing meeting last night at the city hall. A new board of governors was selected composed of: Hugo Schlink, Henry Hamann, L. P. Rumkle, C. L. Dixon, A. K. Oswald, H. J. Campbell, F. D. Vibert, John Mattinen and J. G. W. Havens. After the meeting the board of governors met for the purpose of choosing their president and secretary, and selected the old heads of the club: Hugo Schlink, president, and Henry Hamann, secretary. The meeting was attended by the road committee of the Commercial club for the purpose of co-operating with the auto club on matters pertaining to roads adjacent to Cloquet, which were taken up and discussed at length by Senator Fred Vibert. He had maps of the district to show where the missing links of roads in this territory were located, which aroused the general sentiment of the meeting to take the necessary steps to have the stretches repaired and completed. If the present plans carry through, there will be two good roads to Duluth, which may be traveled over in any kind of weather.

After New Members.

A membership campaign was started for the securing of new members and it was unanimously decided to have each old member act as a committee of one to act in conjunction with the regular committee who are J. T. Richter, L. A. Freeman and C. D. Ohman in order that they might carry it through to a successful end. It is planned to have every automobile owner as well as the farmers and all who are interested in the building of good roads to become members of the club if possible.

GREED PROVES THEIR UNDOING

Two Alleged Thieves Taken in Storeroom of Dock Company.

On March 14 thieves broke into the storeroom of the Northern Dredge & Dock company at Forty-first avenue west and the bay front, and stole a quantity of brass and copper.

For thirty-six hours Theodore Amonson, watchman, searched for them, and yesterday he walked into the West Duluth police station with Tony Antonovich and Mike Berbich.

Not satisfied with their first haul, the thieves had returned for some more loot, Amonson said, and that proved their undoing. They were held at West Duluth yesterday and were brought to headquarters this morning.

Arraigned before Judge F. H. Cutting for a preliminary hearing on a charge of burglary, both men asked for an examination. They were held in $500 bonds and will be heard March 17.

LAHTI REMEMBERED HIM.

Fugitive Hides Face But Is Too Late to Escape.

When Chief of Detectives Lahti walked into a St. Croix avenue saloon yesterday, John Koski put his hand over his face and turned his back.

That is the main reason why Koski is in jail today with a charge of escaping from the work farm on the police blotter opposite his name.

Chief Lahti thought he recognized the man and smelled a rat when Koski covered his face.

"When did you leave the work farm?" he asked.

"Me?" said Koski in surprise. "I never was out there."

That was enough. Records showed later that Koski took French leave on April 12, 1915.

KEEPS KIDNEYS ACTIVE WITH A GLASS OF SALTS

Must flush your Kidneys occasionally if you eat meat regularly.

Noted authority tells what causes Backache and Bladder weakness.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.—Advertisement.

PRISON HIS LIFE PORTION

Michael Hastings Found Guilty of Murdering William Saari.

Sister, Expecting Acquittal, Shocked; Convict Is Family's Black Sheep.

"Guilty of murder in the second degree" was the verdict returned last evening by the district court jury which tried Michael F. Hastings, 26, for the killing of William Saari, homesteader, on a tote road three miles south of Brookston on Oct. 26, last.

Hastings will spend the remainder of his natural life behind prison bars as punishment for the crime. The sentence of the court is fixed by statute.

When the jury returned its verdict at 10:40 o'clock last evening less than a dozen spectators were in the courtroom. When Hastings learned his fate he bowed his head and stared at the floor. His two sisters, Mrs. Mary Farnsworth and Miss Margaret Hastings, who came all the way from their home in Clinton, Mass., to be with their brother in his hour of trouble, sobbed convulsively. Hastings cried, too. Then he recovered his composure and tried to be brave while his sisters were with him.

Shock to Man's Sisters.

The verdict evidently came as a blow to the two sisters. In view of the fact that the jury had deliberated nearly seven and a half hours, they had believed that a verdict of acquittal would be returned. They never doubted for a moment the story which Mike told on the stand. They knew he was telling the truth about who was doing the shooting. He was their brother.

The two young women will return to their home in Massachusetts with the sad intelligence that their brother must serve a life sentence in prison for his misdeed. Hastings is one of ten children and, according to his sisters, the only one who turned out wrong.

Toiled for Family.

One of the young women confided the story of her life to a court attendant while awaiting word from the jury. She said that she had come to the United States from Ireland several years ago and had procured a job in a Massachusetts textile mill at a small wage but managed to save enough money to send for her sister. The two girls then saved until they accumulated enough money to bring the remainder of the family to the United States.

"And to think that after all of these years of hard work to keep together this family, one of our brothers had to disgrace us," she declared, wiping her eyes.

Hastings will be brought before the court later for sentence.

Hammons Case Next.

The case of the state against Max Hammons, the alleged accomplice of Hastings, will next be tried. Hammons is 20 years old.

The two men are jointly charged in an indictment returned by the November grand jury, of the crime of murdering William Saari. Saari and one Matt Niemi were returning from the harvest fields of the Dakotas to their homes near Brookston when they were accosted by two men, said to be Hammons and Hastings, who commanded them to throw up their hands. They could not understand English plainly and failed to obey promptly. Niemi says that Hastings, the smaller man of the two, fired two shots, one of which killed Saari. Niemi testified that Hammons pulled at Hastings' arm as if to restrain him, but not in time.

E. J. Kenny will defend Hammons and County Attorney Greene will prosecute.

Ranking of Teachers Offers Big Problem for School Board.

Many Below-Grade Instructors on Staff in Duluth.

Directors of Duluth's school board today admitted that their body probably would be called upon to solve problems which would necessitate a complete change in methods of ranking teachers and principals in the near future.

Data presented at the March meeting of the board by C. Francis Colman, chairman of the committee on finance, showed that seventy-three teachers out of 372 failed to pass examinations, but that many of them were re-engaged and will serve during the coming year.

Under the so-called merit system of grading teachers, which has been in vogue here for some time, instructors are marked by the principals of their buildings and by Supt. R. E. Denfeld. This information is catalogued and goes to the committee on schools, with his recommendations, when salary schedules for the new year are drafted.

A teacher is allowed 50 per cent for teaching ability, 25 per cent for scholarship and 25 per cent for personality. The special teachers, elementary teachers at Washington school, a number of the principals, and teachers of the outlying schools do not take an examination.

"Ninety of the 462 teachers on the payroll of the board are in the list of those who are not examined," said Mr. Colman. "Of the remaining 372, there were fifty-three who received less than the required grade in scholarship; twenty-eight were below in teaching ability, and five in personality."

Various directors of the board have expressed themselves as against a system that would permit teachers who fall below requirements to continue in the city's employ, while children who fall below in their class work must be graded accordingly.

Allowances were made in the cases of many of the below-grade teachers, it was reported, and although a few were discharged, most of them will remain on the city's teaching staff.

Another question soon to come before the board, members agree, is that of establishing a time-limit of teacher's service, making retirement on a pension compulsory after a certain number of years.

Thirty-one teachers now employed have been in Duluth public schools twenty years or more.

CHURCH FOUNDER OF MINNESOTA IS CALLED

Dr. E. Norelius, Pioneer Swedish Minister, Passes at Vasa, Minn.

Red Wing, Minn., March 16.—Rev. Dr. E. Norelius, one of Minnesota's most eminent churchmen, founder of the Swedish Lutheran churches of Red Wing and Vasa, and the Vasa Orphans' home, author of several important works of Swedish-Americans of America and publisher of the first Swedish paper in Minnesota, died Wednesday at his home in Vasa at the age of 83 years. Dr. Norelius had been in feeble health for some time past, and his last illness was of several weeks' duration.

Dr. Norelius, who for many years was president of the Augustana synod of the Swedish Lutheran church, was born in Helsingland, Sweden, in 1833. At the age of 17 he came to America and in 1855 graduated from the Capitol university of Ohio. He entered the ministry and was ordained the following year. He then came to Minnesota where he continued his labors with short interims.

REV. E. NORELIUS.

In the pioneer days of Minnesota, Dr. Norelius established a dozen congregations in log huts, which today have become a conference, numbering about 400 congregations and 75,000 members. Fifty-nine years ago he established the first Swedish newspaper in Minnesota which led the way to the number published today.

Founded Gustavus Adolphus.

In 1862 Dr. Norelius founded a high school for the conference in this city in which he was deeply interested. It was moved to Carver and then to St. Peter and is today the Gustavus Adolphus college, an institution known far and wide. In 1865 he established the Vasa Orphans' home. Dr. Norelius was the author of several important works of the Swedish-Americans of America and the development of the Swedish Lutheran church in this country, also biographies of several of the leading Swedish-Americans of Minnesota. In January, 1903, Dr. Norelius was knighted by King Oscar of Sweden and Norway, being named as knight of the North Star Order.

Dr. Norelius and his wife arrived in Red Wing in May, 1856, to assume charge of the Swedish Lutheran congregations of this city and Vasa. He preached his introductory sermon on Trinity Sunday in an unfinished store building on the corner of Fourth and Plum streets. At the close of the service a subscription was made for a church, which amounted to $104. The congregation bought a lot at Fifth and Franklin streets and in 1856 the little church was erected. In 1895 the present beautiful edifice was completed and dedicated by Dr. Norelius.

Dr. Norelius is survived by his wife, who has reached the age of 78 years, and who at the present time is in very poor health, and the two sons, L. C. Norelius of Vasa and M. S. Norelius of Lidstrom.

MEXICAN BANDITS FIRE ON AMERICANS

Attack Made on Soldiers Guarding Railroad Bridge Near Brownsville.

Kingsville, Tex., March 16.—Mexican bandits, said to have numbered about thirty, fired upon sixteen American soldiers guarding the Barreda bridge on the St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico railroad, about fourteen miles north of Brownsville, at 10 o'clock last night. At least 100 shots were exchanged. None of the Americans was hurt. It is not known if the bandits suffered any casualties.

While the fight was in progress, a train approaching from the south was flagged and stopped by an American soldier. A guard of five soldiers on the train rushed forward and reinforced the men at the bridge. With the arrival of these reinforcements, the bandits fled and are believed to have escaped into Mexico.

This was the first bandit trouble in the Brownsville region since last October. Troops guarding the railway line have been ordered increased.

BRANDEIS HEARINGS ARE AGAIN CLOSED

Committee Adjourns to March 24 When It Will Probably Report.

Washington, March 16.—The senate judiciary subcommittee considering the nomination of Louis D. Brandeis to the supreme court completed its public hearings yesterday and adjourned until March 24, when, it is expected, a vote on the recommendation to the full committee may be reached.

Departing from senate precedent, the subcommittee's inquiry has been conducted publicly and since the hearings began Feb. 8, many witnesses have been heard both for and against confirmation. A week ago the committee closed the taking of testimony, but the hearings were reopened at the request of those protesting against the nomination.

The last witness heard was Edward R. Warren of Boston, who in 1905 was chairman of the executive committee of the Boston public franchise league, of which Brandeis was counsel. During the fight before the Massachusetts legislature that year on the consolidation of the Boston Gas companies, Mr. Warren said that his committee and Mr. Brandeis worked along harmoniously to protect the public interest until one day Mr. Brandeis suddenly and without explanation appeared before the executive committee of the league and recommended that it vote in favor of the gas companies' increasing their capitalization two or three million dollars.

"That man has a wonderful magnetism," said Mr. Warren, "and he just swept those men off their feet. All voted in his favor except myself. With the votes in his pocket, he went that day before the legislative committee and told them the league was behind his recommendation, as he had a perfect right to do.

"The legislature was not required to do what Mr. Brandeis recommended, was it?" suggested Chairman Chilton.

"No," said Mr. Warren, as he left the stand.

CODE WORK WILL TAKE LONG TIME

Committee Does Not Expect to Be Through Before Fall.

Drafting of the proposed combined building, plumbing and electrical code will take until early next fall, according to reports made by the chairmen of the sub-committees at a meeting of the general code committee in the organization's headquarters yesterday afternoon.

William H. Hoyt, chairman, presided during the meeting, and each of the nine sub-committee chairmen reported on the work done by himself and his associates. Indications are, they said, that the work of drafting a code and preparing it for presentation to the council will require several months at least.

Mayor Prince and Adolph Anderson, deputy building inspector, were present at the meeting yesterday. The nine sub-committee chairmen follow: Whitney Wall, F. H. Fitzgerald, C. A. Graves, Abraham Holstead, C. A. Marshall, Edward Burg, A. J. Harker, A. W. Lindgren and E. W. Burbeck.

SUGAR PRICE ON INCREASE

Highest Point in Long Period Reached; More Advance Expected.

Shortage in Raws and Refined Both in Europe and America.

Sugar prices are advancing and now stand at the highest point in a considerable period. During the last week the wholesale quotation at New York of refined granulated sugar has advanced from 6.35 to 6.65 cents per pound, and in the opinion of jobbers considerably higher figures are likely in the near future.

Fully 75 per cent of the Cuban April production of sugar is said to have been already marketed, and planters there have become very bullish in their views. A factor that is already having a marked influence in higher sugar prices is the recent formation of the Cuban Cane Sugar corporation, which controls a large proportion of the entire Cuban sugar crop. Another factor that has stiffened up raw sugar prices so sharply has been the decision of the American Sugar Refining company to open its reserve plant at Philadelphia. That move is understood to mean that the company has booked some large export orders and that it must obtain raw sugar to insure the operation of that plant. During the last seven days refiners have purchased over 700,000 bags of Cuban sugars, according to reports.

Imports Below Requirements.

Evidence of the effect the large European shortage is likely to have upon the sugar market is furnished in the statement that Cuban sugar exports came to 90,000 tons last week, of which 30,000 tons were for Europe, and 60,000 tons for the United States. The amount brought into this country, too, is estimated to be far below normal requirements.

As a result of the world's shortage of sugar, a tonnage estimated at 250,000 tons of Hawaiian sugar was rushed across the continent by train from San Francisco to New York last week entailing payment of freight rates that in normal times would be deemed confiscatory.

During the past week Holland entered the market for raw sugars, and an active demand for both raws and American refined sugar developed from Italy. American refiners are being taxed heavily to supply the domestic demand, and as a consequence several large inquiries from Europe have been refused lately.

DEFENSE LEGISLATION MAKES ANOTHER STRIDE

Washington, March 16.—National defense legislation took another stride forward today when the senate military affairs committee completed consideration of the Chamberlain army reorganization bill and ordered it to be reported to the senate tomorrow.

The senate bill, in its fundamentals, would add to the army 14 regiments of field artillery, bringing it up to 20 regiments, increase the infantry regiments to 64; cavalry regiments to 15; increase the coast artillery to 30,000 men, and make generous increases in engineer corps and signal and aviation corps.

Enlistment after July 1, 1916, would be for six years, three with the colors and three in the reserves to be composed wholly of men who had received regular army training or those specially qualified for scientific and engineering duties.

U. S. ENGINEER TALKS ON "PORK BARREL"

The Duluth chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers held a meeting during the luncheon hour at the Commercial club today and discussed matters of interest to members of that profession. The chief matter on the program was a paper by Clarence Coleman of the United States engineer's office on "The Pork Barrel."

Mr. Coleman admitted that perhaps there has been waste in appropriations, but pointed out that, on the other hand, the saving to shippers in freights in the Duluth-Superior harbor alone has been more than the entire amount appropriated for rivers and harbors improvement in the United States.

AMERICANS HAVE RIGHT TO PURSUE GEN. VILLA

Milwaukee, Wis., March 16.—"This country has the right under international law to enter Mexico in pursuit of the bandits headed by Villa because of the governmental condition of the Southern country, that government being incapable of preventing outlawry," said Judge William H. Taft in Milwaukee today. Mr. Taft addresses the local Hibernian society tonight.

The Mexican situation at best, he said, was extremely delicate because this country was doing exactly what Villa wanted done.

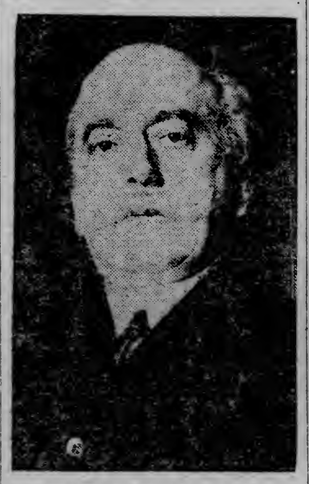
Mr. Taft said Funston and Pershing were the two most competent men to handle the campaign which he looked upon as being more difficult than the one in the Phillippines.

CENSORSHIP RELAXED FOR OFFICIAL MESSAGES

Douglas, Ariz., March 16.—Censorship placed by the United States army officials against all messages in code to points in Mexico was amended today to allow Consul Ives G. Lelevier, of the de facto Mexican government, the use of code in his official telegrams.

Gen. P. Elias Calles, military governor of Sonora, immediately afterwards announced that the telegraph censorship in Sonora also had been changed so as not to affect telegrams, sent to American consul officers in Hermosillo, Guaymas and other cities in Mexico by Frederick Simpich, United States consul at Nogales, Sonora.

HUNGARIAN-AMERICAN LEADER WHO IS LOYAL TO UNITED STATES



ALEXANDER KONTA.

Alexander Konta, the leading Hungarian-American, now a resident of New York, organized a mass meeting in Madison Square Garden recently at which the Hungarian-Americans declared their unswerving loyalty to the United States. Mr. Konta headed a delegation which presented to the president the resolutions adopted at this mass meeting and President Wilson made a speech in response dealing with the duties of the adopted citizens of the United States.

Social Worker Says She Is "Citizen"

MRS. H. A. STIMSON.

Mrs. H. A. Stimson is the president of the Woman's Municipal League of New York, which is doing hard work to obtain employment for the unemployed of the great city. Also she is a citizen and so she informed the mayor's unemployment committee the other day. The secretary of that committee told the league that women's clubs were helpful but that help from "bodies of citizens" was more needed. Mrs. Stimson called his attention to the fact that the supreme court had decided the women were citizens and the statement was revised to read "voters." Women do not vote yet in New York.

For Coughs and Colds PERUNA A Scientific Remedy

A cold is a congestion. Some place an inflammation sets up. Nature tries to throw this off. The irritation produces sneezing and coughing. A scientific remedy for colds must relieve the congestion. To do that the entire body must be treated This is accomplished by Peruna for the following reasons:

First—Peruna is a tonic. It restores balance and invigorates the system.

Second—Peruna is especially valuable for the healing of the mucous membranes, the local seat of colds.

Third—Peruna aids poor digestion and restores impaired appetite.

Fourth—Peruna dispels congestion of the membranes, which absorb your air and food, and expel the waste products from your body.

Fifth—Peruna as a catarrhal remedy has no superior. Colds are acute catarrh---sometimes local; often systemic.

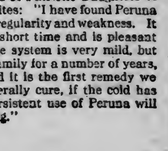
Sixth—Peruna cleans the body of all waste matter.

Everybody who has used it knows Peruna is remarkably effective in each of these capacities.

WITNESS THESE LETTERS

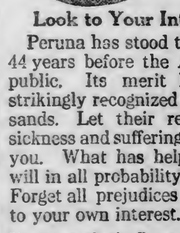
Mrs. I. D. Hayes, 1937 Druid Hill Ave., Baltimore Md., writes: "Peruna is one of the best remedies for grip, cold in the head, sore throat, nervous headaches and coughs that has ever been discovered. After the use of one bottle in my family, I don't feel safe without Peruna in my house."

In a later letter Mrs. Hayes says: "I am never without a bottle of Peruna in my house. I give the children Peruna if they have a cold, and it always relieves them. I had catarrhal bronchitis and it relieved me."



Mr. C. O. Peterson, Lieut. Engine Co. No. 56, No. 3327 N. Hamilton Avenue., Chicago, Ills., writes: "Last year I had a severe attack of la grippe, which left me very weak, so that I was unable to perform my duties. Several of my friends advised me to build up on Peruna, and I found it by far the finest tonic and invigorator I had ever used. In two weeks I was strong and well, and if ever I am exposed to unusual hardship incident with my duties at fires, I take a dose or two of Peruna and find that it keeps me in good health."

A dose of Peruna now and then is a wonderful protection against contagious diseases.



Mrs. Mary O. Miller, Chaplain of Patriotic Daughters of America, Indianapolis, Ind., writes: "I have found Peruna of especial benefit in cases of irregularity and weakness. It restores the strength in a very short time and is pleasant to take. Its action on the whole system is very mild, but sure. We have used it in the family for a number of years, and when any of us take a cold it is the first remedy we take, and a few doses will generally cure, if the cold has not been neglected. But the persistent use of Peruna will cure a cold of even long standing."

Look to Your Interest

Peruna has stood the test of 44 years before the American public. Its merit has been strikingly recognized by thousands. Let their relief from sickness and suffering convince you. What has helped them will in all probability aid you. Forget all prejudices and look to your own interest.

You may obtain Peruna in Tablet form for convenience.

BATHING

By DR. SAMUEL G. DIXON, Commissioner of Health for Pennsylvania.

When Adam first fell into the water the human race took a step forward. Civilization and bath tubs now go hand in hand.

Authorities may vary in discussing the merits of the hot bath, the tepid bath and the cold bath, but they all agree in the abstract that bathing is a necessity to good health and a prime promoter of self respect. The removal from the skin of the accumulation of refuse matter is the primary reason for the bath.

It is essential to good health that the skin be kept in proper condition as it automatically regulates the heat of the body, permitting it to cool off when it becomes too warm and keeping in heat when it becomes too cold. It assists the lungs and kidneys in the disposal of refuse matter. When the skin sweats it assists the kidneys. When not too heavily clothed it respires and helps the lungs.

A bath should not be taken too near meal time. There is a normal attraction of the blood toward the stomach after eating; any interference with this and the attraction of the blood toward the surface of the body is apt to arrest digestion.

Warm baths have a soothing effect and are often prescribed for nervousness. The tepid bath can do no harm. Cold baths are stimulating but are apt to be injurious if the heart action is not strong enough to permit of a ready reaction. To some individuals the shock to the nervous system is so great that they cannot accustom themselves to cold baths.

MOMENTUM OF EVIL DEEDS.

Detroit News: A strange characteristic of crookedness was brought out by the young man who confessed to the police of a long string of forgeries committed in various cities. His logical story gave a striking explanation for the wrong doing which has brought him to disgrace at the prime of life. His first forgery, done at the instigation of a superior, was not intended to bring him any benefit, and it did not, as the tool of another's criminality he was trapped. Instead of facing the consequences he fled. His guilt was on his heels and he was compelled repeatedly to jump from city to city. A forged check each time supplied him with the means.

In graphic fashion the sequence of results was laid bare by the prisoner, relieved when he was at last overtaken. What happened to him happens in some form to everyone who takes liberties with his own conscience. The smallest deceit is a costly expedient, because it must be followed up with a succession of lies in many instances. The man who departs from his own code finds that he is being pushed on in a course of wrongdoing in spite of himself. Partly through habit, partly through the law of cause and effect, one slip necessitates another and another until disaster is complete.

The momentum of devilry is a difficult force to combat.

SAYS NEW LUTHER IS NEEDED.

New York Tribune: In a fervid address to his congregation in the Chapel of the Intercession, Trinity parish, One Hundred and Fifty-fifth street and Broadway, the Rev. Dr. Milo H. Gates recently characterized the Bible societies as the greatest enemies of the whole Bible. He accused them of withholding the Apocrypha from the common people and declared that a new Luther should arise to grapple with them.

"The time has come when all real Protestants should demand from the Bible societies the whole Bible," said Dr. Gates. "The day was when every true Protestant had as the motto on his banner, 'The Bible, and the Bible Only, Our Rule of Faith and Practice,' and, therefore, every true Protestant should now make a fight for the restoration of the Bible.

"One of the greatest libraries of sacred writings is contained in the Apocrypha. In that is contained such wonderful books as the 'Wisdom of Solomon,' Ecclesiasticus and the 'Song of the Three Children.' It is the fault of the Bible societies that this wonderful part of Holy Writ has been stolen from the Bible.

"The theft is really modern, dating from rather late Puritan days. The early reformers all had a high regard for and were familiar with the Apocrypha. In point of fact, it was not until 1826 that the Bible societies refused any longer to print these books as part of the Bible."

A CURIOUS TOBACCO PIPE-BORER.

Popular Science Monthly: Travelers among the Sioux Indians are very much impressed with the perfect smoothness of the bore in their pipestems. Without the use of a tool of any kind, they make a perfect bore in the twigs of ash trees, which they use for musical instruments and for pipes. To accomplish this end, they employ the larva of a butterfly which inhabits the ash tree. The Indians remove the pith for about three inches from the stick they wish bored. Into this cavity they place one of the larva of a brown butterfly, which gradually eats its way down through the pith until the fore is completed. A little heat applied to the wood expedites the work of the larva. The Indians consider both the tube made in this way and the larva as sacred as their idols.

TODAY'S AID TO BEAUTY

An especially fine shampoo for this weather can be easily made at trifling expense by simply dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water. Pour slowly on scalp and massage briskly. This creates a soothing, cooling lather that dissolves and removes all dandruff, excess oil and dirt. Rinsing leaves the scalp spotlessly clean, soft and pliant, while the hair takes on a glossy richness of natural color, also a fluffiness which makes it seem very much heavier than it is. After a canthrox shampoo arranging the hair is a pleasure.—Advertisement.

PAY THEIR TRIBUTE TO ST. PATRICK

Rotarians Wear Shamrocks and Sing Irish Songs at Luncheon.

Rotarians paid homage to Ireland's patron saint this noon at the Spalding hotel, when the club held an informal dinner.

Harp-bedecked flags decorated the room, diners wore tiny boutonnieres of shamrock, with a miniature clay pipe, and the program smacked of St. Patrick's day.

In addition to the program, Collin Kirk of the Otis Elevator company selected it as the day upon which he was to make his initial appearance as a Rotarian. George Ward sang "Mother Macree" and "A Little Bit o' Heaven," accompanied by Ronald Myron.

An informal canvass of the diners, taken to learn how many Duluth delegates would make a trip to Cincinnati to represent this city at the annual convention of the National Rotary clubs on July 16, showed that many prominent business men were planning to go.

SHIPPING OF COAL HEAVY

Greatly Ahead of Last Year and Demand Continues.

No Danger of Shortage However and Strike Is Averted.

Despite the fact that the coal dock companies have been badly handicapped this winter by car shortage and snow blockades, the shipments of coal from the Head of the Lakes during February to interior points amounted to 493,796 tons of all kinds more than in February of last year.

The demand for coal has kept up surprisingly well this year and still shows but little letup. The fact that the shipments are more than they were last year during the same month is hardly to be wondered at in view of the fact that last winter was about the poorest in the coal business that the companies have seen in a great many years. The holdover on the docks when spring came amounted to about 30 or more per cent.

This winter, on the contrary, with more severe weather and better financial conditions, has developed a heavy coal demand, and for a time it was figured that there was likely to be a severe coal shortage. However, coal dock superintendents say now there is very little likelihood of any shortage occurring before spring opens up and coal begins to move this way.

Now that the settlement has been reached between the miners and operators, the probability of strike is out of the way and there is a much better outlook.

Concerning the coal shipments in February, they amounted to 1,204,560 tons as compared to 710,765 tons a year ago. The shipments by cars from the Head of the Lakes were as follows:

	1916.	1915.
Duluth, tons	10,728	5,476
Superior, tons	23,688	14,803

YES—IT IS POSSIBLE TO STOP RHEUMATISM

Rheumatism is a tormenting and stubborn malady. In some cases it yields to treatment which is without avail in other cases.

The darting pains, lame muscles or stiffened joints only disappear by gradually expelling the uric acid, and so many thousands have been relieved by the blood-enriching oil-food in Scott's Emulsion that you should give it a faithful trial. Scott's Emulsion acts as a powerful blood-purifier by increasing the red corpuscles and it strengthens the organs to carry off the acids which cause the trouble.

Try Scott's Emulsion. It cannot harm. It has helped thousands and may be exactly what you need. No Alcohol.

PAWNBROKER HELD, TOO.

Search for Stolen Brass Leads to Arrest of Moses Skarlo.

After police arrested two brass thieves yesterday, they began looking for the stolen property, and as a result Moses Skarlo, 925 West Michigan street, also found himself in jail.

Skarlo is the proprietor of a pawnshop or second-hand store, and the charge was failing to report purchased property.

After Skarlo told Lieut. N. U. G. Terry that he had not purchased the brass, police searched the place because the two alleged thieves had roomed above the second-hand store. They found the goods.

Skarlo pleaded guilty and was fined $12.50.

FOUR ARRESTED AFTER ROW.

Three Negroes Draw Sentences and One Is Released.

William Austin and Mrs. Austin of 232 South First avenue east, were not receiving callers Wednesday night, or Thursday noon, but Frank Shirley and Mrs. Shirley called, anyway.

The fact that Mr. Shirley had a large revolver tucked beneath his coat, with which to emphasize his greeting to the Austins, made things interesting for a while, until police raided the place in answer to a riot call, and arrested all four of them.

Shirley was sentenced to pay a $100 fine or serve seventy-five days at the workfarm by Judge F. H. Cutting today. Mrs. Shirley will serve sixty days at the county jail if she defaults a similar fine, and Mrs. Austin will be her companion. Mr. Austin was freed.

All four are negroes.

JUSTICE MARSHALL STILL ON VACATION

Madison, Wis., March 16.—Justice R. D. Marshall of the supreme court is still absent on a vacation, the first he has taken in twenty-five years. Three weeks ago the judge left for the South, saying that he would be gone for a month or more. The other judges predicted at the time that Judge Marshall could not stay away from work ten days. He is still absent.

Justice Timlin is also absent owing to ill-health. Only one opinion was announced for him at this assignment and there is grave doubt here as to whether he will return to the court. His term does not expire until next January and the successful candidate for that seat elected this April would not accept the official duties until that time.

CHARGE MORE SERIOUS.

Jacob Britz Is Now Held for Alleged Forgery.

When Jacob Britz, 26, was arrested in Superior last night, he consented to return to Duluth to face a charge of passing worthless checks, an offense calling for a work farm sentence or fine.

This morning when brought before Judge F. H. Cutting in municipal court, however, the charge was changed to forgery. He asked for an examination on this count and will be held until March 20.

He is alleged to have passed a check for $12 on Anton Nelson, proprietor of a hotel at 1525 West Superior street, on March 14.

WILL NOT BE TRIED AT PRESENT ASSIZES

Winnipeg, Man., March 16.—Sir Rodmond Roblin, George R. Coldwell and James H. Howden, former ministers, will not be tried at the present assizes on the charges of conspiracy to defraud the province in erection of parliament buildings, on which they were committed for trial several months ago, it became known today.

J. B. Coyne, one of the crown counsel, has conveyed this intimation to A. J. Andrews, K. C., counsel for Sir Rodmond Roblin, in a letter.

SOUTH SHORE ROAD DOING GOOD BUSINESS

Marquette, Mich., March 16.—James T. Maney of Duluth, general passenger agent of the South Shore railway, called on many of his friends here Tuesday. The South Shore freight traffic is excellent, Mr. Maney says, and scarcity of rolling stock is the thing principally to contend with. The passenger traffic has also been improving of late.

Movement For Peace Plank.

New York, March 16.—The League to Enforce Peace, of which Former President William H. Taft is the head, announced today that it has begun a movement to induce the Democratic and Republican conventions to insert planks in national, state and county platforms indorsing the proposal that a league of nations be formed after the war to maintain the peace of the world.

The Eden ELECTRIC WASHER

"I Purchased the Eden on It's Merits"—

"Some time ago I felt sure there was a much better way of saving time, labor and money in washing; I did not see any economy in a hand washing machine. After thorough inspection of a great number of washers, I convinced myself that the "EDEN" Washing machine was the only one that would not rust, shrink or warp, as it was all of metal. Your company was kind enough to send one to my home and demonstrate its usefulness. This decided the question—I bought the machine on its MERITS and not on your SAY SO. Tomorrow will be the 1,423rd anniversary of the death of St. Patrick, apostle of Ireland.

St. Patrick was born in Kilpatrick, near Dumbarton, Scotland, about 387, though no one has been able to fix the exact date of his birth. He died March 17, 493, at Saul, Downpatrick, Ireland.

The account of the life of St. Patrick, as written for the Catholic encyclopedia by Cardinal Patrick Francis Moran, is based partly on the "Confessio," said to have been written by St. Patrick himself, and on the "Epistola ad Coroticum," another writing of the saint's.

St. Patrick's father was Calphurnius, a Roman decurio of Gaul, and his mother was Conchessa, a relative of St Martin of Tours. When the boy was 16 years old Irish marauders carried him to Ireland and made him the slave of Chief Milchu of Dalaradia, County Antrim, Ireland. For six years he tended flocks and during this time mastered the Celtic tongue in which he was to speak to the Irish people when, years later, he was sent as a missionary to the west coast of Ireland.

The Christian youth fled from his Druidical master, traveled 200 miles to the water front and was just in time to board a small vessel that took him to his old home in Scotland. Later he went to France to study for holy orders that he might convert the people of Ireland.

It probably was in the summer of 433 that Patricus landed in Ireland, at the mouth of the Vanity river, near Wicklow head. The Druids promptly rose in arms against him and his companions, but in spite of them, Patricus made his way toward Dalaradia, where he expected to meet his old master and pay to him his ransom as a slave. It is recorded that in his journey he rested at various islands along the Skerries coast, some of which bear his name to this day—such as Ins-Patrick and Holm Patrick.

Patrick never paid the ransom, for when he arrived before the home of Milchu he saw it in flames. The old master and high priest of the Druids, in fear, had gathered himself and his possessions together and set his property afire. Of Milchu, the historians say, "his pride could not endure the thought of being vanquished by his former slave."

In the center of the table was a large round mirror upon which two vases of pink roses were arranged amid a lattice work of chiffon ribbon. White lace nut baskets tied with chiffon bows and white slippers edged with gold and tied with chiffon bows to harmonize, were the favors. Pink and green streamers of baby ribbon were fastened to individual crystal candleholders in which were pink and green candles.

Princess Proposed to Earl Kitchener

PRINCESS MARY.

Princess Mary, the only daughter of King George of England, will be 19 years old on the twenty-fifth of next month. But for the war, she would have been having a very gay time socially this winter. As it is, she has had to devote most of her time to relief work. The princess is not so practical a person as her mother. She is said to have a decided vein of romance in her composition; and all England was amused two years ago when it was reported that she had made an idol of the stern Lord Kitchener and actually proposed to him as her grandmother Victoria did to the prince consort.

How to Eat a Soft-Boiled Egg

WELL, who would have thought it? Winter is almost passed and scarcely a protest has been heard against the high price of eggs. Hens have been attending strictly to business; perhaps their con sciences got busy; mayhap they feared investigation. But the point is that for once eggs are reasonably priced, just at the season when poached eggs for breakfast are most delightful. An omelet every day, yum, yum! and fresh-laid eggs in fizzes and rickies; egg-nog for bad colds and plenty left for a shampoo if you want one.

Even china stores feel the wave of prosperity that comes from egg factories working time and a half and sell sets of the dearest little egg cups just big enough to hold an egg firmly. The nicest way in the world to eat a fresh-laid, soft-boiled egg is from the shell. Put the egg into one of these small cups. If you have not supplied your cupboard with them, you can use a small napkin ring. Chip the shell from the large end, take one spoonful of the white, salt and pepper and eat it. Ah-h! what an appetizer—and now you have room for a bit of butter, salt and pepper. Now eat the egg with your hot, brown, buttered toast and have another and wish you could have a third.

Another thing about eating eggs, don't use a silver spoon. It really is not done, for the egg discolors the metal and there are new, long-handled porcelain spoons for this use that are simply irresistible. They are the only proper spoons to serve with boiled eggs.

Poached eggs may be a reality now, too. You need not use the poacher to hold them in shape as you must do if eggs are suspiciously aged. Just have water boiling and bubbling and salted; drop the egg in and wait four minutes. Lift it out with a skimmer so the water can drain off, butter and salt and serve on a hot china dish. After all a poached egg is more delicate than an egg served any other way.

A tender omelet is a triumph of good cookery that is like a theme for a detective story; add almost anything to it, handle with care and it is sure to please. It really needs a special volume to do omelets justice.

Questions and Answers.

Reply to "Constant Reader" regarding mildewed books: Take books from shelves and place in sunshine, clean shelves and place small lumps of unslaked lime in corners. Use a cloth dipped in gasoline to remove traces of mildew from the books and return them to the shelves in such order that there will be some little space between them.—From Mrs. McN., Imperial City, Pa.

This same neighbor writes the following advice for cleaning carpets on the floor: "Make a suds of strong white soap and add a tablespoon of ammonia to each quart. Dip a soft cloth in this and wring almost dry. Wipe the carpet after it has been well swept. When the cloth becomes soiled take a fresh one, and renew the suds when it is dirty. Do not walk on the carpet until dry and you will be delighted with the result." We will all appreciate this timely suggestion; it is a simple matter to clean carpet in this way, but we always buy a bar of carpet soap. Doubtless any white laundry soap will serve as well.

Bed Time Tales

Two Owls Go Hunting

"Good evening to you," said a voice out of the darkness. "May you never again be as thin as you are now!"

Wizzy Owl squinted his eyes and looked in the direction from which the voice had come. Anyone but Wizzy or one of his family would have seen nothing but blackness, for the night was more than usually dark—not a star, even, was shining. But those were the nights when Wizzy most liked to hunt for things. He liked to realize that he could see whatever he wished and when other creatures could not.

"Oh, good evening," he replied cordially. "What brings you here this evening, Friend Hoot Owl?"

Now usually Wizzy and Hoot, in spite of the fact that they were first cousins and should have played together, very seldom spoke to each other. Not that they felt unfriendly—far from it—but simply because both were so dignified and solemn that they would never think of playing—dear me, NO! And as for idle chatter, they had neither the time nor the inclination for it. So Wizzy well knew that something was up; otherwise Hoot would never have hunted him up and addressed him.

"What brings me here?" repeated Hoot Owl. "I merely came to see if you were as thin as the last time I saw you."

That made Wizzy very cross. Nobody likes to be called thin when it is an honor to be fat! And being thin in winter meant that Wizzy had not been able to find enough to eat. He didn't fancy being thought too lazy or too stupid to hunt food.

"Oh, as for that," he replied grandly, "a mere trifle, a mere trifle. I've been far too busy to bother with eating."

That answer didn't fool Hoot Owl one bit, for he had said the same thing himself when asked the same question. But he was kind enough not to press the matter.

"To be sure," he agreed. "To be sure; but I am going over to the farmer's barn tonight to get me a mouse, and I thought you might like to go along."

"I Merely Came to See if You Were as Thin as the Last Time I Saw You."

"The farmer's barn?" asked Wizzy. "What barn?"

"A new one," replied Hoot Owl. "I thought perhaps you had not found it, for it was not there last year. A new barn over past the far corner of the wood. It's almost too new for mice a-plenty; but there are chicks inside if the mice fail us. Better come." And away he flew in the direction of the new barn.

Wizzy followed him slowly and deliberately—it would never do to seem hurried, even though a good meal (something he had not had in many a day) was in prospect! But if there were any little mice out playing near that barn I'll venture to say they wouldn't find Wizzy very slow!

Short Skirts Bring Out Fancy Styles in Footwear

Some skirts make trim shoes an absolute necessity, but the manufacturers are striving not only for trim, but also for unique and even bizarre ones. Jewels, embroidery, hand painting, costly fabrics and kid in shades that are unusual for foot wear are some of the devices they have used.

A statistician has taken the time to figure out that there are from sixty to 200 square inches on a woman's shoe, and now the object in life of the most up-to-date women is to have each bit of the 200 square inches as ornate as possible. The prices range from $20 to $200 a pair, and, as a jeweled or embroidered boot is as noticeable as a gown, there must be many pairs to take the places of the few black, tan and white ones that formerly sufficed.

Naturally, fancy stockings go with fancy shoes and some startling designs have been evolved. The "Maypole" has a dozen or more semi-precious jewels, on gaily colored ribbon backgrounds, each ribbon bow ending in a streamer, finished with a jeweled pendant, that reaches to the ankle. The "parachute" stocking is like a child's half sock, finished at the top with a ruffle of lace that gives it its name.

Peggy Peabody's Observations

Virtuous Woman Supreme

Women who have been of loose character and who have recognized the error of their ways and returned to moral standards, will never take precedence over pure women as wives. The woman who rescues herself from evil-doing does not feel that she is on an equal footing with the good woman, nor does she expect to be so classed. She is usually at heart a humble, contrite soul, who prays for peace of mind, and looks upon any happiness or joy that comes to her as something that is scarcely her right.

I do not believe that women who have forsaken the path of moral rectitude for a time ever make as good wives as good women who never stray from the narrow confines of righteousness, and who, therefore, never wholly lose that innocence of mind and that faith in humanity which in its entirety is ideal. Perhaps they make equally desirable helpmates for a certain class of men.

There are good, serious, high-minded men who have openly and in full knowledge taken erring women who have redeemed themselves to their hearts and crowned their lives with love, fidelity and confidence. Some men have never regretted the step taken, while others have. Some have had good cause to regret it, for their confidence was misplaced; while others who made the sacrifice have let the past prey upon them, and in spite of the devoted faithfulness of the woman, have been sorry and miserable in their position as husbands of this unfortunate type. It takes a very generous, courageous, deep-thinking and far-seeing man to be happy with a wife under such circumstances.

I do believe that this type of woman can make a very good wife, just as good as the woman who knows nothing of the darker side of life. Her sympathies are broader, her understanding of men and life more comprehensive, and her charity almost boundless. She appreciates the privacy and quiet of home, the worth of one man's devotion and protection, and the heartache hidden in indiscretion and careless, reckless living, better than most women who have never fallen into temptation.

She who has led a loose life knows what to avoid and something about the power she can muster for resistance. Vice has no attraction for her. The untempted woman sometimes takes a great deal of pleasure in tempting fate in this respect. It is unwomanly and dangerous, for these women do not know at what moment they may yield to wrong.

Damrosch Pioneer in Musical Affairs

A New York writer on musical topics has the following to say of Walter Damrosch and the New York Symphony orchestra, which will appear here at the armory March 28:

"There is hardly a great pianist or violinist of today who has not made his first appearance in this country under the baton of Walter Damrosch and it will be remembered that he brought to America some of the greatest Wagnerian singers for his own opera company and for the Metropolitan. Among these may be mentioned Max Alvary, Lillie Lehmann, Emil Fischer, Johanna Gadski and Milka Terina. Mr. Damrosch was the first to present 'Parsifal' in orchestral form, Saint-Saens' 'Samson and Delilah,' and Tschaikowsky's Fifth and Sixth symphonies.

"A fact almost forgotten except by those who still revere the memory of Tschaikowsky's visit to America was that he came as the guest of Walter Damrosch and dedicated Carnegie hall in New York city. The relation of Walter Damrosch to Josef Hofmann is equally interesting. It took place when Hofmann was but 10 years old, when he made his first American tour and was acknowledged the greatest prodigy since Mozart. The meeting took place on the stage of the Metropolitan opera house where the little Hofmann was playing under the management of Abbey, Schoefel and Grau. Henry Abbey, seeing Mr. Damrosch in a box, asked him to come to the stage and give the boy a theme upon which he was to improve. Mr. Damrosch had only a few days before brought out a new suite by Tschaikowsky. He remembered a graceful waltz theme and played it through once for the little pianist, who was almost invisible as he stood by the side of Mr. Damrosch on the huge stage surrounded by the orchestra of 100 men. The child sat down and improvised a series of variations which he closed with a fugue that aroused the audience to a frenzy of enthusiasm.

"The coast-to-coast tour will cover an immense territory during March, April and May and it brings to mind the days when Theodore Thomas and his orchestra with Anton Rubinstein as soloist undertook more than forty years ago to blaze the way for art."

"Gala Week" for Alpha Omega Club

The week of May 7 has been set aside by the Alpha Omega club as "gala week," as at this time there will be a formal opening of the new club rooms in the Hanson block on Twenty-first avenue west, that is under construction. The club will occupy the entire top floor, having, besides the main lounging room, a reading room and three smaller rooms.

The Alpha Omega club is a social organization of young men. The membership is now forty with the limit restricted to fifty when the new quarters will have been procured.

Under the leadership of Elmer Peterson, A. Russell Broman and George Wolcan, early in the fall of 1914, it was decided to increase the membership of the club and to extend its scope. Twenty names were then added to the books and a suite of rooms was rented in the Mohaupt block. Last summer it was found necessary to secure more space, and four rooms were rented in the Nelson block. Getting one entire floor in the new Hanson block speaks well of the progress of the West end club. Securing of the new rooms is due to the influence and work of the club's building committee, composed of

Answering the Cynic

SOME time ago the Wants-to-Be Cynic took the floor and told women how they could be more efficient about their housework. One thing he complained of was the way in which the average woman rushed from one thing to another.

A most interesting letter in answer to the Cynic has been overlooked in a pigeon-hole. For the sake of the sex it so ably defends, I want to give it even at this late date.

"Yes, Mr. Cynic, we would save time if we didn't rush from one thing to another; but suppose, on her way to cellar or refrigerator, the doorbell rings, or the telephone, or the baby awakens and cries, is it any wonder if, by the time she has attended to any or maybe all these demands upon her time and mind, she should have forgotten half of the things she started to get?

Could a Man Work With the Children Around.

"Can a man work in any place and have the child or children always around and asking questions? I say no, and write it with a big 'N.'

"You step into a bank or place of business—do you interrupt the cashier or business man? No, indeed; be you in ever so much of a hurry, you must wait until he is at liberty to attend to you. Not so the woman in her kitchen. Her good husband never thinks he is adding to her already over-taxed mind when he says, 'Be sure you take correctly the telephone call from Mr. W——, it's very important.'

"I say it with all reverence—God never permitted to live upon this beautiful earth a more helpless creature than some men are.

What the Minister's Wife Has to Do.

"Let me cite one instance of many we know. I was standing in the vestibule of our church one Sunday morning when the wife of our pastor, a very brilliant man, came in, followed by her three small children. She usually has a quiet and serene face, but she now had an anxious expression as she said: 'I am so ashamed to be late, but we had callers late last evening and I failed to do some of the many things I always do Saturday night. Mr. G—— can never do one thing Sunday morning. I must lay out all his clothes, see that he takes his Bible and notes, that he has a clean handkerchief in every pocket, that his breakfast is on time, and get it, too, get myself and three children ready for church, all under a nervous strain, for it annoys him if we are late.'

"Was she an inefficient woman?

"I will let the Cynic answer."

Women Would Make Excellent Train Dispatchers.

"A very good man once said, 'Women would make excellent train dispatchers.' The man to whom he was talking said, with great astonishment, 'Why?' The first man replied, 'Because they are able to attend to so many things at one time.'

"Alas! the man who said that died. He was lonesome!

"I am not asking that men give us the right to vote, but I do ask that they respect our endurance, perseverance and efficiency."

Try This if You Have Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.—Advertisement.

Gopher Girl May Crown Queen's Tooth

Miss Dagny I. Just, a junior in the school of dentistry of the University of Minnesota, stands a good chance of conferring a crown on the queen of Norway, provided Queen Maude has a tooth that is in need of such treatment, for Miss Just has an aunt living in Christiania, Norway, who is the queen's special dentist and whose office the U. of M. dental student will enter after her graduation next year.

The four women who are taking dentistry at the state university include another one who will practice abroad. She is Miss Erna N. Meyer of Gottingen, Germany, the only senior in the group. After she is graduated in June, Miss Meyer will go to Norway to practice with Dr. Ottensen, who conducted a clinic at Minnesota last year and who is one of the leading dentists of Norway.

The young women, as well as the men who are in the advanced classes at the University of Minnesota, do all of the clinic work under the direction of the faculty. More than 400 men, women and children who cannot pay the private fee for the class of work they want, go to the clinic every day to have their teeth extracted, treated or straightened, or to have their gums treated for pyorrhea and other diseases.

Miss Parlow Has Had Sensational Career

The impression made by Miss Kathleen Parlow when, in 1910, she made her first New York appearance is one that will long be remembered. The following day the metropolitan papers hailed a new-found genius of the violin—a genius looked upon today as one of the foremost woman exponents of her instrument. During the last five years Miss Parlow has been the "sensation of two continents," and her talent has impressed itself on the public to a degree that makes an appearance by her an event of exceptional interest.

Miss Parlow was born in Calgary, Alberta, in 1890, but much of her childhood was passed in California, her first instruction being received in San Francisco, where she made a public appearance when 6 years old. In 1905 she went to London, and in November of that year played with the London Symphony orchestra.

She has since appeared with all the important symphony orchestras of the country, one notable engagement being for sixteen appearances with the Boston Symphony orchestra on tour during the season of 1911-12.

Miss Parlow will play at the Lyceum theater next Saturday night.

New War Secretary Is Stanch Suffragist

Woman's Journal: Newton D. Baker, the newly appointed secretary of war, is a suffragist of long standing. He is the youngest member of President's Wilson's cabinet.

Mr. Baker is a member of the Men's League for Woman Suffrage of Cleveland, and speaks for suffrage whenever a chance comes up. Mrs. Baker is a stanch suffragist and has taken part in a number of pageants for the cause.

In addition to 300 editors throughout New York state who are friendly to woman suffrage, at least fourteen of the dailies of Greater New York city between Feb. 22 and 26 published editorials urging the senate to bring the woman suffrage bill out of committee. Almost every editorial was based on the political sagacity of heeding a cause backed by a half million votes. One, at least, of these editorials appeared in a paper which was outspoken against suffrage until the election returns proved its voting strength. This editor saw a great light after 553,348 men voted for equal franchise.

OPIUM TRAFFIC EXPOSED.

"Hop, the Devil's Brew," at the Orpheum-Strand.

Opium, most deadly of all habit-forming drugs, and its evil effects, are the theme of the photoplay, "Hop, the Devil's Brew," at the Orpheum-Strand until Sunday night.

Despite the government's ceaseless fight to stamp out the traffic, smuggling bands bring valuable consignments to American Chinatowns every month. From these centers, hatchet-faced agents operate in distributing the drug. Here are maintained secret rooms wherein addicts may consume the death-dealing narcotic. The nation-wide fight that is being waged by the government to stamp out the traffic and restrict the use of opium has been made the basis of this exciting photplay.

Thrilling scenes abound; exciting combats between government agents and the opium smugglers, actual scenes in Chinatown and "opium raids" by secret service agents—all these interwoven with an impelling story of love and sacrifice, combine to make "Hop, the Devil's Brew" an interesting photoplay.

The Bluebird pictures will be shown next week also, commencing Monday, with Helen Ware, America's leading emotional actress, in the heart-gripping story, "Secret Love," for four days, to be followed by "Divine Sarah" Bernhardt in the powerful "Jeanne Dore," the high water mark in actual cost of picture production.

FAVORITE STAR AT REX.

Bessie Barriscale Appears in Strong Triangle Photoplay.

The charm of Miss Bessie Barriscale, who is at the Rex for three days in "The Last Act," has been steadily winning her way into the hearts of the great theater-going public, east and west. The secret of her popularity lies in her own distinct personality. Called the "darling of the stage," she is the acknowledged "idol" of a legion of admirers everywhere.

The public has its own strong likes and dislikes among film stars. That Miss Barriscale, who is appearing at the Rex for three days in "The Last Act," numbers among her devotees men and women of all ages, has been established by box office records.

Miss Barriscale plays exclusively for the Triangle Fine Arts corporation. She seems to have overcome the difficulties that beset the screen actress and projects her personality as few film stars do.

In "The Last Act," as Ethel Duprey, Miss Barriscale learns to love the wrong man, and gives him up to his wife that the latter may have him for herself. It is a strong story, dignified and true to life.

Theater Gossip.

Robert Edeson appears as a comedian in "The Cave Man," a five-part comedy drama, which is now showing at the Zelda theater. The play is different from what the title would make it appear. It might have been called "The Coal Heaver's Debut in Society." Robert Edeson, in the role of a coal heaver, who takes society by storm and in a space of a few days becomes the lion of the hour, is a "scream."

Mr. Edeson is so funny that for one solid hour yesterday he had the audience in an uproar of spontaneous laughter. The play is not of the slapstick kind and is free from any vulgarity.

While the play was originally intended for a comedy, there is a touch of drama that helps considerably and allows Mr. Edeson to display his dramatic power.

The star is supported by an excellent cast of well-known screen players. "The Cave Man" will show for the last times today and tomorrow.

Several years ago, when Anne Crawford Flexner gave to the amusement loving world that delightful comedy, "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," dramatic writers generally hailed it as the success of the year. That the play, with its simple but entrancing theme, possessed much enduring merit is evidenced by the fact it remains to this day one of the most popular offerings of stock organizations throughout the country. At the time the comedy was first produced critics of things theatrical prophesied that from the same pen would later come another play of equal force and of equal, if not greater, merit.

MRS. FLEXNER ACHIEVED SUCCESS IN "MARRIAGE GAME."

Time passed on, and nothing came from the versatile Mrs. Flexner save a few short stories for the magazines. Then last year Manager John Cort, one of Gotham's leading play producers, announced the presentation of "The Marriage Game," by Mrs. Flexner. The play had its premier at the Comedy theater, New York, under the personal direction of Hugh Ford, and under Mr. Cort's management.

The same dramatic writers who prophesied of Mrs. Flexner years before watched the play with unusual interest, and the following morning all were agreed Mrs. Flexner had lived up to all expectations in "The Marriage Game," several venturing the opinion that it was snappier in dialogue and stronger in construction than the play which gave the author her first reputation. Duluth theater patrons, however, having seen the first play, will have an opportunity to judge for themselves on Friday, March 17, St. Patrick's day, when Miss Florence Stone will be seen in "The Marriage Game" at the Lyceum, appearing at two performances, matinee and evening.

At the New Grand this week-end is another of the combination vaudeville and photoplay bills which have made this theater popular among Duluth's theater-goers. Opening the bill are Karlton and Klifford who are said to offer a revelation in art.

A tuneful swaying bit of singing and dancing is offered by Dale and Boyle in "The Belle and the Beau." There are a goodly number of catchy songs, some dancing and a vein of comedy. A gymnastic turn is presented by the Three Bartos. They handle each other with as much apparent ease as the average man would handle a baby.

Brown and Jackson in a comedy singing and talking diversion, "The Clubman and the Suffragette," fill in twenty minutes brimful of good comedy and catchy musical numbers. Toplining among the photoplays is the irresistable Charlie Chaplin in one of his latest film successes, "A Night in the Show." "The House of Darkness," a drama, and "Her Bad Quarter of an Hour," a Vitagraph story of intense interest, are among the other interesting film stories. The Selig-Tribune of pictured events on international interest from all over the world make up the remainder of the entertainment.

Today and tonight Lyric patrons are enjoying Miss Florence Rockwell, one of the players who has a strong following among Lyric audiences, in "He Fell in Love With His Wife." It is a story out of the ordinary, and tonight will be the last opporunity of seeing it at this theater.

MARY PICKFORD COMING TO LYRIC

Tomorrow comes little Mary Pickford in "Poor Little Peppina." This is an unusually long picture, eight reels, and is termed Miss Pickford's "greatest achievement." The management made an additional outlay of money to obtain the full reels and has decided to increase the regular prices during the run.

In the play Mary as "Peppina" is a kidnaped child, working in an Italian vineyard. It is the biggest story in which this star has ever appeared. The setting, in Italy, is picturesque. Although an American, the stellar role has given the star many Latin ways, from her early childhood, as the story goes.

REOPEN CANAL BY APRIL 15

Great Ships May Pass Then, Is Official Prediction.

Scientists Report Further Serious Trouble Not Likely at Panama.

Washington, March 16.—An official prediction that the Panama canal will be open by April 15 for the passage of deep draught vessels, was announced last night by the war department.

Conditions in Gaillard cut, scene of the principal earth movement, which blocked the waterway last fall, are regarded as justifying the forecast.

Col. Harding, acting governor of the canal zone, telegraphed the war department as follows:

"Conditions in Gaillard cut justify predictions that the canal will be available for ships of 30-foot draft on April 15, subject to probable temporary delays thereafter to meet exigencies of dredging fleet in completing canal to full width and in removing shoals that may possibly develop."

Until this report came, canal officials had refused since the closure to make any estimate of the probable date of reopening. Col. Harding's telegram is taken to mean that, short of another great movement of earth, the canal will be practically in full operation again after April 15.

Report of Scientists.

Navigation through the Panama canal is not likely again to be seriously interrupted by slides, and realization of the great purpose for which the waterway was constructed is assured in the near future, according to the finding of a committee of scientists appointed by the National Academy of Sciences at the request of President Wilson to investigate the problem. While the committee realizes that slides may be a considerable maintenance charge upon the canal for a number of years, it believes there will be little trouble after present difficulties have been overcome.

A summary of a preliminary report by the committee was made public today at the White House. No time was set when the canal can be opened for navigation, but it was said that "this time is not far off."

Due to Excessive Rainfall.

Excessive rainfall was found to be one of the chief causes for the slides, and control of the falling water was the most important remedy suggested. The committee made detailed recommendations for the prevention of slides in the future.

Although the committee's final report will not be ready until April, William H. Welch, president of the academy, has transmitted to President Wilson a preliminary report of the committee prepared by Charles R. Van Hise, president of the University of Wisconsin, chairman; Gen. H. L. Abbott, corps of engineers, United States army; John C. Branner, geologist and former president of Stanford university; Whitman Cross, geologist in the United States geological survey; R. C. Carpenter, professor of mechanical engineering in Cornell university; Arthur P. Davis, chief of the reclamation service, Washington; John R. Freeman, constructing engineer, Providence; J. F. Hayford, dean of the college of engineering, Northwestern university; Harry Fielding Reid, professor of engineering, Johns Hopkins university.

Confident of Future.

"The committee looks to the future of the canal with confidence," the report declares. "It is not unmindful of the labor necessary to deal with the present slides, and it realizes that slides may be a considerable, but not an unreasonably large, maintenance charge upon the canal for a number of years; it also realizes that trouble in the Culebra district may possibly again close the canal. Nevertheless, the committee firmly believes that, after the present difficulties have been overcome, navigation through the canal is not likely again to be seriously interrupted. There is absolutely no justification for the statement that traffic will be repeatedly interrupted during long periods for years to come. The canal will serve the great purpose for which it was constructed, and the realization of that purpose in the near future is assured.

"All slide material which reaches the canal must, of course, be removed at a certain expense and inconvenience. The engineers estimate that about 9,000,000 cubic yards will have to be removed between the two Culebra slides; and the dredges can remove 1,000,000 cubic yards a month. But it must not be supposed that the canal will remain closed for nine months. As soon as the channel has been sufficiently deepened and the movement of the slides become so low that the dredges, even when interrupted by the passage of ships, can more than keep pace with them, the canal may be opened for navigation. This time is probably not far off.

Slides May Continue.

"The committee believes that some sliding ground will continue to enter the canal for several years to come, though in diminishing amounts. Any relatively inexpensive measures which tend to arrest the present active slides, or which promise to reduce the charge against maintenance of the canal in the future are therefore fully warranted.

"The composition of the rocks, their structural weakness and earthquakes are all instrumental in producing slides, and are beyond the control of man; but a partial control of ground and rain water and the relief of pressure by unloading certain areas are feasible, and the committee confines its remedial suggestions to these measures."

In summing up the history of the present slides, the committee concludes that since the three great slides are all in the Culebra district, this is the chief area of danger. This is the natural consequence of the fact that by far the deepest part of the canal cut is in this district, and that the weakest of the geological formations, the Cucaracha, is strongly developed here.

Slides may occur in other parts of the canal, but they will be relatively small and infrequent; for the banks are high, and unstable ground has already slid down so that its surface has approached the angle of repose. Should slides occur, they are not likely to menace the operation of the canal. Slides great enough seriously to obstruct traffic in the canal could occur only in the Culebra district, which is but one mile long. The possibility of great slides in this section has therefore claimed the most careful consideration of the committee. In general, the committee believes that no great extension of these slides is probable, because the soft rock constituting a very large part of the slides is quite limited in extent, except east of the East Culebra slide, and conditions elsewhere are unfavorable for extensions.

Sold Out Again!

The entire edition of Pictorial Review for April has already been exhausted!

This is mainly due to two things: First, the unprecedented demand for the next-to-the-last instalment of Kathleen Norris's sensational success—"The Heart of Rachael." And second, the superb pages in color showing the cream of the advance Easter styles.

The wonderful reception our Easter Fashion number has met with is, naturally, much appreciated and we sincerely hope that all of our good friends may be able to secure copies. This is by no means certain however. The only April copies to be obtained anywhere are a scattering few in the hands of the newsdealers throughout the country.

We must especially request you not to send us subscriptions to Pictorial Review to begin with the April issue, as we are not in a position to supply them. The May number will be the first we can send you.

TO TAKE CENSUS OF NEUTRAL FOREIGNERS

London, March 16.—An Amsterdam dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company says the municipal authorities in Germany have been instructed to take a census of all neutral foreigners who have lived in each city for more than five years. Male foreigners who have lived uninterruptedly for five years in Germany will be considered as having lost their previous citizenship and will be regarded as Germans and therefore liable to military service. These men will be enrolled in the army, but will not be sent to the front. They will be put to work in offices so as to release men of the landsturm who will thus be able to take their places in the fighting line. It is said that there are about 30,000 foreigners of fighting age in Germany.

Look to the Coffee

"In all cases of so-called neurasthenia, the coffee-drinking of the patient should be inquired into. What has been said about coffee also holds good in regard to tea," says a physician of note.

More and more, people are coming to know that the coffee and tea habits are responsible for a large percentage of those nervous disorders classed under the head of "neurasthenia," or nervous prostration.

Both coffee and tea contain the drug, caffeine, a powerful irritant of the nerves. They also contain tannin—an astringent—which acts most unfavorably upon the intestinal walls. Headache, "nerves," insomnia, biliousness — these are some of the signs of caffeine poisoning.

Many coffee and tea drinkers are learning that the way to health is by quitting coffee and tea; and for a pleasant, healthful drink, using

TODAY IN HISTORY.

James Madison born, 1751.

Born in Virginia; law student; at 23 member of the committee of safety of his county; 1776, delegate to the Revolutionary committee of Virginia; member of first legislature under new Virginia Constitution, which he helped to draft, 1780; member Continental congress; member of the convention that drafted the Federal Constitution, earning the title of "Father of the Constitution." Failed of election to senate because of Patrick Henry's opposition, but elected to first congress, defeating James Monroe, and served four terms. Was the house leader opposed to policies of Hamilton, and supporter of Jefferson. Became Jefferson's secretary of state, and succeeded him as fourth president, serving two terms, 1809-1817. Retired to private life at Montpelier, Va., where he lived quietly, devoting himself to education, till his death June 28, 1836.

SPREAD THE GLAD TIDINGS.

Do you know that the tonnage of Duluth's harbor is about three times as great now as it was in 1900? That bank deposits are more than four times as great as in 1900? That there is three times as much grain and four times as much iron ore passing through Duluth as fifteen years ago?

If you know these facts, and various other statistical facts on the growth of the city, perhaps your correspondents or friends do not. The Commercial club has a supply of neat statistical leaflets, suitable for envelope inserts. They show, almost at a glance, the growth of Duluth in fifteen years. If you can use some, notify the secretary.—Public Affairs, the bulletin of the Duluth Commercial club.

It helps a little to have Duluth people know these striking facts; and not all of them by any means know them.

But it will help a lot more if people elsewhere in the country are told about it, so they can sit up and take notice of Duluth's rapid strides and great future.

The Commercial club gets out not only these leaflets but other reading matter calculated to make people elsewhere realize that Duluth is a good town to work in, to make money in and to live in.

Are you doing your share in circulating this matter—in sending it out where it will do the most good?

That, at least, you can do with small trouble and no expense whatever. Why not do it?

Villa showed his lack of enlightenment by not waiting till the baseball season was on.

THE SENATORIAL ELECTIONS.

One-third of the United States senatorial terms expire every two years, so this year thirty-two senators out of the ninety-six are to be elected.

As the Democrats now have a majority of sixteen in the senate, and as seventeen of the thirty-two places to be filled this year are occupied by Democrats, nothing but a landslide of the most pronounced character could gain the senate for the Republicans, even if they gained the presidency and the control of the house of representatives.

Minnesota is particularly interested because it is one of the states that must elect a senator this year. The terms of Senator Moses E. Clapp, Republican (with radical and Bull Moose tendencies), expires, and Minnesota will elect him or some other man to fill the place. He is a candidate for re-election, and is opposed by Adolph O. Eberhart, former governor, and Frank B. Kellogg of St. Paul. The Democratic candidate has not yet appeared.

The senators whose terms expire are as follows:

State.	Senator.	Party.
Arizona,	Henry F. Ashurst	Dem.
California,	John D. Works	Rep.
Connecticut,	George P. McLean	Rep.
Delaware,	Henry A. DuPont	Rep.
Florida,	Nathan P. Bryan	Dem.
Indiana,	John W. Kern	Dem.
Maine,	Charles F. Johnson	Dem.
Maryland,	Blair Lee	Dem.
Massachusetts,	H. C. Lodge	Rep.
Michigan,	C. E. Townsend	Rep.
Minnesota,	Moses E. Clapp	Rep.
Mississippi,	John Sharp Williams	Dem.
Missouri,	James A. Reed	Dem.
Montana,	Henry L. Myers	Dem.
Nebraska,	G. M. Hitchcock	Dem.
New Jersey,	James E. Martine	Dem.
New Mexico,	Thomas B. Catron	Rep.
Nevada,	Key Pittman	Dem.
New York,	J. A. O'Gorman	Dem.
North Dakota,	P. J. McCumber	Rep.
Ohio,	Atlee Pomerene	Rep.
Pennsylvania,	G. T. Oliver	Rep.
Rhode Island,	H. F. Lippitt	Rep.
Tennessee,	Luke Lea	Dem.
Texas,	C. A. Culberson	Dem.
Utah,	George Sutherland	Rep.
Virginia,	Claude A. Swanson	Dem.
Vermont,	Carroll S. Page	Rep.
Washington,	Miles Poindexter	Rep.
West Virginia,	W. E. Chilton	Dem.
Wisconsin,	R. M. La Follette	Dem.
Wyoming,	C. D. Clark	Rep.

The death of Senator Shively of Indiana, democrat, gives Indiana two places to fill. Senator Works of California and Senator Oliver of Pennsylvania will not be candidates for re-election. Governor Johnson will probably seek the Republican nomination for Works's place, and P. C. Knox, former secretary of state, will seek Oliver's place. Senator Lea of Tennessee has already been defeated for renomination. Senator Kern of Indiana is renominated.

The Republicans must gain nine places to get control of the senate. Only eleven states are even remotely possible to them. It would require a landslide of the most formidable proportions, of which there is not the slightest sign visible at present, to give them command of the senate.

Moreover party ties are still visibly weakening, and the personality of the candidates is likely to work much more heavily than the party label. Partisanship cuts even less than the usual figure in the issues that are crowding to the fore these days.

Then there are those who would readjust the letters in the name of the Moewe so as to make them read "W-o-e m-e."

A QUESTION OF MORAL INTEGRITY.

Col. Roosevelt, you will remember, has been bitter as gall in his abuse of President Wilson because he did not make the crushing of Belgium an occasion for getting the United States into the European war.

Not once but many times he has declared that it was this country's duty, to which it was solemnly pledged, to go to the rescue of Belgium against the German invasion.

Yet here is what he said in an article in the Outlook on September 23, 1914, a few weeks after the invasion of Belgium:

A delegation of Belgians has arrived to invoke our assistance. What action our government can or will take, I know not.

It has been assumed that no action can be taken that will interfere with our neutrality. It is certainly eminently desirable that we should remain entirely neutral and nothing but urgent need would warrant breaking our neutrality and taking sides one way or the other.

Of course, it would be folly to jump into the gulf ourselves to no good purpose and very probably nothing we could have done would have helped Belgium. We have not the smallest responsibility for what has befallen her and I am sure that the sympathy of this country for the suffering of the men, women and children of Belgium is very real.

Nevertheless, this sympathy is compatible with full acknowledgement of the unwisdom of uttering a single word of official protest unless we are prepared to make that protest effective; and only the clearest and most urgent national duty would ever justify us in deviating from our rule of neutrality and non-interference.

Read this again, in the light of what Roosevelt is saying a year and a half later, when he is a partisan seeking party advantage and a candidate for a third term as president of the United States.

What do you make of a man who would do this thing? What would you think of an ordinary citizen who would do it? Wouldn't you think him intellectually dishonest, politically crooked and utterly untrustworthy?

Could anybody else in the country get away with this kind of stuff? Is Roosevelt always going to keep on getting away with it? Has his din so blunted the moral perception of his followers that they cannot detect dishonesty when it flaunts itself in their faces?

Villa may yet wonder who put the "Fun" in Funston.

RAPACITY.

Hard coal prices usually go down in the spring so people will lay in their supplies, rising again during the summer to full price in the fall.

Local representatives of the coal trust announce that that won't happen this year.

Also, it seems that wages of SOFT COAL miners have been increased, so the coal trust has to put up the price of HARD COAL.

The hard coal miners are also asking a raise, and when they get it doubtless prices will rise again. They rise on every possible excuse and often without excuse, and they never go down under any possible circumstances.

Moreover, the coal people talk of scrambling the sizes and names of anthracite, producing a new set entirely, which they say may offset the increases in price. Those who used to pay five dollars for buckwheat coal, who lately have been paying five and a quarter, and who would under the new system pay six for a hybrid of pea and buckwheat, will find difficulty in seeing the point.

If there is anything in American life more rapacious and remorseless than the hard coal trust, and more deserving of the attention of the Federal government's legal department, it would be hard to imagine what it is.

One of the most pitiful sights in the country today is the man who has been wildly urging Uncle Sam to get into Mexico, but who isn't on hand as an enlisted man in the troops that are chasing Villa—and who couldn't be hired to join them.

The Rich Northwest.

Milwaukee Journal: The tremendous growth of the Northwest is probably not appreciated in the Far South, East and West, and even the people themselves who have been concerned in this rush of development are probably not broadly cognizant of what has taken place. That from 1900 to 1915 Minnesota's bank deposits jumped from $76,000,000 to $551,000,000 reads like a tale of Aladdin's lamp. The dry plains of South Dakota also have evidently blossomed like the rose, for in this period bank deposits have grown from $14,000,000 to $111,000,000. This means that South Dakota bank deposits have risen 800 per cent in fifteen years, a wonderful record. Montana's bank deposits in the same period have leaped from $17,000,000 to $101,000,000.

In the aggregate here are four contiguous Northwestern states, the Dakotas, Montana and Minnesota, whose bank deposits have risen in fifteen years from $118,000,000 to $800,000,000 and whose crop values have risen from a negligible amount in 1900 to $600,000,000 in 1915.

The 1900 figures show these states almost in the pioneering stage. The 1915 figures speak of the development of a vast farm empire with millions of contented families. And all accomplished in one and one-half decades, just a fraction of one lifetime. Perhaps the only man who is not surprised at this showing is a visionary like James J. Hill, who, even when his locomotives shrieked the first call of civilization over the Western plains, spoke of the Northwest in eleven figured terms. He has seen his wildest dreams come true.

The Keynote

By Savoyard.

Washington, March 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—Elihu Root is universally conceded to be the ablest living Republican. Perhaps that party has never produced his superior as a thinker. As a lawyer he is the head of the American bar. He served with prodigious distinction in the cabinets of two Republican presidents. As secretary of state he was the balance wheel of the Roosevelt administration. His "swing around the circle" in South America showed that he can be broad-minded and far-seeing after the order of Woodrow Wilson, who has brought those Latin peoples into a bond of intimacy with and confidence in our government.

Then it was natural and proper that Mr. Root should be appointed to sound the Republican "keynote" of this year's political campaign. He is not only a great statesman, but in the game of politics he is a hand-and-a-half as well, as witness his jamming the nomination of Taft through the Republican national convention of 1912, of which he was permanent president. If he were ten years younger it is practically assured that he would head the ticket in 1916, and few would be surprised if he should be nominated after all, notwithstanding he is past three score and ten years of age.

Mr. Root has sounded the keynote, and such a keynote! Now, a keynote should require no interpreter. It ought to be plain to every understanding and have the same meaning everywhere. But folks are at a loss to comprehend precisely what Mr. Root was driving at. Some will tell you that this keynote is a boast for Col. Roosevelt. Others incline to the belief that Mr. Root is trying to steal Col. Roosevelt's thunder. Unmistakably his voice is for war against Mexico and against Germany. As to that there is no uncertain sound. He severely condemns Wilson for not sustaining Huerta and his cutthroat gang, and he is in a rage because Wilson did not choke Germany off Belgium.

In the platform on which Abraham Lincoln ran for president in 1860 is an indictment of those "twin relics of barbarism," human slavery and the Mormon church. For more than a dozen years the Mormon church has been a trusted ally of "the party of Great Moral Ideas," and in 1912 that "twin relic of barbarism" supplied the G. O. P. with one-half the votes it received in the electoral college in a presidential year. And since the inauguration of Wilson the party of Lincoln and Sumner has severely criticized him for not lending countenance to Huerta in Mexico, who stood for human slavery and nothing but human slavery.

"Vice is a monster of such hideous mien
As to be hated needs but to be seen;
But seen too oft, familiar with her face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

And to that complexion has come at last the Republican party—in firm alliance with the Mormon church at home and the apologist and supporter of human slavery abroad!

Now, Root complains of Wilson because he did not challenge Germany for the invasion of Belgium in 1914. In that he is only the echo of Theodore Roosevelt, who holds that, like England, we are bound by treaty to do so. If his indictment means anything it is condemnation of the president for not going to war with Germany. At that time it was the opinion of nearly everybody—and certainly the opinion of Germany—that she was not only invincible but irresistible on the field of Mars. Suppose Wilson had protested Germany's conduct of the war? What would have followed? A war between the United States and Germany as certainly as the sun rises to his course in the east. Everybody knows that.

Then Mr. Root is not sincere in his condemnation of Wilson for not challenging Germany, or he is for war with Germany. What follows if this keynote is accepted by the Republican party and incorporated in the Republican platform? The issue will be the Democratic party and peace against the Republican party and war. All the lawyers in Philadelphia and Elihu Root thrown in cannot twist the thing so as to have any other meaning.

Mr. Root is from the East. So is Col. Roosevelt. So is Joseph H. Choate, so is James M. Beck; so is Augustus P. Gardner; so is the New York Tribune; and there is little doubt that these reflect public opinion in New York and in Massachusetts. But that is not the opinion of the country by a long shot, and this latter opinion is reflected by Woodrow Wilson. It is for peace, and it is behind Wilson both as to his Mexican policy and his policy in regard to the war in Europe.

It was Boss Barnes' convention in New York and Tom Platt never had a firmer grip on the party than his successor in the bossship now has. It is the chief ambition of Barnes to defeat Roosevelt for the Republican nomination, and Barnes it was who ordered the expurgation of the complimentary reference to Roosevelt from this here "keynote" of the versatile interpretation.

Now, whatever else Teddy may be, he is a fighter. Suppose Barnes, Crane, Penrose and all the other bosses turn up at Chicago with enough "handpicked" delegates to steam-roll the convention? What will follow?

This, and only this—Teddy will bring out the Bull Moose and we will have 1912 over again—unless Teddy has turned mollycoddle.

Clever Work.

Rippling Rhymes

By Walt Mason

Fighting and Farming.

Since winter on its way is faring, and spring is in again, old Europe's hosts are now preparing to slay about a million men. Great husky youths who should be seeding the fertile fields to wheat and oats, will spend the springtime scrapping, bleeding, intent on cutting strangers' throats. The hills of France will see no tiller, the vales in vain expect the plow, and Death, the dour and dusty miller, is doing all the grist-work now. And Death is measuring the acres where once the shepherds used to bask, to see that kings and kindred fakers have room to do their butcher's task. And Death demands the ox and charger, which used to draw the loaded wain, and everything that will make larger his crimson tally of the slain. Where once the milkmaid drove the heifer, where once the vintner pressed the grape, Death's bloody odor taints the zephyr, Death flaunts his rusty rags of crape. When to your divers gods you're praying, pray not that either side may win, but for an end to crazy slaying, an end to murder's smoke and din.

The New Imperialism

Editorial in the San Francisco Bulletin.

The new imperialism suggests itself. The imperialism of 1898 was underdone and premature, that which threatens—or promises—today is a different matter. The public is not ripe for it, but the public's industrial bosses are.

"There can be no stable prosperity at home," said President Farrell of the Steel corporation in a recent and typical speech, "unless we are able to make liberal sales of American manufactures abroad."

There is no question about the truth in this statement, provided that liberal sales of our own products are accompanied by liberal purchases of other people's products; and provided further that exports of the necessities of life are not checked off against imports of leisure class luxuries. If one result of foreign trading and foreign lending is to increase the number of people in the United States who can live on their incomes without doing any useful work those processes are to that degree bad. If, on the other hand, the new trade turns American labor into channels where it is more effective, and thereby increases both the individual output and the individual wage, we can be happy about it and grateful.

Which turning our commercial policies will take is at present uncertain. Probably, in the good American way, we will take both turnings, the wrong one first. There is evidence that the great capitalists who are planning foreign trade campaigns are doing just what any good business man does when he tries to extend his market, and for the same reasons, but with less frankness. They are establishing branch offices, studying market conditions, and advertising, and their natural purpose in this is to increase their own profits. Doubtless they have convinced themselves that the increase of their personal profits will also benefit their employes and the nation at large, but a great deal of their conversation on this subject has a delicate flavor of hypocrisy.

Not that they are more hypocritical than the rest of us; it is simply that they have been encouraged to talk patriotism when what they mean is dollars and cents. Dollars and cents are not necessarily any less noble than patriotism, but money interests do not, in fact, constitute patriotism. A business man performs a valuable service when he takes American machinery to Brazil and brings back hides, but usually he would think it foolish to say that he does this because he loves his country. But when a man climbs to the head of a great corporation which exports large quantities of machinery and imports huge quantities of hides, or their equivalent, he seems to consider that he must acquire large-scale motives, and must talk patriotism, not profits. The American public encourages him to do it. We like bigness, and next to that we like ordinary motives wrapped around with the tinfoil of idealism so that the dull surfaces do not show.

The danger is that under the honorific title of commercial expansion some ignoble acts may be committed. Sordid enough is the history of Europe's commercial wars. In the name of commerce black men were tortured in the Congo, brown men in Guinea, and yellow men in China. In the name of commerce huge navies and armies have been maintained. Commercial representatives of European nations have committed crimes which are now being paid for in other men's blood. Commerce of this sort has not profited Europe or very many of Europe's people. It has been a horrid travesty on good business.

Walking along the docks of San Francisco one may see lumber that has come from Eureka or Puget Sound, bean oil from Japan, copra from the South seas, silk from China, and so forth and so on; and one may see such things as structural steel, coal oil and prunes being loaded for foreign ports. The moral is that each kind of import and export represents a series of individual business transactions. Individuals or corporations in San Francisco sell to individuals or corporations abroad; there is no tangible reality corresponding to the idea of a trade between nations. Individuals and corporations trade; nations don't and won't unless every nation undergoes absolute state socialism.

But individuals carrying on transactions with foreigners have fallen into the habit of depending on their governments for assistance. Some of our great interests will certainly ask our government to modify both its internal and its external policies, to maintain great fleets and armies, even to the extent of enforcing universal military service, and to run grave danger of war. Much of the pressure behind "preparedness" has come from men with such interests. They wanted aggressive preparedness—the big navy kind; for examples, see the Navy league's roster. To a certain extent they have been disingenuous, and need watching and sifting.

We ought to help good and useful businesses, in or out of the country, but it would be silly for a hundred million common people to go in for militarism, imperialism, bigsticksism, and monopolism merely as an act of kindness to a few thousand men with large hearts, beautiful ideals and special financial interests.

The Superior Wisdom of Ants

E. W. Howe's Monthly: Men have very high notions of their intelligence, regarding themselves as superior to all other living things.

Are they? A great naturalist says that "the life story of the ant is the most extraordinary in the whole book of Nature;" which is equivalent to saying that ants are more intelligent than men. Ants live together in cities; they construct wonderful dwellings with bricks and mortar; they divide their labors among themselves; they cultivate crops, and gather and store food; they keep and milk cows; they have pets and amusements; in all these things they are like men, but in some ways they seem to be superior.

For one thing, there are no fools or loafers among the ants; every ant learns the lessons of life, and heeds them. For another, the female ant has very superior common sense. On a bright day in summer the young queens and the males leave the nest, and sail away into the sunlight. It is their wedding journey; for this one day the queen has wings. She might keep them, and fly again on other days; but Nature tells her that from this one day her place is the home. So she never flies again; when she descends to earth from her honeymoon, she sets to work with jaws and feet, and deliberately breaks off her wings. Her duties in life begin after her honeymoon, and these duties she never neglects.

The ants also make use of loafers. If there is an ant in a colony who is not very active, the others use him as a tank. Ants are very fond of honey, and this they pump into the loafers until they swell up like dog ticks. The loafer ants become so full of honey in time they may lie helpless on their backs, which they probably enjoy; then in seasons of scarcity, the honey is pumped out of the loafer ants, and used by the workers.

Do you know of a human community which makes use of its loafers? If these ants loafers were not used as tanks, they would engage in all sorts of mischief, as human loafers do.

Duluth and The Herald

Bouquets and Brickbats From the Press.

Come to Duluth for It.

Biwabik Times: The Universal Portland Cement company has flooded this office with the announcement that it is now producing the goods at Duluth. That is really better than having the production at some distant point, from which it would not be expected that any of the results would ever get back.

Is That the Kind They Have at Chisholm?

Chisholm Tribune-Herald: And now they are seeing aeroplanes hovering over Duluth. Nothing is said about the aeronaut, but we presume it is some pink elephant with green eyes and a yellow tail.

Minnesota's First.

Verndale Sun: Minnesota's first cement plant is in operation. The new plant, which is located at Duluth, is known as the Universal Portland Cement company, and is a part of the United States Steel corporation. The daily capacity of the plant is 4,000 barrels. Heretofore the cement used in Minnesota has been supplied largely from plants in Indiana, Illinois, Iowa and Michigan.

Heartily Indorsed.

Brainerd Tribune: It is seldom that we agree with The Duluth Herald, but we heartily indorse its editorial opinion that "Roosevelt is the most baleful and dangerous influence that has been let loose upon this land in all its history. Baleful because his military ideas would throw this country into every available vortex of war and turn a peaceful republic into a menacing world power; dangerous because of his unquestionable power to influence men's opinions."

The Whole Northwest Will Benefit.

Gonvick Banner: Minnesota has a new industry. It is a Portland cement plant and it is located at Duluth. The daily capacity of the new plant is 4,000 barrels. Materials used in the manufacture of this product are blast furnace slag from the Minnesota steel plant at Duluth and limestone, quarried at Calcite, Mich.

Heretofore the cement used in Minnesota has been supplied from plants in Indiana, Iowa, Illinois and Michigan. Now the new plant will not only be able to supply a large part of Minnesota's needs, but will also ship its product into the Dakotas, Montana, Wisconsin and other states and thus make the Zenith City a greater distributing point.

Duluth-Made Cement.

Menahga Advertiser: A Portland cement plant has begun operations at Duluth to be run as Mill No. 7 of the Universal Portland Cement company, which is one branch of the United States Steel corporation. The crude materials will come from the Steel company's plant and from a mine in Upper Michigan.

Cement has become almost a necessity in building operations and in many other ways now days and a plant that near home will at least save that much freight, besides adding another big industry to the state. Practically all our cement has heretofore come from a distance and as it is one of the heaviest of freight, it has come high.

St. Louis County's Latest.

Tower News: Something new and big is always happening in our own St. Louis county. It is a county of big things. It is announced that Minnesota's first Portland cement plant has made its first cement at Duluth. It is estimated that this year there will be used some 95,000,000 barrels of cement in the United States. Cement is the coming building material. But for it wood could not be purchased at present prices. The Duluth plant is another big asset to a big county which does big things.

Billy and Billie

Kansas City Star: The complaint oftenest made against Billy Sunday by those not in harmony with his mission is that he gets so much money for his work. Thirty-two thousand dollars for seven weeks' work in Trenton, for example.

"My goodness," they exclaim; "nearly $5,000 a week. Say, he is sure some grafter. Out for the coin, that's all." One often hears that sort of criticism.

The Star told last week of Miss Billie Burke, the actress, who is getting $120,000 for twenty weeks' work before the moving picture camera. That is $6,000 a week, $1,500 a week more than Billy Sunday gets.

But you hear no criticism of Billie Burke because she gets so much; let her get all she can.

And yet, Billy Sunday works a great deal harder to earn his forty-five hundred a week than Billie Burke does to get her six thousand. All she does is to put on pink silk pajamas, fix her hair bewitchingly and parade for awhile before the camera, and she is through for the day.

But Billy Sunday works hard. He is a pulpit cyclone. His energy is the wonder of all who have seen him.

Why should he preach for nothing? Why shouldn't he take all the people give him for his work? What difference does it make how much he gets? The cities where he has worked have felt he was worth the money. He has achieved great results. Several states have gone dry because of his efforts. He started sixteen thousand men and women on the road to better and fuller lives in Trenton alone, and at a cost of only $2 apiece that was the lowest priced reform Trenton ever had.

When Gen. Grant was making his great successes, someone complained to Lincoln that Grant was drinking hard.

"I wish you would find out the brand of whisky he is drinking," said Lincoln. "I would like to get a few barrels of it to send to some of my other generals."

Send us a few more "grafters" like Billy Sunday. The country needs them.

Living Right.

If you're living right you can be a better
sort of man,
Be a kinder and a sweeter friend and neighbor—oh, you can.
If you're living right it's easy
To be happy and be free.
With a heart that beats with music
And a spirit full of glee.

If you're living right you'll find such a bubbling in the mind,
Such a yearning and a hunger to be gentle and be kind.
If you're living right its splendid
Just to feel the rushing tide
Of life's sweetness, song-attended,
Bubbling up and down inside.

If you're living right you'll show it in the smile upon your face;
If you're living right you'll know it by the sense of heavenly grace.
If you're living right it's certain
That you'll want to, and you can
Be a bigger kind of fellow
And a better sort of man.

The Supreme Taint.

Emporia Gazette: This is the year when the Gazette will take the announcements of all the candidates of all the parties. Time was when we took only the Republicans. Then we took on the Moosers with the Republicans. This year we are going to enlarge our sphere of influence and take Democrats, Socialists, Prohibitionists and Independents.

We have no desire for tainted money. But there is only one taint about the $5 of the candidate.

Taint enough!

Where Wilson Is Unpopular

Editorial in Life.

Mr. Wilson's unpopularity seems to be growing. He is unpopular just now with M. Clemenceau in France, whose specialty is demolishing statesmen, with Punch and others in London who think him too patient, with Germans, Austrians and Turks pretty generally, we fear, with Mr. Root, Mr. Roosevelt and most of the other Republicans and Progressives who are getting ready to nominate some one for president, with some Democrats who don't know what they want, but are conscious of a suspicion that they are not getting it, with pacifists like Mr. Bryan and Mr. Villard, with militarists generally and especially the continental army and universal-compulsory-service kind, with Col. George Harvey, with a large company of dislikers of Josephus Daniels, and with everybody who ever bet a cent on the business future of Mexico.

If Mr. Wilson was malfeasant, incompetent, cowardly, vacillating and insincere in the degree that all these detractors, between them, aver, the wonder would be that he had managed to shuffle along three years in office with such immense defects without having a committee appointed to be answerable for his behavior. That makes one think that the circumstances of the world have a good deal to do with most of the complaints that are made about him. If his detractors could concentrate on two or three good points—say Mexico, Garrison and the Lusitania—they might score. But there is safety for him in the variety of their accusations. They lambast him for the tariff bill, the shipping bill, the persecution of corporations, the invasion of Belgium, the Lusitania, British meddling with our exports, the exploits of German spies and firebugs, the resignation of Mr. Garrison, the retention of Mr. Daniels and the neglect of Americans and their interests in Mexico.

It is hard to get proper teamwork among so many accusers. They get to correcting one another and that weakens the attack. But it is true that there is doubt and dissatisfaction in the land. So there is in every other country on earth. The war is harrowing, and even here the harrowed don't like it. We have been warmed up to deeds of valor and sacrifice and then allowed to cool, and the effect on the national disposition has not been good. Perhaps it is just as well that the tonic of a presidential campaign is about to be poured out for us, and that the rival doctors are giving out their diagnoses and telling us what we ought to take.

Daily Strength and Cheer.

"We are saved by hope."—Rom. viii, 24.

To desire, to pray, and to long for the great object of our hope, the mighty prize of our high calling; and to desire the other things of this life as they are promised; that is, so far as they are made necessary and useful to us, in order to God's glory and the great end of souls. Hope and fasting are said to be the two wings of prayer. Fasting is but as the wing of a bird; but hope is like the wing of an angel, soaring up to heaven, and bears our prayers to the throne of grace. Without hope, it is impossible to pray; but hope makes our prayers reasonable, passionate, and religious; for it relies upon God's promise, or experience, or providence, and story. Prayer is always in proportion to our hope, zealous and affectionate.

Perseverance is the perfection of the duty of hope, and its last act; and so long as our hope continues, so long we go on in duty and diligence; but he that is to raise a castle in an hour, sits down and does nothing towards it.—Jeremy Taylor.

FIREMAN WRITES ABOUT "TWO-PLATOON SYSTEM"

To the Editor of The Herald:

In answer to the comment of the commissioners on the circulation of a petition for the two-platoon system in Monday night's Herald:

First, they express surprise that they were not asked for it. I would like to ask them where the petition is that was presented to them about the first of February of the present year, asking for better "offs"? It was simply ignored, and we are still waiting for an answer. Also would like to state here that in any city that has the two-platoon system in operation it has had to go before the voters for their indorsement.

Quoting the same article, Commissioner Silberstein says that establishment of a double platoon system is out of the question at this time, which should be enough to show what fate a petition would have there. He says, however, that if the firemen would formally request the council for a change (which we have already done), if is possible we could work out some scheme at a much lower expense. It is strange that men should first have to formally ask for better conditions if it has been possible to have them.

The commissioners will find that the fire department is a money-saving institution (four walls within which convicts are imprisoned), and is organized for that purpose; and the members are ready at all times to do all in their power to save the city or individual taxpayer unnecessary expense; and we claim that a two-platoon system does not cost more according to the service rendered than the present system. We have the experience of other cities to prove our contentions.

A FIREMAN.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

This department does not pretend to be infallible. It will endeavor, however, to answer questions sent to it by readers of The Herald to the best of its ability, reserving the right to ignore all that are trifling or of concern only to the questioner, or that ask for advice on legal or medical questions.

To receive attention, every inquiry must bear the name and address of the person sending it. This is not wanted for publication, but as an evidence of good faith.

"C. S. O.," Northome, Minn.: (1) Is there a law in Minnesota making it unlawful to charge monthly hospital fees to employes of a logging concern? (2) Can the company compel its employes to pay such fees?

Ans.: (1) The editor knows of none. (2) Employers doubtless have a right to make such payments a part of the contract under which an employe is engaged.

Andy Swart, Tower City, N. D.: (1) Has the United States government control of the railroads to transport troops free of charge in time of war? (2) Do the United States regular soldiers have to enter Mexico, or do they volunteer to go?

Ans.: (1) No; some compensation must be given. (2) They must obey orders. Their "volunteering" at the time they join the army covers whatever service they may be called on to perform.

Frank Hayes, Shaw, Minn.: It is contended that it costs $12,000,000, in round numbers, to kill one man in the European war. Another man disputes this claim. What is right?

Ans.: That cannot be definitely decided, as neither the actual number of dead nor the actual expense of the war is known. England has admitted that it is costing her $17,500,000 a day to keep up the war; France admitted a cost in the first year of $1,280,600,000; both these figures probably are increasing in proportion for each day of the war, and the cost to the other eleven nations engaged cannot even be estimated. The killed during the first year was estimated at 2,500,000 men.

S. Q. Uaredeal, Ironwood, Mich.: (1) How wide is Lake Superior at its widest point? (2) Where is the widest point? (3) How wide is the lake from Little Girls' point to the north shore in a straight line? (4) How high is Ironwood above the level of Lake Superior? Looking north from several of our lofty hills about one mile north of Ironwood, on a clear day, a person can see the lake and also a long range of hills which appear to be on the north shore of the lake, while many others claim they are on the south shore, notwithstanding the fact that the white surface of the lake is seen on this side of the range of hills. Which side are they on?

Ans.—(1) 164 miles. (2) From Munising, south of Grand Island, in Michigan, to McKelley's bay, on the north shore. (3) 79 miles. (4) 918 feet. (5) While it is possible that under exceptional conditions it might be possible to see the north shore from Ironwood, it is more likely that the land seen forms part of the Apostle islands, which belong with the south shore, though not attached to it.

"A. C. C.," Duluth: Can you kindly give me the names of dramatic companies that issue catalogues of the various plays that they have for sale?

Ans: Business addresses cannot be given in this column. See any theatrical publication for advertisements, or send a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Israel Havlia, McKinley, Minn.: 1. Is the Panama canal open at the present time? 2. How well is it fortified? 3. Is the city of New York well fortified?

Ans.: (1) No. (2) Excellently, by forts at the entrances and on islands close by, in which are mounted several 16-inch guns, each throwing a 2,400-pound shell as big as a man, for a distance of twenty miles. There are also smaller guns, and additional defenses, the nature and extent of which are kept secret by the war department. (3) Yes.

GOOD NEWS

Many Duluth Readers Have Heard It and Profited Thereby.

"Good news travels fast," and the many bad back sufferers in Duluth are glad to learn where relief may be found. Many a lame, weak and aching back is bad no more, thanks to Doan's Kidney Pills. Our citizens are telling the good news of their experience with this tested remedy. Here is an example worth reading:

Julia Hauser, 4317 East Superior street, Duluth, says: "I had kidney complaint in a bad form. My kidneys were weak and my back ached. I felt lame and sore all over. I finally used Doan's Kidney Pills and was cured. I have told many people about them at times and cannot say too much in their favor."

The above statement was given on Oct. 9, 1913, and on Sept. 17, 1915, Mrs. Hauser said: "Doan's Kidney Pills helped me after other medicines had failed to do me much good. They have practically brought permanent benefit, as I have had very little cause to complain for the last few years."

Price 50c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Julia Hauser has twice publicly recommended. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

This Week's Sunday School Lesson

Written for The Herald By Rev. J. S. Kirtley, D. D.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON: MARCH 19.

Acts viii, 26-40: Philip and the Ethiopian.

CONNECTION.

We have come to the missionary period of the cause. The persecution that arose about Stephen drove them out with the gospel—quite a good thing. The religion that was to conquer the world seemed slow to get at its task. The obstacles were a lingering prejudice against taking the Gentiles into the church, a fond notion that the Jews may still accept Christ and remain the chosen nation, a growing comfort in the life at Jerusalem—less persecution and more popular favor. Something must start them out on their work. What is needed? New men with less prejudice against the Gentiles and something to thrust them out of the city. The former is supplied through the seven deacons. They all have Gentile blood and their very names suggest the outlook of God's purpose. Two of them are the men for the new movement; Stephen, whose preaching struck the note that brought on the persecution, and Philip, who was the first to go to a Gentile as we learn today. The persecution started them out. Philip was the first to get out with his broad spirit and to be fraternal with aliens.

THE LESSON.

I.

Meeting an Eminent Gentile, 26-28.

"But an angel of the Lord spake unto Philip, saying, 'Arise, and go toward the south unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza, the same is desert.' And he arose and went, and behold, a man of Ethiopia, a eunuch of great authority under Candace, queen of the Ethiopians, who was over all her treasure, who had come to Jerusalem to worship; and he was returning and sitting in his chariot, and was reading the prophet Isaiah."

1. PLAN.—The angel of the Lord said to Philip, "Arise and go," which means that He who told them to go into all the world with the good news was superintending the enterprise. There were four steps from Jerusalem to the Gentiles. First, the conversion of Gentiles who had first become Jews. One of the seven deacons was "Nicolaus, a proselyte of Antioch." Second, going to the Samaritans, who had enough Jewish blood in their veins to make them only partially Gentile, yet had enough alien blood to make them a half-way house to the Gentiles. They were going "unto all the world" by degrees, as far and as fast as their vanishing prejudices would allow. Third, going to remoter Gentiles, as in the case of this Ethiopian nobleman, who had evidently become a proselyte to the Jewish faith, for he had been to Jerusalem to worship and was now returning home when Philip met him. Fourth, going straight to the Gentiles themselves, as later Peter did, reluctantly, in the case of Cornelius, the Roman centurion at Caesarea, and as Paul did later on. We see God's ruling hand very clearly—in the previous dispersion of the Jews among the Gentiles from whom they made those proselytes, in calling out the aggressive gifts of Stephen and others, so as to draw out the opposition that dispersed them with their blessings, and in personally guiding Philip and Peter and the rest of them, step by step, out into the great world "that lieth in darkness."

In His plan He selects the men needed. Here it is Philip, not Peter and John, who have gone back to Jerusalem and are not yet broad enough in their sympathies to meet that man from Africa. Philip must leave Samaria for something that is more important just then. He also gives adequate instruction as to the general direction south; as to which of several roads, the Gaza road, running through a country thinly populated, which, for that reason, the Jews called "desert."

He never runs His servant into a blind alley, but "behold" there was the man, a nobleman from Ethiopia, a man so astute and influential and trustworthy that the queen had entrusted him with her personal as well as the public treasures. Jews were scattered through Africa and had won him to the true God. He was so devout as to make this trip to Jerusalem, but he was returning with unsatisfied longings. The rabbis taught their pupils to read aloud and he was so doing. God's spirit not only prompted Philip to go down there from Samaria, but to "go near and join thyself to this chariot."

2. OBEDIENCE.—Philip carried out the plan. His spirit was entirely responsive to God's plan. That meant watchfulness. Because he was looking out for work in the first place he saw the opening in Samaria and then saw that this trip to the south meant something, even though he went out like Abraham, or like Moses going into the wilderness, "as seeing Him who is invisible." It meant promptness that was wholehearted and without regret. It meant fearlessness. A man in a chariot is only a man. The man with Christ in his soul may be fearless before any task and any trial.

II.

Instructing the Great Man. 29-35.

"And the Spirit said unto Philip, go near, and join thyself to this chariot. And Philip ran to him, and heard him reading Isaiah, the prophet, and said, Understandest thou what thou readest? And he said, how can I, except some one shall guide me? And he besought Philip to come up and sit with him.

"Now the passage of the scripture which he was reading was this:

He was led as a sheep to the slaughter;

And as a lamb before his shearer is dumb,

So he openeth not his mouth;

In his humiliation his judgment was taken away:

His generation who shall declare?

For his life is taken from the earth.

"And the eunuch answered Philip and said, I pray thee, of whom speaketh the prophet this? of himself, or of some other? And Philip opened his mouth, and beginning from this scripture, preached unto him Jesus."

1. SYMPATHY.—Philip showed it in his sensitiveness to the Spirit's directions, in his evident interest that throbbed in his abrupt question and saved it from seeming rude, and in the way in which he helped the man to find Jesus in the Old Testament prophet, Isaiah.

2. HUMILITY.—The Ethiopian showed it in forgetting that he was a high official and in being willing to learn from this stranger. "Except ye become as little children," teachable, obedient, trustful, ye cannot be saved.

III

Enrolling a New Convert. 36-40.

"And as they went on the way, they came unto a certain water; and the eunuch saith, Behold, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized? And he commanded the chariot to stand still; and they both went down into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him. And when they came up out of the water, the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip; and the eunuch saw him no more, for he went on his way rejoicing. But Philip was found at Azotus, and passing through he preached the gospel to all the cities, till he came to Caesarea."

Verse 37 is an old baptismal formula that was allowed to creep into the text. They are thought to have been twenty miles south of Jerusalem, near "a fine stream of water called Marubah." The sight of the water suggests to the new convert the duty of confessing Christ, which Philip had, no doubt, explained to him. It cost him the loss of prejudice to confess Christ and would cost him still more at home. He had found Christ and he had widened the horizon and deepened the joy of Philip. Philip evangelizes all the towns till he reaches Caesarea, and let us hope the nobleman gave out the good news in his home.

WHAT THE MASTERS SAY.

Divine intervention and human journeying and work were brought into play simply for the sake of one soul which God's eye saw to be ripe for the gospel. He cares for the individual, and one sheep that can be reclaimed is precious enough in the Shepherd's estimate to move His hand to action and His heart to love.

The death of Christ was so distinctly foretold in the passage (from Isaiah) that Bolinbroke was forced to assert that Jesus brought on his own crucifixion by a series of preconcerted measures, merely to give the disciples who came after him the triumph of an appeal to the old prophecies.

PERTINENT QUESTIONS.

1. Do men and angels still co-operate in God's work?
2. What is the value of unstudied obedience to God?
3. In what respect is Jesus the real hero of the Old Testament?
4. What preparations usually precede sudden conversions?

The Blue and the Gray.

By the flow of the inland river,
Whence the fleets of iron have fled,
Where the blades of the grave-grass quiver,
Asleep are the ranks of the dead;
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment day,
Under the one, the Blue;
Under the other, the Gray.

These in the robings of glory,
Those in the gloom of defeat,
All with the battle-blood gory,
In the dusk of eternity meet;
Under the sod and the dew
Waiting the judgment day;
Under the laurel, the Blue,
Under the willow, the Gray.

From the silence of sorrowful hours
The desolate mourners go,
Lovingly laden with flowers
Alike for the friend and the foe;
Under the sod and the dew
Waiting the judgment day;
Under the roses, the Blue;
Under the lilies, the Gray.

So with an equal splendor
The morning sun rays fall,
With a touch impartially tender,
On the blossoms blooming for all;
Under the sod and dew
Waiting the judgment day;
Broidered with gold, the Blue;
Mellowed with gold, the Gray.

So when the summer calleth,
On forest and fields of grain
With an equal murmur falleth
The cooling drip of the rain;
Under the sod and dew
Waiting the judgment day;
Wet with the rain, the Blue;
Wet with the rain, the Gray.

Sadly, but not with upbraiding,
The generous deed is done;
In the storm of the years that are fading,
No braver battle was won;
Under the sod and dew,
Waiting the judgment day;
Under the blossoms, the Blue;
Under the garlands, the Gray.

No more shall the war cry sever,
Or the widening rivers be red;
Our anger is banished forever
When are laureled the graves of the dead.
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the judgment day;
Love and tears for the Blue—
Tears and love for the Gray.

—By F. M. Finch.

Would You Care?

Lift your eyes to mine, my darling;
Let me see the lovelight there.
For you know I love you dearly,
And to me there's none so fair.
Yet at times I often wonder,
Would you care if I'd dare
Tell you that my love had vanished?
Tell me, sweetheart, would you care?

Chorus.

Would you care if I should leave you?
Would you care if we should part?
Would you care if some one told you
That another won my heart?
Would you care if you had found me
Closely held in someone's arms?
Would your heart ache just a little?
Tell me, darling, would you care?

Just suppose I should forsake you—
Break my vows, leave you alone;
Just suppose I should reject you,
Take another for my own!
Just suppose that duty called me,
Would you cry if I'd die,
And my eyes were closed forever—
Tell me, sweetheart, would you care?

Leaf By Leaf the Roses Fall.

Once again, sweetheart, I wander,
In the dear, familiar ways,
And the stars that shine up yonder
Bring me dreams of other days.
Then 'twas spring and birds were calling
To their mates when day was done;
Now I see the roses falling
In the moonlight, one by one.

Chorus.

Leaf by leaf the roses fall, dear,
Each a memory of you.
Leaf by leaf the roses fade, dear,
Like the golden dreams we knew.
Day by day we drift apart, dear,
Each, it seems, beyond recall.
In the garden of my heart, dear,
Leaf by leaf the roses fall.

Once again the breezes whisper
As they did so long ago;
Once again, it seems, you're waiting
As the twilights come and go.
Still, I know I am but dreaming,
For tonight you're far away,
And tonight the leaves are drifting
O'er the paths we used to stray.

SKIN TROUBLE DISFIGURED FACE

Went All Over Hands. Skin Very Red and Burning. Lost Rest. Could Not Put Hands in Water.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"My skin began to get rough and peeling. It went all over my face and hands and on my neck, and every time I would wash I took some skin off. My skin was very red and burning and I had to scratch and my face was disfigured. I lost rest at night, and I could not put my hands in water.

"One day I found a Cuticura Soap and Ointment advertisement. I first bought a box of Cuticura Ointment and then a cake of Cuticura Soap, and after using them about a week my face began to get well, and I used about two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Ointment and I was healed." FAVOR COMMISSION IDEA IN ESCANABA Committee of Business Men Inspect Marquette and Like Plan.

Marquette, Mich., March 16.—A delegation of members of the Escanaba Business Men's association, G. T. Werline, president; C. E. Snyder, secretary; Herman Salinsky, Ed. Voght, P. C. Peterson, C. E. Jacobson and F. D. Davis, spent Tuesday here, making an intensive study of the commission plan as it has been developed here. At the conclusion of their survey they were a unit in expressing the opinion that Marquette has been doing well with the commission form and has an admirable government.

On their return home they will formulate a report setting forth the conclusions they have reached. It will, the expressions of the visitors left little doubt, recommend commission government as an objective toward which public spirited voters in Escanaba should aim.

PIONEER SOCIETY IS RECEIVING AID

Appeal for Funds Sent Out By Secretary Hazzard Effective.

St. Paul, Minn., March 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—George H. Hazzard, secretary of the Minnesota Territorial Pioneer association, is mailing circulars to the members and their families, advising them of the society's need of $1,000 to $1,200 to insure their readiness with 1,200 to 1,500 pioneer pictures appropriately framed for the new historical building gallery.

Are Responding Liberally.

The circular is well received. A daughter in Minneapolis sends $200 in memory of her father and mother; two sons in St. Paul send a check for $25, making their total gifts $147; while an old veteran of the Civil war writes, "You will hear from me as soon as my pension comes," and another old pioneer writes from a sanatorium, "I cannot do much, but inclose $10."

The association will hold its annual meeting here in the old capitol Thursday, May 11. Dinner will be served and the families of territorial pioneers are invited.

CLOSED CASSELTON BANK OPENS AGAIN

North Dakota Institution in Position to Pay 100 Cents on Dollar.

Fargo, N. D., March 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—After being closed since Dec. 6, last, the First National bank of Casselton, near here, has reorganized and opened its doors for business with a capital of $50,000. At a meeting of the directors last night, M. G. Strais was elected president; N. J. Ford, vice president; J. A. Krick, formerly of Richardson, cashier.

Arrangements were made for the reorganization some time ago, the actual opening being delayed until after the call of the comptroller of the currency for National bank statements. The bank now reopened will pay 100 cents on the dollar, each director having advanced $25,000 to cover an alleged shortage and "slow" paper, except one who placed $30,000.

Two Officers Accused.

The closing of the bank Dec. 6, resulted in the arrest of F. W. Kittle and R. C. Kittle, cashier and former president, respectively. The latter has been indicted, charged for misappropriation of funds and falsification of accounts by the Federal grand jury. His trial will probably be held during the spring term of U. S. court here.

Mal D. Clark will be toastmaster. The speaker of the evening will be Rev. Father P. J. O'Mahoney of Superior, Wis.

The program includes the opening remarks by the toastmaster; violin solo by John Goedderz; vocal solo, "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Charms," by Mrs. Mal D. Clark; speech on "Influence of the Irish in America," by H. P. Dunn; cornet solo, "Killarney," by William Graham; speech, "Ireland in the Days of St. Patrick," by Rev. John Crean; vocal solo by S. F. ODANAH WANTS AGENCY.

Movement on Foot to Move Indian Headquarters From Ashland.

Ashland, Wis., March 16.—Every effort will be put forward by the citizens of Odanah to have the Indian agency, at present located at Ashland, removed to the village on the contention that it will mean the cutting down of expenses of operation; that it is the proper place for it; and it will be the means of keeping many of the Indian people out of the Federal court for whiskey charges.

By the agency being located at Odanah, it will mean that all business now transacted at the agency in this city would be taken care of on the reservation. An Odanah citizen contends that the location of the agency at that village would remove a big undesirable influence for the Indians, and would cut down the number of Indian whiskey offenders.

Just get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance; freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and luster and try as you will you cannot find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower, destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this.—Advertisement.

Mr. Blumenthal will attempt to show in this course just what work different types of men are best suited to, and his instruction will be along practical lines. The course is being given under the auspices of the educational department of the association.

The lectures will be given at 12:15 daily.

A Message to Thin Weak Scrawny Folks

An Easy Way to Gain 10 to 30 Pounds of Solid, Healthy Permanent Flesh.

Thin, nervous, undeveloped men and women everywhere are heard to say, "I can't understand why I do not get fat. I eat plenty of good nourishing food." The reason is just this: You cannot get fat, no matter how much you eat, unless your digestive organs assimilate the fat-making elements of your food instead of passing them out through the body as waste.

What is needed is a means of gently urging the assimilative functions of the stomach and intestines to absorb the oils and fats and hand them over to the blood, where they may reach the starved, shrunken, run-down tissues and build them up. The thin person's body is like a dry sponge—eager and hungry for the fatty materials of which it is being deprived by the failure of the alimentary canal to take them from the food. A splendid way of working to overcome this sinful waste of flesh building elements and to stop the leakage of fats is to try Sargol, the famous flesh building agent that has been so widely sold in America in recent years. Take a little Sargol tablet with every meal and see if your cheeks don't quickly fill out and rolls of firm, healthy flesh form over your body, covering each bony angle and projecting point. Boyce drug store and other good druggists have Sargol or can get it from their wholesaler, and will refund your money if you are not satisfied with the gain in weight it produces as stated on the guarantee in each large package. It is inexpensive, easy to take and highly efficient.

NOTE—Sargol is recommended only as a flesh builder and while excellent results in cases of nervous indigestion, etc., have been reported, care should be taken about using it unless a gain of weight is desired.

JEWELERS' TRADE ACTIVE

Prices Are Going Up in Nearly All Staple Articles.

Wholesalers Are Swamped With Orders; Labor Situation Acute.

The improvement in general business that has come about over the country during the last few months is being reflected to a marked degree in the jewelry trade. Everything in fact is booming in that line and prices are going up in nearly all staple articles.

As a dealer explained it, jewelers are now able to do more business than they are in a position to find the goods to supply. This has been brought about through dealers having allowed their stocks to run low, and the higher prices and difficulty in obtaining materials such as nickel, base and white metal, zinc and brass.

Marius Henricksen, of the Marius Henricksen Manufacturing company, said today on his return from a trip through the East that conditions in the jewelry manufacturing centers are without parallel. In some materials entering into the manufacture of goods, conditions are such that instead of naming prices, jobbers are being asked to make their bids for spot cash, and at the same time great uncertainty exists as to when shipments can be made. Another difficulty in the trade he found to be the congested labor situation. On account of the higher wages being offered by manufacturers of munitions, skilled labor is being drawn from the regular jewelry trade and factories are experiencing extreme difficulty in filling up the vacancies. In that connection Mr. Henricksen mentioned that when he was in New Haven, Conn., 260 workmen with their families moved across the river to Bristol, where they had obtained work in a munitions factory just started up at $2.75 and $3 a day, whereas they had formerly been paid only $1.75 and $2.

Prices Going Up.

"We have received five notices of advances since March 1 and the tendency is upward all through the list," said Mr. Henricksen. "Wholesalers and manufacturers are refusing to accept offers for delivery beyond thirty days and in some goods, such as in cutlery and in hotel and restaurant ware, we have been compelled to stop accepting advance orders."

Among the advances in quotations that have been made recently he instanced flatware, 12½ per cent; silverware, 12½ per cent; hollowware, 10 per cent, and all clocks, 10 per cent. Watch crystals have nearly doubled in price during the last six months, and for the first time in the history of the trade they are now being manufactured in this country, two factories having been started in New Jersey and one in Seattle, Wash. Sterling silver has not yet been advanced and neither has there been any marked change in diamonds.

The Marius Henricksen Manufacturing company is engaging in a wholesale trade in watches, clocks, jewelers' supplies, etc., and is specializing in the manufacture of rings. Six of the largest New England manufacturers, including cutlery, silverware and silver service lines, are represented. The company is pushing trade over a territory embracing Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Wisconsin and Northern Michigan.

TORPEDO NARROWLY MISSES BIG LINER

Fabre Steamer Patria Attacked By Submarine Without Warning.

New York, March 16.—While carrying twenty Americans among her 900 passengers the Fabre liner Patria, a French steamer, was attacked without warning by a submarine off the coast of Tunis, according to the story told by her captain upon the Patria's arrival here today. A torpedo fired by the submarine, he said, passed twenty feet to the liner's stern.

When the Patria arrived some days days later at Lisbon, Portugal, the American vice consul, Ramon I. Janer, boarded the ship to conduct an investigation for the purpose of notifying Washington of the circumstances of the attack.

Capt. Dechelles of the Patria said that upon his return to Europe he would apply to the French government for permission to arm his vessel, on the ground that submarines in the Mediterranean would not in his opinion refrain from attacking merchant vessels without warning them.

VOTE IN COUNTY ABOUT SAME PROPORTION AS THAT OF CITY

Organization Candidates in Both Parties Maintain Their Lead.

Considered That Insurgents Made Good Showing in St. Louis County.

With about twelve towns still missing in the county, outside of Duluth, the vote in the presidential preference primary of Tuesday seems to run about the same as to sentiment as in the city. The leaders in the city are the leaders in the county.

On the Democratic side the conference candidates for delegates to the St. Louis convention were favored handsomely in the outlying districts, with John Jenswold, Jr., leading the vote. The candidates for delegates-at-large, A. C. Weiss, B. F. Nelson, D. W. Lawler and W. A. Just, were strong, with C. A. King of Deer River, one of the best known of the North country men, running well up with the rest. For district delegates, Jenswold and Douglas Greeley of Virginia captured virtually every precinct.

Eberhart Heads List.

On the Republican ticket, the organization men for district delegates, Millie Bunnell of Duluth and D. M. Gunn of Grand Rapids, ran strongly, and for delegates-at-large, Eberhart headed the list in the county as well as in the city. O. J. Larson of Duluth ran well in the county and Former Governor Van Sant also ran strongly.

There have not been enough changes in the county to make any change in the standing of candidates in either party so far as the county as a whole is concerned.

The towns whose returns are coming in late are running much the same as those already reported on. The organization men in both parties have proven the favorites, and have been chosen, although the "insurgents," if the opposition may be so termed, have made a good showing.

Insurgents Do Well.

The anti-Lynch ticket in the Democratic party did better in this county than many supposed they would. This, it is believed, is due to the fact that Z. H. Austin of Minneapolis, one of the candidates for delegate-at-large, formerly lived in Duluth and is very well known here and, in fact, in all parts of the state; also because C. M. King of Deer River, another candidate at large, is one of the best known men in Northern Minnesota and is a hard worker for the farmers and settlers. These two men received large votes, Mr. King leading Mr. Austin, however.

The "insurgents" on the Republican ticket were the Estabrook men. With Estabrook an unknown ten days ago, it is understood that the candidates for the delegation on his side of the fight polled a very heavy vote. They were by no means beaten badly.

263 to 4,702 for Estabrook. There are nearly 2,000 precincts yet to hear from. Those that are in give the following totals on Republican delegates at large contenders:

A. O. Eberhart, 22,575; S. R. VanSant, 17,952; J. E. Jacobson, 15,832; F. C. Stevens, 13,535; James Manahan, 12,837; A. A. Rahn, 9,360. Manahan, with two-thirds of the country yet to report, has almost wiped out Stevens' lead of 2,100 in the Twin Cities.

The Democratic Contest.

The Democratic race is mixed, the eight candidates ranking as follows: D. W. Lawler, 19,391; B. F. Nelson, 11,597; C. M. King, 11,511; A. C. Weiss, 11,495; W. A. Just, 10,896; Z. H. Austin, 10,663; H. F. Wessel, 10,462; J. A. Keller, 9,817. This shows C. M. King, an anti-Lynch man, among the four leaders, but more complete returns may change the present standing of the candidates.

GERMAN NAVAL HEAD CHANGED

is a guarantee that with regard to methods of naval warfare, no change will take place. Admiral Von Capelle worked with Admiral Von Tirpitz and his assumption of office means there will be no alteration in the naval policy of the late minister. The submarine warfare will be prosecuted on the lines outlined in the recent memorandum to neutral powers."

Connected With Emperor's Decision.

Berlin, March 16, wireless to Sayville.—"In some quarters," says the semi-official Overseas News agency, "the belief prevails that the resignation of Admiral von Tirpitz as minister of marine was connected with Emperor William's decision not to extend submarine warfare beyond the limits announced to neutrals in the German government's memorandum and not to direct it against neutral ships.

"Admiral von Capelle's appointment as minister of marine is not of importance in relation to the question of submarine warfare," the News agency continues, "since direction of naval warfare is in the hands of the chief of the admiralty.

"The resignation of Admiral von Tirpitz is much commented on because of his successful activity in fostering naval construction. Admiral von Capelle long has been familiar with affairs of the marine department, especially organization of naval construction in which he was the most capable collaborator of Admiral von Tirpitz. He successfully represented the marine department before the reichstag where he obtained the funds necessary for construction work."

Admiral von Tirpitz last year celebrated his fiftieth anniversary in the German navy. He has always been a strong believer in keeping Germany's navy in a high state of efficiency, and is declared to have always favored the pressing of Germany's submarine warfare. Several times since the outbreak of the war Admiral von Tirpitz has been reported at odds with Chancellor von Bethmann Hollweg, and even with Emperor William.

In his position of head of the admiralty, von Tirpitz would brook no opposition and he has fought many political battles in the carrying out of his plans for the betterment of Germany's naval policy. Von Tirpitz became a naval cadet in 1865. Four years later he was made a lieutenant and at 25 years of age had the commission of lieutenant commander. He was appointed commander of the Kiel naval station in 1891 and six years later he was made minister of marine. In November of last year it was reported that von Capelle had resigned as director of the administration department of the German admiralty because of ill-health, and been placed on half pay.

BILLIARDS ~ WRESTLING ~ BOWLING

Basketball Boxing

NEWS, GOSSIP AND DOPE OF THE OLD SPORT GAME

BY BRUCE.

A Mutual Admiration Society.

James J. Corbett—"Willard is a good fighter, but he is nothing like the old boys. Fitzsimmons or Jim Jeffries, one of the greatest of all time, could have easily beaten him."

Bob Fitzsimmons—"Willard will lick Moran, but he is not as good as the old boys. Jim Corbett would have licked him in three or four rounds. Willard would never lay a glove on Corbett. Jeffries in his prime would have beaten Willard easily."

James J. Jeffries—"Willard is a tough big fellow and should beat Moran. Jess can take a lot of beating. But he's not as good as the old boys. He lacks the cleverness of Corbett and can't hit like old Fitz."

The trio will now render that pathetic little ballad, "Passed But Not Forgotten."

Has He Come Back?

Standing under the shower of the Los Angeles Athletic club, Frank A. Gotch, with the water trickling over his face and that great body of his, gave out the following words:

"Boys, I'm tickled to death. I wrestled for nearly thirty-nine minutes and then spurted at the end. I am still there. I didn't know whether I would be there with the old stuff, but I feel as good as I ever did in my life."

This statement was addressed to the newspaper men of the Southern California city.

"Feel my heart," said Gotch. "It's as steady as ever. I think the old boy has a lot left in him."

That question, one that is interesting a lot of followers of athletics in the country just at this time, will be more fully answered when the hero of a hundred contests crawls through the ropes to meet Joe Stecher, perhaps the greatest wrestler Frank A. Gotch has ever been called upon to meet.

Fulton and Jim Flynn.

It will be back to the unromantic trade of decorating the interior of houses or on to higher pugilistic heights, for Fred Fulton, all depending on the outcome of his battle with Jim Flynn, in Milwaukee Friday evening.

If Fulton wins in cleancut and decisive fashion, he will be in a position to move up with the headliners and work into the big time; while if the old and battle-scarred veteran of Pueblo stakes the Minnesota white hope to a thorough licking, the trades unions will be the future field of the man who was for a few short minutes matched with Jess Willard.

Is It Luck or What, Then?

Mike Collins took Fred Fulton and slayed like a man who has never gone to college in the endeavor to bring his fighter to the front. Mike passed up a lucrative position, believing he was on the gilded road to a fortune. If Fulton fails to register twelve in the encounter with Flynn, the work, hopes and worry of Collins will have gone for naught.

Ad Wolgast was wished on Tom Jones, Billy Papke picked up Cherokee Tom simply because Jones lived down in the same neighborhood as the Illinois Thunderbolt. It is quite unnecessary to call attention to what the two great fighters did, or mention what Jones got for his end.

Willard was a pugilistic outcast when Jones had the Kansan sign a contract that gave over half of his earnings to the man who had made thousands out of Wolgast and Papke. Now Willard is the champion of the world and Jones can order wine without wondering how the play will shape up in the semi-finals.

Maybe it was luck with Jones, or maybe he has a lot of shrewdness.

Take the case of Joe Hetmanek, who handles Joe Stecher. Hetmanek was postmaster at Dodge, Neb., where the trains whistle twice and occasionally stop. Friendship caused young Stecher to choose Hetmanek as manager. If Hetmanek doesn't make a fortune out of Stecher, absolutely the greatest athletic sensation of the age, it will not be because old Dame Opportunity has not registered a solid jolt on his door.

There is Billy McCarney. He has been identified with the fighting game for years. Always he has been just out of sight of the big money. Then he discovered the late Luther McCarty. He had struck pugilistic pay dirt at last. McCarney had McCarty hooked to box six rounds with Jack Johnson immediately after the Pelkey affair. That was considered a cakewalk for Luther. Of course all of you know what occurred in Calgary. McCarney would have made a huge fortune, as he is peculiarly fitted to handle a great fighter, and McCarty was all of that and one of the greatest cards of them all.

Tom Jones, admitting he is a hustler and very shrewd, has been extremely fortunate, while McCarney, on the other hand, has fared extremely poorly.

J. H. Herman had been mixed up in the sporting game and was tenaciously saving all the thin dimes he had to show for his profits. Frank Gotch was asked by Stanislaus Zybszko to recommend some shrewd and hard-working manager to take charge of the big Pole's affairs in this country.

"Get Jack Herman," said Gotch. "He'll keep you busy."

Herman took hold of Zbyszko and made a fortune variously estimated from $60,000 to $100,000.

It's a great game, the sporting life, when they have a real champion or a huge box office attraction.

FINAL GAME OF SEASON

Universals and Northerns Will Clash in Farewell Hockey Contest.

With the members of both the Universal and Northern Hockey teams in the very best of condition, a great contest is looked for this evening in the Duluth Curling club when the two rival teams meet in the final game of the present season.

Dave Larson, manager of the Northern Hardware septet, is confident his men will emerge from the contest a winner. A win over the Universals will give the hardware men a talking point in regard to the league pennant.

Ed Harris, who steers the destinies of the Universals, is quite positive that the flour makers will play a fast and consistent game and defeat the Northerns, just as they have defeated all of the other teams of the league during the league pennant race.

As many of the members of the Northern team are West Duluth boys the rivalry between the two teams is very keen. During the season the Northerns have been one of the strongest contenders against the Universals. It is expected that tonight's game will be both close and exciting from the opening to closing bell.

As the proceeds of the contest will go to defray the expenses of the annual hockey banquet, it is rather expected that followers of the league will turn out in goodly numbers. The game will start at the usual time. There will be music and skating following the contest.

STATE MARKS ARE BROKEN

Y. M. C. A. Athletes Set Four Records in Annual Hexathalon Contest.

Duluth Y. M. C. A. athletes made a great showing in the annual Hexathalon contest, which was staged last evening in the local association gymnasium. Four state records went by the boards, the running high jump, standing broad jump, shot put and pole vault being the former state marks to fall before the assault of the local athletes. The showing of the twenty-one men entered in the various events has led the followers of the Duluth team to believe that the local association team will finish very high in the national standing.

Brabrook's jumping was clearly the feature of the exhibition. He won the standing broad jump and the running high jump and finished second in the fence vault. The summary:

60-YARD POTATO RACE.

First—Bailey, time 14 4-5 seconds; Friedman, second, 15 flat; Coning, third and Myrhman, fourth.

DENFELD HIGH AND C. H. S. CLASH AGAIN

Return Game of Quints Friday Afternoon at Washington Gym.

The Central and Denfeld high school basket ball quints will meet tomorrow afternoon at the Washington gymnasium in what is expected to be a fast and interesting contest.

Last week the Central athletes traveled out to West Duluth and defeated the Denfeld five by a count of 35 to 10. Despite the score, the game was hard, and the Red and White team was in considerable danger for a time. For a long time in the first half the Denfeld men held the lead, but as soon as their opponents found the basket they began to roll up the score.

The Denfeld quint is playing its first year under a regular coach and has met with great success. Some great players are being developed, and in the next year or two the West Duluth school should turn out teams the equal of any at the Head of the Lakes. They have been considerably strengthened since the last Central game, and they expect to give their rivals a good game. Last week the Denfeld school turned out a crowd of over 200 persons, and it is expected that there will be a large delegation of rooters from both schools tomorrow also. The game will be played in the afternoon, immediately following the close of school, thus enabling more of the students to see it.

The Denfeld game was substituted on the Central schedule because the Superior Central quint has gone to the Wisconsin state championship tournament. The Superior game, the last one of the season, will be played next week.

The lineups of the two teams tomorrow afternoon will be as follows:

Duluth Central—		Denfeld High—
Mason	f	Martin
Karon	f	Gilbert
Gogins	c	Myles
Rosenberg	g	Dormedy
Shaw	g	Wick

HOCKEY PLAY CHECKED.

Weather Prevents Central Teams From Playing Off Final.

Central high school hockey enthusiasts are making desperate efforts to play the final games in the interclass schedule.

To date all of the games have been played at the Twenty-fifth avenue rink, but the condition of this rink, due to the warm weather, has made hockey there impossible. The curling rink was obtained for yesterday afternoon, but when the junior and senior septets, which were scheduled to clash yesterday afternoon, came on the ice, they were informed that a game would be impossible, as it would spoil the ice for the evening skating.

It had originally been planned to play the junior-senior contest yesterday afternoon and have the winner of this affray meet the sophomores for the championship of the school. There is at present a three cornered tie for first place between the three upper classes, and it is earnestly hoped that the deciding contests can be played before the season closes. It is probable that the upper class game will be played tomorrow afternoon at the curling rink. The game will begin at 5 o'clock so as not to interfere with the basketball game to be played tomorrow afternoon between the Central and Denfeld quints.

SAINTS BEGINNING SPRING WORKOUT

Mike Kelly Announces Training Season Games and Roster.

St. Paul, Minn., March 16.—Seventeen games will be played by the St. Paul American association team on its training trip this spring, Manager Mike Kelley said today. Fourteen of these contests have been arranged and for the remaining three dates, April 12, 13 and 14, games are being sought with teams at Paducah, Ky., and Fulton and Cairo, Ill. Kelley also gave out the roster of the 1916 Saints already signed or who have signified their intention of signing.

Reporting at Fort Smith, Ark., this week, the Saints will remain at their training camp there until April 3, when they leave for Little Rock for the first games of the following training schedule:

April 4 and 5, Little Rock, Ark.; 6, Milwaukee American association team at Pine Bluff, Ark.; 7, Jackson, Tenn.; 10, 11, Memphis, Tenn.; 15, 16, Evansville, Ind.; 17, Terra Haute, Ind.; 12, 13 and 14, unsettled.

Except for the Milwaukee team, local aggregations will be encountered in all practice games.

Two more pitchers will be added to the following list of players, given out by Manager Kelley today:

Pitchers—Finneran, Niehaus, Upham, Grouch, Gipe, Benton and Leifeld.

Catchers—Glenn, Marshall and Berger.

Infielders—Dressen, O'Leary, Berghammer, Nash, Smith and Holt.

Outfielders—Riggert, Paddock, Niles and Gilmore.

Fort Smith, Ark., March 16.—The advance guard of the St. Paul American association club, twenty players, headed by Shortstop Charlie O'Leary, arrived here yesterday to begin spring training. Active work will commence today, and the squad will play the first game Sunday with the Fort Smith team of the Western association. Mike Kelley, the St. Paul manager, and probably eighteen more players will arrive today or Friday.

Refuses Work With Chance.

Chicago, March 16.—Catcher Ed Wallace declined to go to Los Angeles to play under Frank Chance, and hence reverts to the Chicago Nationals, according to a dispatch from Tampa. Wallace will be carried by the club until Manager Tinker can find another place for him.

DELLER SETS HIGH MARK IN NORTHERN PIN TOURNEY

Elcora Team Star Rolls Into First Place in Singles; Duluth Team Third in Five-Men Event, While Range Bowlers Make Splendid Showing in Several of the Events.

"Handsome" Joe Deller of the Elcora team leaped into the limelight of the Northern Bowling association tournament yesterday by making high count in the singles. Deller registered a mark of 625, five points in advance of that made by Taylor of Virginia, thus placing a score on the boards that will require some great rolling to beat.

Taking it all in all, yesterday was a very good day for Duluth, Superior and range bowlers. During the afternoon the Virginia pin men set up some good scores, while during the evening shift Deller rolled into first place and the Superior Water and Light five men team bowled into second place with the Wagner Annex five right behind for third place.

In addition to being the first Duluth bowler to gain first place in any event, Deller also holds the distinction of rolling a very creditable game in the doubles with Andy Otterson. This pair hit the maple for a count of 1,165 and remain anchored in fourth place.

Krause and Buskey of Rhinelander, Wis., still cling to their lead in the doubles.

Deller in Tough Luck.

While Deller leads the tourney in the singles count, the followers of the popular local bowler are lamenting over his hard luck—a streak of luck which they claim robbed him of a high count that would have made it extremely difficult for any bowler to have overshot his mark during the week.

Making 235 in his first game and a 221 for his second, Deller struck bad going in the third and just managed to pull out with a 169 score. Only a great finish in the last two frames enabled Joe to make any kind of a showing in his final game.

Taylor of Virginia, who is but five points behind Deller, made the highest one game score of the day with a count of 269, the score coming in the five-man event. The Virginia bowler rolled a strong and consistent game throughout the day.

Yesterday's showing of the local bowlers was the best of the tournament. It was also a great day for the visiting rangers. Looking over the existing high scores it will be found that Duluth and range bowlers are fairly well represented. While these scores may not stand the assault that is sure to come from some of the cracks Friday and Saturday the locals have so far set a rather lurid pace for the invaders to follow.

Following will be found the high scores to date and the complete scores of yesterday's rolling:

MAGNATES TO GATHER HERE

Northern League Baseball Heads Will Meet Early Monday.

The expeditionary forces of the Northern Baseball league will meet at the Spalding hotel next Monday morning to try to capture a schedule and a definite policy. Permission has been granted to the Canadian forces to cross the line and unite with the American magnates.

An official communication was received today from President John Burmeister, stating that the meeting place of the magnates has been switched from Minneapolis to Duluth. Every club owner of the league is expected to be present.

Adoption of a schedule is expected during the meeting. Also it is believed that the bonds will be passed upon and the affairs of the league put in definite shape preparatory to the starting of the 1916 season.

As there is considerable work to do before the league will be ready to launch forth into the current of the approaching season, it is expected that the session of the magnates will continue until late in the evening.

Superior will be represented by Charles Armstead, who has been elected president of the club across the way.

HANDBALL ON "Y" COURTS

Annual Tournament Under Way; Challenge Issued to Twin City Players.

After several weeks of delay the annual handball tournament is in full swing on the courts of the Y. M. C. A. During the present week some very close and interesting games were played. The elusive serve of Fred Hanson brought about the downfall of Clarence Olson, considered one of the best players in the association, Hanson winning, 21-9, 6-21 and 21-16.

Bill Johnson defeated Dave Wisted, 21-19, 11-21, 21-20, these games being one of the best series played in some time on the Y. M. C. A. courts. The men were so evenly matched that there was little difference and the series was a real battle from start to finish.

Dr. Clark is playing in great form this season, defeating Denny in two well-played games, 21-15, 21-13. Denny defeated Ralph Pineo last Saturday, 21-16, 21-19. Pineo is a new man at the game and is playing some very creditable handball.

Lavine and Wendlandt are scheduled to meet Saturday and this should prove a corking contest. Dreves and Johnson are also on Monday's schedule.

Challenges will be issued next week to the Minneapolis Athletic club. Six new handball courts have recently been installed in the palatial Minneapolis club and some crack players have been working out on them. As the tournament doubles have been completed on the courts of the St. Paul Y. M. C. A. a challenge will be issued for a series of games between the St. Paul winners and the local winners. Followers of the game here would like to see Wendlandt and a strong partner hook up with two St. Paul men.

CINCINNATI STARS

Make High Marks in Two Bowling Events at Toledo.

Toledo, Ohio, March 16.—Cincinnati proved the star performer on the alleys of the American Bowling congress here yesterday, installing Ben Huesman in a tie for the lead in the individual event with 685, equaling the mark made by Frank Shaw of Chicago a few days ago.

The same town also went into a tie for fifth place in the doubles with 1,229 by Engel and Brinkman, but the best mark in the two-man showed up from the work of Hatch and Nelson of Racine, Wis., who pounded out 1,261 for second position. Four pairs rolled into the first ten places, while two individuals cashed high.

The Detroit Journals of Detroit, rolling with the late shift on the A. B. C. tournament, went into third place in the five-man event with a total of 2,879. The S. A. C. of Syracuse, N. Y., bowled 2,750, but did not break into the standings.

WILLARD AND MORAN WORK HARD FOR BOUT

New York, March 16.—In a driving snow storm over frozen and slippery roads, both Jess Willard and Frank Moran did some hard road work yesterday in preparation for their bout. The big champion jogged about four miles through Central park and along nearby thoroughfares, while Moran's five-mile run was across country near his Westchester training quarters. Neither was sorry when the outdoor work had been completed.

Willard went through his regular afternoon stunts in the West Side clubhouse, showing plenty of vim and speed.

Moran showed much agility in bagpunching and rope skipping, as well as in all his gymnastic work.

Moran's trainers admitted he is on edge and will need careful nursing to keep in condition. He said he only wished his bout with Willard was on for tonight instead of ten days away.

REFUSES SANCTION.

Illinois University Track Men Out of Big St. Louis Meet.

St. Louis, Mo., March 16.—Dispatches from Champaign, Ill., say that the council of administration, University of Illinois, has refused to sanction the participation of the university track team in the tournament to be given here by the Missouri Athletic association on March 25.

The University authorities decline to approve the entry of the university team because the contests were not to be limited to college teams.

Falkenberg to Toledo.

Toledo, Ohio, March 16.—Cy Falkenberg, formerly with the Brooklyn and Newark Federals, may be signed by Roger Bresnahan for the Toledo American association team, it was reported today. Falkenberg has been in Toledo since Sunday and has been in conference with Bresnahan. A story that Secretary George Wild of the Toledo club has resigned was denied today by Bresnahan.

CHECKER TOURNEY SET FOR SATURDAY

Round Robin and Elimination Contest at Y.M.C.A.; Twenty Entries.

Entries are now being made at the Y. M. C. A. for a combination of "round robin" and elimination checker tournament, according to W. E. Lauterbach, one of the assistant secretaries at the association building. The first games will be played Saturday night.

"When the entries are in," said Mr. Lauterbach in outlining the plan, "a draw will be made dividing them into groups of four players each. Every man will play each of the other three in his group. In other words, each one of these groups will play a round robin tournament of its own. The one getting the highest percentage of games won will continue in the tournament. In a case of a tie in percentage a match consisting of five games (draws not to count) will be played.

"A match shall consist of six games, draws to count. Each one must play his three matches by April 5. The draw will be made Saturday noon."

The tournament is open to all men of the city. Twenty men have already signified their intention of entering.

HOW I CURED MY CATARRH

TOLD IN A SIMPLE WAY

Without Apparatus, Inhalers, Salves, Lotions, Harmful Drugs, Smoke or Electricity.

Heals Day and Night

It is a new way. It is something absolutely different. No lotions, sprays or sickly smelling salves or creams. No atomizer, or any apparatus of any kind. Nothing to smoke or inhale. No steaming or rubbing or injections. No electricity or vibration or massage. No powder; no plasters; no keeping in the house. Nothing of that kind at all.

Something new and different, something delightful and healthful, something instantly successful. You do not have to wait, and linger and pay out a lot of money. You can stop it overnight—and I will gladly tell you how—FREE. I am not a doctor and this is not a so-called doctor's prescription—but I am cured and my friends are cured, and you can be cured. Your suffering will stop at once like magic.

I Am Free—You Can Be Free

My catarrh was filthy and loathsome. It made me ill. It dulled my mind. It undermined my health and was weakening my will. The hawking, coughing, spitting made me obnoxious to all, and my foul breath and disgusting habits made even my loved ones avoid me strictly. My delight in life was dulled and my faculties impaired. I knew that in time it would bring me to an untimely grave, because every moment of the day and night it was slowly yet surely sapping my vitality.

But I found a cure, and I am ready to tell you about it FREE. Write me promptly.

RISK JUST ONE CENT

Send no money. Just your name and address on a postal card. Say: "Dear Sam Katz: Please tell me how you cured your catarrh and how I can cure mine." That's all you need to say. I will understand, and I will write to you with complete information, FREE, at once. Do not delay. Send postal card or write me a letter today. Don't think of turning this page until you have asked for this wonderful treatment that can do for you what it has done for me.

NO ADVANCE IN SALARIES

Raises for Teachers "Advisable," But Not "Possible," Says Board.

Teachers Hear Report of Committee Working for Higher Pay.

Teachers in Duluth schools, at a meeting of their association at the Y. W. C. A. last night, were told that they would have to go to other cities if they insisted upon higher salaries.

Miss Effie White of the salaries committee reported on a four-hour conference with Mrs. T. J. Davis, chairman of the board of education's committee on schools, and was unable to give instructors any encouragement in regard to their campaign for a higher minimum and maximum salary scale.

"The general opinion expressed by the board of education was that salary raises were advisable but quite impossible," said Miss White. "Funds available are fixed by statute, and this fund has already been overdrawn. At the present time it would be impossible to raise the maximum or minimum salary for grade teachers.

"We were given the hope that after next year it would be possible to give grade teachers a raise of $50 upon the principal's recommendation. The maximum and minimum salaries for teachers of the junior high schools will be fixed later; and we understand that a report has been promised for May 1 on all salary questions.

"Our suggestion that a teacher be advised of the cause of her dismissal before the end of the first semester met with some favor, as did our suggestion that any teacher be given two years' trial, the second in another school, possibly, before her dismissal could be ordered.

"Our objections to the marking system on a percentage basis was met by the remark that this was merely a retention of the old merit system on a simplified basis, and that increases depended largely upon principals of the different buildings."

Miss White's report contained an appreciation of the work being done by Mrs. T. J. Davis.

A financial report of the association showed a balance of $212.72. The social part of the evening's program was furnished in readings and vocal selections by Miss Spencer, Miss Van Cleef and Walter H. Benson.

Harry O'Brien, president of the association, presided at the meeting.

MUCH STATE LAND BOUGHT AT SALE

One of Largest Yet Conducted; 5,900 Acres Disposed of.

One of the largest state land sales ever held in St. Louis county was conducted yesterday afternoon at the courthouse by A. C. Wiprud of the state auditor's office. One hundred and fifty-three parcels, comprising approximately 5,900 acres, were sold. The state will receive $62,970.

The top price of $161 was paid by D. S. Forgy of Duluth for one and three-fourths acres, known as lot 1, section 36, 63-18.

Vermilion lake property brought good prices, it being in demand by summer resorters, who bid up the price. The demand for farm lands on the iron range was also brisk and the volume of the sale is regarded as an indication that there has been a revival of interest in St. Louis county's land for farming purposes.

Food for Thought.

Duluth grocers and manufacturers of food products pay quite a compliment to the women readers of this paper in the way they spend their money for advertising.

Seldom, if ever, do they miss telling the great army of Herald housewives about their special Saturday offerings, or bringing to their attention the good qualities of food products that await them in Duluth's best stores.

REGULATION OF MARITAL AFFAIRS DENIED BY FORD

Detroit, Mich., March 16.—Henry Ford does not undertake to regulate the marital affairs of his employes. This was learned through his denial of testimony given in a divorce case in Chicago.

Henry Carter, a porter, employed by the Ford Motor company, testified that the one reason for seeking a divorce was that Ford employes must make peace in their homes, get a divorce or lose their $5 a day wages, Walter G. May, a former Ford investigator testified this outline of the Ford policy was correct.

"There is no such rule in force," said Mr. Ford. "We make an effort to keep man and wife living together in harmony, but to gain this end we never have gone so far as to lay down an order that a man must obtain a divorce or lose his job if unable to live in peace at home."

Red Wing, Minn., March 16.—Mrs. Randi Johnson, 97 years old, Red Wing's oldest woman resident, is dead. She was born in Norway in 1818 and has lived here since 1861. Two sons, P. O. and Martin Johnson, and a niece, Mrs. J. A. Westby of Minneapolis, survive.

SHE DARKENED HER GRAY HAIR

A Kansas City Lady Darkened Her Gray Hair and Stimulated Its Growth By a Simple Home Process.

She Tells How She Did It.

A well-known resident of Kansas City, Mo., who darkened her gray hair by a simple home process, made the following statement: "Any lady or gentleman can darken their gray or faded hair, stimulate its growth and make it soft and glossy with this simple recipe, which they can mix at home. To half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, 1 small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair every other day until the gray hair is darkened sufficiently, then every two weeks. This mixture relieves scalp troubles and is excellent for dandruff and falling hair. It does not stain the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off. It will make a gray haired person look 10 to 20 years younger. —Advertisement.

GROCERS HEAR OF AD VALUES

Advisability of Handling Known Goods Is Pointed Out.

Herald Advertising Man and A. C. Pearsons Address Retailers.

Closer co-operation, a more candid handling of the credit problem, and closer attention to nationally-advertised food products were urged upon retail grocers last night, during the monthly meeting of their association, held at the M. M. Gasser store, 211 West Superior street.

"Safeguard your credits," said A. C. Pearsons, in one of the principal talks of the evening. "Be frank and honest with each other in this matter of bad credits, and thus help each other. The credit problem is one of the most important confronting a retail merchant."

"Ask the salesman if his product is being advertised nationally," said Charles A. McDonell of The Herald advertising force. "Thirty thousand Chicago housewives recently answered questions put to them by a newspaper.

"They gave a list of their favorite food products, from baking powder to vinegar, and said their attention was called to them by newspaper advertisements.

"We hear and read lots about stringent pure food laws," continued Mr. McDonell, "and the efforts of the government officials to compel manufacturers to observe them, but not so much about the thousands of dollars spent by manufacturers to make their plants sanitary and their products big grade.

CHARLES McDONELL.

Advertised Goods Are Bought.

"Many retail merchants have their shelves stocked with goods which move slowly, and which thus represent a loss. Housewives will pass by the unknown product and take one that is nationally advertised every time.

"Manufacturers who spend thousands of dollars in national advertising campaigns must keep their goods up to standard so that they can stand an acid test. They know that they must do this in order to make every sale after the first one."

The grocers discussed plans for boosting the annual state meeting of retail merchants, to be held at Duluth next summer. Committee reports showed that merchants are lining up in an effort to make the gathering a success. Secretary George M. Peterson urged members to help in making the meeting the largest ever held.

Change Advertising Day.

"Standard" advertising day for grocers may be changed from Saturday to Wednesday as a result of a resolution adopted by the members. This change is being considered in order to equalize the rush of Saturday by inducing shoppers to buy in the middle of the week, grocers said.

An excellent luncheon was served by M. R. Bush with supplies from the grocery, bakery and meat market of the establishment where the meeting was held.

The next meeting will be held at the store of Olson Bros., 2303 West Superior street.

MORE WOMEN TO AID IN RELIEF

New Volunteers Appear at Meeting of Teuton Bazar Committees.

About 200 women attended last night's meeting of the different subcommittees of the German-Austro-Hungarian Relief association, which is arranging for the Red Cross and war relief bazar, which is to be held in the Duluth auditorium March 23, 24 and 25. Max Binheim, general manager of the Red Cross bazaar, presided. Mr. Binheim appointed E. R. Gnifke, supervisor of the dancing pavilion. All other supervisors had been appointed before. He informed the women that all the supervisors would have to report at the executive office of the association between now and next Tuesday, and that all workers would have to register at the bazar office at the auditorium at 1 and 5:30 p. m. on the opening day. He said that every woman would be assigned to a certain booth, to the dining room or refreshment room, or to the floor, but that the management wuld reserve the right to put her in any place. About twenty-five new women volunteered last night to assist in the work during the days of the bazar, and there will be about 150 on the sales force, most of them in national or Red Cross costumes.

The foreign language exhibit will be a very interesting feature of the fair. German newspapers and periodicals will be on exhibit during the three days in the reading room. The war souvenir booth will be built in regular old Dutch style, and the gold for iron rings, iron watch fobs, and iron cross pins will be on sale at this booth. The iron rings are significant. They recall the joy of sacrifice, which prompted the German women during the days of the Napoleonic wars to pour their wedding rings into the public treasurer.

FARGO ARSON CASE ABSORBS ATTENTION

Evidence Wyman's House Was Fired But By Whom Is Problem.

Fargo, N. D., March 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—That some one had set fire to the John Wyman residence here with the intention of destroying it seems to be fully established, but whether the perpetrator of the crime was Mr. Wyman or some one else, remains for the jury to decide. This is the status of the Wyman arson case on trial here after the state has had seven witnesses on the stand with a large number still to be examined.

Fire Chief James Sutherland and Assistant Fire Chief Frank Campion, both gave startling testimony as to the condition of the Wyman home when they arrived there on the morning of March 20, 1915, at about 3:30 o'clock to extinguish a fire that was discovered by neighbors.

Both Chief Sutherland and Assistant Chief Campion testified that they had found the fire had started in two closets and two blind rooms that were used as an attic on the third floor of the residence and that in both closets holes had been cut through the plastering and lath in the walls and ceiling and the holes filled with newspaper, rags and bits of wood and all saturated with kerosene.

Turned in Alarm.

Arthur Rose, who lives next door to the Wyman residence, testified when he discovered the Wyman house was afire he turned in an alarm and that the department was two or three minutes in answering. His brother, Albert Rose, who was living at the Rose home also, stated that shortly after the fire department arrived Mr. Wyman appeared at the door of the Rose home and asked him to assist in carrying a trunk belonging to Miss Eleanore Hartney, a Fargo school teacher who roomed at the Wyman home until about ten days preceding the fire and had left the trunk and some clothing in the Wyman home, to the Rose home.

The testimony showed that there was nobody at the Wyman home at the time of the fire, Mrs. Wyman having been away on a visit.

The case is attracting a large amount of attention, the court room being crowded. The trial is being held before Judge Charles M. Cooley.

WATER METERS BRING RESULTS IN FARGO, N. D.

Fargo, N. D., March 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—That the installation of water meters in this city proves a great saving in water is brought out by a statement by Robert E. Blakemore, water commissioner, that while there are now between 3,000 and 3,500 more water consumers in the city than there were three years ago, the water pumped from the filtration plant to the city has been reduced from an average of 3,000,000 gallons a day to 2,000,000 a day.

He also shows that there are now less than 900 meters still to be installed in order to have all water consumers on the meter rate and as a further inducement to get these on meters and because of the fact that there is a large surplus in the water fund, he has several times introduced a resolution to have the city purchase back from the water consumers the meters that have already been installed and to hereafter install these meters free. He contends that the city should have absolute control over the meters.

The commission has failed to take action on the ideas of Mr. Blakemore up to this time.

D., March 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The city commission has approved plans and declared it necessary to pave Tenth avenue north from Broadway to 130 feet west of Tenth street north, a distance of about four blocks and a half, and on Eleventh avenue north from Broadway to a point 140 feet west of Seventh street north, a distance of about a block and a half.

"Father" asks: "I suffer constantly with rheumatism. Sometimes I can hardly walk the pains are so severe and muscles and joints so stiff."

Answer: There is no better treatment for rheumatism than the following prescription. I have used it with most satisfactory results in my practice for years. Every rheumatic sufferer should use it for quick and permanent relief: 2 drams of iodide of potassium, 4 drams sodium salicylate, ½ oz. wine of colchicum, 1 oz. comp. essence cardiol, 1 oz. comp. fluid balmwort and 5 ozs. of syrup sarsaparilla comp. Mix and take a teaspoonful at meal times and again before going to bed.

"Vain" asks: "How may I cure my scalp of a very disagreeable itching and scaly condition and at the same time not endanger the growth of my hair?"

Answer: I would suggest the immediate use of plain yellow minyol to remove dandruff and make the scalp alive and healthy. Three or four treatments should correct your scalp and beautify your hair.

"Helen" writes: "I have a cold and cough constantly. My throat and chest are sore and I am getting discouraged."

Answer: Secure from your druggist 2½ oz. concentrated essence mentholaxene and mix with one pint of simple sugar syrup. You will find this syrup very beneficial in opening up the air passages and healing the diseased inflammed membranes. It breaks up your cold and cough and relieves the system of the cold inflammation.

"Too Fat" writes: "Since I have gotten so stout, I don't feel well and I tire easily. I want to reduce safely but surely."

Answer: Five grain arbolone tablets are highly indorsed as safe and sure flesh reducers. I have recommended them in many cases of obesity and they have given perfect satisfaction.

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply in any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Ellwood Sts., Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. "Worried" writes: "I am only thirty, and up until a few months ago never knew what it was to feel tired or worn out. Now the feeling of fatigue never leaves me. I've 'lost my backbone,' have a shortness of breath and feel almost exhausted and wholly without ambition. Feel grouchy and have pains in the back of my head and spine. What will liven me up and make me strong."

Answer: You need a good tonic to build up your blood and soothe and strengthen your nerves; something to restore your energy and overcome the weariness and make you a man again. Three grain cadomene tablets are most effective and highly recommended. Start using them now, and in a short time you should feel fine and better than you ever did.

"Mary G." asks: "How may I increase my weight? I am very bony and angular looking. I eat plenty but it does not seem to nourish my system."

Answer: The most satisfactory and healthful treatment to increase your weight, you will find in the use of three grain hypo-nuclane tablets.

"Worried" writes: "I have constant headache and backache, my feet swell and I am tired all the time. My eyes look puffed and appear yellow. The urine is very little and of bad odor. My blood seems to be turning to water."

Answer: You have a bad case of kidney trouble and you should be very careful. Don't work too hard and avoid taking cold. If you will begin at once taking balmwort tablets, you will get almost immediate relief and continued treatment should greatly relieve you.

"Mrs. W. J. T." writes: "You helped a cousin of mine when she had diseased blood. I think now my blood is impure and I want a good blood medicine. I am very much constipated."

Answer: If your blood is impure you would know from some of these symptoms: Constipation, headache, coated tongue, sallow complexion, breaking out of the skin, tired feeling and possibly indigestion and some fever. Take three grain sulpherb tablets, (not sulphur). They are splendid to clean the system and put the blood right.—Advertisement.

UPHOLDS HIS FATHER'S ACT

Grand Rapids, Minn., Man Justifies His Parent's Killing Himself.

C. C. Peterson Delivers Remarkable "Sermon" at Crookston Suicide's Bier.

Crookston, Minn., March 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—Beside the bier of his dead father, who committed suicide a few days ago, C. C. Peterson, a prominent merchant of Grand Rapids, Minn., yesterday made one of the most remarkable pronouncements ever heard at a funeral in the state. Peter Peterson, the suicide, aged 80 years, shot himself through the temple sitting in a chair in his room. He had been a sufferer from a chronic ailment for years, and for the past three years had not known a moment without pain. He used a 32-caliber revolver to end his life, and after the other five cartridges had been snapped and failed to explode, the sixth one was discharged, the bullet crashing through his brain bringing instant death.

In the presence of gathered friends and relatives, including the widow and two of the five surviving children, and following prayer offered by Rev. Francis Erickson, C. C. Peterson, the son, said with impressive earnestness:

"Pursuant to a tentative promise made many years ago, it becomes my duty to make a few remarks at the side of father's bier. Owing to the peculiar circumstances connected with our gathering here this afternoon, these remarks may be of a different nature from what they might have been under other conditions.

"His memory is being brought up before a public tribunal where the masses at large are the judges and the charge is brought against the departed that he violated one of the rules made by the Creator and accepted by man as supreme.

"According to all precedents there should be no judgment passed before he has been permitted to submit his defense. This has been the law and custom since before the time of Moses, and even Christ was not condemned and crucified before he had been asked the question whether he had any thing to say in His defense or not.

World Full of Mistakes.

"Did the deceased make a mistake? Possibly he did. But even a mistake is evidence that it is made by a man who does things.

"And to this day the world is full of mistakes. When the forces of nature send us sunshine we find fault with it and say it is a mistake because we need rain. When rain comes we call that a mistake because we need the sunshine. Whether cold or warm, sunshine or shadow, tempest or calm we always pronounce it a mistake and want the other thing.

"Every school of medicine will prove to us that every other school is a mistake; every political party knows that every other party is a crime; every religious sect has an inspired and heavenly knowledge that every other sect is mistaken. No one in this wide world does anything correctly except our own selfish 'we' or 'I.'

"Was his act unnatural? Let us see. Let us watch the wild beast in the open. He obeys no laws, no orders, no customs, no usages excepting those that the Creator has endowed him with. He may be grazing in the field when he sees the fire approaching. He sniffs the smoke—he feels the biting of the flame as it creeps up to him rod by rod. He knows it would be painful to go through to the other side where he would find safety on the burnt-over plot and in his frenzy he leaps over the precipice to be dashed to pieces on the rocks below.

"Only a few days ago a railroad train was derailed and the coaches smashed, pinioning a passenger beneath the beams of the car. The trestle caught fire and the blaze crept slowly toward him. As it began to lick his limbs he made pitiful appeals to his comrades to end his misery which at worst could last but a few minutes.

"Here lie the remains of a man whose body was racked with pain. For two or three years he had not known a peaceful moment. Excruciating pain that had fairly eaten his life away gripped him. Hours, days, weeks, months, years passed with pain whether sitting or lying down, and no relief could be found.

Life Back of Him.

"Here was a man who had entered the Valley of Death. His life was back of him. The pleasant meadows were far in the rear. The golden fragrance of the waving grain fields and the morning freshness of the pastures were far behind. The smooth, even pathway of his youth had become a rocky road. No more flowers were growing at his roadsides, no more bubbling springs at which to quench his feverish thirst. Beautiful birds no longer chirped cheerful melodies above him.

"With faltering steps he stumbled along toward the open grave for which he had longed for the past five years, and which was still around a bend in the road ahead.

"Having reached the limit of human endurance he decided to take a short cut. With the evidence before us we may be ready to pass judgment, or we may profess belief in the teachings of Christ, in which case we must abide by the admonition to 'judge not, that you be not judged.'

"Selfishness was unknown in the nature of our departed parent. While always saving, he was not stingy. At the age of 50 years he left his birth place and came to America that his children might have greater opportunity. He worshiped liberty in every form where it did not interfere with the liberty of his fellow man. He believed that reason was the only light given by the Creator for man's guidance. Justice was his religion. He had dread of only one thing—that he might become a helpless burden to others before the end came.

"His pain is gone. He will draw no more criticism. The old oak scattered its acorns, and from them grew oaks from which came more acorns, from which sprang younger saplings, thus forming the eternal chain of life that has continued since the first man was created and which will continue till the last of us has gone. We can simply commit his remains back to mother earth, from whence they came."

CAUGHT IN STORM; PARTY EAT HORSES

Minnesotans Have Tough Experience in Canadian Blizzard.

Little Falls, Minn., March 16.—Stranded in the snow for six weeks on the Canadian prairies and forced to eat horseflesh to escape starvation were part of the adventures of Henry Otto, formerly of Little Falls, and a party of International Falls men. Barney Burton, who returned from International Falls Tuesday morning, learned from friends of the party's experience.

The party had started for the Peace river country, in Northern Canada, when the big storms of the winter began and, with only two horses, they were unable to make any progress during the blizzard and camped in the snow. Their provisions gave out and they were forced to kill and eat one of the horses. The other horse froze to death, but all the members of the party got out safely.

Mr. Otto was formerly employed by Barney Burton in Little Falls and left this city a few years ago. He went to the Peace river country to make his home.

UNKNOWN MAN IS GROUND TO PIECES

Mellen, Wis., March 16.—An unknown man was ground to death beneath the wheels of a "Soo" train in the city limits here Monday evening. His body was so badly mutilated that identification would be alomst impossible, even if the man were known here. He had the appearance of being a fairly young man and his clothing seemed to be of good quality, better, perhaps than one would expect to find garbing a regular hobo, but his identity is a complete mystery.

The remains are being held here awaiting possible identification or further light upon the cause of the accident.

Minneapolis, Minn., March 16.—Roy and Clarence Kangan, aged 4 and 3 years respectively, were burned to death when the rooming house in which they lived with their mother was destroyed by fire here late tonight.

SOME FARMERS ARE HIT BY FAILED ELEVATOR

Fargo, N. D., March 16.—Holders of storage tickets issued by the elevator manager at Wellum, N. D., of the North Dakota Grain company of Duluth, will sustain only slight losses as a result of the fact that the company has become insolvent, according to W. H. Stutsman, president of the railway commission. Holders of tickets issued from the company's elevator at Dazey, however, are not likely to be so fortunate. Stutsman estimates they will receive only about a third of the face value of their tickets.

At Dazey a total of about $17,000 in storage tickets remains unredeemed. On this amount there is a $5,000 bond that will be paid.

At Wallum the storage tickets issued total $9,000. To offset them there is about $4,000 worth of grain stored in the elevator and a bond of $5,000.

LONG PRAIRIE POWER.

It Will Be Furnished By Plant at Little Falls.

Little Falls, Minn., March 16.—The Little Falls Water Power company will furnish current to Long Prairie by next fall, as the result of an informal vote on the project Tuesday. The voters of the city were given an opportunity to express their preference as to getting current from Little Falls or from the old plant at Long Prairie, and 157 voted for the Little Falls proposition and 102 against it.

The council has agreed to be guided by the sentiment of the voters, and will probably pass ordinances closing their plant and granting a franchise to the local company at its next meeting. T. C. Gordon, manager of the local company, said that the line to Long Prairie would be built some time next summer if the franchise goes through. Propositions had been made to Verndale, Wadena and other towns in that section, but Long Prairie had been holding up the plans until the vote was taken.

Clear, Peachy Skin Awaits Anyone Who Drinks Hot Water

Says an inside bath, before breakfast helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Sparkling and vivacious—merry, bright, alert—a good, clear skin and a natural, rosy, healthy complexion are assured only by pure blood. If only every man and woman could be induced to adopt the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls, with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store, which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance, awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

FIVE YEARS OF MARRIAGE ENOUGH

Mrs. Alice Sigouin Asks for Divorce and Maiden Name.

Five years of married life has proved to be quite enough for Mrs. Alice Sigouin, 25, wife of Zolique Sigouin, 38, blacksmith, 725 South Sixty-ninth avenue west. In district court today, she began suit for divorce, alleging cruel and inhumane treatment.

Mrs. Sigouin declares that for the last four years her husband has been drinking heavily and that he has been abusive on numerous occasions. It was a common occurrence for him to strike and beat her, she says, and once he picked her off her feet and slammed her down on the floor. During the month of October, 1914, she alleges, he drove her out of the house.

Mrs. Segouin asks for an absolute divorce. They were married in this city on April 16, 1910. There are no children. Mrs. Segouin's malden name was Alice McDonald and she asks to have it restored to her.

HAS A "HOME" NOW.

Prowler Is Sent to Work Farm on Drunk and Disorderly Charge.

Oscar Johnson, 44, whose home is nowhere and who claims to have no particular occupation, was given sixty days at the St. Louis county work farm on pleading guilty to a charge of being drunk and disorderly, in the West Duluth police court before Judge H. W. Lanners this morning.

Johnson was arrested early last evening after having given Mrs. M. J. Fillatrault and her two children a bad scare. He walked up the back stairway leading to the Fillatrault house, and began mumbling something after pushing the door open. Mrs. Fillatrault and the children ran downstairs to Mr. Fillatrault's office, and a search was at once begun for the man. He was picked up a few moments later by Mr. Fillatrault, who, after a struggle, turned him over to the police.

The appearance of the stranger at the back door gave an added scare to the family after the shooting at the Henriksen home at noon yesterday. Robbers, burglars and highwaymen were the principal theme discussed all day in West Duluth, and prowlers of any kind would have been given a warm reception.

DONALD'S RINK WINS.

Two games are scheduled in the button event tonight. T. F. Olsen will play Alex Donald, and Melvin Olson is drawn against Joe McDonald.

POLICE CAPTURE FUGITIVE AFTER EXHAUSTING CHASE OF SEVEN HOURS THROUGH SNOW

William Erickson Too Exhausted to Raise Hands When "Covered."

Chief McKercher Borrows Snowshoes for Final Sprint.

Two Victims of West Duluth Holdup Are Recovering.

THE HENRIKSEN HOUSE, 625 NORTH FIFTY-SIXTH AVENUE WEST.

WILLIAM ERICKSON.

MRS. HENRIKSEN, LEFT; MR. HENRIKSEN, AND MRS. HENRIKSEN'S SISTER, MRS. ALMA ERICKSON, RIGHT.

After a sensational chase, lasting nearly seven hours, through snow, which, in many places, reached to the armpits of the fugitive and his pursuers, William G. Erickson, who shot and seriously wounded Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Henriksen, at their home, 625 North Fifty-sixth avenue, yesterday noon in an attempt at robbery, was captured by Chief of Police Robert McKercher last night. The capture was effected about three-quarters of a mile above the Great Northern Power company's transmission line, about a half mile west of the Getchell road, and a mile and a half south of the Morris Thomas highway.

Erickson was completely exhausted when the chief, accompanied by Charles Larson, a farmer, both wearing snow shoes, reached him. His condition was such that he was unable to raise his arms to the level of his head when the chief ordered him to throw up his hands. His clothes were wet through, and the canvass gloves which he wore on his hands were frozen stiff. Chief McKercher is of the belief that if the man had not been caught before dark, he would have perished before morning.

Victims Are Improving.

Mr. and Mrs. Henriksen are both reported to be in good condition this morning. An operation was performed on Mrs. Henriksen yesterday afternoon, and the bullet extracted from her head. It had penetrated the back of the head, the point of the bullet just touching the delicate membrane covering of the brain but not piercing it. She rested easily during the night and this morning conditions were favorable for her speedy recovery.

An operation to extract the bullet from Mr. Henriksen's left hand was performed this morning. The bullet had entered the wrist near the artery, grazing the bone and entering the palm of the hand and shattering a bone near the little finger joint. Dr. David Graham, who performed both operations, said this noon that both patients were getting along as well as could be expected. Dr. Graham said that the chances of the recovery of Mrs. Henriksen were good and that, in all probability, Mr. Henriksen would not lose his hand.

On Fugitive's Trail.

The police got on the man's trail early in the afternoon. When he left the scene of the attempted robbery he made straight for the hillside. Officers posted through the district and men from Proctor were notified to be on the lookout for him. His tracks were discovered early in the chase where he had left the boulevard and headed into the brush. Patrolman Oscar Peterson, who was probably about three-quarters of a mile behind him, was hindered in catching up because of the heavy snow.

At least twice during the chase in the early afternoon Patrolman Peterson, as well as Lieut. Schulte and Patrolman L. D. Root were within about 500 yards of the fugitive. At two different times they got into deep holes where Erickson had floundered about and had rested, evidently for periods of five or ten minutes. One place, for a distance of about 300 yards, Erickson had walked on the top strand of a wire fence and in that manner kept out of the heavy snow. Patrolman Peterson attempted the same feat, but because of greater weight he sank into the snow.

Late in the afternoon, Chief McKercher with a squad of men joined the chase, and the chief selected the farm of Charles Larson as a favorable spot to watch and wait.

It was shortly after 6 o'clock when he noticed the man emerging through the brush and cutting straight across the power company's right-of-way. Borrowing snow shoes, he chased after the man, who then was about a mile away. It was about three-quarters of an hour later that he caught up with the fugitive and commanded him to throw up his hands.

Fugitive Exhausted.

The man was barely able to comply with the request, getting his hands to about the level of his shoulders. The chief fired a shot over Erickson's head and again issued the command, and this time he got his hands about three inches higher. The chief and Mr. Larson half dragged and half carried the man to the Morris-Thomas road, where a passing sleigh was pressed into service in bringing him to the city.

Erickson was easily identified by Mr. Henriksen when taken to West Duluth this morning. Mrs. Alma Erickson, sister of Mrs. Henriksen, also passed on the man's identity. Erickson willingly told his story to the chief and other police officials, and intimated that he would plead guilty to the charges against him, it is said.

Erickson was reared in West Duluth. He is the son of a farmer at Midway, and after it became known who he was police were sent to that locality in order to head off any possibility of his trying to get to his relatives for shelter.

On Tuesday evening, Erickson was on Central avenue. He spoke to Joe Lutzky, a former schoolmate, and asked him for the loan of a dollar. Mr. Lutzky loaned him the dollar, and Erickson offered to let him have the revolver, which he carried as security. Mr. Lutzky told him that he did not know what to do with the "gun" and did not take it.

Saw Henriksen's "Roll."

Yesterday morning Erickson spent considerable time in Henriksen's saloon. While in the saloon Henriksen came from the bank after drawing a large sum of money with which to cash pay checks. This "roll" was displayed by Henriksen while cashing some of the checks and it is believed that Erickson immediately resolved to get it.

Shortly before noon, the time when Henriksen intended to leave the saloon for his home, Erickson stepped out of the place. About fifteen minutes later Mr. Henriksen started home, and Erickson followed. Erickson went up the alley and entered the Henriksen property from the alley, going right up to the rear door and opening it.

When Mr. Henriksen saw the door opened and Erickson standing in the door he asked what he wanted. "Throw up your hands and give me your money," Erickson answered.

"You're crazy, get out of here," said Mr. Henriksen.

Then Erickson is said to have pulled the gun and fired, the first bullet grazing the left side of Mr. Henriksen's head. Mrs. Henriksen was attracted by the noise and came towards the rear of the house. In the struggle the gun was discharged and Mrs. Henriksen was struck in the back of the head with a bullet. She dropped, falling on the stairway leading to the basement, which is adjoining the rear door. Another shot was fired from the revolver, and the bullet struck Mr. Henriksen in the left wrist.

Son Arrives Home.

Mr. Henriksen got hold of the highwayman as he attempted to reload the revolver and was attempting to hold him in a corner of the stairway. At this time his youngest son arrived home from the Ely school, and he rushed over to the home of his aunt, Mrs. Alma Erickson, 623 North Fifty-sixth, next door, to the Henriksen home, shouting "Auntie, Auntie, a man is killing my papa and mamma."

Mrs. Erickson ran to their assistance and grabbed the man. She might have been successful in holding him until further assistance arrived, but he had by that time struggled free of Mr. Henriksen and was at the door. Mrs. Erickson managed to hang to his mackinaw which he left in her grasp.

Erickson then ran around to the front of the house and north on Fifty-sixth avenue to Elinor street and from there towards the hillside. At the corner of Fifty-seventh avenue and Elinor street he lost a note book containing his name and giving his membership in the Lake Carriers' association. This book was picked up by Joseph Brotherton, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Brotherton, 623 North Fifty-seventh avenue. He turned it over to the police.

Seen Running Away.

Probably what aided the police best in getting his description was that given by a milk woman who saw him running away. This description fitted the man almost perfectly. Erickson stopped at the home of Ed. W. Griffith on the cemetery road, and asked for a drink of water. He told Mrs. Griffith to hurry because he was getting away. "I've killed a whole family in West Duluth," he told Mrs. Griffith.

Erickson was arraigned in police court this afternoon at 2 o'clock. It was expected that two charges of assault in the first degree would be placed against him as well as a charge of attempted robbery.

Every Man Read This

This treatment is said to have acquired a wonderful reputation throughout the East, owing to its peculiar propensity to fortify the nerve force and generate health and a consequent personal magnetism, so essential to the happiness of every normal human being. It is claimed to be a blessing to those who are physically impaired, gloomy, despondent, nervous or who have trembling of the limbs, dizziness, heart palpitation, cold hands and feet, insomnia, fear without cause, timidity in venturing and general inability to act rationally as others do. Also of vast benefit to writers, professional men, office workers and the victims of society's late hours and over-indulgence in wines, liquors, etc.

By obtaining the treatment at some well stocked pharmacy, no one need know of another's trouble, while the treatment has been widely prescribed and dispensed heretofore by physicians and pharmacists, the grain tablets are so prepared with full directions for self administration that it is wholly unnecessary to pay a physician for prescribing them. Just ask for three-grain Cadomene tablets, begin their use and soon all the joy of a healthy body, sound nerves and strength will be felt.

M. in Book 337 of Mortgages on page 96. Said mortgage was assigned by said Louis Rosenbluth to Max Mickel by written assignment dated October 30th, 1915, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for St. Louis County, Minnesota, on November 8th, 1915, at 4:15 P. WHEAT TAKES FRESH SPURT Market Bulges With Fresh Batch of Crop Damage Reports.

Flaxseed Turns Strong Again on Active Bidding By Crushers.

Duluth Board of Trade, March 16.—The market was strong at the close with good bidding and short-covering demand.

May wheat closed ¾c up and July ⅝c up.

May durum closed ½c up and July ½c up.

Oats closed ¼c up at 42@42½c for on the track; rye, unchanged at 88@89c, and barley, unchanged at from 63 to 71c for on the track.

At Winnipeg, May oats closed ¾c up at 43⅝c.

At St. Louis, May wheat closed at $1.08½, and July at $1.07.

At Kansas City, May wheat closed at $1.03½, and July at $1.02⅝.

Puts on Minneapolis May wheat closed at $1.11, and calls at $1.14½.

The swings of the wheat markets these days appear to be largely dependent upon the character of winter wheat news for the time being. Today a fresh batch of crop damage reports came to hand from Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska, with the depreciation in the first three states named, placed at an average of 22 per cent. The market, therefore, recorded substantial advances from the low points set early in the session. The opening was weak at ¾c below yesterday's close. That was attributed to the failure of Liverpool to follow the advances on the American markets yesterday. The action of the boards on this side was thought over there to be speculative and unwarranted by supply conditions. Their figures came unchanged to 2d lower.

The more liberal clearances of wheat and flour today, given at 1,865,000 bu, had a bullish influence, that being taken to indicate that shipping conditions at the seaboard are becoming better and that more strenuous efforts are to be made to relieve the congestion at the seaboard. There is said, however, to be no betterment in the car supply situation. A few cars are being obtained daily, mainly for the moving of bonded wheat and oats, but all-rail forwardings of wheat and oats to the seaboard are nominal.

Receipts of wheat are light at this point, amounting to only 32 cars today, just 14 less than a year ago. At Minneapolis they had 303 cars against 131 last year. The movement is good up in the Canadian West, as shown in receipts of 832 cars at Winnipeg today against 335 last year. Bonded receipts of wheat and oats continue in liberal volume, Canadian wheat arrivals here amounting to 121 cars today.

May wheat opened ⅝c off at $1.11¼, weakened fractionally more and then moved up to $1.12¼ at the noon hour. July opened ¾c off at $1.11⅞, advanced to $1.13¼, and then eased off to $1.12¾.

Quotations in durum were in fair volume and its markets followed about the same course as spring wheat. May durum opened ½c off at $1.05½, advanced to $1.07 and later eased off ⅝c. July opened unchanged at $1.07, and gained ⅜c more.

Flax Moves Up.

Flaxseed prices recovered substantially on good buying by crushers at the low spots, while holders became more bullish in their views. Receipts, furthermore, were light at all the markets. The close was strong with a burst of buying.

May flax opened unchanged at $2.26½ and closed 2½c up at $2.29 bid.

July opened unchanged at $2.26½ and closed 2½c up at $2.29 asked.

At Winnipeg, May flax closed 2¼c up at $2.08¼.

At Buenos Aires, flax closed ⅝c off at $1.35⅝, and London ⅞c off at $2.69⅜.

MARKET GOSSIP.

A more active demand for good wheat developed on the Duluth market today. In view of the light receipts, millers were in the market for any nice milling grain offering. Cash No. 1 northern wheat sold at from ½c under to 2c over the May price. Cash No. 1 durum sold at ½c under the May figure. The lower grades were draggy.

Russell's News, New York, said: "There was no evidence of export buying of wheat early, but on the other hand no foreign selling was claimed, although one foreign house said that they had selling orders at a slightly higher level.

Estimated Argentine shipments of wheat this week are 2,800,000 bu; last week, 2,944,000 bu; last year, 5,128,000 bu; corn, 850,000 bu; last week, 969,000 bu; last year, 541,000 bu.

At Minneapolis some improvement in the cash wheat demand was reported by most handlers. Premiums were the same at ½ to 4c over May, and velvet chaff at ½ to 1½c. Millers said flour trade is dull. Open contracts are liberal but shipping directions light.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool: "Spot wheat was unchanged to 2d lower; cargoes weak, Manitobas 3d lower, winters and Plates and Australians 6d lower. The importers are not following it. Winters and Manitobas are freely offered at 3d decline from yesterday and Plates and at Australians 6d lower."

* * *

New York specialist wired: "I am friendly to oats. Canadian oats won't be available in any quantity for Eastern ports until early June. Freight rates are very high and boats are scarce. I think there will be urgent demand for our oats up to June 1 anyway."

CHICAGO MARKET.

Chicago, March 16.—Lower cable quotations had a bearish effect today on the wheat market here. It was said buyers were holding off at Liverpool and that Australian and Argentine offers were becoming larger. There were also favorable advices in regard to the harvest in India. Opening prices, which ranged from ⅛ to ⅝ to 1c lower with May at $1.09½ to $1.09¾, and July at $1.07¾ to $1.08¼, were followed by a rally but then another sag.

Subsequent Hessian fly reports from Northern Kansas led to an advance in prices. There were also many crop damage complaints from Ohio and other winter wheat states, including Nebraska. The close was steady, ¼c to 1⅛c net higher, with May at $1.11⅜ and July at $1.09⅜@1.09½.

Corn developed strength owing to the absence of any decided pressure to sell. At first, however, the market tended to ease off with wheat. After opening ¼ to ¼@⅜c lower, prices rose to well above yesterday's finish.

The market receded later in consequence of profit taking by holders. The close was unsettled at ⅛@⅜c to ⅝@½c net advance.

Oats continued to show independent firmness. The reason was the outlook for heavy shipments soon from Chicago.

Moderate buying of lard gave a lift to the provision market as a whole. The demand for lard appeared to be of a speculative character.

RECESSIONS IN STOCKS

Selling for Profits Produces Declines in the Final Hour.

Canadian Pacific Weak on Reports of New Dominion Loan.

New York, March 16.—Vigorous buying of various stocks imparted a strong tone to the market at today's opening. Such issues as United States Steel, Mexican Petroleum, Westinghouse and Inspiration Copper were offered in lots of 1,000 to 4,500 shares and freely absorbed on a rising scale of values. Mexicans were among the foremost issues, the oils and American Smelting rising 1 to 2½ points with like gains for Crucible Steel and American Zinc. Reading again assumed leadership of the rails, gaining a point, while Western Maryland rose 1¼. Crucible soon extended its gain to 5 points.

Activity prevailed throughout the first hour in the stock market today, sales again exceeding 300,000 shares. Prices of leading stocks, especially rails, shaded soon after the opening on selling precipitated by news of another marine disaster in the foreign war zone, but strengthened again as buying was resumed. Crucible led the list, extending its rise to six points, and other prominent issues included United States Steel, which rose to 87¼, its top price for the current movement, Mexican Petroleum and Baldwin and American Locomotives. Numerous specialties were higher by 1 to 5 points, but rails continued backward, with heaviness in Canadian Pacific. Bonds were irregular.

Canadian Pacific's weakness, attributed to announcement of a loan to the dominion government, caused another moderate waterfall in prices. This was offset in part by strength in motors and Bethlehem Steel, the latter gaining 10 points.

Selling for profits caused substantial recessions in the final hour, particularly in Mexican Petroleum and Crucible. The close was irregular.

—TALK TO GILIUSON—

He will put you wise to a great many things you should know in selecting a piano. Do not be deceived by misleading advertisements, offering something for nothing. Remember, it is characteristic with some firm to have a so-called piano sales, advertising big discounts, made possible only by inflating the original prices.

There are no such methods used in selling the Raudenbush piano, which is sold direct to the public (by the manufacturers) at an actual saving of at least $100. If this statement is hard to believe, call and investigate.

GERMANS MAKE FIVE VIOLENT ATTACKS ON FRENCH NEAR VAUX; ALL ARE REPULSED, SAYS PARIS

DESPERATE ASSAULTS BY INFANTRY

Every Onslaught Broken By Heavy Fire of Machine Guns.

Bombardment Diminishing to the West of the Meuse.

Berlin Reports Repulse of Two Attacks By the French.

Paris, March 17, noon.—Important infantry assaults on the French lines east of Verdun were made by the Germans during the night. Five successive onslaughts in force were repulsed by the French.

The Germans have not yet resumed their activity against the French positions at Mort Homme. Artillery exchanges in the Woevre district continue, but otherwise there is nothing of importance to report.

The foregoing information is contained in the French official communication on the progress of hostilities given out by the French war office this afternoon. The report follows:

"To the west of the Meuse the bombardment diminished last night in the region of Bethincourt and Cumieres. After the bloody check to the attack of yesterday the enemy has not resumed his movement on Mort Homme.

Violent Offensive Actions.

"To the east of the Meuse a recrudescence of the bombardment was followed at 8 o'clock last night by series of very violent offensive actions directed against our positions at the village and the fort of Vaux.

"Five successive attacks in large numbers were delivered by the Germans in this region but without success. Two of them were against the village of Vaux; two others against the slopes leading up to the fort and the fifth was an effort to emerge from a protected roadway to the southeast of the village of Vaux.

"Everyone of these attacks was broken by our curtains of fire and the

RUSSIANS SHOWING INCREASED ACTIVITY

Attacks By Muscovites Reported to Have Been Repulsed By Austrians.

Berlin, March 17, via wireless to Sayville.—Increased activity on the Russion front is reported in the official Austrian communication of yesterday as received today. The statement follows:

"On the fronts of the armies of Generals Pflanger, Baltin and Boehm-Armolli there was increased activity by the artillery on both sides. Russian attacks northeast of Kozlov, on the Stripa, were repulsed.

"Italian attacks on the Isonzo front decreased in violence. Two attempts to advance against the Podgora position by strong Italian forces were impeded by artillery fire. An Italian attack on the northern slope of San Michele was repulsed with sanguinary losses for the assailants.

"At many places there were artillery duels during the night. On the Carinthian front there is artillery fire in the Fella sector."

WILL GO TO LIMITS SET

Announced Submarine Warfare Not to Be Abandoned By Germany.

Indiscriminate Torpedoing Will Not Be Allowed By Admiralty.

Berlin, March 17, via London.—German officials repeat the statement that submarine warfare will go on in the limits set by the German memorandum to neutral powers of last month, but that the demands of those who wished to see the indiscriminate torpedoing of "whatever comes in front of the torpedo tubes," to use the expression of one of those who advocate this policy, will not be fulfilled.

This is also the deduction which those acquainted with the situation declare can be drawn from the resignation of Admiral von Tirpitz, which was foreshadowed a few days ago by the reports of his illness. The conclusion is said to be strengthened by the fact that Admiral von Capelle has been chosen as the new minister. He is known merely as an excellent ad-

ECONOMY IS NECESSARY

German Imperial Treasurer Helfferich So Informs the Reichstag.

Declares Framing of Budget Must Be Done With Care.

Berlin, March 17, by wireless to Sayville, N. Y.—Dr. Karl Helfferich, secretary of the imperial treasury, introduced in the reichstag yesterday the budget proposals and bills for new war taxes. Dr. Helfferich insisted upon the necessity of rigid economy in framing the budget, saying:

"We shall put on the brakes wherever we can."

Dr. Helfferich said it was essential to make adequate provisions for war requirements in the way of loans.

"This is not red tape," he said. "It is nothing but duty and foresight for a coming day."

The secretary pointed out that an increase in revenue by taxation was necessary, although he said every German expected peace would bring financial advantages. After stating that war expenses were not included in the budget he referred to the fact that the influence of the war was noticeable in the increase of interest on the public debt which was 1,268,000,000 marks last year, and is now 2,303,000,000 marks. He said the budget showed a deficit of 480,000,000 marks, which was to be covered by new war taxes.

Takes Exception to Statement.

Dr. Helfferich took exception to statements that he had said no new taxes were contemplated during the war. As a matter of fact he had said new taxes should be avoided as long

WILL INVESTIGATE SINKING OF LINER

American Consuls Ordered to Report on Loss of Tubantia.

Washington, March 17.—American consuls in Holland have been instructed to investigate the sinking of the Dutch liner Tubantia with Americans aboard, said to have been torpedoed.

Consular agents at Gibraltar and Lisbon have been instructed to investigate the reported unsuccessful attempt to torpedo the French liner Patria.

May Have Been Some Casualties.

London, March 17.—According to latest reports there were undoubtedly some casualties as a result of the disaster to the Holland-Lloyd passenger steamship Tubantia yesterday, says a Reuter dispatch from Flushing. Men from the crew who have been landed by Dutch torpedo boats say that the vessel was struck amidships in dense darkness owing to a mist on the high sea. The explosion was so terrific that some of the lifeboats on deck were shattered.

The Dutch admiralty states that 377 survivors from the Tubantia have arrived in Holland while the revised lists of the steamship company show there were 381 persons aboard, according to a Reuter dispatch from The Hague.

Thinks Ship Struck Mine.

London, March 17.—A Reuter dispatch from Amsterdam says:

"Richard Schilling, the American consul, who, with his wife and daughter arrived here this morning with other survivors of the Tubantia, expressed the opinion that the liner struck a mine. The steamer, he said, soon came to a standstill after being struck and almost immediately heeled over. The passengers and crew rushed on deck, leaving all their belongings behind and consequently lost all their baggage.

"Mr. Schilling had heard that some persons on board had lost their lives, but the correspondent was unable to obtain any confirmation of this."

LYNCH MEN TO CONTROL DELEGATION

Have Elected Fourteen District Delegates and Two at Large.

Just and Weiss Are Defeated By King and Austin.

Manahan Appears to Be Chosen on the Republican List.

St. Paul, Minn., March 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Returns from 1901 precincts in the state, the Twin Cities and Duluth included, show that in Tuesday's presidential primary, Cummins received about five votes to Estabrook's one for presidential preference, and that Sulzer is considerably ahead of Foss in the Prohibition presidential preference. Former Governor Eberhart, Former Governor Van Sant and J. F. Jacobson are elected as delegates-at-large to the Republican national convention, while James Manahan is next highest and probably elected, with O. J. Larson of Duluth about 2,700 behind him.

In the Democratic list it would seem that the delegates-at-large elected are Daniel W. Lawler, B. F. Nelson, Z. H. Austin and C. M. King, Mr. King running second to Mr. Lawler. Lawler and Nelson are Lynch men, and Austin and King anti-Lynch.

Of the twenty district delegates elected fourteen are friends of Fred B. Lynch and six are anti-Lynch. With the delegates-at-large the delegation

EVIDENCES OF EXTRAVAGANCE

Public Examiner's Report on Hibbing Affairs Is Forecast.

St. Paul, Minn., March 17.—The Dispatch says: "Startling evidences of extravagances in city administration will be revealed, it is said, in the coming report of Andrew E. Fritz, public examiner on the examination he has been conducting the past six months on the books of Hibbing, 'the wealthiest village in the world.'

"That high prices had been paid by the village for its supplies, which were away above those quoted on the market, was said to be true at the Capitol today.

"The examination at Hibbing, which was requested by freeholders, is one of the most thorough ever made by the office of the public examiner."

ARMY DEFENSE BILL IS BEFORE HOUSE

Final Vote on Measure May Be Reached Saturday Night.

Washington, March 17.—Under a rule limiting general debate to ten hours, the house today began considering the army bill, the most extensive proposal for increasing the military establishment ever laid before it in peace times. If possible a final vote will be reached tomorrow night.

Forty speakers have asked for time. Republicans and Democrats were equally represented on the list and all were expected to favor a wide degree of national preparedness whatever their attitude might be on the committee bill.

Chairman Hay, of the military committee and Representative Kahn, ranking Republican member, apportioned the ten hours equally. No general opposition was in evidence.

Speaker Clark, who will deliver an address in support of the measure, surrendered the chair to Republican Garrett of Tennessee, at the beginning of the debate.

Representative Gordon, Democrat of Ohio, led off for the bill. He had been listed as an anti-preparedness man but explained today that his opposition was only to a great standing army.

RECRUITING MEASURE SIGNED BY PRESIDENT

Washington, March 17.—President Wilson today signed the joint congressional resolution authorizing the increase of the standing army to its full strength of approximately 120,000 men.

LOSS OF FINE STEAMER STIRS DEEP FEELING OF RESENTMENT IN HOLLAND

Paper Calls Attention to Continued "Mistakes" By Submarines.

Says Germany May Find Herself in Conflict With Neutrals.

Tubantia Pride of Fleet and Hard to Replace Its Loss.

The Hague, Netherlands, March 17, via London.—The loss of one of Holland's finest steamships has stirred the country deeply. The sinking of Tubantia, valued at $1,600,000, and insured for $1,240,000, means loss of valuable cargo space not easily replaceable.

The opinion accredited to the captain that the Tubantia was torpedoed adds to the feeling of resentment aroused by the disaster. The Vaderland calls attention to the fact that the vessel was sunk at almost the same time that announcement was made of the resignation of Admiral von Tirpitz as German minister of marine and of the statement that his successor would continue submarine warfare without abatement.

"Mistakes" Increasing.

This newspaper refers to the cases of the Dutch steamships Katwyk, Artemis and Bandoeng, sunk or damaged as a result of German "mistakes" and says that if the Tubantia was sunk by a German submarine there will be increasing danger that Germany, against her wishes, may find herself in conflict with neutral states on account of the conduct of her submarine commanders. The Vaderland voices the hope that the change in leadership of the German marine ministry will be utilized as an opportunity for issuing more binding rules to submarine commanders.

The Nieuwe Courant says:

"Is this von Tirpitz's farewell greeting to friendly Holland? Germany

ARGO STRIKE NOW IN HANDS OF A. F. OF L.

Will Support Men Financially and Morally and Carry on Fight.

Chicago, March 17.—The American Federation of Labor today assumed the direction of the strike of the employes of the Corn Products Refining company at Argo. Emmet Flood, state organizer for the federation, said the labor body would support the men financially and morally and would see that they were organized to carry on the strike for months if necessary.

Armed guards continued to patrol the plant this morning but few strikers were about. The strikers plan to form a union today.

Killed in Auto Wreck.

Sioux City, Iowa, March 17.—Louis D. Albers of Vermillion, S. D., 34 years old, was killed and Andrew Anderson, 25, of Spirit Mound, S. D., probably fatally injured last night in an automobile accident near Elk Point, S. D.

MOVEMENTS SURROUNDED BY SECRECY

Thought Mounted Men May Have Crossed Long Before Infantry.

Junction of Two Columns May Be Made in Casas Grandes.

Reports That Mexican Snipers Shot at Troops Is Unverified.

El Paso, Tex., March 17.—A few definite facts about the American expedition into Mexico today stood out with considerable clearness, as the result of official published reports and the news brought here by Americans who have been in touch with some portion of the American movement.

It seemed certain that of the two columns which are "somewhere in Mexico," one was constituted for speed, while the other apparently was moving more slowly. The swift-footed column was the auxiliary army, seemingly mostly cavalry, which went into Mexico fifty miles west of the main army of Gen. J. J. Pershing when his forces crossed at Columbus, N. M.

The secrecy which has surrounded the movements of the main column has been slight compared with that of this western force. There is reason to believe, from the official announcements, that the western column may have gone into Mexico earlier than the main body. Every report arriving here from the border asserts that the western wing has traveled farthest. By these same reports the two columns will form a junction near the threatened American Mormon colonists, possibly in the Casas Grandes region.

Sniper Reports Unverified.

Reports that snipers had shot at the troops remained unverified today. However, sniping and even the possible killing or wounding of a few American soldiers by these long range marksmen was not regarded here as an indication that the American army's march up to date was otherwise than a peaceful expedition so far as the majority of the Mexican people are concerned.

Carranza officials, it was learned today, have been discussing with some concern whether American troops during the Villa pursuit would have to occupy any Mexican cities and the ef-

GRENADES EXPLODE; TWENTY-FOUR DEAD

Fourteen Carranza Soldiers Among Killed at Monerey, Mex.

Laredo, Tex., March 17.—Fourteen Carranza soldiers and ten civilians were killed in an explosion of a carload of grenades and artillery ammunition in the yards of the National Railroad lines at Monterey, Mex., last Tuesday, according to passengers reaching here today from Monterey. The news was suppressed by the Carranza authorities because of the tension existing between the United States and Mexico.

Several were injured. All the dead and injured were Mexicans. Immediately after the explosion a mountainous cloud of smoke spread over the city and the cry "The Americans have arrived!" rang throughout the poorer section. When the smoke cleared away it was found that besides the twenty-four dead, a hundred yards of railroad track had been torn up, window panes shattered and other minor damage done for a radius of a half mile.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY IN MEXICO.

SUMMARY OF THE WAR NEWS

The German drive at the Verdun defenses has again shifted its direction. Strong assaults were made by the Germans on the lines east of Verdun during the night, five successive assaults in the Vaux region being repulsed by the French, Paris announces today.

The German attacks were of the most violent character, but each was broken up by the French curtain of fire, the Paris war office declares. Both the fort and the village of Vaux were objectives of the Germans, two attacks being made on each, while a fifth was delivered in an effort by the Germans to debouch from a protected roadway southeast of Vaux village.

The heavy fighting in the past few days has been to the northwest of the fortress, and only last night Paris reported massed attacks by the Germans, who drove at the French position at Dead Man's hill, only to be forced back eastward toward the Corbeaux woods, suffering heavy losses. Although a bombardment has been continued in this region, the infantry attacks have not been renewed.

Important operations may be developing along the southern part of the Russian front, as Vienna reports increasing activity by the artillery on both sides. In Galicia the Russians have attacked along the Stripa, but without success, the Austrian war office declares.

The Italian offensive along the Isonzo is commanding increasing attention, although Vienna's latest report on the situation declares the attacks on the Austrian lines have decreased in violence. The current statement by the Rome war office records counter-attacks by the Austrians on positions newly won by the Italians. These are declared to have been repulsed.

There were probably some casualties in the sinking of the Dutch liner Tubantia off the Dutch coast yesterday by a mine or torpedo, according to dispatches from Dutch sources.

The German official bulletin today does not mention the fighting east of the Meuse in the Verdun region. It reports, however, two attacks by the French on "our positions on Dead Man's height," possession of which now is apparently claimed by both sides.

Both of the French attacks, one of which was a surprise affair without artillery preparation, are declared to have been unsuccessful.

PROUD OF HYPHEN; IRISH REAFFIRM THEIR FEALTY

Irish Fellowship Club Holds Annual St. Patrick's Day Banquet.

D. W. Lawler and Others Speak on Patriotism and Citizenship.

Patriotism was the keynote of the program which followed the banquet of the Irish Fellowship club at the Spalding hotel last night, and the loyalty of Americans of foreign birth was lauded. That "hyhenated" Americans are as faithful to the Stars and Stripes as those who are native, was the repeated declaration of the speakers, and those who have sneered at the voluntary citizen came in for the reverse of encomiums from several.

Another feature of the speeches was the deprecation of the attitude of those Minnesota members of congress who failed to support the president in the recent vote of confidence in the house and senate, and the corresponding indorsement and praise given the senior senator, Knute Nelson, for his action in supporting the president and putting patriotism before party. Senator Nelson's name was cheered to the echo, and when Ray M. Hughes denounced the Minnesota members of congress who voted against the president, he was interrupted by a roar of applause.

About 500 Irishmen and Irish sympathizers partook of the banquet, which was served in the dining room on the fourth floor of the hotel, and greeted the speakers and rewarded their hits with enthusiasm. W. E. Culkin was toastmaster and introduced the speakers in happy vein. Those who gave addresses were Mayor W. I. Prince, Rev. Philip Kiley, Dr. Maurice Lefkovits, Ray M. Hughes and Daniel W. Lawler of St. Paul.

President Is Absent.

James Travers introduced the toastmaster in the absence of Frank J. Dacey, president of the club, who was unable to be present because of the severe illness of his father, James W. Dacey. At the suggestion of Mr. Travers a rising vote of sympathy for the club's president, and best wishes for his father, was given.

During the meal, Michaud's orchestra played an attractive program of American and Irish airs, and just before the speaking began, played with a dash, "The Rocky Road to Dublin," following that with "Yankee Doodle," and finished with "The Star Spangled Banner," which brought the audience to its feet. Interspersed through the toastlist were vocal numbers by Mrs. A. E. Deslauriers, Ollie Digness and Charles Young, all of whom sang well and who had chosen their songs with an eye to appropriateness. The singers were given most hearty applause, and all of them had to respond to encores.

Mayor Welcomes Lawler.

Mayor Prince, who opened the toastlist, gave an address of welcome to those from outside of the city, especially to Mr. Lawler, the speaker of the evening. He paid a tribute to Frank J. Dacey, the president of the club, as a fine example of the young business man. He also commended the name of the club, declaring that he likes the word "fellowship" in the title, for it spells broadness, sympathy and mutual regard.

"Patriotism and Peace," was the subject with which Father Kiley dealt. Those who attended the St. Patrick's day banquet of the club a year ago, and heard Father Kiley, expected a treat last night, and were not disappointed. He created a laugh on arising by saying that it is noteworthy that a priest could comfortably take part in this banquet without being afraid to take the soup, referring to the recent soup poisoning in Chicago, which proved near-fatal to an archbishop and a large number of other clergymen. He spoke of the war and the rumors of more war, and of the need of patriotism in such times. He declared that while defense is a noble thing and the willingness of the citizenry to defend the country is always fine, patriotism is not confined to martial things. He defined patriotism as "an untiring, consistent effort for the country's interests."

Better to Live For Country.

"It is a fine and noble thing to die for one's country," he said, "but it is a sweet and fitting thing to live for one's country. It takes a man to live. The patriotism of peace is far nobler than the patriotism of war. We need not go beyond the boundaries of our country to find its worst enemies."

He declared that two systems of philosophy extant in America, Socialism and anarchy, are evils that must be combatted.

Speaking of the mission of America, he declared that here is the place where idealism must be developed and given to the world.

"At the birth of this nation," said Father Kiley, "the angels of the old world endowed it with their best, and one angel in green presented it with the gift of idealism. And the patriotism of peace is the greatest of idealism. Your nationalism is endowed to this country and it behooves us all to fight every intellectual and moral evil. When these are conquered, we can, indeed, call this God's country."

Dr. Lefkovits, in opening his address, said that he was pleased at "the absence of spirits and the presence of plenty of spiritualism." He spoke of the occasion as his second birthday as an Irishman, referring to the fact that at the banquet a year ago, he was one of the speakers. He said that by his birth as an Irishman he had acquired a two-fold hyphen—Irish-American and Jewish-American. The rabbi proceeded to pay his respects to those who sneer at the American of foreign birth, and declared that the talk of hyphenated Americans comes from "prating politicians and prattling preachers." He asserted that the condemnation of hyphenated Americans is a gross exaggeration and mostly an absolute untruth.

May Love Two Lands.

"Why cannot one love the land of his birth and yet bear as great a love or a greater one for the country of his adoption?" he asked. "Does a man love his mother the less because he takes unto himself a wife?"

"Beware the demagogue," warned Dr. Lefkovits. "The worst enemies of the republic are the self-styled patriots who seek to stir up racial and religious antagonisms."

Dr. Lefkovits congratulated the association as Irish-Americans and declared that should the nation need help for defense, none will be found more devoted than the Irish-Americans, the Jewish-Americans and other hyphenated Americans.

"We love the flag," said he, "because its stars are as the dawn of light, its blue reflects the eternal skies and its crimson bars are reminiscent of the blood that has been spilled to establish and preserve it. If ever a call to arms for defense should come none would respond more promptly and willingly than the sons of Erin and the sons of Israel."

Irishmen as Americans.

Ray M. Hughes spoke on "The Irishman as an American," and repeatedly roused his auditors to cheers and enthusiastic applause. He traced the great Irish names that appear in history as commanders and heroes of the American wars of the revolution and of the rebellion and declared that the Irishmen have always been the truest of patriotic Americans.

"Why do Irish make good Americans?" asked Mr. Hughes. "Because they are by instinct patriots. What makes such men as Dan Lawler stand supreme? Their sterling patriotism and solid citizenship. Irishmen always stand ready to respond to the country's call. When she needs help in war or in peace you will find the Irish among the first to respond. When war calls, there are no Irish, for we are all Americans."

Mr. Hughes referred to the crisis the country is passing through at this time, and spoke of the request that President Wilson made to congress for a vote of confidence. He strongly condemned those who did not support the executive. That Mr. Hughes, a strong Republican in politics, should so feelingly and strenuously defend the president, was not lost on his auditors and he was cheered to the echo.

Shame for Minnesota.

"Minnesota should blush for shame," said he, "because of the attitude taken by her entire delegation to congress, with one single exception. Only grand old Knute Nelson, the foreigner, the hyphenated American, but the splendid patriot that he is, stood by the president, and put country ahead of his party. It is that quality of true and unmistakable patriotism and sterling citizenship that makes Senator Nelson the strong man he is with the people of this state and which makes him one of the big men of the United States senate."

In closing, Mr. Hughes spoke of the ideals of the Irish race and declared that such ideals are those that will win.

"Let us live," said he, "so that we can defend our principles with Old Glory over us, willing to die for the higher ideals of American citizenship, but also willing to live that we may enforce them."

Daniel W. Lawler of St. Paul, the chief speaker of the evening, took for his subject "American Citizenship." The hour was late when he was introduced and he curtailed his address somewhat, but filled his speech with stirring utterances and created great enthusiasm by his appeals for true patriotism.

Mr. Lawler's Narrow Escape.

Toastmaster Culkin, in introducing Mr. Lawler, said that had it not been for the antics of another great Minnesota Irishman, Ignatius Donnelly, in 1890, he would be introducing Former Governor Lawler.

"But I have the pleasure and the privilege," said Mr. Culkin, "to introduce to you a great American and a great Minnesotan."

Mr. Lawler said that his subject is one that always appeals to him, and should appeal most strongly to the Irish heart.

"The splendid characteristics of your race," said he, "are love for religious liberty and free education. In this grand country of ours, you have both. Nobody can appreciate these privileges better than those who are before me tonight. No family of the children of men have suffered more for liberty than have the Irish people. Religious liberty and free education are trite principles today, but were startling a century ago, and even then the Irish people were striving for them.

"No race is immensely superior to another, but the first generation born beneath our flag gain in character and citizenship.

"We are steadily improving in every way. Witness, for instance, the partisanship of a generation ago to the partisanship of today. Then partisans were personal enemies; today they are opponents only in the matter of the principles which they believe best. It is simply a difference of opinion with no enmity mixed in.

Must Be Sincere and True.

"Americans care nothing about a man's religious affiliations, but he must be sincere and true. Prejudice is not representative of the spirit of the people. Personally, I have been honored beyond my deserts in spite of my religious affiliation."

Mr. Lawler spoke of the strain that citizens of different nationalities are put to in these days of war, but declared that there has been, as yet, no breach in American citizenship.

"There can be no such thing as neutrality," he declared, "but we can be neutral in the exercise of the supreme law of brotherly love, and in refraining in act and thought from stigmatizing others; for that is unjust.

"In Minnesota today, 25 per cent of the population is Teutonic. Their forebears were true to the flag before which you and I make obeisance tonight, and they will be true if need be. Knute Nelson, the hyphenated American, carried a musket in the Civil war, and he is true to America today by supporting her president in these trying times, without regard to party affiliation. The first United States senator from Minnesota was James Shields, an Irish-American, and he proved his worth and his love for his adopted country."

Spaking of the war and the fact that America has, so far, been saved from taking part in it, he said:

"Why are we saved from this awful holocaust? I believe it is to find and keep that perfect liberty which God has intended for man. We know that never before this country was created, was there an arena of humanity where men are judged only by their achievements. Because we know this and because our fathers and mothers took part in all the rugged fields of war and peace, we proudly hail ourselves as hyphenated Americans, Irish-Americans on this day of our patron saint; and thank God that we are Americans, and pledge our lives to the nation."

FRENCH MINISTER OF WAR RESIGNS

Gen. Gallieni Retires on Account of Ill Health; Succeeded By Roques.

Paris, March 17.—Gen. Joseph Simeon Gallieni, minister of war, has resigned because of ill health, and Gen. Charles Roques has been appointed to succeed him.

Gen. Gallieni sent his resignation to Premier Briand in a letter dated Versailles, March 16, a translation of which follows:

"Mr. Premier: As I explained to you last week my strength, which I have devoted exclusively and uninterruptedly to the service of the country, now fails me. The doctors consider that I am not at present in a condition to perform with the necessary activity the duties of the high office entrusted to me. They declare that to make it possible for me to resume active work a complete and lengthy rest and careful treatment are indispensable. I therefore ask you to accept my res'gnation as minister of war. With great respect, sincerely yours,"

"GALLIENI."

M. Briand replied under date of Paris, March 16:

"My Dear General: I can only acknowledge the receipt of your resignation and at the same time express to you the grief with which I receive it, a grief which is shared by all your colleagues in the ministry. I wish to tell you how much I regret that the state of your health should deprive the government of services so precious in the work of national defense. I hope that, cured of the illness which for the moment forces you to forego active work, you may be able soon again to take a prominent place in the service of the country. Believe me, my dear general, sincerely yours,"

"ARISTIDE BRIAND."

Gen. Pierre Auguste Roques, whose appointment as minister of war in succession to Gen. Gallieni was announced yesterday, is best known for his work as inspector general of aeronautics. He occupied this position from 1910 to 1912, at a time when the military importance of aviation was beginning to be realized fully.

The efficiency shown by this arm of the French service during the war is due largely to the sound organization built up by Gen. Roques. Like Gen. Joffre, the commander-in-chief, the new minister of war is an engineer and like him he is a southerner, having been born in Marseillan, department of Herault, on Dec. 28, 1856.

ENGLISH WOMEN URGED TO SAVE

Economy in Dress Is Suggested as Part of Retrenchment.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

London, March 1.—Women usually spend more money than men and therefore have much greater opportunities for retrenchment than men, according to the arguments advanced by the government and its supporters in the general campaign for economy now being renewed throughout England.

One of their best arguments is to point to the recent statement of a great English economist, who decried the changing fashions during the war. "In the middle of the big war," he declared, "the whole womankind of our country got out of tight skirts into full skirts at enormous expense in the twinkling of an eye. It does not cost as much to change ten clerks from civilian attire to khaki as it costs to change the outward semblance of one fashionable woman."

Women are urged to wear one-color suits which will give them the appearance of being smartly dressed and which will bear critical inspection for a longer period.

GREAT GARDENING WORK IN GERMANY

Campaign of 1915 Is to Be Duplicated During This Year.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

Berlin, Feb. 20.—Everything indicates that the great home gardening campaign of 1915 is to be duplicated this year, but on an even more extensive scale. Seedsmen report that people began to buy garden seeds with a rush in January, and the buying is now proceeding at a rate never before known. The great dealers at Erfurt, where the seed industry has its center, are answering mail orders with printed postcards begging customers to be patient till they can fill the orders.

The strictest care is being taken that seeds be bought only for bona fide purposes. An American in Berlin, the owner of a small garden, ordered seed potatoes from Erfurt, and was surprised a week later to receive from a dealer a blank form on which the police were to certify to the fact that he owned a garden and was therefore entitled to buy seed potatoes. Otherwise he might have eaten seed potatoes that cost threefold more than ordinary ones.

The imperial government, which had taken no action last year for the encouragement of vegetable growing, has now established a special bureau at Berlin for that purpose. It has appointed a horticultural expert to take charge of it and to inaugurate and conduct a country-wide campaign for the increase of vegetable production. His plan of operations embraces practical measures of help, besides mere propaganda. All available lands about cities, factory sites and elsewhere will be put into vegetables and properly cultivated. The superintendent of gardening is communicating with the various economic war organizations to induce them to look after supplies of manure for the armies of volunteer gardeners thus to be called into the field; the waste from slaughter houses and cold storage plants, and the sweepings from the streets are to be turned over to them at a very low cost.

Not only will vegetables be grown in greater quantities than ever before, but the preserving of them will be on a larger scale than ever known. The fifty-two canning and preserving factories at Brunswick (the center of the industry) put up about 200,000,000 cans of vegetables from last year's crop, as compared with 70,000,000 cans for 1914.

During these five months 400 new members have been placed on the books, sixty during last month, and juvenile members have drawn as many nonfiction books as fiction.

HEMLOCK BARK SOARS.

Prediction of $15 Per Cord Before Long Is Made.

Oshkosh, Wis., March 17.—Advices to the offices of the Northern Hemlock & Hardwood Manufacturers' association on Wednesday indicate that prices of hemlock bark are rising rapidly and promise even higher figures. Prices of late have risen to $11 and $12 per cord, while there is talk of sales in the neighborhood of $13 for immediate delivery, lower prices being quoted for fall delivery. Some manufacturers think that by next winter the price will be up to nearly $15, especially in the Upper peninsula, where the heaviest part of the cut is produced. The hemlock manufacturers are rejoicing in this increase for the by-product of their forest operations, for it will it possible for lumbermen to secure profit on their product without increasing the prices of the manufactured lumber. The great effort of the lumber manufacturers has been to keep hemlock prices down and reinstate this timber in Wisconsin markets, where it has been driven out partially by competing woods.

IDLE WORKMEN IN FRANCE DECREASED

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

Paris, March 1.—Official figures just given out by the department of labor inspection show a revival of industry and a decrease in the number of idle workmen in France. More than half of the industrial and commercial establishments of the country closed at the beginning of the war, when an average of 24 per cent of the workmen were called to the colors. Forty-two per cent were thrown out of employment by the closing of the establishments, leaving only 34 per cent continuing to earn their wages. In about 50,000 establishments inspected, 1,700,000 workmen were employed in time of peace. The figures fell to one-third of that number in August, 1915, then increased progressively to 1,300,000 in January of this year, which is 77 per cent of the normal. Taking into account the 24 per cent mobilized, there are actually employed now in French industries 1 per cent more workmen than before the war.

These figures would seem incompatible with the fact that many industries are still closed, but it is explained that, though building industries and a few others have less work since the war began, other industries have more.

It cost the government 3,784,000 francs to support idle workmen in Paris alone during the second half of January, 1915. In the second half of January, 1916, this allowance had fallen to 1,524,000 francs. In some other cities the number of people out of employment has been reduced to 10 per cent.

Excepting among such employes as garment workers in Paris and kindred industries, all wages are higher, according to the official figures.

GERMAN POWER IN KAMERUM IS ENDED

Only One Isolated Mountain Outpost Remains of the Army.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

Capetown, Union of South Africa, Feb. 5.—Only one isolated mountain outpost consisting of a company of native troops and four German officers, remains of the German army in Kamerun. This outpost is at Mora, on an almost inaccessible height which forms one of the most northerly spurs of the Mandara range in the far north of the country. From its high fortressed position, this German garrison looks down on the plains, several thousand feet below, stretching northward toward Lake Chad. For a year and a half the imprisoned garrison has been blockaded by British and French forces and cut off from the outer world.

Today they represent all that is left of German power in Kamerun. The remainder of the German forces of a colony which has an area larger than that of Germany, Denmark, Holland, and Belgium taken together and a population of over 3,500,000, have been killed, captured by the Allied forces, or driven into Spanish territory, whence they are being collected by the Spanish government for internment either in Spain or in the Spanish island of Fernando Po.

The great colony thus wrested from the Germans represents thirty years of steady work and expenditure. It is estimated that in the Victoria and Buea districts alone more than $5,000,000 has been spent on the development of cocoa, rubber and other tropical products. The vast forests of the south abound in wild rubber, which was exported to Germany mainly from Kribi. The total external trade of the colony in 1912 amounted to $15,000,000 of which 90 per cent went to Germany.

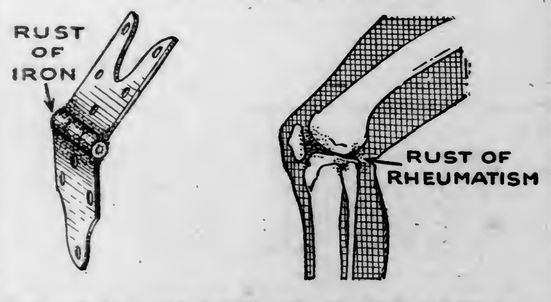
DRINK HOT WATER AND RID JOINTS OF RHEUMATIC RUST

Why rheumatism and lumbago sufferers should drink phosphated hot water each morning before breakfast



Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken day after day leaves in the alimentary canal a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not completely eliminated each day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels. From this mass of left-over waste material, toxins and ptomaine-like poisons, called uric acid, is formed and then sucked into the blood where it continues to circulate, collecting grain by grain in the joints of the body much like rust collects on the hinge as shown above.

Men and women who suffer from lumbago, rheumatism or sore, stiff, aching joints should begin drinking phosphated hot water, not as a means to magic relief from pain, but to prevent more uric acid forming in the system. Before eating breakfast each morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will first neutralize and then wash out of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's accumulation of toxins and poisons; thus, cleansing, sweetening, and freshening the entire alimentary canal, each morning, before putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to make any rheumatic or lumbago sufferer an enthusiast on the morning inside bath.

Millions of people keep their joints free from these rheumatic acids by practicing this daily internal sanitation. A glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate, drank before breakfast, is wonderfully invigorating; besides, it is an excellent health measure because it cleanses the alimentary organs of all the waste, gases and sour fermentations, making one look and feel clean, sweet and fresh all day.

Those who try this for one week may find themselves free from sick headaches, constipation, billous attacks, sallowness, nasty breath and stomach acidity. —Advertisement.

GREAT GAINS IN U. S. STEEL

Activities Set New Record With Business Volume of $486,352,054.

Increase for Year Is 27.9 Per Cent; Vast Gains in Mining Also.

New York, March 17.—The fourteenth annual report of the United States Steel corporation, covering operations for 1915, was issued yesterday and disclosed with much detail the remarkable recovery of the steel and iron industry from its low state during the preceding year and the first quarter of 1915 to the highest level of activity and prosperity ever known. One of the most impressive features of the report is the item recording the corporation's total volume of business at $486,352,054, against $380,228,143 in 1914. This increase of $106,123,911 represents a gain of 27.9 per cent. Of the total amount gained, domestic business showed an increase of 15.9 per cent and export business 122.4 per cent.

Earnings of $140,250,066 show an increase of $58,503,548 over 1914 and balance of earnings less interest on outstanding bonds and mortgages of subsidiary companies, is increased $58,732,396.

A net income of $97,967,962 is a gain of $51,447,555, and the balance, after interest payments on all classes of outstanding bonds is greater by $52,337,064.

Surplus net income amounting to $44,260,374 replaces a deficit in the previous year of $16,971,984, an actual gain of $61,231,286. Total undivided surplus on Dec. 31, 1915, exclusive of profits earned by subsidiary companies on inter-company sales aggregated $180,025,329, against $135,204,472, in 1914.

Ordinary maintenance, renewals and extraordinary replacements amounted to $43,366,643, or about $2,000,000 the preceding year.

Iron ore mined in 1915 totaled 23,669,676 tons, an increase of 38.95 per cent; coke manufactured aggregated 11,173,914 tons, an increase of 29.77 per cent, blast furnace production increased from 10,052,557, to 13,641,508 tons, and steel ingots from 11,826,476 to 16,376,492 tons.

The average number of employes totaled 191,126, against 179,353, and total salaries and wages amounted to $176,800,864, against $162,379,967.

The average daily salary or wage per employe was $2.92, an increase of 4 cents.

"The improvement in the demand for iron and steel products," says Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board, "which became evident before the middle of 1915, continued increasing throughout the remainders of the year, both for domestic and the export trade. Until the latter part of the year, however, the advances in the prices received for domestic business were moderate and the average selling prices received for the year were only slightly more than those for the preceding year. In the closing months of the year, the demand for products from the domestic trade for future delivery exceeded the producing capacity of the country and caused price advances. The demand for products for export was the largest for any year in the history of the corporation."

Why Tolerate Catarrh?

You have noticed, no doubt, that any cold aggravates nasal catarrh, and the flow of mucous amazes you that such objectionable matter could find lodgment in your head. To ignore this catarrh when the cold subsides is wrong because it continues to slowly injure the delicate linings of the nasal passages and clog them up.

To correct catarrh, cleanse the nostrils frequently with a solution of warm water and salt, insert vaseline on retiring, and take a spoonful of Scott's Emulsion after meals for one month. Scott's acts through the blood to feed the tissues, and contains soothing glycerine to check the inflammation and heal the sensitive membranes.

Scott's is pleasant to take.

GLASSMAKERS MAY MEET IN DULUTH

Efforts Are Being Made to Bring National Convention Here.

Duluth may become the Mecca for delegates attending the annual convention of the Window Glass Manufacturers' association, to be held about the end of July.

T. J. Nixon received a letter from Pittsburgh yesterday intimating that Duluth might obtain the convention if the business interests here instituted a campaign for it. Mr. Nixon immediately brought the subject to the attention of the Rotary club, and it was voted to appoint a committee of three to co-operate with him in gathering data that would likely prove a factor in bringing the convention to Duluth.

Delegates to the Glass Manufacturers' association convention come principally from Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Kansas and Oklahoma, the states in which the fifty or sixty glass manufacturers of the country are located. In addition to the manufacturers, retail distributers usually attend the three days' convention, bringing the average number in attendance up to around fifty persons. J. H. Brewster, vice president of the association, and J. R. Johnson, secretary-treasurer, have, it is understood, offered their support in the event of Duluth making a determined bid for the convention.

Hotel facilities in Duluth are more than ample to handle the crowd, Mr. Nixon pointed out, and furthermore the lake trip up here during the sweltering July weather, should in his opinion be an inducement to bring the delegates here.

Col. H. W. Eva, secretary of the Commercial club, expressed gratification over the prospects of landing the convention for Duluth, and he urged carrying through a systematic campaign to obtain it.

The committee will gather data to forward to the executive committee of the association. It will probably include an invitation from the different business groups and from prominent business men of the city.

CONDITIONS ARE UNSATISFACTORY

Serious Depression in Business in the Danish West Indies.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

St. Thomas, Danish West Indies, Feb. 25.—The report that the Danish government might reopen the old question of the sale of the Danish West Indies to the United States has attracted attention to the industrial and economic conditions here at the present time. In answer to inquiries from the United States it may be said that the conditions are most unsatisfactory both on this island, and the island of St. Croix.

There is a serious depression in trade and scarcely any money in circulation in St. Thomas. This is chiefly due to the European war and the closing of the Panama canal. The chief industry of the island has always been the supplying of coal and water and other necessities to ships, but this is now practically at a standstill, particularly because of the suspension of the steamship service of the Hamburg-American line. This company gave employment to a large number of laborers and others, the majority of whom have had to emigrate to Santa Domingo or other agricultural islands in order to make a livelihood. In fact it is felt now that the Hamburg-American line has, more than was heretofore realized, been the main support of the island, disbursing a large sum of money annually. It is only recently that there was completed here an extensive system of harbor works, with an up-to-date dock and all modern appliances such as electrical coal cranes, warehouses and oil tanks, and with the opening of the Panama canal it was expected that a great trade would develop here. But the slides in the canal have prevented these hopes from being realized.

There are no serious labor troubles nor real signs of distress, however, and the people are living in hopes that with the reopening of the canal and the cessation of the war, conditions will rapidly improve.

On the island of St. Croix the strike which paralyzed the sugar industry has been a serious matter. The island, very much more so than St. Thomas, is agricultural, and this year's production of sugar and rum promises to be exceptional. Following the formation of a labor union, the laborers on the sugar estates contended that with the increased prices for sugar they should be paid more wages, but this was refused by the planters. When the strike began, thousands of the workers were turned off the estates, and flocked, with personal belongings, to the towns of Fredericksted and Christiansted, where, for the past month, they have been living in tents and thatched houses, and school buildings.

Notwithstanding the unsettled conditions, there have been few disorders, except for a small amount of suspected incendiarism.

The government has recently passed several bills looking to the improvement of the laborers of both islands, including the parceling out among them of small lots of land under certain conditions. If these measures are carried out they should improve the situation greatly.

Shortly after the foregoing was mailed from St. Thomas, cable dispatches announced the settlement of the sugar strike, the laborers winning a small increase in wages.

PHENOMENAL HEAT WAVE IN ARGENTINA

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

Buenos Aires, Feb. 10.—Argentine is experiencing a phenomenal heat wave that has caused an enormous mortality among livestock. In the rich district of Venado Tuerto, province of Santa Fe, alone, from 5,000 to 6,000 head of cattle have succumbed, involving a loss of nearly $1,000,000 to the ranch owners. The wheat yield, however, is remarkably large, and the corn crop also promises to be good.

WOMEN CURATES NOW TALKED IN ENGLAND

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

London, March 1.—Women curates are being suggested because so many clergymen have gone to the trenches and because theological students who have not already enlisted will be absorbed under the compulsion act unless they are physically unfit.

For ten years before the war there was a steady decrease in the applications for ordination, owing, in some measure, to the modern recognition of the fact that a young man of what is known as "good family" may engage in commerce without any social disadvantages. Genteel starvation is no longer preferable to getting a good living outside "the professions" and the candidates for the church have gradually been narrowing down to those who feel an earnest call to preach or to undertake the more exacting forms of Christian work. The war apparently has but hastened the process.

Bismarck to Build School.

March Weather Dangerous to Health

In most parts of the U. S. March weather is usually a series of rain, wind, hail and snow storms. Many people who have weathered the storms of the previous months easily succumb to the chilling blasts of March. Statistics show that the mortality rate reaches its highest point in March, due largely to the fact that grip, pneumonia and other pulmonary troubles claim many victims.

The system that is well fortified is invariably able to resist and throw off disease germs so they can not take root in the system.

WAS SOLDIER OF FORTUNE

"Dick" Ferris Returns to Duluth After Adventurous Career.

Nearly Captured Lower California; Talks on Mexican Affairs.

"Dick" Ferris, years ago known to every man, woman and child of Duluth, is back today and is meeting old friends and visiting some of his former haunts. Since he left Duluth, where he was engaged in theatrical stock work, Mr. Ferris has had some stirring experiences. It was Ferris who organized the expedition to take Lower California and convert it into an independent republic. One battle was fought between the Ferris forces and the Mexican forces, in which some twenty-eight men were killed. The United States government returned seven indictments against the former Duluth theatrical man, and it was only after some real diplomacy upon the part of Ferris that he succeeded in escaping serving a term in a Federal prison.

Perhaps Mr. Ferris is very well qualified to speak of the present Mexican situation. His experience with Mexicans has been both acute and practical.

"I don't believe the United States will go to war with Mexico," said Mr. Ferris today. "The greatly disturbed conditions that have arisen across the Mexican border as a result of the frequent revolutions are almost indescribable. Few persons realize the vast state of upheaval that exists.

Peons as Soldiers.

"Carranza, Madero, Villa and the other leaders combed the hills and low places, searching out the peons and the very scum of the republic in an effort to increase their armies. These peons, understand, were poverty stricken with a depth of poverty not even understood in our country. Barefooted, ragged, penniless and even hungry, this scum of modern civilization was taken. The leaders put shoes on the feet of their followers, clothed them, put khaki uniforms on these hastily converted soldiers, and then allowed them to loot, and murder, and indulge in rapine. Do you suppose that these ignorant peons, once they have tasted money and what to them amounts to real riches, will willingly return to labor and the unceasing grind of poverty?

"It is my belief that the solution of the Mexican trouble, insofar as Mexico is concerned, lies in the division of the republic into smaller republics. There are factions in Mexico today that I believe it will require years to unite. In time I believe Mexico would perhaps return to a central government, but for the present I am positive that it will require radical action to pacify that revolution-ridden country."

"Dick" Ferris made his famous attempt to capture Lower California in 1911. Speaking of the attempt to capture the "appendix of the world" from Mexico, Ferris declared today that he and the men associated with him would have succeeded without a doubt, had it not been pointed out to them in no uncertain way that the United States government would speedily take very prompt means to prevent them from going through with their undertaking.

"Many persons are of the belief that Lower California is merely a desert," said Ferris," but such is not the case. It is rich in timber and minerals and has not been even scratched. If this country belonged to the United States it would speedily be discovered what a vast amount of natural resources the strip of land contained."

fect of such occupation upon Mexican public sentiment. The Carranza officers have frankly expressed the hope that the garrisoning of the cities can be left to their own troops. The American army's choice of the Chihuahua desert as its place of entry precludes for the present such a problem as city garrison duty. It is estimated here that the cost of the Villa pursuit at present is upward of $40,000 per day.

Boy is Anti-Carranza.

There is one soldier in the Carranza garrison in Juarez who is frankly anti-Carranza. He is a 13-year-old boy who was captured with the Villa garrison at Juarez and whose life was spared on the condition that he turn Carranzista. His name he said today formerly was "Little Pancho Villa."

"And now," he added, "It is Little Carranza."

"Whom do you like best?" he was asked.

"Pancho Villa!" was the reply.

Daniel Hurst, son of Bishop P. H. Hurst of the Mormon church, who reached here yesterday from the Mormon colonies with important news about Villa for the American army considered his chances of getting through safely so uncertain that he made part of his trip in hiding on the train under a coach seat.

Villa Believed to Be Far South.

Washington, March 17.—The eyes of administration officials centered today on the desert plains of Northern Mexico where Brig.-Gen. John J. Pershing is leading American troops in pursuit of Francisco Villa and his band of outlaws.

Strict censorship still surrounds the movement of the expedition.

Unofficial advices from the border today said Villa and his men are far to the south of the American forces. Army officials do not expect a clash for several days.

Official advices from diplomatic representatives in Mexico reported conditions as generally quiet. There were signs of unrest in the Tampico district, however.

To Enter Villa Territory Soon.

El Paso, Tex., March 17.—Expectation along the border was keyed to its highest pitch today by the general belief that before nightfall the advance guard of the American expeditionary force would have entered Villa territory in the mountains of the Casas Grandes region of Mexico.

While the censorship prevented any official news of the whereabouts of the American columns, reports brought by Americans from the interior, coupled with the calculations of men thoroughly familiar with the territory over which the expeditionary force was passing, made it reasonably certain that the United States soldiers must be close to the district where Villa is believed to exercise his greatest influence.

Andres Garcia, the Carranza consul here, and recognized as the closest man to the first chief on the border, refused to make any definite statement as to what co-operation the American officers might expect from the Mexican authorities. It was suggested to him that the Carranza forces could render valuable aid in supplying guides, aiding in the obtaining of forage and in similar directions.

"The Americans have guides of their own," he said, "who, I am sure, are as good as any we could give them. I feel equally certain that they have better maps than any we have. The soldiers of Gen. Carranza are marching against Villa, the American soldiers are doing the same. That seems to me to be co-operation and it is all I have to say."

May March at Midnight.

San Antonio, Tex., March 17.—Night marches probably will be made by Gen. John J. Pershing's expeditionary forces in their search for Francisco Villa, it was indicated today at Fort Sam Houston.

Night marches would help to mystify Villa as to the movements of the American columns and would be easy of accomplishment, it is said, because there is sufficient light for the purpose. Also they would keep the men and horses fresher. Days could be used for reconnoitering.

Daylight marches make it impossible to hide troop movements. Huge clouds of dust indicate the marchers' progress and are visible at great distances.

There will be no music for the soldiers of either Gen. Pershing's or Col. Dodd's commands to enjoy while on the march or in camp. Not a single regimental band has been taken with the expedition. This is because it was desired not to handicap the expedition with any useless appendage, not because the absence of martial music was expected to aid in secrecy regarding troop movements.

Word was received today that C. A. Williams, American consul who quit Torreon when trouble with Villa broke out, is on his way here from Laredo, where he arrived yesterday. At the army post nothing was known of Williams' coming. It was said he had not been asked to make any report to army officials.

Assurances From Carranza.

Washington, March 17.—Very satisfactory assurances regarding the attitude of the Carranza government toward the entrance of American troops into Mexico were conveyed to the state department today by Consul Silliman, who is with Gen. Carranza. He reported no trouble from the Carranza forces was to be expected.

Mexican dispatches received by Acting Secretary Polk of the state department and Secretary Baker were optimistic. The text of none was made public, but it was said by administration officials that the Mexican situation seemed entirely satisfactory.

President Wilson received the reports before the cabinet meeting. The administration believes the danger of active opposition by Carranza forces is growing less.

Consul Silliman's dispatch from Gen. Carranza's headquarters reviewed the favorable sentiment there.

To Co-operate With United States.

Douglas, Ariz., March 17.—Carranza troops of Gen. P. Elias Calles, military governor of Sonora, were making every effort to co-operate with the soldiers composing the punitive expedition from the United States in the pursuit of Francisco Villa, according to reports received here.

Persons arriving here during the night from Bavispe valley in Eastern Sonora stated that 400 Calles troops commanded by Lieut. Col. J. M. Aguirre were strongly entrenching themselves near Bavispe in a position commanding two passes through which Villa bandits would march should they make a sortie against the towns of Bavispe, San Miguel, Legalera and El Tigre.

No Casualties.

San Antonio, Tex., March 17.—The American expeditionary force has had no casualties and has had no clashes with Villistas to date, according to reports received today at Fort Houston. There have been no instances of sniping reported.

Brig.-Gen. Pershing's dispatches to southern department headquarters confirm reports that Mormon colonists from Colonia Dublan and Colonia Morralos are acting as scouts for the expedition.

Absolute secrecy is maintained here as to the distance the American troops have penetrated into Mexican territory.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft luster and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—Advertisement.

minist rative officer, not having had ship command in the last twenty-five years. During this period he has been at the admiralty, first as adviser on military affairs, then in the budget departments and finally as head of the administrative department. He was looked on as the right hand man of Admiral von Tirpitz until his retirement last November.

The Tages Zeitung which has been one of the strongest supporters of Admiral von Tirpitz, says that it is "shaken by the news of the admiral's resignation and does not at present feel itself in a condition to comment thereon."

The Morgen Post says:

"There will be universal regret that circumstances made the retirement of the grand admiral necessary. The reasons for this and the inner relations of affairs with one another cannot now be discussed but it will be regretted that there was no other way out."

All the newspapers pay high compliment to the career of Admiral von Tirpitz.

GERMANS MAKE FIVE VIOLENT ATTACKS ON FRENCH NEAR VAUX

fire of our machine guns cost the enemy heavily.

"In the Woevre district there is nothing to report further than artillery exchanges in all of the sectors to the west of Pont-a-Mousson. A surprise attack against a salient of the enemy lines at the wood of Mort Mare made it possible for us to bring back some prisoners and to inflict some losses on the enemy.

"The night was calm on the remainder of the front."

Germans Repulse French.

Berlin, March 17, via London, 3:22 p. m.—The German official statement today reports two attacks by the French on "our positions on Dead Man's height." Both of these were unsuccessful, it is declared.

Thursday's Fighting.

Paris, March 17.—Another very strong German attack was delivered yesterday afternoon against the French positions at Le Mort Homme, in the Verdun region, but the assaulting forces were driven back in the direction of the Corbeaux wood, where, according to the official statement issued by the war office last night, the concentrated fire of the French guns inflicted heavy losses on them.

The text of the communication follows:

"To the north of the Aisne there has been artillery activity on both sides in the region of Bois Buttes, east of Ville aux Bois.

"In the Argonne we carried out a concentrated fire on the German organizations to the northwest of the road from Varonnes and from batteries in action on the outskirts of Mountfaucon.

"To the west of the Meuse, after a very violent bombardment of our Bethincourt front, the Germans launched during the afternoon a powerful attack against our positions at Le Mort Homme. The assaulting masses, which came on like waves, were not able to gain a footing at any point and were forced back in the direction of the Bois De Corbeaux, where our concentrated fire, let loose immediately, inflicted heavy losses on them.

"On the right bank of the Meuse, the activity of the artillery has redoubled to the east and west of Douaumont, as well as around the village of Vaux. No infantry attack was carried out, however. Our batteries took under their fire on several occasions, troops engaged in evolutions in that region.

"In the Woevre a rather spirited bombardment on both sides occurred in the sectors at the foot of the hills."

LOSS OF FINE STEAMER RESENTED IN HOLLAND

ought to be ashamed of this fresh proof that her admiralty has not her submarine commanders properly in hand. They sink neutral merchantmen and are reprimanded and punished, yet, on the next occasion flount their government's measures and promises and fire away blindly."

Stronger Note Sounded.

A stronger note is sounded by the Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant, which says that no matter whether the Tubantia was sunk by a torpedo or a mine the country demands that such occurrences cease. It declares the government must make the strongest representations to Berlin, and continues:

"The Tubantia was not a mere tramp. She was the pride of our mercantile marine. Every responsible naval commander would know what she was and whither she was bound. No account of the disaster mentions a warning of any kind. There is no excuse. No words can qualify this misdeed, which stultified all German assurances and promises.

"We have nothing to do with officers' 'mistakes.' The German admiralty is responsible and the demand must be made that definite instructions be given to the German navy to render it certain that such mistakes will not arise in future."

This newspaper says Holland is unfortunately placed between one belligerent, "who professedly fights for the interests of small nations, but holds up our ships, seizes what she likes and paralyzes our imports and industries," and another belligerent who "while contending for the so-called freedom of the seas, sinks our ships on sight without notice."

Newest and Finest Ship.

Amsterdam, via London, March 17.—The newest and finest steamship sailing under the Dutch flag, the Tubantia of the Holland-Lloyd line, was sunk early yesterday thirty miles off the Dutch coast. Although it is not positively established whether the sinking was due to a mine or a torpedo, there is a singular unanimity on the part of those who were on board in attributing it to a submarine's act. The crew base their belief in this regard chiefly on the intense violence of the explosion and on the fact that it occurred amidships.

The vessel was bound from Amsterdam to South American ports, carrying a crew of 294 and 82 passengers, the latter mostly neutrals including, it is said, three Americans. The ship bore the usual identification marks of her neutral character, including an illuminated name and flag. The disaster has created a profound sensation throughout Holland. The press comments reflect anger and indignation. The Niewe Rotterdamsche Courant says:

Little Difference.

"Between being torpedoed and being mined the only difference which exists is that known in criminal law between intention and conditional intention. If the ship was torpedoed, then there was absolute intention, or ignorance or neglect equivalent to intention. The submarine commander must have known, when he gave the command to fire, that the ship was the Tubantia. No word can be found to qualify this crime; no excuse can be accepted."

It is now believed there was a small number of lives lost in the sinking of the Tubantia, either in the explosion or in an accident which attended the launching of a lifeboat. The steamship remained afloat several hours.

According to all reports there was no panic. The boats were launched in their appointed order and the passengers were all taken off first. The rescue work was difficult owing to the darkness, the heavy mist and the rough sea.

The captain and part of the crew remained on the gradually sinking ship for some time, the wireless operator keeping up the work of guiding Dutch vessels to the rescue. The captain was on the vessel for two hours after she was struck and was the last to leave. The rescuing vessels took the passengers and crew to Flushing, Amsterdam and the Hook.

GERMAN CHANCELLOR MAY ALSO BE RETIRED

London, March 17.—Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the imperial chancellor, may follow Admiral von Tirpitz into retirement, according to a dispatch from Geneva to the Daily Express quoting Berlin reports which also state that Prince Bernhard von Buelow, the former chancellor, will soon leave Lucerne for Berlin.

GERMAN LOSSES SAID NOT TO BE EXCESSIVE

Berlin, March 16, via London, March 17.—Further confirmation of the report that the German losses in the capture of Douaumont, northeast of Verdun, were not excessive is found in the regimental memorial to the dead of the Brandenburg regiment appearing in the German newspapers. The memorial is signed by the regimental commander who gives the names of six lieutenants and one ensign as having fallen in the fighting before Verdun.

ASTONISHING POWER OF IRON TO GIVE STRENGTH TO BROKEN DOWN NERVOUS PEOPLE

Physician Says Ordinary Nuxated Iron Will Increase Strength of Delicate Folk 200 Per Cent. in Two Weeks Time in Many Instances.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—In a recent discourse Dr. E. Sauer, Specialist, of this city, said: "If you were to make an actual blood test on all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the exceedingly large number who lack iron and who are ill for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied all their multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue, and therefore nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. Your food merely passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and nerve starvation, people become generally weakened, nervous and all run down, and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at night; others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless, but all lack physical power and endurance. In such cases it is worse than foolishness to take stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your fagging vital powers for the moment, maybe at the expense of your life later on. No matter what any one tells you, if you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the time double, and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of their symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form, and this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by new remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and good, sound, healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener and the best blood builder in the world. The only trouble was that the old forms of inorganic iron, like tincture of iron, iron acetate, etc., often ruined people's teeth, upset their stomachs and were not assimilated, and for these reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of the newer forms of organic iron all this has been overcome. Nuxated Iron, for example, is pleasant to take, does not injure the teeth and is almost immediately beneficial.

NOTE—The manufacturers of Nuxated Iron have such unbounded confidence in its potency that they authorize the announcement that they will forfeit $100.00 to any Charitable Institution if they cannot take any man or woman under sixty who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. Also they will refund your money in any case in which Nuxated Iron does not at least double your strength in ten days' time. It is dispensed in this city by Boyce Drug store and all other druggists.

JAPANESE NEGOTIATING

Concerning the Anti-Japanese Agitation in the British Colonies.

Demand That the Anglo-Japanese Treaty Should Be Reframed.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

Tokio, Feb. 15.—Baron Ishii, minister for foreign affairs, told the house of peers on Feb. 13 that Japan is negotiating with Great Britain concerning the anti-Japanese agitation in British colonies. The foreign office, however, denies the report persistently circulated in Tokio that fresh negotiations are going on between Japan and England for the revision of the Anglo-Japanese alliance. The idea put forth, as the basis of the report, is that Japan seeks from Great Britain some definite recognition of Japan's superior position in China.

The alliance with England, as a result of which Japan declared war against Germany, continues a favorite topic of discussion. A good many disparaging remarks have been made about it by Japanese who feel that Great Britain is asking and receiving too much under its terms and that it has ceased to be an instrument useful to the Japanese nation.

Disturb Friendship.

Baron Ishii referred to these criticisms in his remarks before the peers. He deprecated them, he said, as being exceedingly regrettable because they do harm to the friendly sentiments between the two nations. He regretted also that British residents in China occasionally gave voice to unfriendly utterances about Japan. But he pointed out that these criticisms should not be interpreted as the opinion of the nation as a whole.

At a recent dinner of the Japan Trade association, Ichiro Tokutomi, the editor of the Kokumin, declared that there prevails an opinion among a section of statesmen and politicians that the Anglo-Japanese alliance has become superannuated and should be reframed to meet the changed situation of Japan—the growth, or exaltation of her position and influence in Far Eastern affairs. He considered it most probable, he said, that the time will come before long when this opinion will be seriously taken up and embodied in the form of negotiations for the revision of the existing treaty. He insisted that this view was shared by several members of the cabinet and privy council.

Japanese Goods Boycotted.

The present negotiations with England to which reference was made by Baron Ishii are believed to include the status and treatment of Japanese emigrants particularly in Australia, but refer particularly to an alleged boycott of Japanese goods.

The case of those Japanese who are demanding a revision of the alliance with Great Britain is summarized by the Nichi Nichi. It declares that in Canada, Australia and other British colonies Japanese are refused treatment on an equal footing; that the British residents in China, official and otherwise, are bent on curbing Japan's interests in that country; that Japan's position in China is of vital importance to Japan but that its predominance is not recognized, and that moreover, in case of misunderstandings with the United States over Chinese questions the British government is known to be bent on avoiding the responsibility of rendering assistance to this country.

Japan in India.

The newspaper further alleges that Britain is restricting Japan's free action in India. Under these circumstances the journal deems it natural that there should be a feeling of dissatisfaction concerning the alliance as it now exists. The paper further points out that Great Britain on account of the war is not in a position at present to protect her interests in the Pacific and has to depend solely on Japan in that respect. In other words Japan is now the only nation able to protect the interests of Great Britain and other nations in China, and the paper thinks that this position of Japan deserves to be fully recognized by Great Britain by formally allowing Japan to have her position in the Far East clearly defined.

Wording Is Ambiguous.

As for the provisions in the alliance concerning the peace of India the paper points out that they were made when there was a fear of Russian advance to the South. Those provisions were made against a Russian menace, but the present relations of Great Britain and Russia are practically those of an alliance and the paper finds no reason or necessity for having the provisions in the alliance concerning India. Moreover, the paper thinks that the wording of those stipulations is rather ambiguous and calls for a more explicit arrangement concerning Japan's obligations on that point.

The Nichi Nichi does not want the treaty annulled but it recommends a revision so that Japan may receive what it deserves as the only power in the Far East that is now in a position fully and efficiently to protect British and other interests in this part of the world.

SEED CORN IS SCARCE.

Louis Hill Says Minnesota May Have to Get Supply From Montana.

St. Paul, Minn., March 17.—Railroad men and bankers have joined hands in an endeavor to forestall the effects of a seed corn shortage said to obtain throughout this section of the Northwest.

Local newspapers state that the Northwest is facing one of the most acute corn situations in twenty years.

The railroads, including the Great Northern, the Northern Pacific, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie, are making every effort to get seed corn into the hands of the farmers and thus prevent a threatened big decrease in acreage.

Louis W. Hill, president of the Great Northern railroad was one of the first men here to recognize the acute situation. Several weeks ago Mr. Hill gave it as his opinion that the Northwest would have to look to Montana for its seed corn. Since that time railroad men and bankers generally have been exhibiting an active interest in the developing situation.

It was reported to local bankers that seed corn yesterday sold at $8 per bushel at Pine City, Minn., and similar figures were quoted from other Minnesota points. The shortage is said to be widespread and to extend into Iowa.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

Budapest, Feb. 20.—One of the most notable charities since the beginning of the war is the gift of approximately $5,000,000 by Frau Irma Krall, who died recently, for the education of the common people. Frau Frall, wealthy when she married for the first time, enhanced her fortune with each of her five marriages and died worth many millions. Her fourth husband, Baron Strahlendorff, was widely known through Austria-Hungary.

G. A. ORECK & SONS CO., Sole Proprietors
29 and 31 WEST SUPERIOR STREET, DULUTH, MINN.

And just as sure as March follows February—we're going to get it! We've bought merchandise that is more than $20,000.00 ahead of any other March, whether you look at it from a "quantity" or "quality" standpoint. Weeks ago we called the department managers together and gave them a free hand to do what they would to make the increase we have set. Many of them made special trips to the New York markets. In every instance they called upon manufacturers for cooperation, and the results have been way beyond our expectations! We've left the "organizing," the "merchandising" and the "advertising" of this event entirely to our department managers, and we can assure you, from what we've seen, that they are going to make every day of March a day of extraordinary interest and profit to you. We've started March off with a vim and a go—but tomorrow we're going to "throw it into high" and open the "value throttle" wide—watch it! Make it a point to see our windows—Look for "not advertised" specials.

WHITNEY CONFIRMED BY ONLY ONE VOTE

Albany, N. Y., March 17.—Governor Whitman's nominations of Travis H. Whitney and Charles S. Harvey of Brooklyn as downstate public service commissioners were confirmed by the senate late yesterday after more than five hours of spirited argument. The vote on Whitney was 27 to 23 and on Harvey, 31 to 19. Twenty-six affirmative votes are necessary to confirm.

Consideration of the governor's reappointment of James M. Lynch, John Mitchell, Louis Wiard, Edward P. Lyon and William Rogers as industrial commissioners were deferred until Monday night. It is expected that all will be confirmed.

LODGE CANDIDATE FOR RE-ELECTION

Lynn, Mass., March 17.—The administration at Washington was criticised severely last night by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge in an address during which he announced himself a candidate for re-election. He spoke before the Lynn Republican club.

"In my own opinion," he said, "with the exception of the administration of Buchanan, there has been no administration in power which has been so injurious to the United States both at home and abroad, as that now in control at Washington."

After condemning the tariff and taxation legislation enacted by a Democratic congress, Senator Lodge turned to the foreign policies of the administration. He said the plans for national defense suggested by President Wilson "proved on analysis to be partly shams, and wholly inadequate."

To Live in Ironton.

Cambridge, Minn., March 17.—Miss Ethel Lindroth was married to Charley Nystrom Saturday evening at the groom's home in Mora. Mrs. Carrie Lindroth, the bride's mother, went to Mora to attend the wedding. The young couple came to Cambridge Tuesday for a short stay. They expect to make their home in Ironton.

MOTHER! LOOK AT YOUR CHILD'S TONGUE

Give "California Syrup of Figs" If Cross, Feverish, Sick, Bilious, Constipated--They love it

Watch Children Now! Guard Against Colds, Grippe, Sore Throat and Sickness by Keeping Liver and Bowels Free from Poisons

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has the grip or sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. See that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't merely ask for Syrup of Figs, but ask for "California Syrup of Figs." Remember, "California."—Advertisement.

LIVING COST TO BE LOWER

Fresh Eggs Scarce Just Now; Butter Production Increasing.

Apples Lead Fruit Market; Spring Vegetable Supply Is Good.

Supplies of all edibles are good on the Duluth produce market and the range of fruits and vegetables continues to improve. Quotations are expected to drop slightly as is usual at this season.

Commission men aver that trade was never better for the spring, being much ahead of a year ago and also heavier than 1912, the previous record season. A feature commented upon by dealers is the better shipments of articles coming in the luxuries class to the range and other district towns.

Egg Prices Stiffen.

The extended cold weather conditions of the last ten days have resulted in stiffening up the market in eggs, according to the Bridgeman-Russell company. Hens are reported to be not laying as well and the bad condition of the country roads has held back receipts at many points. Quotations are the same as a week ago at 21@23 cents a dozen for the fresh article. Supplies of storage eggs in warehouses in this territory are exhausted, and according to figures of dealers, packers in the East are cleaned up also. It is conceded, however, that should temperatures over the country become more seasonable, egg figures would drop again but not to any great extent in view of the active demand being met with. Packers may endeavor to depress prices, as buying for storage will begin during the first week of April. A year ago at this time Western eggs were quoted in New York at 19 cents a dozen.

Butter Market Firm.

Butter quotations are unchanged at 35@37c per pound for the best creamery, as compared with around 30 cents a year ago. Dealers say that while the production of butter is increasing, consumption is fully keeping pace with it and it is thought that the general range of the market this spring and summer will be higher than during the period last year. Butter shipments were steadily maintained from Duluth to the Eastern markets all through the winter months, attesting the growing importance of the dairying industry in this territory.

Apple Sales Heavy.

Apples still hold the lead in the fruit market with a gratifying movement reported by the Fitzsimmons-Palmer company, the Culbertson Bros. company and the Stacy-Merrill Fruit company. Quotations in New York state barrel apples are regarded as exceptionally low for this late in the season.

The average quality of oranges is improving and with the better consumption, a higher market is expected. The grapefruit season is now at its height and sales are bulking up to a large volume. With the season for Florida strawberries approaching its finish, quotations are higher. Prices will ease off again as soon as the Louisiana berries make their appearance.

Supplies of green vegetables and the range available shows marked improvement. The general tendency of prices will be downward from now on.

Potatoes are higher at $1 per bushel, and whether their cost will be higher or lower in the near future is regarded as problematical, depending altogether upon the supplies still being carried by growers in this district.

ATHLETIC DRILLS FOR FAIR.

Many Duluth Young People Will Appear on Teuton Bazar Program.

Athletic exhibitions by boys and girls, under the direction of M. E. Alletzhauesser, will be features on the program of the Red Cross bazar and fair, which will be given under the auspices of the German-Austro-Hungarian Relief association March 23, 24 and 25. On the opening day, Thursday, the following will be seen in club swinging: Harry Levin, Percy Glag, William Jensen, A. Abelson, Fred Schumann, William Hoskins, Clifford Welander, Oscar Pederson, Irvin Dutcher, Joe Goldfarb, Wallace O'Neil, Harold Campbell, James Rosenblad, Cathleen Clark, Ethel Schenick, Sylvia Josephs, Edith Hanna, Rosalia Haddad, Katie Meyers, Mildred Erickson, Catherine Mortiz, Henrietta Olsen, and Margaret Cameron, pianist.

On Friday, eighteen boys and girls will appear in a dumb bell drill. They are: Orien Anderson, James Annand, Edward Erickson, Dudley Holland, Irving Josephs, Lansing Kempton, Morris Sherwood, Wesley Spink, John Wallen, Vernon Wenlandt, Florence Cullen, Genevieve Dahl, Ruth Green, Alice Hayes, Thelma Hoff, Helen Holmberg, Ethel Johnson, Helen Linder and Margaret Cameron, accompanist.

On the same evening the following will appear in flag drill: Carolyn Bigelow, Elizabeth Gilbert, Charlott Lugoff, Ione Larson, Catherine McCurdy, Genevieve Brugger, Mildred Wallen, Marie Rosenblad, Godfrey Azine, Herbert Ketchum, William Healey, Mannie Kron, Clarence Smith, Clarence Lytle, Herbert Miller, George Thompson, piano player.

On Saturday Miss Edna Moterud will appear in classic Greek dancing. The following will appear in a German scarf drill: Ruby Anderson, Olive Arthur, Margaret Beck, Florence Carlson, Myrtle Grundlund, Lillie Jensen, Mildred Kohagen, Florence Kymala, Mary Little, Martha Mox, Laura Lielsen, Eleanor Olson, Hazel Pederson, Bertha Rockland, Dorothy Rogers, Elizabeth Pink, Ruth Rust, Florence Smith, Bessie Thompson, Lillie Tinseth, Helen Vogel, Ethel Wiedeman, Margaret Wold, Ethel Carlstead, Alice Gustafson, Ella Hafler, Blenda Johnson, Ethel Johnson, Elizabeth Kerr, Grace King, Ellen Kymala, Nora Lindquist, Angela Maleska, Lily Mandelin, Margaret Niedefner, Florence Nordquist, Evelyn Perleberg, Hazel Thompson, Josephine Tyson, Florence Wagner, Siegred Solo.

Among the soloists, who will appear on the program, are B. Siegert, the well known cello player of the Duluth orchestra, and Mrs. Wurms, who will render a flute solo.

CLERK STEALS DRUGS WORTH OVER $50,000

Detroit, Mich., March 16.—In the arrest of Emil West, an employe of a local wholesale drug concern, and a raid on his rooms today, Federal officials claim to have uncovered one of the biggest habit-forming drug thefts they have ever known. In the rooms, they declare, two suitcases filled with drugs were found. The officials said the drugs were stolen from West's employes. They placed the wholesale value of the seizure at $50,000, but said it could be retailed among drug users for fully $300,000.

According to Federal authorities, West formerly was an inmate of the Jefferson City penitentiary and had a market there. He has admitted that he served a five-year term there under the name of A. J. Huther.

WEST END

CLUB WANTS WIDER PAVING

Thirty Feet Not Enough for West First Street, Say Members.

Compromise Suggested By Council; Piedmont Grade Project Discussed.

Members of the city commission and an attorney who advocated the paving of West First street to a width of thirty feet west of Twenty-third avenue, were criticized by members of the West End Commercial club last night at its meeting. The club members do not propose to allow the paving to be laid as narrow as that if they can help it, and as many members of the club as can get away will attend the meeting of the commissioners on Monday afternoon when that proposition is to be taken up.

It was pointed out that First street was too important a thoroughfare to be given a narrow paving. The members said that it would be but a few years before the street would become as important as Superior street. Traffic, they said, would naturally swing to this street in order to get away from the more crowded principal thoroughfare where danger of street cars was ever present.

According to the plan advocated by the commissioners on the protest of some of the property owners, it is proposed to pave First street from Twentieth to Twenty-third avenue to a width of thirty-eight feet. Beyond Twenty-third avenue to Thirtieth avenue the paving will be narrowed to thirty feet.

The lowering of the Piedmont avenue grade between Tenth and Twelfth streets will be an expensive job, according to statements made by E. K. Coe, engineer of roads in St. Louis county. The present grade is from 8 to 10 per cent. This, he told the members, can be lowered to about 7.8 per cent, but at a cost that would be heavy on the property. The matter is to be left in the hands of the former committee, consisting of County Commissioner Walter Swanstrom, Capt. K. A. Franklin and August Width. Two other members were added to the committee, James W. Preston and Charles Mork.

PLAN SPRING OPENING.

Business Men Will Confer at Luncheon Next Wednesday.

The business men of the West end will plan for a spring opening celebration at an evening luncheon to be held at the Esmond hotel next Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Plans for the luncheon were made yesterday by Charles J. Lindquist and Ben F. Schweiger, the committee appointed at the last meeting of the business men's organization.

The spring opening will be celebrated generally throughout the city by the merchants on April 3, 4 and 5. On each of these evenings the stores will be kept open between the hours of 7 and 9 for display purposes only. On at least one of these evenings the West end business men plan to have a celebration similar to those that have been given by them in the past. A parade of all industries in the West end will be one of the features considered.

NEW QUARTERS FOR ALPHA OMEGA CLUB

The second floor of the A. Hanson & company building, which is now under construction on Twenty-first avenue just below First street, has been leased by the Alpha-Omega club of the West end. The floor will be fitted up for clubrooms. The new building has a frontage of thirty-five feet and is fifty feet deep.

The Alpha-Omega club was organized as a social organization about a year ago. It has a membership of about fifty young men of the West end. The officers of the club are: E. E. Robinson, president; Harry Johnson, vice president; Albin Johnson, secretary; George Wallin, treasurer, and C. F. Anderson, clerk.

STREET VENDORS NOT IN EVIDENCE

London's Streets Freed of Ragged But Picturesque Army.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

London, March 1.—Almost complete disappearance of the ragged but picturesque street vendors and other itinerant frequenters of London's thoroughfares is one of the notable changes brought about by a year and a half of war.

Before hostilities began the curb stones of the principal streets were lined from morning to night by hawkers of pirated copies of popular songs, cheap toy sellers and match vendors, while at every few yards the passerby was accosted by a man or woman carrying a fruit basket or a tray laden wth chocolates or other candies. Now these are gone and pedestrians are grateful for the relief from the constant appeals to buy. At the same time the police are pleased to be freed from the continuous duty of keeping the ragged army within the limits of the city ordinances.

Other characters of London's streets whose disappearance, on the contrary, is regretted, are the red-coated shoeblacks formerly seen on every street corner and around the railroad stations. The disagreeable London mud, oozing up in case of wet weather owing to the clayey composition of the subsoil, makes these men's absence noticeable, and also that of the crossing sweepers, who at the junctions of frequented streets swept narrow pathways through the mud and whose services were much appreciated by the women.

The push-cart men, or "costermongers," with their little donkey burrows full of cheap vegetables which they loudly offered for sale in the suburban districts away from the shopping centers have gone—many of them to serve in the army.

The "muffin and crumpet" men, with their warm wares for afternoon tea, whose advent into the street after lunch was heralded by the ringing of a bell, have quit their rounds, for bakers have been turned into a "starred" trade, whose services are required for the making of army bread and cannot be spared for luxuries.

The "shellfish" stalls, formerly much used by patrons for saloons after their favorite houses had closed at midnight and where they consumed whelks and cockles soaked in vinegar and sprinkled thickly with pepper, are no more in evidence, having accompanied the hot-baked potato can into oblivion with the introduction of the new lighting regulations which they could not avoid infringing if they desired to continue their trade with success.

Many of the workers at these peculiar "trades" are now engaged in the service of their country in making ammunition for the troops at the front, and whether they will ever return to their old stands after the war is a moot point.

In the reign of Philip III of France women were forced to wear veils in obedience to ecclesiastical decree.

MUST PAY FOR TRESPASSING

West Duluth Woman Will Collect Triple Damages From City.

Contractors Cut Away the Ends of Her Lots Over Protest.

On Oct. 13 last, when contractors for the city, in the Smithville subway construction work, entered the premises of Mrs. Matilda Harkins with a steam shovel and a large crew of men started cutting away from sixteen to eighteen feet from the end of her two lots, she made a strenuous protest.

The foreman for the E. W. Coons company of Hibbing, contractors, then took the matter up with Commissioner Farrell and other city officials and upon his advice and that of the city attorney, continued to cut away the lots for street purposes.

A jury in Judge Cant's division of the district court this afternoon is deliberating upon the amount of damages due Mrs. Harkins for the unlawful trespass. Judge Cant charged the jury that the actions of the contractor and the city were without authority of law and instructed the jury to return treble damages in accordance with the state law covering willful trespass. At that time condemnation proceedings had not been begun.

The suit was brought against the Coons company, contractors, but the city of Duluth is defending the action, in accordance with the terms of contract whereby the municipality agrees to indemnify the contractor against any judgments which may arise from the performance of the contract.

Mrs. Harkins is the owner of two lots fronting on Commonwealth avenue, the grade of which was lowered several feet in order to make a cut for the Smithville subway. Mrs. Harkins claims that the actual damage to each lot was $750 and she asks treble damages in the sum of $4,500. The testimony of other witnesses in the case was that the actual damage was about $200 for each lot.

J. E. Samuelson, city attorney, appeared for the municipality and C. E. Adams represented Mrs. Harkins at the trial.

One Need in Tuberculosis

is careful attention to hygienic living and proper diet. Science is agreed that fresh air, rest and avoidance of food excesses constitute the most effective non-medical treatment in this widespread disease.

Often, however, these measures need supplementing by proper medication The system lacks sufficient resistance to overcome the attack, and something must be done to assist in up-building the patient's strength.

In many cases of this sort Eckman's Alterative has been used with marked success. Its efficacy in this disease has borne fruit in a record of numerous apparent recoveries, and where a tonic is indicated, it has produced most beneficial results.

Since it contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, it is safe to try. At your druggist's or direct from

HENRIKSEN WAS SHOT THREE TIMES

Third Wound Is Discovered in Fleshy Part of Left Arm.

Three shots fired from the gun in the hand of William Erickson on Wednesday noon took effect on Alexander Henriksen at the time of the attempted robbery at the Henriksen home, 625 North Fifty-sixth avenue west. The third wound was not discovered until yesterday afternoon, the bullet having just grazed the fleshy part of his left arm about half way between the elbow and shoulder.

Mr. Henriksen had not paid any attention to this wound until yesterday when the attention of Dr. Graham was called to blood on the undershirt. Investigation revealed a scratch and the bullet holes. The greater pain in the wrist had distracted Mr. Henriksen's attention from the pain from the other wound, although he said today that he had felt a little pain there, but thought that it was caused from being pinched by Erickson.

Mr. and Mrs. Henriksen are both rapidly recovering from their injuries. The shock left both in a slightly nervous condition, but in the quiet of the hospital both are doing well.

Mr. Wade has been in the hardware business in West Duluth for more than twenty years. He stated today that he had no plans for the future which he was as yet ready to announce, but said that he was not considering leaving West Duluth.

Mr. Wade has been one of the most active promoters of sports in this end of the city. He is president of the Western Curling club, an enthusiastic curler, baseball fan and motor boat owner. For several years past Mr. Wade has been possessor of one of the fastest motor boats at the Head of the Lakes.

"I expect to remain in West Duluth," said Mr. Wade. "I am just retiring from the hardware business. I have been in the business long enough. Twenty years selling hardware is a long time, and I need a rest.

"Next winter I expect to devote all of my time to curling, and I'm going to have the strongest rink in this part of the state. I am going to pick up some curlers who can spend the time evenings and during the bonspiel at the game."

Mr. Wade is the owner of a large farm in South Dakota, and when asked if he intended going there to live, said he had not considered it. His son, Richard F. Wade, who expects to take a course at the state agricultural school in the near future, may become the manager of the farm in a few years.

READY TO REPAIR BLOOMING MILL

Carload of Material Is Brought to Steel Plant.

Practically all of the parts required for the repair of the big blooming mill engine at the Duluth steel plant, which was wrecked some time ago, are now on hand. Nearly a carload of material arrived at the plant yesterday, and these parts will be put in place as rapidly as possible.

Officials of the plant announced this morning that in all probability the blooming mill would resume operation in about two weeks. In the meantime part of the ingots tapped from the open hearth furnaces have been put in storage and will be used later on. A large number of the ingots are being shipped to Eastern plants for reheating and rolling.

The four furnaces at the open hearth furnace building are in continual operation, turning out between 500 and 1,000 tons of steel daily. It is expected that within a short time another of the furnaces, which is now being given its basic treatment, will be ready for steel making.

DEATH ENDS ILLNESS OF MORE THAN TWO YEARS

JAMES F. DACEY.

James F. Dacey, pioneer manufacturer and long a prominent Duluth resident, died at his home, 15 West Fourth street, at 9:30 o'clock this morning after an illness which began with a nervous breakdown more than two years ago. He was 62 years old.

Known and loved as "Jim" Dacey, baseball "fan," by countless Duluthians, and respected by those with whom he was connected in a business way, Mr. Dacey was an unusual character. Always an optimist, with a never-failing belief in Duluth and its future, he was regarded as a highly valuable citizen. Baseball was his great hobby, and he followed the game with the same keen insight he gave to his business.

At the time of his death he was president of the Gogebic Steam Boiler works and the Duluth Boiler works. Nearly twenty-six months ago he suffered a nervous breakdown, and from the illness which began at that time he never recovered. On Monday last he took cold, and the complications developing from that proved fatal. Chronic heart disease was given as the immediate cause of death.

James F. Dacey was born Sept. 3, 1853, at Canadaigua, N. Y., and was a son of Bartholomew and Mary Ann Dacey, both natives of the Empire state. The father, a contractor, engaged in construction work on the Erie railway system, died in 1855.

James was educated in the public schools of Dunkirk, N. Y., and after leaving school learned the printer's trade. In 1868 he changed and entered the employ of the Brooks Locomotive works at Dunkirk, where he learned the boilermaker's trade. He worked on the first locomotive made by that concern.

In 1872 he left this company, and going to Elkhart, Ind., worked about four years in the employ of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railway company. From 1876 to 1888 he was with the Union Pacific Railway company, between Omaha and other western points.

In November, 1898, he settled in Duluth, then a city of 30,000 inhabitants, and founded the Gogebic Steam Boiler works. This was the first plant in Duluth operated by the Great Northern Power company, and has been said to be one of the most modern establishments of its kind in the United States.

Mr. Dacey was a pioneer on the Vermillion and Mesaba iron ranges, building and placing the first boilers going into service to develop the iron industry of St. Louis county, long before the advent of the railroads. He hauled the boilers in sections and completed construction in the field.

In 1876 Mr. Dacey married Miss Mary Nolan of Elkhart, Ind. Of three children, Francis, J., the eldest, alone is living. He has been associated with his father in the firm of J. F. Dacey & Son.

Funeral services probably will be held Monday.

ARMY RECRUITING OFFICE FOR DULUTH

United States Will Bring Fighting Force to Full Strength.

Because of the plans of the war department to have the United States army increased to full strength, army recruiting stations will be established throughout the country and Duluth and Fargo are to be included in the list. The army offices for these two cities were closed about a year ago, although army recruiting officers have been at work here from time to time since the discontinuance of the office. It is said that the required increase in the army will mean the enlistment of from 20,000 to 27,000 men.

Corporal V. J. Morkowski, it is announced, will have charge of the Duluth office.

It is expected that the army recruiting officers will meet with much success in securing enlistments owing to the Mexican situation. Many men, it is said, are eager to go with the army across the border.

EMPLOY ATTORNEY TO MAKE APPEAL

Leaders in Armory Referendum Fight Retain Frank Crassweller.

Leaders in the armory referendum fight have raised $250 and secured the services of Frank Crassweller to assist City Attorney Samuelson in making the appeal to the supreme court from the decision of District Judge Dancer.

Mayor Prince said this morning that the city will print the briefs prepared by Mr. Crassweller and also pay his expenses to and from St. Paul, where the supreme court will be in session early next month.

The report that the city has agreed to pay an additional $250 for the services of Mr. Crassweller was denied this morning by Mayor Prince, who said that the leaders in the referendum fight had not even made such overtures to the council, the only request being that the city should pay for the briefs and the railroad expenses of the special attorney.

District Judge Dancer recently handed down an opinion to the effect that the referendum filed by the leaders in the fight against the sale of the armory was illegal, because it did not have a sufficient number of signatures at the expiration of the thirty days allowed in the charter. He ruled that an additional ten days cannot be allowed for a referendum petition.

The city commissioners three weeks ago voted to appeal the decision and City Attorney Samuelson was instructed to take the case to the higher court. John Jenswold, Jr., potentate of Aad temple of Shriners, will represent the fraternity.

TEST PAPERS NOT READ.

Secretary Johnson Will Confer With C. S. Board Next Week.

Civil service examinations were held on March 5 and the papers submitted by the applicants have not yet been read.

The delay has been caused by the fact that members of the board have failed to get together and go over the test papers, although the examination was held two weeks ago. Applicants are constantly calling up the city hall for information on their marks, but Secretary Johnson is unable to give anything out until the board members meet.

Arrangements are being made today to hold a meeting of the board early next week.

Says Woman's Beauty Depends Upon Health

Health and Vigor Necessitate Regulation of Organs of Elimination

Skin foods and face creams and powders cannot make a woman beautiful, because beauty lies deeper than that—it depends on health. In most cases the basis of health and the cause of sickness can be traced to the action of the bowels.

The headache, the lassitude, the sallow skin, and the lusterless eyes are usually caused by constipation. An ideal remedy for women, and one that is especially suited to their delicate organisms, is found in Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a mild laxative compound, pleasant to the taste and free from opiates and narcotic drugs of every description. Mrs. Gertrude Jordan, 522 North Liberty St., Indianapolis, Ind., says: "It is simply fine; I have never been able to find anything to compare with Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. I started using it for the baby and now it is my family standby in all cases where a laxative is needed."

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold in drug stores for fifty cents a bottle; a trial bottle can be obtained, free of charge, by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 454 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois.

Solid Ice Across Lake Superior; Storms Have No Effect.

Calumet, Mich., March 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Marine men last night reported that Lake Superior is packed with unusually heavy ice floes, solidly cemented together from the west shore of Keweenaw Point to Isle Royale, fifty miles and probably beyond.

This condition has never before obtained this late.

It is believed that the break-up this year and the opening of navigation in Lake Superior will be much later than usual. The ice is so heavy that northerly storms have little effect on it.

The temperature registered 11 deg. below zero yesterday.

"The epidemic in Duluth will continue until the latter part of the spring, when it will break up itself," said Health Director Fahey. "Meanwhile we are doing everything we can to check it."

CLOSE DIVISION FOR ENGLISH GOVERNMENT

Secures Adjournment After Long Session By Only Six Votes.

London, March 17.—The house of commons adjourned after 1 o'clock this morning, after a protracted debate nominally on army estimates but really covering a wide range of topics including calling out married men.

It was announced that a conference will be held Saturday at the war office between the higher military authorities and the recruiting commanders when the whole requirements of the navy in regard to men will be fully discussed and explained.

It is stated that the widespread agitation on the part of the married men has already interfered somewhat with the war office arrangements but there is little doubt that the calling up of further groups of married men has been only briefly postponed.

Among the proposals now being considered is that of extending the military age for single men to 45 years. There is also a widespread feeling that the compulsion act should be extended to the married men as a considerable part of the ill-feeling among married men now being called is due to the fact that those who voluntarily enrolled under the Derby scheme must go into the army while married men who declined the invitation to enroll are allowed to continue in their civil occupations.

Feeling on this matter was reflected in the house on the vote for adjournment. The government demanded adjournment until Tuesday but partisans of the married men urged a continuation of the session until the question of the married men was properly settled.

The government got its wish but only after a division which was carried by six votes. This is the most serious division the coalition government has yet faced.

He advocated military training in the high schools as a means of creating an efficient reserve of half a million men.

Only five times since 1886 has Duluth had a heavier snowfall than that of this winter.

According to figures given out today by Weather Forecaster Richardson, the snowfall from Oct. 1 to March 16 was 70.3 inches, 28.1 inches above normal. The precipitation was not heavy during the first three months of the winter, while in January and during the first half of this month the normal figures were trebled.

The heaviest snowfalls from 1886 follow:

	Precipitation Oct. 1 to March 16.
1886	89.0
1887	89.0
1891	77.0

CRIPPLED, HE APPEALS TO SCHOOL BOARD AND THEN GOVERNOR FOR AN EDUCATION

Elmer Dahlgren, life-long and helpless cripple, wants an education like other men received in their youth.

Although Elmer is 24 years old, he has never walked a step in his life and has never seen the inside of a schoolroom. He has learned to read and write without any instructor except his mother, Mrs. Olena Dahlgren, widow, who supports him.

Elmer has taken the matter up with the school authorities of Duluth, but they found no way in which he might receive instruction. The young man wants to learn something about arithmetic and says he would equip himself to become self-supporting so as to lighten the burden which now rests upon his mother's shoulders.

When the young man learned that the school authorities could do nothing for him, he wrote to the governor, stating that he was a cripple and wanted an education. The governor referred him to the state institution for crippled and deformed children, but Elmer's age, it was afterwards discovered, will bar him from entering there.

Was Born Paralyzed.

Pathetic, but nevertheless interesting, is the life history of the young man. He was born a helpless paralytic and from the beginning was deprived of the use of both of his legs. A strange feature of the case is that his body developed along normal lines, but his lower limbs grew to be of an unusual size. As he grew older, he managed to get around the house by using his arms and at the age of 18 found him almost a full grown man. Tho arms, from constant use, became quite strongly developed.

Legs Amputated.

Four years ago, Elmer submitted to an operation whereby both of his lower limbs were amputated. He recovered nicely from the ordeal and after several long weeks in the hospital was removed to his home. Now he is able to get around much better than he could with his useless lower limbs which he often found to be in the way.

Three years ago, the Sunshine Society of St. Paul, an organization for cripples only, became interested in his case and sent him some money and a wheel chair. Although, as stated, Elmer has never had any schooling, he is able to write a legible hand and has an exceptionally intelligent understanding of things.

Never Saw Circus.

Owing to his crippled condition, Elmer has been unable to get around except in and about his home. He does not know, for instance, what a theater looks like; has never experienced the boyhood delights of attending a circus.

ELMER DAHLGREN.

The Invalid's Pension association of Omaha, Neb., is helping the young man with a pension of $10 a month, which has helped considerably to lighten the burden which has been placed on his mother, who has also had the care of providing a home and shelter for her mother, a blind and aged invalid of more than 90.

The pension is made possible through the idea of one John Gordon, a lifelong invalid of Omaha, Neb. Mr. Gordon's back was broken fifteen years ago and today he is bedridden and his body is lifeless from the waist down. With the help of his friends, he has established a subscription agency for magazines, the profits of which support Mr. Gordon and hundreds of other cripples around the country.

Elmer and his mother reside at 5019 Wadena street, West Duluth.

BRITISH FORCES IN GENERAL RETREAT

Turks in Full Pursuit on the Tigris, Says Constantinople.

Berlin, March 17, wireless to Sayville.—The British forces on the Tigris below Kut-el-Amara began a general retreat after their defeat near Felahie on March 8 with the Turks in pursuit, according to today's headquarters report from Constantinople, received here.

The official statement follows:

"The enemy after his defeat near Felahie on March 8, while preparing for a general retreat, attempted to attack by surprise the Turkish right wing, but under the pressure of the center was forced to desist from the plan and begin a general retreat.

"On March 10-11 Turkish troops vigorously pursued the enemy and crossed several lines previously fortified by him. On March 10 Turkish vanguards reached Zenzir height, which was fortified. The enemy, considering the Turkish insignificant, attacked, but the Turkish reinforcements counter-attacked, defeated the British and took 180 prisoners, among whom were five officers, and also captured one machine gun, arms and ammunition."

REFUSES TO BE SUSPENDED.

Patrolman Retains His Uniform and Continues to Walk Beat.

Chief of Police Vincent McKinnon yesterday filed charges of insubordination against Patrolman Gust Holm, whose "beat" is in South Superior. The specific charge that Patrolman Holm refused to change his beat with that of another patrolman located in the West end when requested to do so by the chief.

Holm was suspended this morning, but refused to accept his suspension and assumed his duties as patrolman on his former beat. The result is that South Superior now has two policemen instead of one as formerly.

The controversy was taken up by the South End Commercial club, all of whose members indorsed Patrolman Holm. A request that due consideration be given all charges has been filed with the police commissioners. The trouble is said to have been instigated by a South Superior saloon keeper. It is said that all of the residents of that section of the city are in favor of the retention of Holm for patrolman for the district.

Why Suffer From Migraine or Sick Headache?

Dr. J. J. Caldwell says that this exceedingly distressing disease does not shorten life, but does not appear to be curable. Sufferers from this affliction are condemned to undergo the periodical attacks every few weeks until they are forty years of age, after which the attacts are less frequent, and finally disappear entirely. Palliative measures during the attack are all that it is possible to suggest, while care in the diet is the best preventive measure. An attack may often be prevented by taking two anti-kamnia tablets when the first symptoms appear, and one anti-kamnia tablet every two hours during the attack shortens it, eases the pain and brings rest and quiet.

Anti-kamnia tablets may be obtained at all druggists. Ask for A-K Tablets. They quickly relieve all Pain.

SEED PRICES WILL NOT BE RAISED

"War Influence" Declared Mere Pretext; Contracts Made Year Ago.

Although the war is declared to be boosting the prices of nearly everything these days, the quotations for garden and flower seeds will not be changed to any great extent in Duluth—at least not this year. In the Twin Cities prices are reported to be soaring because of importations falling off, but local dealers say America is raising enough seed to supply the demand, except in a very few cases where there was a crop shortage, as in certain kinds of onions.

The city and country gardeners are now beginning to think about their gardens, and although the snow is too deep to allow "father" to begin turning the soil with his spade, he has daily visions of the time when he can get up at 4 a. m. and do his morning constitutional to the accompaniment of the robin.

In discussing the seed situation today, one of the chief dealers in seeds in this part of the country, said:

"There is no excuse for seed prices to go up materially this spring. Our contracts were all made a year ago, and the war is not an important element anyway. America raises nearly all the seed used, and can raise all of it."

According to reports from unbiased sources, the "war" is being used as an excuse for raising prices on seeds regardless of the local supply and demand.

TROUBLE WASN'T MUTUAL.

John Kling Admits One Half of Fight; Denies Other Half.

There was a fight on West Michigan street last night between two men and Knute Peterson, 40, was one of them. Patrolman Oscar Olson, nicknamed the "czar" of that portion of the city, was sure of that much.

Peterson, in court today, said "Yes, I had a little trouble."

John Kling, 51, the only other man in sight when Peterson was arrested, said: "No, I wasn't fighting. He may have had some trouble with me, but I didn't have any with him."

Both men were given seven-day sentences at the work farm.

Looking for Sheehan Heirs.

St. Paul, Minn., March 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—The state auditor's office is trying to locate the heirs of David E. Sheehan, whose estate, valued at more than $18,000, has escheated to the state. Sheehan, who owned a 40-acre farm in Sibley, died June 5, 1914, and all efforts to locate heirs have failed. The property was turned over to the state today and will be held for claimants.

To Go to Supreme Court.

Appleton, Wis., March 17.—The question as to whether a convent in Wisconsin, which is separated from a parochial school, although the teachers of the school live in it, can be taxed, is to be carried to the supreme court. This decision was reached today, by Rev. W. J. Fitzmaurice, St. Mary's Catholic church, following a refusal by the common council to revoke the tax.

Chinese Revolution Spreading.

Philadelphia, March 17.—Gen. Hwang Hsing, first secretary of war in the Chinese republic, who is temporarily residing in Media, Pa., near here, announced today that he had received cable advices from Shanghai that the revolution in China is advancing rapidly. The province of Kwang Si declared its independence, the general said the cablegrams stated, and had been added to the list of provinces in rebellion.

Society • Women's Clubs • Music • Drama

THE Woodland Mothers' club adopted a resolution at its monthly meeting, which was held yesterday afternoon at the E. R. Cobb school, to invite correspondence from all the mothers' clubs in the city, with the object of forming a federation of mothers' clubs. The purpose of the proposed federation is the discussion and promotion of movements of general interest in the city and the exchange of ideas on the work of mothers' clubs. A paper on child training problems was read by Mrs. L. J. Pitts.

The officers of the Woodland organization are: President, Mrs. D. E. Grim; vice president, Mrs. D. D. Sherman; secretary, Mrs. G. A. Pearce, and treasurer, Mrs. E. R. Cobb.

J. R. Batchelor, whose talk on "Public Playgrounds" was a part of the program that was given at yesterday's meeting, is strongly in favor of the proposed federation.

"I think it is an excellent idea," he said this morning. "Many schools have associations of the mothers and teachers for their own communities but there are many features in which all the clubs could co-operate for the city at large, as for instance in preparing programs. The more the clubs get together the better it will be for the city."

French Horn Solo at Twilight Concert

Director Bradbury's plan of presenting the members of the Duluth orchestra as soloists has proved so successful that he has arranged for still another at next Sunday's concert at the new armory when Charles Tryner, French horn virtuoso, will be heard in a brilliant number particularly adapted to his instrument. The idea of introducing the least familiar instruments affords an opportunity to patrons of becoming conversant with their tone and uses in the many celebrated compositions of which they form an important part in the orchestration.

The beauty of many of the great symphonies lies in the unusual tone effects produced by the general combination of strings, wood-winds and brasses, and it is in the two latter sections that instruments seldom heard aside from a complete concert orchestra are found.

In the Duluth orchestra Mr. Bradbury has been particularly fortunate this season in having players who are soloists on the unusual instruments, or those not ordinarily heard in solo work, and their introduction upon the programs of the orchestra has met with a ready response from the audience.

Sunday's program is an excellent one, made up from the choicest selections of musical literature, and will no doubt prove as popular as any of the preceding ones.

All About Scrapple

FARMERS are the best scrapple-makers, for they have the meat, cornmeal or, what is better, wheat middlings, to make it decidedly delicate, firm and good tasting. In some cities where farmers stand in the city market one may buy scrapple ready to fry. It is never expensive and is hearty, filling food.

One of the many good friends of this department sends the recipe that pleases her family; it us as follows:

Burlington Scrapple—Boil part of a hog's head until the meat comes free from the bone. Chop the meat and strain in as much of the liquid as you want to have scrapple. Season. Boil this and add cornmeal as for mush. Cook slowly, stirring often. Cool slowly, stirring often. Cool in molds. Fry brown on both sides, using very little fat, as there is usually sufficient in the scrapple.—Mrs. Fred E. Schultz.

Other recipes have been received with interesting variations. One contributor uses powdered sage, with the salt and pepper for seasoning; this would, I think, be a good addition. Still another insists that apples fried and served with the scrapple should never be forgotten. It is refreshing to hear from so many home cooks about such an oldtime dish, for did not some one write that we are all "given over to dandified foreign cookery?"

You may use scraps of cold pork well seasoned if you do not possess or cannot secure a hog's head for scrapple or have not the time for its preparation. Make the mush as usual and add the chopped meat. Cool in mold and fry. This is excellent at any meal and particularly good with rich meat gravy.

Questions and Answers.

Kindly suggest pictures suitable for nursery and tell me how to obtain them. I do not want expensive ones. I should also like to know about some simple home amusements for a girl of 4 and a boy almost 6.—Mrs. G. A.

Reply—Penny prints are used in kindergarten and primary rooms at school, and these are suitable for any home. Write to any art store or department store for a catalogue of these prints and it will be sent to you free and you can make your selection.

Both Perry and Copley prints sell at a cent each. Have glass cut the size of the pictures and cut pasteboard for the back.

Put the picture between and bind firmly with tape, strips of canvas or linen. Paste cord or a ring on the back for a hanger. This work is called passe partout and the pictures last for years.

You can buy modeling clay, willow for weaving, colored paper for cutting and paint sets at kindergarten supply stores, and these will keep your children supplied with amusement until warmer weather.

Mother Raccoon Sends Billy to Bed

"What's that funny noise I hear?" asked Flitter one evening as he and Flutter were about to begin playing. "Listen! Hear that?"

Flutter stopped and listened. So still did she hold herself that she seemed hardly to be alive.

Through the woods, silent in the evening dimness, there sounded the strangest noise—like somebody crying in distress.

"Something dreadful has happened to somebody, that's plain to tell," said Flutter, who was very kind and soft-hearted and hated to hear anyone in trouble. "But I cannot tell who it is! Let's get nearer, maybe we can be of help."

So the two little flying squirrels made their way nearer and nearer to the mournful sound.

As they got closer, they could plainly hear a whiny voice crying. "I'm so cold; and I'm so hungry; and I'm so miserable, oh-h-h-h dear! I'm so cold; and I'm so hungry; and I'm so miserable, oh-h-h-h dear!" Over and over again just that way!

"Who can that be?" whispered Flutter, in distress. "Sounds like some young creature! Why don't its mother take care of it?"

"Let's go a little closer," suggested Flitter. "Maybe, when we find out who it is, we can help."

So they ran up a beech tree and gracefully flew down nearer to where the sound came from.

And what do you suppose they saw? And what in the world did they hear?

They landed on the ground just in time to hear old Mother Raccoon, whose voice they recognized at once, say sternly: "Now, Billy, that's just enough whining for one night! I don't know what I am going to do with you to make you be a nice, manly raccoon."

"I don't want to be a nice, manly raccoon," cried Billy. "I want some supper! I'm so cold and I'm so——"

"Now don't start that story over again," interrupted Mother Raccoon. "If you are hungry, hustle around and get you something to eat—don't depend on your mother, who has too much to do already! And if you are cold, curl yourself up in a tight ball and go to sleep in a hollow tree like I have taught you to—don't whine all night! First thing you know, some of the woods folk will be coming to see what is the matter with you! I'd be ashamed to be found so lazy!" And without further words, Mother Raccoon went on about her business.

"Think we'd better let him know we are here?" asked Flitter in a whisper.

"Let's not," replied Flutter, "for some day he will be ashamed of his laziness and then he would wish we didn't know!"

So Billy Raccoon went grumblingly to bed, and the two little flying squirrels went back to their play. I think it was kind of them to keep still, don't you?

Brooklyn Artist Speaks on Freak Fashions for Women

Leon Dabo, a Brooklyn artist, who spoke one afternoon this week before a woman's club in Brooklyn on the evolution of fashion, ridiculed hats until nobody in his audience dared put up her hand to feel if her crown of glory happened to be on at the right or at a wrong angle. He said the modern shoe had absolutely no relation to the shape of the foot and accused American women of having no taste and being wholly dependent on the French fashion makers, whom he characterized as artists, not dressmakers.

Greek Fashions.

Mr. Dabo, according to the Brooklyn Eagle, pointed out that the Greeks for several centuries clung to one type of costume. Of course he referred to the Greek women, as he all but ignored the fact that men's fashions have included sweeping plumes, gorgeous silk and velvet costumes—they might almost be called "creations," ruffles and even muffs. He said that there were two types of costumes for the ancient Greeks, as class distinction made it necessary for the lady and the slave to dress differently.

"The flowing garments that hampered were in ancient times the sign of the class that did not have to labor, as distinguished from the others who had to wear clothes in which they could move freely and work," he said.

"Queen Elizabeth, if you will remember," he told his audience, "had it all mapped out concretely in her days. The wife of a fish monger was to spend so much for dress, and it was to be only just so many inches wide and so on. And the influence of these arbitrary laws which governed fashion then is felt even today. Every once in a while a judge will think his conscience has been shocked and he will issue a decree that sleeves must only be seven or seventeen inches long. You see the belief in man, who has bossed the job for so long, is still inherent, that by the passing of a law he can influence fashion."

The Modern Shoe.

Of the modern shoe he said: "What relationship has it to the shape of the human foot? None whatever. When I see the shoe, I sometimes wonder just how a woman got her foot into it—shoe-horn or no shoe-horn. But women have an idea that a small foot is beautiful. It isn't," he added. "Only when a foot is in proportion to the human body is it beautiful. You know it actually gives me pain to see a big, strapping woman with a small foot. But it all goes back to what I said—women wearing these shoes show that they are 'ladies,' and do not have to indulge in heavy work. The dainty shoe is essentially a carriage shoe. But what happens? You get them for about $11. Nothing but a show of vicarious and conspicuous consumption are these shoes—neither a protection against weather nor dust."

And in the same class Dr. Dabo put the wearing of white gloves. "They soil so easily that you can only wear them once; and so, to appear often with a pair of immaculate gloves means that you have several pairs."

"Your hats," he said, "are neither a protection from the sun nor rain. Do you know how a woman goes to buy a hat? Let me tell you.

"She goes to a store and picks out the most beautifully arranged wires and sprays and dyed pigeons and things she can pick out, and then, instead of putting this object in the curio cabinet, she puts it on her head. Of course, its a 'duck of a hat,' but very often it does not suit the wearer.

French Are Artists.

"Why do we Americans go to Paris to study art and get fashions?

"Why don't we go to Germany?" he asked. "The Germans are more akin to us—the French are Latins. Because the French know how to twist 10 cents worth of ribbons into 500 francs, and make it worth every penny of it.

French fashions are superior, and the superiority is based on law and not on taste. Oh! how you American women abuse taste. Each of you professes to have it—but aside from a blonde knowing that she should not wear certain colors and a brunette's knowledge that she must avoid others, what do you really know about the fundamentals?"

Vertical and horizontal lines, beloved of fashion dictators and psychologists, as illustrative of optical illusions, were not relied upon by Mr. Dabo in his suggestions to women who want to hide defects.

Effect of Colors.

The Brooklyn artist suggested that a thin arm be made to look plump by a bit of color at the shoulder and that an arm which is too large be made to look slender by a flashing ring.

"Dress Specialist" Is New Occupation

Portland Telegram: Did you ever hear of a dress specialist? There are beauty specialists who aim to improve complexion, hair, hands and all the physical attributes of womankind. There should also be costume specialists. There are a few, and the work opens an interesting, if small, field to women of taste—and tact.

There are many women who wish to dress well, but who really don't know how. They cannot choose clothes that bring out their best points. They don't know when hats are becoming. They haven't the fine sense that points out the difference between things that are smart and up to date and things that are too extreme to be in good taste.

It is for women such as this that the clothes specialist can work. And she ought, in a community of reasonable size, to be able to make a good income. One customer will recommend her to another, and her clientele may grow very large.

The requisites to a clothes specialist are good taste, tact, and what is called clothes sense. If she is also a woman of charm and personality, her work will be so much the easier and more successful.

She must know when she sees a woman with a tiny head in a huge hat that a toque would look smarter on that particular type. She must know that the dumpy little woman who wears roundabout stripes would gain dignity and bearing in a plain navy blue broadcloth for the street. She must know that each woman should study her mirror, her individuality, rather than the fashion sheets. After a

Thought Being Given to Handling of Crowd for Damrosch Concert

Every one of the 3,500 people who went to the John McCormack concert at the new armory may take heart. There is not going to be any repetition of that exasperating delay and life-endangering crowding when the New York Symphony orchestra appears here March 28. Careful arrangements have been made to prevent it, the McCormack concert having taught the needed lesson.

To begin with, start early, and be seated by 8:15, which does not mean to be leaving home, wherever it is, at ten minutes past 8. Then when you reach the armory, if you have a dollar ticket clutched firmly in your hand, you will find the doors on Thirteenth avenue more than ready to receive you, while four—count them—four competent and intelligent ticket takers—college graduates—will usher you gently to your seats. No surging and swaying helplessly with the crowd this time.

The box seat and $1.50 seat holders will go in at the London road entrance, where again will be found "platoons" of ticket takers and myriads of ushers, to see that they reach their seats not only alive, but comfortably. The same excellent management will control the parking of automobiles under the direction of numerous policemen who will be detailed by Commissioner Silberstein to see that traffic moves smoothly. So anyone who is remembering the crush at the McCormack concert and is hesitating between buying tickets to the New York Symphony concert or enlisting in the Mexican war, may put off the latter until after March 28.

Peggy Peabody's Observations

Don't Coddle Children

A 10-months-old baby fell head foremost out of bed the other day and the cry that he set up should have plainly told his parents that he had not been killed or seriously injured. His mother snatched him from the floor and hugged him to her breast quite as though she never intended to unfasten her arms and allow him a breathing spell. The father was more practical. He took his little son from his mother's arms and proceeded to examine the little head for bumps and to peer anxiously into the mild blue eyes of the child for some sign of the nature and extent of his injuries.

When it was apparent that the child was not injured the father jokingly remarked that it was as well that the little fellow had taken it upon himself to fall out of bed, otherwise he might have been pushed out. It is the belief that a baby, to amount to anything, must fall out of bed before he is a year old, and most of them do, too, whether they amount to anything or not.

After a baby has fallen out of bed he must naturally pull his high-chair over while he is sitting bolt upright in it. They always do. When he commences to creep, there is a fall and an ugly and even dangerous bump or bruise awaiting him at every turn. And, of course, he will fall into the coal hod, and burn his little fingers on his tours of investigation.

As the baby grows to be a boy the next thing you know he is climbing trees and falling off the roof of a barn. It would be all very well if the mother could be spared to care for him all the days of his life, but in the natural course of events she cannot. So the best thing a mother can do is to teach her children to take their knocks philosophically and not to cry too much over them or pay too much attention to them.

We gets knocks from the cradle to the grave of one kind and another and we should be trained to take them. Don't made a mollycoddle out of your boy because you are afraid that he may hurt himself. Let him climb trees and investigate the ridgepole rather than develop the clinging, dependent type that falls in all things because he has never been placed upon his own responsibility.

SIDE TALKS

By RUTH CAMERON

Untruthful People

HOW easy it is to understand how scandals and untrue reports of one sort or another start!

A friend or mine was married recently to a man whom none of her friends knew. The wedding was private and naturally her friends are now very anxious to know what the man is like.

Someone brought up the topic the other day and one of her friends said, "I'm crazy to see her and I suggested going out to call, but Lucy didn't seem a bit cordial. I think it's awfully queer. Do you suppose she doesn't want us to meet him?"

The Explanation Was Simple.

"Why, Gertrude," spoke up another woman, "how can you suggest that? The reason Lucy doesn't want us to come out yet is because she lives so far out. You know she told us both the other day that she was afraid we wouldn't feel repaid if we came just for the day and that as soon as she got her guest-room fixed up, she wants us to come out and spend the night."

Before the vigorous breath of this explanation the insinuation of "Do you suppose she doesn't want us to meet him?" was thoroughly withered. But suppose the second woman had not been there to deliver that explanation, what then? Can't you imagine into what ugly monster of rumor that accusation might have grown? It would be only a step from "Do you suppose she doesn't want us to meet him?" to "She doesn't seem to want us to meet him," and from that to "She's ashamed of him," and from that to guessing at a cause for that shame and thence to stating that guess as a fact.

Not a Lie But an Untruth.

"Rose telephoned that she was up a lot in the night with the baby," one of my housemates told me the other day.

"Why, that's funny," said I. "She didn't exactly say that she was up with the baby, but she said she didn't get much sleep and I supposed she meant that."

"I imagine she meant that she had a short sleep, because she didn't get home from the dance until 1 o'clock."

"Oh, yes," said my informant, "I guess that's what she did mean. I'm glad the baby is better."

The Way We Mix Facts and Fiction.

That's another example of the way facts become transformed as they pass from mouth to mouth. In this case there was no unkind insinuation and no harm done. I quote it merely because it shows the way in which we translate and add to facts, incorporate the translation or the addition with the original fact, and pass it on as a part thereof.

I know that either of these women would be horrified to be told that she was not truthful. But surely no one who garbles and misinterprets what has been said to her is truthful in the very strictest sense of the word.

Hair Often Ruined By Washing With Soap

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonsful will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy; it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.—Advertisement.

woman knows all about her own looks she may think about the clothes she is to buy.

This expert must also know much about color, for color is almost as important as line and cut in determining the becoming quality of clothes. She must know that certain shades of red hair look best when the owner dresses in dark blue or black. Other shades can stand brown. She must know which type of blonde can wear bright colors, which type looks better in dull and light shades. She must realize that tone of skin as well as color of eyes and hair counts in the color scheme of a woman's dress.

The woman who would make a success as a dress expert must study her patrons tactfully, but thoroughly, and must insist that she needs a free hand—subject to suggestion, of course—if she is to give satisfaction. Then she must work hard and work well.

Relief Association Will Get $1,731.99; Receipts Set New Record.

This year's annual ball, held on Feb. 15 at the new National Guard armory, Thirteenth avenue east and London road, was the largest in point of attendance and the most successful financially.

In all, the report shows, 1,987 tickets were sold, netting $2,079.50. Expenses amounted to $347.51. The gain in net receipts over any previous year was approximately $400.

On the night of the ball those in charge estimated that between 5,000 and 6,500 persons danced or thronged the galleries.

OPIUM TRAFFIC IS EXPOSED IN FILM

"Hop, the Devil's Brew" Is Feature at Orpheum-Strand.

The never-ending fight between Uncle Sam and the men behind the opium ring in the United States is being shown in a sensational way at the Orpheum-Strand theater this week.

"Hop, the Devil's Brew," is the title of the picture, which is one of the Bluebird series and which will remain at the Orpheum-Strand until Sunday night, inclusive.

The picture was made with two objects in view, one to expose the opium traffic and its evils and the other to entertain with an interesting and exciting love story. There is a well-defined plot running through the picture, telling a story of love and sacrifice, and, in addition, Uncle Sam cooperated in the expose of the opium traffic. There are many thrilling scenes showing exciting combats between government agents and the opium smugglers, actual scenes in Chinatown and opium raids by secret service agents.

Monday the Orpheum-Strand will present Miss Helen Ware in another of the Bluebird feature plays.

CHAPLIN POPULAR AT GRAND.

Movie Comedian and Good Vaudeville Bill Draw Big Crowds.

Charlie Chaplin in one of his latest Essanay comedies and a corking good vaudeville program combined to make an excellent week-end show at the New Grand. Crowded houses featured afternoon and evening performances yesterday, and it is expected that people will be turned away during the remainder of the engagement because of the popularity of the show. Chaplin had not been seen at the Grand for many weeks, and his appearance yesterday in a dual role, showed that the king of movie comedians is just as popular as ever.

The outstanding feature of the vaudeville bill is the original and remarkably clever athletic act of the Three Bartos. These boys have not been seen in Duluth before, and it is safe to say that many of their turns have not been seen here. They combine strength with cleverness, and put up an act that is far ahead of nearly all of the athletic features on the vaudeville circuits.

Brown and Jackson in "The Clubman and the Suffragette" offer a bright bit of song and repartee with some good eccentric dancing by Mr. Brown thrown in for good measure. Mr. Brown is about seven feet tall, and is ludicrous in a bell hop's uniform. Miss Jackson is a very attractive young woman who dresses and talks well and sings in a very entertaining manner.

Karlton and Klifford offer a new wrinkle in art, producing reproductions of noted paintings upon the stage. Their work is original in that they produced their pictures from behind the canvas, the outline and filling in appearing in colors in silhouette form.

Dale and Boyle in "A Belle and a Beau" present a musical and dancing diversion.

The photoplay program is unusually strong. In addition to Charlie Chaplin there is Lillian Walker, the "girl with the dimples," in a Ytagraph-comedy-drama, "Her Bad Quarter of an Hour," and several other shorter films. The Selig-Tribune shows Colonel Roosevelt returning from the West Indies and many important news events.

Theater Gossip.

THIS GIRL WAS "FORCED" TO GO ON STAGE.

This is a story of a young woman who didn't want to go on the stage at all, but "they just made her." She will be at the Lyceum today in "The Marriage Game," with Florence Stone. In Minneapolis there lived a little blue-eyed, golden-haired and rosy-checked young miss, who attended high school. Her name was Marie Gale. She seldom attended the theaters, for her interest was in her books.

About that time—1913, to be exact—a Minneapolis stock manager was rehearsing a Christmas fairy play, "Snow White" or "The Seven Dwarfs." Among Miss Gale's school girl friends was a young woman, who nourished stage ambitions. She applied to the manager for a change to "go on" as an extra girl. "Go," said he, "and get me another girl—she must be a blonde, and I'll give you both a chance, but I've got to have two girls. If you don't find her, don't come back."

The little girl thought of her friend. It was her one great chance to really act. Would Marie come with her. She would not—firmly and decidedly she would not. The other pleaded, begging Marie not to destroy this one chance of a lifetime. With her mother's consent, little Miss Gale went to the theater, and even more urging was required before she would take part in the performance.

During the two weeks' run of the play, the stage director observed the quiet Miss Gale was not self-conscious, as so many beginners are. At the conclusion of "Snow White," Miss Gale left the theater without even asking for a chance to appear in some other play. Later, the same manager needed a young woman, just to walk "on and off" in a drama. He thought of Miss Gale, but hadn't her address. From the friend he got it. Would she come? Again "no." More coaxing was necessary, and finally Miss Gale came. Then came a play where a young girl was to speak a few lines. Again would Miss Gale come? Another negative answer, for the young woman didn't care for the stage, and said so.

To make a long story short, it was not until Miss Gale had appeared in a dozen parts, and all with unusual success for a girl without previous experience that the young woman seriously considered becoming an actress, and to this day she insists the work "was forced upon her."

MARY PICKFORD AT LYRIC

Who does not know Mary Pickford? The most notable stars of the stage for a century past were not known to as many different people as this charming little woman, whose name in America is a household word. "Little Mary" at the Lyric tomorrow will romp through a two-hour picture called "Poor Little Peppina," written especially for this talented actress.

As a little Italian boy, as a stowaway, and in numerous other roles she plays out the story. She also becomes a bootblack, a "newsie," a fruit vender and a messenger boy. Her adventures almost come to a sudden end when she takes employment in an opium den. A number of Italian actors take part in this picture that packed New York theaters to standing room.

BIG CROWDS SEE BESSIE BARRISCALE AT THE REX.

The Rex theater, when showing notable Triangle pictures of the dramatic form, such as "The Last Act," in which Miss Bessie Barriscale has won her way to the hearts of the American public, always offers a comedy in addition.

Following the hour or more today and tomorrow that will be enjoyed with the "darling of the stage," Bessie Barriscale, one may also see Chester Conklin in "Cinders of Love," "Slim" Summerville, Claire Anderson and many others contributing to a screaming picture of a story having to do with the rivalry between two local fire department companies. It is a farce that has been highly praised, with a thread of love running through its amusing meshes of jealousies and plotting.

Miss Barriscale yesterday played to the largest mid-week houses the Rex has had for many a day.

EDESON SURPRISES ZELDA PATRONS AS A COMEDIAN.

Theatergoers are being given a pleasant surprise this week at the Zelda in Robert Edeson, the famous stage and screen star, who is appearing at this popular playhouse in a role entirely new to him.

Duluthians who have seen Mr. Edeson in "Pine Feathers" and "Strongheart" and enjoyed his dramatic powers will be surprised to learn that he is appearing in the role of a comedian.

This is the first time that Mr. Edeson has attempted a part of this kind. "The Cave Man," in which Mr. Edeson appears, is a clean comedy drama in five parts, which not only allows him to display his versatility as a comedian, but also allows him to show his dramatic ability.

The story in brief tells of how a coal heaver becomes in the short space of a few days through a matter of circumstances, the rage of society. What happens after he makes his debut in the "400" keeps the audience in a roar of laughter.

"The Cave Man" will show for the last time tonight.

RARE DISPLAY OF NORTHERN LIGHTS

Aurora Hangs in Great Orange Curtains Across the Sky.

The northern lights, or the aurora borealis, were on the job last night, and in beauty such as Duluth has rarely, if ever, seen before. It was one of the most wonderful displays of the kind reported in years. The aurora looked like a great golden curtain over a wide stretch of the sky, a curtain which was being shaken by a breeze, for it appeared to be quivering and scintillating. It covered more than half of the heavens about midnight and was very brilliant despite a full moon.

In view of the war, it may be that some of the more superstitious will look upon the unusual display of the lights as presaging some unusual happening. It was supposed in bygone generations that a great display of northern lights foretold the death of kings or noted men. In "Edinboro After Flodden," Ayon says:

"All last night the northern streamers
Flashed across the trembling sky;
Fearful lights that never beacon
Save when kings or heroes die."

BELGIAN REFUSES TO PAY GERMAN MONEY

Appleton, Wis., March 17.—After having apparently come to an agreement in court to settle a $35 case, Albert De Coster, the defendant, today said: "I am a Belgian and never as long as I live will I pay that German, John Wendt, that money. I don't care what they do with me. I will carry the case to the supreme court before I pay that German."

STATE SUES LUMBER COMPANY FOR $39,335

St. Paul, Minn., March 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Attorney General Smith today began suit in the Ramsey county district court against the Grand Forks Lumber company for damages amounting to $39,335. Two logging permits under which the company operated are the basis of the suit.

In the complaint filed, it is alleged that two logging permits issued to the company in 1902 and 1905 are void because the auditor was not aware that the timber sold was in excess of 100,000 feet. S. G. Iverson made a cash sale of the timber in question to the lumber company for $3,445. It is held that the timber was greatly in excess of that figure and the state is now demanding the difference.

LED FIRE AGAINST VILLA BANDITS

Former Resident of Wisconsin Did Good Work at Columbus.

Madison, Wis., March 17.—Capt. Jens Stedje, a former resident of Stoughton, Wis., led the fire against the Villa bandits at Columbus, N. M., last week, according to an account given by Maj. Tompkins, as translated from the Scandinavian, which reads:

"The best stroke during the pursuit was a revolver attack led by Capt. Jens Stedje who had been transferred from the Thirteenth to the Fourth Regiment of cavalry. That was the finest military maneuver I have seen. Stedje advanced under cover toward Villa's men until the opportunity for attack was favorable. Then with hurrahs, his men suddenly crossed over and made an attack with their automatic revolvers with deadly effect, and Villa's men tried to counter-fire and they fell like flies. This was where the loss was greatest. Villa's men turned and fled, leaving two cannon and a great deal of ammunition."

Capt. Stedje referred to lived in Madison in 1882 and 1883. At that time he enlisted in the regular army.

CITY MAY BUILD VAULT.

Would Enlarge Quarters of Assessor at City Hall.

City officials have received permission from the state board of control to construct a vault between the city hall and police station.

John de Waard, local architect, is in receipt of a communication from the board, allowing the city the privilege to build the vault adjoining the present council chamber and connecting with the second floor of the station. This vault would be used by the assessor, who will exchange his offices for the council room in the near future. The vault will cost approximately $500, according to plans now being prepared by Mr. de Waard.

Because of cramped conditions in the basement and the smoke and foul air that fill the rooms, the city assessor recently requested the commissioners to make a change. Commissioner Voss will present his plan to the council next Monday, with a request that the construction of the vault and the other improvements necessary for the changing of the offices be authorized.

If the change is made, the council chambers will be located in the assessor's present quarters in the basement.

as the regular budget, together with requirements for providing for the public debt, balanced without them. The secretary also replied to criticisms that he had shown a lack of originality in devising the new taxes declaring he cared more for money than for originality.

Dr. Helfferich urged the reichstag to expedite the financial legislation, saying that the new taxes would provide 10,000,000 marks each week for carrying on the war.

The secretary compared the financial resources of Germany as exhibited during the war with those of her enemies. He said France up to the present had not raised even 10,000,000 marks in war loans, and that England had raised between 18,000,000,000 and 19,000,000,000 marks of which 15,000,000,000 was in the form of a short term floating debt. Germany, he said, had raised 25,000,000,000 marks and all the loans had been consolidated. At the same time the cost of the war in January and February fell below 2,000,000,000 marks.

Deposits Increased.

German savings banks, the secretary continued, now have deposits 500,000,000 marks in excess of 1914 in addition to which 4,500,000,000 marks has been withdrawn from the banks for war loan investments.

Germany's enemies, Dr. Helfferich asserted, are carrying on a campaign of defamation which extends even into this country, where paid agents spread rumors for the purpose of impairing the success of war loans.

The secretary reminded the reichstag of the battle now in progress at Verdun, saying:

"Our troops have the right to expect that we at home prove worthy of them, and also that everyone shall contribute as he is able in the effort to bring about victory and peace."

TRAITOROUS PARTISANSHIP.

Here's one group of Americans, inspired by partisan and personal motives, shouting at the tops of their voices that the United States ought to wade in and conquer all Mexico.

That's enough to scare the distracted Mexicans into resistance.

There's another group, inspired by the same motives, shouting at the tops of their voices that the United States army is a pitifully weak thing, small in numbers and miserably equipped.

That's enough to lead the Mexicans to believe that they could resist successfully.

Seeking personal and political profit, these so called Americans are inviting calamity and shame—for it would be a calamity to become involved in a war with Mexico when international relations are so precarious, and it would be a shame for us to fight needlessly a nation so impoverished, so distracted, so forlorn and so altogether weak as Mexico.

Never in all the history of the land, surely, has mere partisanship been so bent on exhibiting its hollowness, its lack of patriotism and its bigoted folly, as it is today.

"Tub-antia" is such an exceedingly appropriate name for some boats.

A BILL TO BE WATCHED.

The Shields water power bill has passed the senate and will shortly be before the house. There is much discussion of it, and there should be. It is vitally important, and its importance will increase rapidly in the future if it becomes law. And the subject it covers is always increasingly important.

Conservationists are much worked up about the bill, and condemn it as a betrayal of the public interest. Others say it is a pretty fair bill, and that it should be passed.

Two points are fairly clear about it:

First, that it gives public water power, the last remaining public resource and soon to be the most important public resource, away to private concerns for development to their profit, virtually without compensation to the public.

Second, that it carries no adequate provision for regulation of the rates to be charged the public by these private concerns. This is left largely to state control, and in some of the states having large water powers either the machinery or the will to regulate in the public interest is likely to be lacking. This should be cared for definitely in the bill that passes congress.

It is a question, too, whether the provisions intended to prevent monopoly of water power are strong enough. This privilege of power distribution will tend naturally to monopoly, and already has gone far along that road. Congress would be either amazingly stupid or criminally culpable if it left this great natural resource open to the uses of monopoly.

It is probably true that if water power were sewed up too tightly it would be impossible to induce capital to develop it. If it is open on terms too loose, there will be no public benefit and much public harm. Congress surely ought to be able to find a middle course that will open water power to use, and still protect the public interest. It is the business of congress to find this middle course; and if it fails, then the president should veto the bill.

French regiments that retreat under fire are to be fired upon. Evidently a French regiment is likely to be a reasonably unhealthy place from now on.

RESTRICTING IMMIGRATION.

Word comes from Washington that the Burnett immigration bill with its literacy test probably has not only votes enough to pass, but to pass over the president's veto when he uses it, as he did once before and as Roosevelt and Taft did before him.

Pretty nearly everybody is agreed, probably, that the immigration meshes ought to strain a little finer hereafter. The issue is whether a literacy test is the best way to do it.

On its face, it sounds plausible enough, but it does not analyze very well. Rascals can be educated, and are all the greater rascals for their education. It is well enough to have our immigrants come educated; but is it right to shut out people who, because of tyranny and oppression, are denied education? It doesn't sound right. It doesn't sound like America to lay down such a rule.

Some of the opposition is on this ground. Some of it is from large employers interested in regular importation of large supplies of cheap labor; and that sort of thing the country ought to be dead against at all times.

Immigration should hereafter be restricted. The literacy test is not the right way—certainly it is not the best way—to limit it.

The Dillingham bill has again been introduced, but seems not to get the attention it should have. Besides ordinary precautions against diseased, defective and undesirable aliens generally, it lays down the rule that the annual immigration from any country shall not be more than ten per cent of the number of people from that country already here. That rule is the best one. Perhaps ten per cent is too much—maybe five per cent is enough; that can readily be figured. But that rule would restrict immigration, and it would also do away finally with all causes of friction between the United States and Japan arising from the immigration question.

The bills mostly considered simply shut out Japanese because they are Japanese, and thereby give mortal affront to a sensitive people.

The Dillingham bill would shut out Japanese because there are but few of them here, but it would apply to the Japanese the same rule that applies to all others, and so would accomplish the desired end while saving Japan's face.

It is desirable to limit the amount of immigration and to improve its quality. It isn't necessary, though, to be stupid about it; and it seems stupid to insist on the Burnett bill and neglect the Dillingham bill, which would achieve the same purpose without injustice and would at the same time solve the Japanese immigration problem harmoniously.

Advocates of increased armament should note that the initials of "Philippine Islands" are the exact reverse of those of "immediate preparedness." Which might be taken as an indication that one essential of preparedness is to get rid of the Philippines.

THE SUPREME COURT AND THE TRADING STAMP.

The supreme court of the United States lately had before it for consideration the trading stamp. It tried it, adjudged it, and condemned it.

The trading stamp concerns attempt to justify it in part as advertising, and in part as an encouragement to thrift. On both these counts the supreme court held the argument baseless and misleading.

The case came before the court on the issue of the constitutionality of laws of the states of Florida and Washington imposing prohibitive taxation on trading stamps. Trading stamp concerns contended these laws to be unconstitutional as an interference with a legitimate business, which they sought to justify on the grounds above stated—advertising and encouragement of thrift.

The issue really was, then, whether the trading stamp is a legitimate enterprise. If it is, then of course prohibitive taxation would be unconstitutional and would very properly be held void.

But the supreme court, in effect, held that the trading stamp is NOT a legitimate enterprise, thereby coinciding with the views of the great majority of merchants who have refused to be inveigled into its use.

Justice McKenna, who wrote the opinion, made short work of the arguments for trading stamps. Advertising he defined as identification: as a process by which attention is called to an article and its merits, the article to be sold for its intrinsic value alone.

"But the givers of premium stamps," he said, "rely upon something else than the article sold; they tempt by a promise of values * * * apparently not represented in the purchase price, and THUS BY AN APPEAL TO CUPIDITY LURE TO IMPROVIDENCE."

The trading stamp is not encouragement to thrift, but a "lure to improvidence." It purports to give something for nothing; but full payment is exacted in the end. It is simply a needless addition to the cost of merchandising, for which either the merchant or the consumer must pay. That is why states pass laws against it. That is why the supreme court, in upholding these laws, has condemned the trading stamp and thereby probably has given it its death sentence.

And now Von Tirpitz has had to resign on account of illness. Possibly an acute attack of submarinitis.

State Police.

The World's Work: Some one once asked a chief of the Texas Rangers to explain the remarkable exploits of his men in arresting desperate criminals single-handed. His reply was: "A man that knows he is in the wrong can't stand up against a man that knows he is in the right—and keeps on coming."

That is one of the chief merits of all state police, whether they be Texas Rangers, Northwest Mounted Police, or the State Constabulary of Pennsylvania. They are trained to "keep on coming."

In the nine years that the Pensylvania Constabulary has kept order in that state, the number of times its men have had to use their weapons is relatively very small, and the deadly effectiveness with which they did use them when they had to has made it possible, for example, for six men to quell a riot of more than 1,000 strikers and sympathizers in Pottsville by simply riding slowly and silently through the streets.

How to Pay For Preparedness

Frederick C. Howe in the New Republic.

When our common safety is involved certain principles should be axiomatic. One of these principles is that the sacrifice involved should be equal. And equality of sacrifice involves equality of financial sacrifice. The burdens should be equally distributed. Even in times of peace this should be the last postulate of justice and democracy. The program for protection should include the kinds of taxes to be levied and the classes that will pay them, as well as the objects for which these taxes are to be expended.

There is no difference of opinion on the part of economists that indirect taxes on consumption, on the things people use, are mostly paid by the poor, by those least able to pay them. There is probably not a political economist in any nation who does not agree that indirect taxes are unjust in their incidence, that they are class taxes, and in their operation are exaggerated poll taxes. For indirect taxes only yield a substantial revenue when levied on such commodities as sugar, wool, cotton, cigars, tobacco, beer, chemicals and the things all people use. They yield but little when collected from luxuries.

Taxes on incomes and inheritances, on the other hand, are direct. They are paid by the rich and well to do. If we examine the Federal taxes of the United States we find that for fifty years we have collected almost all of our revenues from indirect taxes.

The total sum so collected has amounted to about $20,000,000,000, almost all from consumption. Only within the past few years has any tax been levied on wealth. Even today we secure less than $80,000,000 from the taxes on incomes and from corporations. Last year the revenue from these sources was but $60,000,000. Wealth, income and inheritances yielded but one-eleventh of our revenues; taxes on consumption yielded ten-elevenths.

Whn we compare this with the countries of Europe we find that a very much larger sum is collected from the well-to-do. Great Britain in peace times (1914) collected $236,245,000 from the income tax, and $136,795,000 from taxes on inheritances. All told, she collected $380,115,000 from wealth in one form or another. Had the same per capita ratio been applied to the United States we would have collected about $800,000,000 from wealth instead of one-fifteenth of that sum.

The shifting of taxes for our common defense on to those least able to bear them is indefensible. It means that the many who have but little shall carry the burdens of defense, while the rich and very rich are burdened hardly at all. And even an approach to equality of sacrifice would provide for the collection of at least one-half of our Federal revenues from taxes on wealth, incomes and inheritances instead of a ninth or an eighth of that sum as has been proposed.

Fashions For Men

Emporia Gazette: Emporia men who have been worrying about what to wear next summer, and who live in daily dread of appearing in the wrong thing, may set their minds at rest. The national convention of merchant tailors, in session in St. Louis, has settled the question, and, it seems, settled to the satisfaction of every glass of fashion who wears men's clothes in Emporia. Here is the list of what the men who prepared the list say is absolutely necessary if a man would be strictly up-to-date in the matter of clothes. The probable cost is listed:

Lounge suit, single breasted sack, $65.
Business walking suit for the forenoon, $75.
One or two-button frock cutaway for the afternoon, worn with striped trousers, $80.
A double breasted frock for the day, wedding or the promenade, dark trousers with light stripe, $80.

Washington Star: "What's the reason this train's late?" said the restless passenger.

"I don't know," replied the conductor.

"You have said, 'I don't know' or 'I forget,' to every question I have asked."

"Well, I'm training for promotion. I'm an ambitious man. And some day I may meet an influential director who will take a fancy to the way I could answer questions if I was testifying in an investigation."

Rippling Rhymes

By Walt Mason

The Annual Paintfest.

The time's at hand, O sons of toil, to buy eight quarts of linseed oil, and half a peck of lead and zinc, and paint the house that's on the blink. O, wield the brush with gladsome shout, till painter's colic knocks you out. There's nothing sadder than a shack that's gone to ruin and to rack because the owner is too tight to buy some paint and make it bright. I buy some pigment every spring, and paint the smokehouse and the swing, and if no pigment is for sale, I buy some hogment with my kale, and paint the chimney, tall and broad, the cistern and the lightning rod. I buy shellac and turpentine and make the whole blamed diggings shine, and thus I gladden up the hearts of people in their choo-choo carts, who scorch along the dusty road, and rubber at my gay abode. "Gee whiz," they cry, "that old fat bard must buy his shoatment by the yard! A fine example he has set to all the world, already yet!"

Keep the Back Yard Busy

From the Kansas City Star.

Even the smallest back yard may be made to yield a supply of fresh vegetables for the family table at but slight expense if two or three crops are successively grown to keep the area occupied all the time, according to the garden specialists of the United States department of agriculture. People who would discharge a clerk if he did not work the year round will often cultivate a garden at no little trouble and expense and then allow the soil to lie idle from the time the first crop matures until the end of the season. Where a two or three-crop system is used in connection with vegetables adapted to small areas, a space no larger than twenty-five to seventy feet will produce enough fresh vegetables for a small family. Corn, melons, cucumbers and potatoes and other crops which require a large area should not be grown in a garden of this size. Half an acre properly cultivated with a careful crop rotation may easily produce $100 worth of various garden crops in a year.

If the garden was not broken in the fall it should be plowed in the spring as soon as the frost is out of the ground. Small areas may be worked with a spade, pushing the blade into its full depth and turning the soil to break up the clods. Heavy soils should never be worked when wet. Overzealous gardeners, ready to seize the first warm spell as a favorable opportunity to go out and work the heavy clay before it is dry, are not only wasting their energy, but are doing a damage to the soil from which it will take years for it to recover. To determine when heavy soils are ready for plowing, a handful of earth should be collected from the surface and the fingers tightly closed on it. If the ball of compacted earth is dry enough for cultivation it will fall apart when the hand is opened.

A garden spot near the house is often more desirable than a plot which is in better tilth, but located at an inconvenient distance. A garden which is near the house will receive many a spare hour of care from adults and children which would otherwise be wasted. Where there is ample room for the selection of a garden site, the slope of the land should be carefully considered. A gentle slope towards the south is most desirable for growing early crops, while it is a decided advantage to have the plot protected on the north and northwest by either a hill, a group of buildings or a board fence.

Drainage of the garden is of great importance. The land should have sufficient fall to drain off surplus water during heavy rains and yet not be so steep that the soil will be washed or gullied. The surface should be nearly level so the water will not stand in hollows. Where the natural slope of the land does not provide sufficient natural drainage, ditches may be dug or a tile drain put in. This will prevent waste water from the adjoining land from washing over it. Such water may carry weed and grass seed into the garden, which are later culled out with difficulty.

The soil in the average back yard is not only lacking in plant food, but also has been packed until it is hard and unyielding. To loosen up such soil and make it suitable for garden produce requires that careful attention be given to its preparation. After spading the inclosure thoroughly, the upper three inches should be made fine with the use of hoe and rake. Stones and rubbish should be removed and clods of dirt broken. The surface should be made even and as level as possible. It may then be marked off for planting in conformity with the general plan of the garden.

Barnyard or stable manure is the best fertilizer because it furnishes both plant food and humus. An application at the rate of from twenty to thirty tons to the acre of well rotted manure is very satisfactory. This should be applied after plowing or working with a spade and distributed evenly over the surface and later worked in with a hoe and rake. On many soils it is advisable to apply commercial fertilizer, especially phosphate, in addition to the manure. An application of 300 to 600 pounds of acid phosphate to the acre is usually sufficient. If additional potash is needed, which is often the case with sandy soils, this may be economically supplied in the form of wood ashes. If the wood ashes are unleached they should be distributed over the garden, using 1,000 pounds to the acre. If they have been wet, or leached 2,000 pounds should be used. An application of 100 pounds to the acre of nitrate of soda may be used in the spring to start the plants before the nitrogen in the manure has become available. It should be borne in mind that commercial fertilizers will not yield good results unless the soil is well supplied with humus. Sod or other vegetation which has overgrown a garden spot may be used to advantage. It should be turned under with a plow or a spade and will aid in lightening the soil and providing humus.

The German Farmer

Century: The interests of the farmer are carefully conserved in Germany as those of the city dweller, for the farmer is a most important factor in preparedness. The German government has paid out hundreds of millions of dollars in subsidies for the farmer. It protects him against foreign competition. It has subsidized an army of chemists to increase the fertility of his fields. A model system of inland waterways, run in collaboration with the railways, assures him cheap transportation. In times of stress special railroad rates are granted to save him from disaster. Expert personal advice is furnished for his smallest problems, and care is taken to insure a ready market for his products. Co-operative associations provide for the small farmer the most modern machinery at a moderate rental. If he has to borrow money on mortgage or to make a short-term loan to get in his crop, a system of land bank associations assures him easy terms. He pays between 3 and 4 per cent for his money on mortgage, and about 5 per cent on short loans.

The American farmer who can obtain money at double the German rate is lucky. We permit a chaotic system of distribution whereby the farmer gets only a third of the value of his product, the rest being swallowed up in transporation charges and by the numerous middlemen.

The result is that while Germany has doubled her agricultural production in twenty years, with virtually no increase in acreage, we have been declining steadily to agricultural unpreparedness. The German farmer's acre of worn-out soil has been made to yield twice the product of our young field.

The Nevermore.

Look in my face; my name is Might-have-been;
I am also called No-more, Too-late, Farewell;
Unto thine ear I hold the dead sea-shell
Cast up thy life's foam-fretted feet between;
Unto thine eyes the glass where that is seen
Which had Life's form and Love's, but by my spell
Is now a shaken shadow intolerable,
Of ultimate things unuttered the frail screen.
Mark me, how still I am! But should thou dart
One moment through my soul the soft surprise
Of that winged Peace which lulls the breath of sighs—
Then shalt thou see me smile, and turn apart
Thy visage to mine ambush at my heart
Sleepless with cold commemorative eyes.

Keeping Up With Minnesota Editors

Scattered Comments Taken From Minnesota Papers.

Make the Jingoists of Use.

Fairmont Sentinel: There is no possible excuse for going to war with Mexico. Exterminate the handful of Villa bandits and the trouble is ended. The jingoists who are "spoiling" for a fight should get to the front and show what they are made of.

Looking Forward.

Little Falls Transcript: How queer it will seem to woman to have a ballot in her hands at last—for use. A thing that cannot be scoured, scrubbed, dusted or polished! Cannot be sewed or made over! Not to be cooked—either by boiling or frying! Will not jelly or freeze! Needs no salt or spice! Won't sour if not used the same day! Is not endangered by mold, rust or moth! Just a nice, fresh, sweet, perfectly good little ballot—to be deposited in a box provided for the purpose! What a wonderful thing and what a wonderful day when the new era for woman dawns!

Another Application of the Phrase.

Red Wing Eagle: Attorney Arntson of the school board at the Commercial club meeting explained that architects' fees are higher now than formerly. Why of course. There's the war, you know!

"For a Change."

Walker Pilot: One of the best things that could happen to the state during the three months of the year 1917 would be for both the breweries and the legislature to agree to leave each other alone, for a change.

As Minnesota's Vote Showed.

Wabasha Herald: The wool trust has paid dividends on its common stock. This is something new, and it must take the breath away in the fellows who still attempt to sing that antiquated delusive ditty about Democratic ruination. About all they have to offer now is wheezing stock, and nobody wants any of it.

Your Back Yard.

Albert Lea Tribune: Even the smallest back yard may be made to yield a supply of fresh vegetables for the family table at but slight expense if two or three crops are successively grown to keep the area occupied all the time. A little system and a little of your spare time will do the trick.

Why Advertise?

Winona Republican-Herald: Winona housewives complain that they are bothered almost to death with itinerant peddlers and agents, demonstrators and alleged college students who offer all kinds of articles for sale, and all being very insistent on getting a hearing. These from-door-to-door salesmen and saleswomen have learned their lesson and well advertise their wares by word of mouth and often make sales.

One such success is reported, the wife of a merchant having bought a patented article after a convincing demonstration, paying the agent a quarter.

The woman, pleased with her new acquisition, showed the bargain to her husband on his return home at night, telling what she paid for it.

"I have a gross of these things down at the store, and I sell them for 10 cents a piece, when I can find a purchaser," he said.

The woman always has the last word, and she said, "Then, for heaven's sake why don't you let people know what you have for sale."

And she had not seen "It Pays to Advertise," either.

Things the Badger State Editors Are Saying.

My! My!

Ashland Press: "Get Villa, dead or alive," sounds good to us, but it might be well to add the phrase, "preferably dead," to make it fully effective.

Knute Nelson Proves a Point.

La Crosse Leader-Press: Knute Nelson, United States senator from Minnesota, the one member of either house from Minnesota who voted to sustain the United States in the recent controversy with a foreign power, was born in Norway, and is, we believe, the only member of the delegation who is not a native of the United States. Which strengthens the opinion we have had all along that some foreign-born residents, who are Americans only because they took out naturalization papers, are better Americans, and better understand the spirit of America, than some born in this country.

"Take It"—You're Welcome to It.

Green Bay Press-Gazette: We take it that in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, Northern Minnesota and North Dakota the groundhog is an extinct animal.

Sustenance Needed?

Wausau Record-Herald: The strain of "standing by the president" has been so great that nothing but pork in large quantities is likely to restore the equanimity and home standing of the congressmen. Look for the biggest raid on the treasury that has been recorded.

A New Philosophy Is Born!

Chippewa Falls Independent: One idea of heaven is a coal bin that never empties, and somebody else to tend the furnace.

And You Can't Get Away From This.

Bayfield Progress: If perchance you disagree with certain of the Wilson policies, then, before you condemn, figure what a Root, a Roosevelt, a Taft, a Cummins or any other man would have done under the circumstances now existing. They would, though possibly in a slightly different way, either be doing as Wilson has done or they'd have us involved in war. You cannot escape that conclusion if you reason with a mind that's unbiased and unwarped.

Therefore we urge that you do your reasoning before party feeling runs high. You will now, we feel sure, conclude that it's not well to swap horses while our wagon is crossing the turbulent stream.

We All Know What It Does Prove.

Eau Claire Telegram: Former Senator Theodore E. Burton said in substance, in a speech at Trenton, that all our troubles with foreign countries, including Mexico, were the fault of President Wilson and that the trouble with Wilson was that he must be a Democrat. Mr. Burton may be big enough for the presidency, but talk of that sort doesn't prove it.

And Very Much More Satisfactory Service.

Fond du Lac Commonwealth: A North Dakota farmer has installed a wireless apparatus in his home, over which each evening he receives the day's news from Bismarck. It would be a lot cheaper and only a few hours slower if he'd subscribe for a leased wire-service paper.

A Broad Definition.

Philadelphia Bulletin: Dr. Anna Howard Shaw said in Philadelphia in an address on the divorce evil:

"Another cause of divorce is domineering on the wife's part—her wearing of the breeches, as the old saw has it.

"Is there much of this wifely breeches wearing? Well, I know, at any rate, a man whose little boy once said to him at the theater:

"'Pa, what's a leading woman?'

"The man answered gloomily:

"'Any married woman, my son.'"

Free Trade vs. Protection

Editorial in the Annalist.

Is England to discard her historic attachment to free trade? Business men all over Great Britain are rising up in favor of departing from the nation's free trade policy to adopt protectionist policies. The movement is not spoken of as a movement for "protection." The name is disliked. It is a movement for the "fostering and safeguarding" of British trade. But it comes to the same thing.

The voices raised in protest against committing the country to a change in time-honored commercial policy during the heat of a titanic struggle are drowned in the demand for preferential, reciprocal and prohibitory tariffs. The true protectionist wants not protection but prohibition. The extremists among the British dissentients, now a majority among the business men of England if one can judge by surface indications, would not protect British trade against German competition after the war, but would prohibit such competition altogether.

Germany is giving thought to that possibility and is taking count of the probable consequences to herself. Is England taking count also? It is one thing to resolve to destroy Prussian militarism and aggression; it is quite another thing to try to destroy German trade. That would be a fatuous undertaking for a nation whose stake in foreign trade is greater than that of any other country in the world.

We cannot control either Germany or England or decide what their relations after this war are to be. We can, though, take account of our own position and determine what our policy is to be. England thrived, and thrived greatly, on free trade, while most other commercial nations committed themselves to protection. She might not have thrived so much actually or relatively had she not been an exception to the rule. What should our policy for the future be? We are turning our thoughts to trade conquests and to the assumption of premier place among the trading nations. Shall we raise barriers against imports or admit them still more freely that our own goods may the more freely flow out?

In the long run our exports, including all items, will be limited by our imports, including all items. One cannot grow indefinitely without the other growing also. We have in the past exported more goods than we have imported, for the reason that in addition to goods we were also importing a great amount of ocean transportation service, a vast amount of capital, and many other things which we are likely to import in steadily decreasing amount. If when we have become a creditor nation we are to continue to develop our exports we shall also have to increase our imports. There is no other way of exporting on a huge scale. It should be our aim not to set up barriers wherever it seems possible to set them up without disaster, but rather to take down barriers as fast and as far as they prudently can be taken down.

WOULD HAVE ALL WAGES RAISED IN SAME RATIO

To the Editor of The Herald:

About a few months ago there appeared an article in one of the Duluth papers, stating that certain well-known mining companies here on the range were to increase the wages of their employes 10 per cent.

Sure enough, the wages were increased in February, but not 10 per cent; nor was the amount of increase in any way equally divided. Some of the employes who earned less wages up to the previous time received less increase, while those who had higher wages received a higher increase in their wages.

The prices in food stuffs are sure to advance since the increase in wages, and they already have advanced some. But are they going to go up in exactly the same way as the increases in the wages have?

Will Mr. Grocer or Mr. Butcher come and say, "Mrs. So and So, your husband didn't get as much raise in his salary as Mrs. Brown's husband next door, so we are going to sell you things that much cheaper?" No, he won't even if he knows that the increase in Mrs. So-and-So's husband's wages is 2 per cent and that of Mrs. Brown's 5 per cent. No; we all have to pay equally for the things we purchase.

Then why couldn't these well-known companies increase the wages of their employes in an equal way, giving every one employed by them an equal raise in wages?

What good would it do to us working class of people even if the wages were increased 50 per cent (though this is not likely to happen except through a miracle) if the price on the food-stuffs advances to the same amount?

If these corporations, instead of increasing (from time to time) the wages, would try to keep the prices on foodstuffs from soaring, which I am quite sure they could do, it would not be necessary to keep on increasing and decreasing wages.

You say those who get higher wages are skilled and deserve high wages? So they do; but why should they be given a higher increase in their wages than the rest of the employes? If they were all given a same amount of increase in their wages there would not be any remarks made or any grudge felt. There are men who are doing all sorts of things for this nation of ours, but there is not one who will endeavor to cut down the high cost of living.

THINKS SENATOR CLAPP'S MIDDLE NAME IS "EEL"

To the Editor of The Herald:

I do not know the middle name of Moses E. Clapp, junior United States senator from Minnesota, but his political record and habits force me to conclude that it must be Eel. He never will say yes or no. One of his dazzling ten-strikes was to refuse to answer the inquiry of the St. Paul Pioneer Press as to how he stood on the question of preparedness, until he could get back to Washington and figure out which way the cat was going to jump.

Among the natural resources of Minnesota not yet listed by the state immigration bureau is the rare specimen for the study of psychologists that this man furnishes. How he, for upwards of twenty years, has succeeded in keeping in the saddle while periodically throwing down friends and supporters, calls loudly for authoritative scientific explanation. I once heard a prominent Minnesota Republican leader fairly simmer under the collar as he recounted the consistent, life-long record of Moses Eel Clapp as a promise breaker.

But it is more especially of the senator's relations with newspaper men that I would speak. Representatives of papers of all parties might a tale unfold, but in most cases they have never printed experiences with this man—which is not to say that they don't have their opinion of him.

Said Jones to Smith: "Brown could have me arrested for what I think of him."

No old newspaper man in the state need be reminded of the senator's habit of being all honey before elections, and then, having climbed into another six-year berth at Washington, turning to vinegar. More than one reporter has received in reply to a respectful, legitimate question involving the public welfare, something like this, in effect: "You go plumb to hell!" It is possible for even that low-down, abandoned creature, the newspaper man, to be a gentleman. It is also possible for even a Federal statesman to be something else.

I never yet attempted to interview Moses Eel Clapp without being bullied and more than half insulted. My last effort was made something over five years ago, when, per order of a leading New York paper, I called upon the senator at his residence in St. Paul. As usual, the necessary and proper questions (concerning on this occasion the tariff, then a live issue) were propounded in an entirely respectful if not deferential manner. As usual, that big voice began billowing and bellowing forth in stump-speech denunciation of the error of my ways, the temerity, the enormity of the offense, in asking an august senator of the United States one or two civil questions.

It was the last straw. The Ciceronian splurge was interrupted instantly, for, turning on my heel, I bolted from the house. A following footstep and a voice mellowed to tones of civility, if not propitiation, were heard, but it was too late. I did not turn back. Didn't have to, for I was then enjoying the independence of a free lance. From that day to this I have never set eyes on the Honorable Moses Eel Claptrap, the renowned "Black Eagle" from Fergus Falls, nor would I walk so very many miles for the privilege of doing so.

It has long been understood that the senator has divided his time in Washington thus: (1) Looking out for Moses Eel Clapp. (2) Forgetting pledges. (3) Monkeying with Christian Science. (4) Boasting that he never reads the newspapers. (5) Looking out for Moses Eel Clapp.

If there is, politically speaking, an honest hair on this man's head, the cash value of the microscope capable of revealing it would strain the resources of an ordinary millionaire.

Only mossbacks have yet to learn that the best-paying investment any one in public life can make is to get on an honest, candid, confidential footing with the newspaper men.

And it does no harm to try to be a gentleman, whether you are one or not.

CANOSIA IS SETTING COUNTY GOOD EXAMPLE

To the Editor of The Herald:

You do not hear from our town very often, but we are to be reckoned with. Tuesday we had election—same as other towns—and the voters decided to show the county a good example. They decided to work eight hours per day and pay $2.25 per day—the same as the county pays for ten hours—team work to be $5 for eight hours. The only trouble is, our treasury is very small, and the work we can do on roads will be limited accordingly.

On the national ticket we had 14 Democratic and 18 Republican votes. Yours truly, A CANOSIAN.

"IGNORANT" TAKES ISSUES WITH "MR. FOR WILSON"

To the Editor of The Herald:

In The Herald of March 14, "For Wilson" denounces the request of the "American embargo conference" and calls it rot. Just what does he mean? Is not America abetting and aiding the allies by sending ammunition and machinery for the making of ammunition? Is this neutrality? Is not America but prolonging the war, even while she prays for peace? As an American I should like to understand these things.

Are we sending this ammunition to the allies because we think their cause is just? Would this be neutrality? Or, are we doing it for money? And if so, what is that? I should be very grateful, Mr. "For Wilson," if you will kindly enlighten my ignorance.

"IGNORANT."

TELLS WHO IS HEAD OF "EMBARGO CONFERENCE"

To the Editor of The Herald:

Concerning "A Reasonable Theory" in your evening edition of March 14, 1916:

It seems that in Hibbing, Minn., there is somebody who is afraid to give his own name and signs an article under the above headline with "For Wilson."

As I made it my business to get acquainted with the objects of the American embargo conference, I am willing to answer his questions.

"Who is the party that is flooding the country with such 'rot'?" The president of this organization is a man who was not only willing to fight for his country with his mouth, as many of our self-styled patriots do today, but who actually fought in the Civil war and gave his blood for his country, and beside this is patriotic instructor of the Illinois department of the G. A. R., Col. Jasper Tucker Darling.

No, my dear Mr. "For Wilson," they are not in the pay of the German government, but they are men who are willing to give all their efforts to the benefit of the U. S. A., who still consider "humanity" higher than a blood-stained dollar, who have the spirit of true neutrality, and not a neutrality like the one of our government, which seems to be one-sided.

No, it is not such stuff that influenced our members of congress the other day to vote for Germany, and against America, as you call it, but it is stuff that stands for "humanity," "neutrality" and "America first," and besides, we have to wait to see who really voted for "America" and who voted for "England."

"A SAD HEART" POURS OUT SOME OF ITS SORROWINGS

To the Editor of The Herald:

So it has come to this now! Congress did as Mr. Kitchin predicted, when he said, "The habit of obedience has been developed to a high degree in congress, and the president will get what he wants from that body." That means—we have a czar-and-duma government in this country, too.

Thus, if the president is bent on it, he can easily usher us into this little war game; and he has in his addresses of late used words and phrases which sound like a preludium, such as defend honor, rights, humanity, tradition, principle, etc. No doubt he can at the proper moment advance a justification for our partaking in the ring dance.

Just think of it! One single heedless American risking the eventual outcome of traveling on a war vessel (or armed merchantman, which is the same, as has been proved) instead of going with one of the neutral boats, could plunge this land in a useless and needless war, in which the people do not want to go, and congress never would have given the president power to evoke, if we had had a pure, patriotic, conscientious congress instead of a party congress. What a farce! (Alas, alas, alas! A ventriloquist and his puppet show!) The pebble with which to turn over the whole wagon! He did not want to have it out of the way.

The Herald certainly is on the wrong path to laud everything coming from the president's quarters, and to deny the truth, even though it be concrete and indisputable, as regarding England's armed merchantmen, and also in the course taken vis-a-vis the warning, which both congressmen and the country at large give to Americans (mostly rich ones, traveling unnecessarily over the sea) to keep out of the war zone and armed merchant ships. The Herald is criminally and—for shame!—deliberately wrong in this!

You echo after your idol: We have a right to travel on the sea, and a right to this, and to that! My dear editor, it is much we have a right to which we ought not to do, nevertheless! We have a right to climb a volcano, even to make our homes on its sides. Likewise we have a right to build our dwellings on the shores of a rising river, and we exercise this right, too. For the slopes of Vesuvius are alive with humanity and the shores of the Mississippi do not hold a vacant lot, but are teeming with life and activity. But we do such things on our own risk, for we knew the possible outcome and there have been plenty of warnings; and if we perish, a nation is not set on fire to avenge us.

This war can well be likened to the elements of nature, for it is human passions let loose. The warring nations are maniacs, and as such not fully responsible for their frenzied actions. All a sane person has to do is to keep away from such maniacs, and not get into entanglements with them. And we can avoid it easily if we only wish to do so. Written with a sad heart by IDA FRIDBLOM.

SISTER SEEKS BROTHER.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Would some kind reader tell me through the Open Court if they know a man by the name of "Henry Trendall," who used to live at Chippewa Falls, Wis.? Tell him to write to his sister, MRS. DORA LALONDE, 326 Second street, Cloquet, Minn.

WE GIVE IT UP.

To the Editor of The Herald:

At the present writing, according to a petition now being circulated, a Duluth city fireman works twenty-four hours a day to maintain life. For those married, what time have they to get acquainted with their wives and families? For those single, what system have they to get a wife? Do they do the courting themselves, or do they hire substitutes?

JUVENILE CRIME IN GERMANY GROWS

Increased Three and Four-Fold Since Beginning of War.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

Berlin, Feb. 29.—Juvenile crime and misdemeanor have increased three and fourfold in nearly all cities of Germany since the beginning of the war, according to the societies which specialize in the care of children.

The absence of fathers at the front, the frequent inability of mothers to oversee their children because they now have to work to support the family, and the increased amount of spending money which boys and girls have—due to employment ordinarily not open to them—are given as the chief causes.

The facts have come as a surprise to juvenile experts. They had always held that the mother was the chief disciplinary factor in the household. They now are constrained to change their opinions and to feel that it has been the father, after all, who has made the children toe the line.

The war, with its accounts of battles and shooting, has inspired countless boys with the desire to have weapons of their own, and in many instances they have been able to secure them. Little groups or "gangs" have formed in most of the great cities of Germany, have made unoccupied cellars their headquarters, and from mock battles have graduated into actual burglary in many instances. Many more boys have comparatively lucrative employment at present than they ever had before, and consequently have an unprecedented amount of money with which to purchase what they want—including firearms. Many others, not employed, but desirous of the weapons just the same, have resorted to crime to get money with which to purchase them.

The contraction of school facilities has also had an effect in increasing delinquency. In Berlin, for instance, about one-third of the schoolhouses have been emptied of pupils and put to military uses—as hospitals and the like. The consequence has been that classes have been crowded in the remaining schools, school hours have been materially shortened, and female teachers have had to be employed. The average boy and girl has suddenly found himself with an increased number of leisure hours, generally without a restraining father to chastise him for misdemeanors, and often without a mother as a substitute. The situation has been complicated further by the arrival in German cities of a large number of children from East Prussia—fugitives driven from their homes by the Russian invasion.

The shortage of workers in most branches of trade throughout Germany has led to the employment of children long before they ought to go to work, and it has put into children's hands sums of money that are a direct temptation to vice and crime.

Many lads of 10, 12 and 15 years now are entrusted as messengers with large sums of money, and in consequence, in some cases, embezzlements and thefts have resulted. It is almost a weekly occurrence to read in the newspapers of the flight, or the capture, of some youthful criminal.

BRITISH ADMIRALTY HIGHLY COMMENDED

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

London, March 1.—The transport department of the British admiralty has been highly commended by the chairman of the Clyde Steamship association, who recently visited this department in order to investigate the methods by which the large amount of commandeered tonnage is operated. On his return to Glasgow the chairman stated that he found the department had on its books 1,800 vessels, and the system under which they were worked was remarkably thorough, simple and as near perfect as it could be. The system was such that the accuracy of the position of a vessel was never lost for more than three days.

FINDS A SUBSTITUTE FOR FERRO-MANGANESE

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

Amsterdam, Feb. 25.—The problem of finding a substitute for ferro-manganese for the production of steel in Germany has been solved, according to a semi-official statement received here from Berlin. This substitute, the nature of which is not divulged, can be produced in large quantities from internal raw materials, it is said.

Factories for the production of the new substance are already working and more are being constructed. It is asserted that this new process will make Germany independent of imports in this line.

BOLD ROBBER IS MEEK NOW

West Duluth Daylight Bandit Is Held to Grand Jury.

Has Mild, Apologetic Air as He Waives Examination.

A mild-looking little man with a soft voice, and bearing a rather apologetic air, waived examination on a charge of attempted first degree robbery yesterday afternoon before Judge F. H. Cutting in municipal court.

He was William G. Erickson, the daylight bandit who walked into the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Henriksen at 625 North Fifty-sixth avenue west shortly after 12 o'clock Wednesday and shot both Mr. and Mrs. Henriksen in the fight that ensued when he told them to throw up their hands.

He is one of the coolest prisoners that has been brought in for many weeks at headquarters. An extra officer stood in the Bertillon room while Erickson was being "mugged," an "honor" that is accorded but few. After going through the rigid examination, he sat down at a table and signed his name to the record with a flourish.

"He's a dandy," said R. E. Donaldson, assistant superintendent of that department of police work.

Erickson was identified positively late yesterday as the bandit by Mr. Henriksen, and also by his sister-in-law, Mrs. Alma Erickson. Mrs. Henriksen did not want to see the man who had invaded her home, and he was not brought before her.

At the Duluth hospital today both victims of Erickson's bullets were pronounced on the road to recovery. His first shot grazed Mr. Henriksen's head and lodged in the wall. The second entered his wrist, and was extracted by Dr. David Graham. Mrs. Henriksen was shot in the head, the bullet lodging in her scalp, and being removed shortly after she was taken to the hospital.

The charge of attempted first degree robbery, under which Erickson was arraigned, probably will be changed to first degree assault later, police intimated. This step will not be taken until the exact extent of the injuries of Mr. and Mrs. Henriksen is learned.

Chief McKercher secured a confession from Erickson after he had chased him on snowshoes along the Great Northern right-of-way beyond Duluth Heights, and captured him. He has no previous police record, as far as is known.

He has worked around Duluth for two or three years, on the docks in the summer and in the woods during the winter.

ONE WAY OF FOILING THE FRENCH CENSOR

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

Paris, March 1.—One way of foiling the French censor in political matters has been found by the Parisian journals. The Figaro was ordered to suppress a cartoon by Forain satirizing the proposed nomination of parliamentarians as "commissioners to the armies." The publishers simply enclosed a proof of the cartoon to all subscribers.

Georges Clemenceau of the Homme Enchaine, has adopted the same plan with censored editorials, enclosing them under cover to all the deputies and senators, with letter postage. Subscribers of Parisian papers who can afford it will hereafter be kept on the inside of politics in this way.

SERBIAN PARLIAMENT NOW MEETS IN NICE

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

Nice, France, Feb. 25.—Nearly all of the members of the Serbian parliament, and most of the higher Serbian government officials are now gathered in Nice, which may almost be said to have become the provisional capital of the Serbian kingdom, although not officially recognized as such. The members of the national assembly have held several meetings, but nothing has been done except to extend thanks to the French government for offering them refuge here. Meetings are held in a part of the mayor's office, not as official sessions of the assembly but as meetings of the "Club of Serbian Deputies of All Opinions."

The colony includes a number of officers and a hundred wounded Serbian soldiers, besides the statesmen.

INGENIOUS RUSE FOR SMUGGLING LETTERS

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

The Hague, March 1.—The smuggling of letters over the Belgian and German frontiers, in order to evade the German censor, has taxed the genius of many enterprising persons but it is doubtful whether a more striking ruse has been adopted than the one just reported from the frontier.

A nurse who was entering Holland from Germany, had a "broken" arm that was encased in plaster-of-paris in the regulation manner. Arrived at the frontier, where everyone has to submit to the most rigorous search, the military guard demanded that even the plaster-of-paris encasing the "broken" arm should be ripped open.

When the cast was broken, some eighty letters lay exposed to view. The arm was perfectly whole and healthy, and its possessor is now in a German prison.

WILL PREPARE FOR PEACE NEGOTIATIONS

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

Zurich, Switzerland, Feb. 25.—Under the title "Europanische Staats und Wirtschafts Zeitung," a new weekly journal will appear in Munich in March, with the object of collecting and publishing bits of economic news which may be useful in the coming peace negotiations. The paper will be edited by the Bavarian state minister, von Frauendorfer, and by Prof. Edgar Jaffe, a well-known authority on economics.

TENDER CAPSIZES; ALL LOST BUT ONE

Prince Rupert, B. C., March 17.—The Pacific-American Canning company's tender Alpha, which left Bellingham on Sunday for Alaska, was swamped off Rachel island, near here, yesterday. All on board with the exception of a deck hand named Christiansen, are believed to have perished.

Besides Christiansen there were seven men, including Capt. S. W. Miller, on the Alpha. Christiansen, who arrived here late yesterday, said as the vessel listed and filled, he threw a small boat clear and drifted away in it. He saw Capt. Miller and the engineer, both wearing life belts, swimming toward an island three miles away.

The wind and tide carried Christiansen to another island, where he improvised a paddle with which he made Metlakatla in the afternoon.

Launches and the steamer Malapsina are searching for other possible survivors.

HOUSE VOTES TO RETAIN TARIFF ON SUGAR

Washington, March 17.—With thirteen Democrats and one Socialist member opposing the house yesterday, by a vote of 346 to 14, passed the administration bill to retain the present tariff of 1 cent a pound on sugar, instead of permitting the free clause of the Underwood-Simmons tariff act to go into effect next May. The measure now goes to the senate.

Voting against the bill were Representatives Bailey of Pennsylvania, Buchanan, Sabath, McAndrews and Tavenner of Illinois, Calloway of Texas, Crossner and Gordon of Ohio, Hilliard of Colorado, Howard of Georgia, Johnson of Kentucky, Thompson of Oklahoma and Van Dyke of Minnesota, Democrats, and London of New York, Socialist.

Americans Leave Torreon.

Laredo, Tex., March 17.—Traveling the entire distance in box cars, Consul C. A. Williams and eighty-six other Americans, arrived here late yesterday from Torreon, Mex., having left the Mexican city, they said, because they were convinced it was the best thing to do. Their departure, they said, was not caused by any overt acts on the part of Mexicans or failure on the part of de facto government officials to offer protection. Eleven Americans joined the party at Monterey.

HEARING ON PAVING CASE

Arguments in Test Suit By Traction Company Being Made.

Arguments are being presented in district court before Judge Dancer today and will be resumed Monday in the Ninth street paving case, the test suit brought by the city against the Duluth Street Railway company to secure judicial interpretation of that provision of the company's franchise which relates to its obligation to the city in the matter of paving costs.

The evidence in the case was presented about three weeks ago. Francis W. Sullivan, special counsel for the city, opened the arguments this morning by stating what the contentions of the plaintiff city are in the action, it being one to collect from the street railway for a portion of the cost of paving East Ninth street.

Attorney Sullivan in outlining his case to the court this morning stated that the main question presented for the court to determine is whether the section of franchise which provides that the city shall stand the expense "made extra" by reason of the street railway tracks, means that the traction company shall pay for the additional width made necessary by reason of the fact that tracks are in the street, or means that the company shall pay the difference between what it would cost to lay the pavement with the tracks and without the tracks.

Attorney Sullivan also declared that the court would be called upon to decide whether or not there had been any practical construction of the franchise which would stop the city from asserting its claim and would release the company from its obligation under the city's present construction of the franchise provisions.

Oscar Mitchell of counsel for the street railway company will follow Mr. Sullivan.

"GET THOSE GREASERS"

That Is Attitude of Entire Southwest, Says Duluthian on Return.

Life of Mexican Not Worth Much Along Border Line.

Visiting Columbus, N. M., two days after the raid by Villa and his Mexican bandits, A. D. Thomson and his son, Adam Thomson of Duluth, saw the closing scenes of the tragedy which has caused the United States to put an armed force in the field to capture the raiders who dared to invade United States soil.

The Messrs. Thomson were coming eastward from Los Angeles, where they had been spending some time, and stopped over at Columbus to view the scenes of the raid and wholesale murder.

"The instant we got off the train," said Adam Thomson today on the board of trade, "we could sense the feeling of grim determination which the Columbus people have to 'git those Greasers.'

"It's in the air there, and the Southwestern people will brook no further delay now. They are in to finish the job if Uncle Sam would leave it to the residents of that section and give them carte blanc, I believe there would be a clean-up of the Mexican bandits in a short time.

"The day we were in Columbus the funerals of several of the victims were being held. Some of them were being sent away on trains to relatives in other parts of the country. The garrison stood at attention, the people sang several hymns, taps was sounded and the last rites concluded.

"In some parts of the city the bodies of some of the horses killed in the raid were still to be seen, but everything else connected with the murder had been cleaned up. The horses' bodies were to be burned, I understood.

"As we were entering the city we saw the bodies of two or three Mexicans close to the track, but these were the only bodies we did see. These men might not have been in the raid, but were probably ordered to get out of town by the soldiers and were dispatched later by citizens who followed them. That, they tell me, is a common occurrence since the Mexican menace has reached its worst. The white men down there do not think anything of shooting a 'Greaser.' These killings are common. Now that the raid has occurred, the life of a Mexican in one of those border towns is not worth much. You can hardly blame the whites for feeling that way, either, for while many of the Mexicans on the border are not identified with Villa, nearly all of them report to him, and those in the American towns are really spies without being detailed that way. The whites must get rid of them and if they will not get out something of a summary nature takes place."

LINE UP FOR INSPECTION

Militia Companies Ready for Critical Eyes of Reviewing Officers.

Duluth Has 600 to 700 Men Ready for Call to Arms.

"Preparedness" is being practiced by between 600 and 700 Duluth young men, members of the National Guard companies and naval militia divisions, who will line up before inspecting officers from Washington, D. C., within the next few days.

Lieut. Commander C. H. Fischer, U. S. N., with Lieut. Gerald Howze, U. S. N., are the reviewing officers who will inspect the men and equipment in the naval militia, while Capt. Charles A. Danforth, U. S. A., will inspect the National Guard.

Maj. James M. Phalen of the U. S. medical corps, after inspecting the National Guard hospital corps which is stationed in Duluth, last night praised the organization highly for its record. This corps, under command of Maj. A. N. Collins, has been recruited to the maximum and is ready for active work.

Every man in the corps was in attendance when the maneuvers began under Maj. Phalen's direction, and their work went through without a hitch. Practical demonstrations in first aid work and drills of various kinds occupied the attention of the corps during the evening.

"The corps made a remarkable showing," said Maj. Phalen. "Their ranking was high on every point, and exceptionally so on litter drill. Considering the fact that they have been organized less than a year, they are doing very well. They are ready for the field right now."

Capt. Danforth, the U. S. army officer detailed to inspect Minnesota's National Guard, will inspect "E" company Monday night, "A" company Tuesday night and "C" company Wednesday. The regimental headquarters company and the supply company also will be inspected Tuesday night.

Lieut. Com. Fischer inspected the naval deck division at Bayfield, Wis., last night, and will be at Ashland, Wis., tonight. Accompanied by Lieut. Howze and Com. Guy A. Eaton of the Minnesota naval militia, he will go to Bemidji, Minn., Monday night, to inspect a deck division, Crosby will be visited by the three men Tuesday, Pine City, Wednesday; Lindstrom, Thursday, and Duluth, Friday and Saturday.

Visitors will be admitted to the galleries of the armory at Thirteenth avenue east and London road Friday night, when the two deck and one engineering division of the militia will pass in review before Lieut. Fischer. The Third Regiment band will be in attendance also.

UNEASINESS INCREASING

Many American Citizens Leaving Mexico for United States.

Disquieting Reports Concerning Attitude of Mexicans in Some Places.

El Paso, Tex., March 17.—Rapidly growing uneasiness among Americans throughout Mexico, especially in the north and east, was shown today by reports from various sections that United States citizens were either en route to the border or were preparing to leave.

At practically every point of entry Americans arrived today from the interior but in the majority of instances they said they were leaving Mexico merely as a matter of precaution and not because of any acts of hostility.

The most significant report came from Durango, where the American vice consul advised that his wife and child be sent out of the country. This followed closely on the arrival last night on the border of the American consul from Torreon with a large number of Americans.

Americans arriving here told disquieting stories privately about the attitude of the Mexicans in the interior, especially in Chihuahua, Durango and Coahuila, but when asked to talk for publication insisted that all was quiet in those sections. They explained the contradiction by saying they expected to return to Mexico later and did not wish to arouse resentment among the Mexicans.

The Mexican consulate here received a telegram today from Gen. Calles, military governor of Sonora, saying that a Villa spy, R. Panobilos, had been arrested at Dos Cabezas. It is alleged that this man was in Columbus on the night of the raid. When questioned he said that Villa had fled after the raid to Corralitos, where he murdered several cowboys and seized a number of horses. He then started for Galeana by way of Puerto Choco.

American Guards Redoubled.

Del Rio, Tex., March 17.—One hundred and fifty Mexicans who organized across the border from Pinto, twenty miles east of here yesterday, have moved inland, according to word reaching here today. American guards have been redoubled along that section of the border. A detachment of United States troopers was sent to the scene.

No Desire to Leave Durango.

Torreon, March 16, via El Paso, Tex., March 17.—Americans in Durango have not yet expressed a desire to leave Mexico, acording to advices received here today from Homer C. Coen, American vice consul at Durango. Mr. Coen reported that he was sending out his wife and child.

There are about 100 Americans, including some women and children, still in this district. Reports sent from here that the American club had been robbed are untrue.

James Thomas Ross, a famous English "fence," has been sentenced to three years' imprisonment. Before the authorities discovered his real occupation he passed as an eminently respectable manufacturer of muffins.

American Singer Does Not Need a Foreign Reputation

EDITH MASON.

The disposition of the management of the Metropolitan opera house to recognize American musical talent is shown in the engagement this year of Edith Mason to take the place formerly filled by Bella Alten. Miss Mason was a choir singer when she attracted the attention of the opera management, and unlike many American singers—Geraldine Farrar and Maud Fay among them—she did not come to the operatic stage with a foreign reputation. She has sung Gretel in "Hansel and Gretel," the Voice of the Forest Bird in "Siegfried" and Papagena in "The Magic Flute" with great success. This portrait of Miss Mason was made at her home in New York.

THE WIDOWS' CASE AGAINST UNCLE SAM

Federal Government Niggardly to Employes Injured on Its Work.

By JOHN B. ANDREWS,
Secretary, American Association for Labor Legislation.

(Exclusive Service the Survey Press Bureau.)

The explosion on the United States submarine E-2 at her berth in the Brooklyn navy yard, Jan. 15, killed four men and severely injured ten. Three of the killed and six of the seriously injured were civilian workmen employed by the United States government as plumbers and as yard workmen.

Two plumbers left dependent widows, who, under the terms of the present antiquated compensation law of the United States, will be granted as indemnity their two bands' wages for one year only. As these men were earning respectively $4 and $2 a day, it is probable that one widow will receive from the Federal government no more than $1,200, and the other as little as $600, for the loss of a husband. Both face the prospect of early dependence upon the charity of the community.

State Laws More Liberal.

In none of the thirty-three American states and territories possessing compensation laws would indemnity have been so niggardly. Had the men been working for a private employer in the state of New York, the widows would have been entitled respectively to $360 and $180 a year during their entire life or widowhood. In Massachusetts they would have been eligible to receive $4,000 each. In Ohio $3,750 and $2,496 respectively, and in California $3,600 and $1,800.

The Federal government, moreover, pays no burial expenses. New York and California pay $100, Ohio $150, and Massachusetts, if there are no dependents, $200.

For the injured, also, there is no allowance for medical treatment, and the burned victims of the Federal government's accident are being cared for in the Cumberland Street hospital at the expense of the citizens of New York city. Massachusetts allows medical and surgical care for two weeks, California up to ninety days, and Ohio up to $200.

It has been agreed for years among informed people, including administrative officials at Washington, that the Federal compensation law of 1908 is the most inadequate in the world and a disgrace to the nation. Meager as are its benefits, only one-quarter of the government's 400,000 civilian employes are covered. The act has been condemned by the United States bureau of labor statistics, which has charge of its administration, by the American Federation of Labor, and by numerous organizations of civil service employes.

Congressional Inertia.

For three years a bill, drafted by the American Association for Labor Legislation, and based on the best experience of American states and foreign countries, has been before congress. It has been endorsed by numerous organizations. Leading journals have editorially called for its enactment. Thousands of citizens have written to their representatives at Washington urging that it be passed. It was reported favorably by the judiciary committee of the house of representatives as early as April 21, 1914. It has met with no open opposition. It is merely a victim of congressional inertia.

This bill—the Kern-McGillicuddy compensation bill for injured employes of the Federal government (H. R. 476) is still before the judiciary committee of the house. Congressman Edwin Y. Webb of North Carolina is chairman of the committee, and the committee's membership is practically the same as when it reported the bill out nearly two years ago. Its passage would provide just compensation for all workmen injured or killed in the service of the United States.

Furthermore, the present accident recalls the inadequacy of safeguards provided by the Federal government for the prevention of accidents and occupational diseases among its civilian employes. Deplorable conditions regarding safety and sanitation have been pointed out many times in the past. Judging from the experience in private industry, no more effective method of stimulating health and safety work in government workplaces could be found than the passage of a just and adequate compensation law by which the money-cost of a work-accident is shifted from the stricken family to the broad shoulders of the employer—in this case, Uncle Sam himself.

FARMERS IN BIG MEETING

Several Thousand Soil Tillers Are Expected at Fargo March 31.

Gathering of Non-Partisan League to Be Political Event.

Fargo, N. D., March 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—One of the greatest meetings of farmers of the state will be that of the Non-partisan league, here on March 31, with the state convention of the organization to be held the following day.

The mass convention will be the chief feature and it is now estimated by the leaders of the movement here that several thousand farmers from all parts of North Dakota will be here for the session, which is to be held in the Auditorium.

It is planned to hold a band tournament, in which $500 in cash prizes will be offered and which is expected to bring a large number of musical organizations of the state here; especially those in the eastern part of the state.

With these bands and the big array of farmers from over the state a great parade will be put on that is expected by the leaders of the movement to exceed anything of the kind ever held in North Dakota, if not in the Northwest.

Convention Proper Secret.

The meeting on March 31 will be open to the public, but the state convention, which will be made up of delegates chosen from each of the county conventions recently held, will be held behind closed doors. This convention is attracting widespread attention among political and party leaders over the state, as many believe the league will exert a powerful influence in the coming campaign unless some untoward event should cause a split or a disintegration of the organization, which is conservatively estimated to be composed of something over 30,000 farmers of the state.

Arrangements are being made for having moving picture men here take views of the big meetings.

St. Paul Woman Shoots Spouse.

St. Paul, Minn., March 17.—P. C. Willkomm, saloon keeper of 109 Carroll street, was shot and perhaps fatally wounded Wednesday night by a .22-caliber rifle in the hands of his wife. The shooting is believed to have been accidental, but the police are investigating.

FOOD SOURING IN STOMACH CAUSES GAS, INDIGESTION

"Pape's Diapepsin" Neutralizes Acids in Stomach and Starts Digestion.

Five Minutes! No Sourness, Gas, Heartburn, Acidity or Dyspepsia.

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fullness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach headache, you can surely get relief in five minutes.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula, plainly printed on these fifty-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will understand why dyspeptic troubles of all kinds must go, and why it relieves, sour, out-of-order stomachs or indigestion in five minutes. "Pape's Diapepsin" is harmless; tastes like candy, though each dose will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides, it makes you go to the table with a healthy appetite; but what will please you most, is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for biliousness or constipation.

This city will have many "Pape's Diapepsin" cranks, as some people will call them, but you will be enthusiastic about this splendid stomach preparation, too, if you ever take it for indigestion, gases, heartburn, sourness, dyspepsia, or any stomach misery.

Get some now, this minute, and rid yourself of stomach misery and indigestion in five minutes.—Advertisement.

CHIPPEWA INDIAN OUT FOR CONGRESS

Edward L. Rogers of Walker Favors Modifying Indian Treaty.

Brainerd, Minn., March 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Edward L. Roger of Walker, county attorney of Cass county, will be a Republican candidate for Sixth district congressman and will make his campaign largely on the platform that the Indian bill should be modified, if not abrogated. Interest attaches to his campaign because Mr. Walker is a Chippewa Indian and in a sense is expected to voice the Indian side of this controversy.

Mr. Rogers is serving his second term as county attorney of Cass county. He attended school in Minneapolis, then Carlisle, Dickenson preparatory school, Dickenson college and graduated from the law class of the University of Minnesota in 1904.

EDWARD L. ROGERS.

In 1907 Rogers was judge of probate in Mahnomen county and helped to organize the first Chippewa council in 1913, being its first president.

Would Modify Treaty.

"I do not think the treaty of 1855 can ever be abrogated, but I do believe it can be materially modified," Mr. Rogers is quoted as saying. "Its restrictions can be made to apply to the ceded Chippewa reservations only, thus confining the attention of the Indian department to the Indians themselves and not to the whites. There are very few Indians outside of the ceded Indian reservation. In the ceded portion all have their allotments and are entitled to all the rights of citizenship.

"That treaty was made for the benefit of the Indians, but they have had no voice in its enforcement or modification. The percentage of Indians drinking is no greater than among the whites. Keep the liquor out of the territory where the Indians reside and the spirit of the treaty will be obeyed.

"The Indians are not interested in the enforcing of the 1855 treaty as a temperance measure among the whites."

COMMITTEESHIP FIGHT.

North Dakota Democrats Reported Divided Upon Question.

Fargo, N. D., March 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Republicans of North Dakota, who are more or less divided, view with satisfaction apparent evidences of discord among state Democrats because of the contest for the national committeemanship, which is sought by John Bruegger of Williston, representing the Carmody-McArthur faction, and H. H. Perry of Ellendale, representing the Doyle-Duis faction.

The delegate places are being hotly contested also, the Wilson men of the state being fearful of a preponderance in favor of the McArthur faction and by the use of the unit rule a Bryan delegation from North Dakota to the national delegation.

There is said to be little doubt that the Bruegger-Carmody-McArthur lineup is in favor of the Commoner, while the Doyle-Duis adherents are strong Wilson men. The Wilson men are bold in their stand in favor of the president for renomination and while the Bruegger adherents are intimating that there is nothing to show that they are not for Wilson there has been no out-and-out statements that they are for him. Hellstrom is an ardent Bryan supporter, and because of his apparent strength in the state is accepted by even the Wilson advocates in the Doyle-Duis faction, all the energies being directed against Bruegger and the "doubtful" candidates for delegate to the national convention.

HUSBAND SAVED HIS WIFE

Stopped Most Terrible Suffering by Getting Her Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Denison, Texas. — "After my little girl was born two years ago I began suffering with female trouble and could hardly do my work. I was very nervous but just kept dragging on until last summer when I got where I could not do my work. I would have a chill every day and hot flashes and dizzy spells and my head would almost burst. I got where I was almost a walking skeleton and life was a burden to me until one day my husband's stepsister told my husband if he did not do something for me I would not last long and told him to get your medicine. So he got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me, and after taking the first three doses I began to improve. I continued its use, and I have never had any female trouble since. I feel that I owe my life to you and your remedies. They did for me what doctors could not do and I will always praise it wherever I go."—Mrs. G. O. LOWERY, 419 W. Monterey Street, Denison, Texas.

If you are suffering from any form of female ills, get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and commence the treatment without delay.

ACID IN STOMACH SOURS THE FOOD

Says Excess of Hydrochloric Acid Is Cause of Indigestion.

A well-known authority states that stomach trouble and indigestion is nearly always due to acidity—acid stomach—and not, as most folks believe, from a lack of digestive juices. He states that an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach retards digestion and starts food fermentation, then our meals sour like garbage in a can, forming acrid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. We then get that heavy, lumpy feeling in the chest, we eructate sour food, belch gas, or have heartburn, flatulence, water-brash, or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast while it is effervescing, and furthermore, to continue this for one week. While relief follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.—Advertisement.

If Too Fat Get More Fresh Air

BE MODERATE IN YOUR DIET AND REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT. TAKE OIL OF KOREIN.

Lack of fresh air it is said weakens the oxygen-carrying power of the blood, the liver becomes sluggish, fat accumulates and the action of many of the vital organs are hindered thereby. The heart action becomes weak, work is an effort and the beauty of the figure is destroyed.

Fat put on by indoor life is unhealthy and if nature is not assisted in throwing it off a serious case of obesity may result.

When you feel that you are getting too stout, take the matter in hand at once. Don't wait until your figure has become a joke and your health ruined hrough carrying around a burden of unsightly and unhealthy fat.

Spend as much time as you possibly can in the open air; breathe deeply, and get from Boyce Drug Store, 331 West Superior street, or any druggist a box of oil of korein capsules; take one after each meal and one before retiring at night.

Weigh yourself every few days and keep up the treatment until you are down to normal. Oil of korein is absolutely harmless, is pleasant to take, helps the digestion and even a few days' treatment has been reported to show a noticeable reduction in weight.

BANKS SEEKING CHISHOLM PAPER

Duluth and Twin City Concerns Anxious to Buy Warrants.

Chisholm, Minn., March 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Requests to purchase village warrants have come to local banks from Twin City and Duluth banks.

Today, with the village indebtedness amounting to $483,945, practically all of which is in the hands of Chisholm institutions, local banks are flooded with requests for village paper, offering to pay face value of the warrants and interests to date. The majority of the bankers of the village are reluctant to sell any of the village paper they are holding, indicating that local banks are in good, sound financial condition in spite of debt hanging over the municipality, the village with a conservative administration of its affairs has a most prosperous year ahead.

Debt Pressure Lessened.

The pressure of heavy debt under which the village has labored for several years is lightened to a great extent by the certain tax revenue of $320,000, raised by a 2-per-cent levy on an appraised valuation of $16,163,006 and a proper administration of village affairs looking toward a retirement of at least a portion of the debt each year is certain, so the bankers predict, to keep village paper in good standing for a long time to come.

NEW INDUSTRIES, VIRGINIA'S NEED

Speaker at the Commercial Club Meeting Tells of Things Wanted.

Virginia, Minn., March 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Addressing one of the largest meetings in point of attendance ever held by the Virginia Commercial club, Alexander Reid of the firm of Alexander Reid & Co. last night, in speaking on 'New Enterprises for Virginia" said that the time had come for citizens to devote their attentions to encouraging manufacturing industries to locate here. He pointed out that in all retail lines the city was at present well supplied and suggested among the manufacturing lines that might be induced to locate here, a fine field for development, are a furniture factory, a sash and door factory, a paper mill, box factories and kindred industries, wholesale groceries, hardware and other establishments.

Carl Shapiro of the Virginia Table Supply company suggested a payup week, which was indorsed by the club. President Greely will appoint a committee of three to advertise and arrange for payup week. The date will be announced within a short time.

The matter of arranging a Mesaba Range Homecoming celebration was referred to the entertainment committee.

To Exhibit at State Fair.

Virginia will have a unit in the St. Louis county exhibit at the Minnesota State fair. The agricultural committee of the club will be in charge of its assembling and mounting, and will cooperate with the agriculture committee of the St. Louis County club in the matter.

Regulation of switching charges and physical connections on railroads entering the city were discussed at length. The transportation committee was instructed to make a full report on the situation, as it affects local shippers at the earliest date possible.

NASHWAUK SCHOOL IS BADLY CROWDED

Rotation in Classes Adopted to Meet Present Situation.

Nashwauk, Minn., March 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Because of the rapid increase in the number of children attending the school here it was necessary for Superintendent Gilruth to adopt the Gary system of rotating classes as an experiment in an effort to save class room which is insufficient. The number of children is more than keeping up with the adult population and the school board is up against it for the time being—or until a high school can be constructed on the large site in the southern addition.

Under the Gary plan rooms will be consolidated and the space of two rooms made to answer that of three. This is accomplished by rotating classes and using the gymnasium, auditorium and special rooms for the different divisions.

New Club Formed.

The All-in-One club perfected an organization with the following as officers: Thelma Cannon, president; Hilda Warra, secretary and treasurer; Miss Dahle, leader. The club starts out with a membership of seventeen, who compose the Methodist Sunday school classes. The term of the officers is four months. Meetings will be held semi-monthly at the homes of the members, each member taking turns. Following are the charter members: Della Johnson, Ellen Aurell, Annie Aurell, Katherine Rauta, Clara Haugen, Thelma Cannon, Elsie Haugen, Marion Webb, Meriel Fletcher, Hilda Warra, Martha Maki, Dorothy Denton, Ethel Wivell, Ina Nurka, Lempi Wallan, Impi Pulikka, Gladys Gordon.

CUT THIS OUT

OLD ENGLISH RECIPE FOR CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES.

If you know of some one who is troubled with Catarrhal Deafness, head noises or ordinary catarrh, cut out this formula and hand it to them and you will have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. In England scientists for a long time past have recognized that catarrh is a constitutional disease and necessarily requires a constitutional treatment.

Sprays, inhalers and nose douches are liable to irritate the delicate air passages and force the disease into the middle ear, which frequently means total deafness, or else the disease is driven down the air passages towards the lungs which is equally as dangerous. The following formula, which is used extensively in the damp English climate, is a constitutional treatment and should prove especially efficacious to sufferers here who live under more favorable climate conditions.

Secure from your Druggist 1 ounce of Parmint (Double Strength). Take this home and add to it ½ pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day. This will often bring quick relief from distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and hearing improve as the inflammation in the eustachian tubes is reduced. Parmint is used in this way as it acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system and has a slight tonic action that facilitates the recovery of the patient. The preparation is easy to make, costs little and is pleasant to take. Every person who has catarrh should give this treatment a trial.—Advertisement.

WARMER

The bright weather still continues, although today is not as sunny as the last two days, stray clouds getting in the way every once in a while, and spoiling the effect. But the atmosphere is agreeable, and warmer weather is promised.

A year ago today was gloomy. The sun rose this morning at 6:15 and will set this evening at 6:17, giving twelve hours and two minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"Severe cold prevails in Ontario, Northern Michigan and Northeastern Wisconsin, the lowest reported temperature being 18 degs. below at Port Arthur. The temperature has fallen over the lake region and extreme upper portion of the Mississippi valley and has risen in nearly all other districts. Killing frost occurred at Raleigh, N. C.; Charleston, S. C., and Jacksonville, Fla., and light frost at Tampa, Fla. Light snow fell during Thursday or last night over Western New York, Western Pennsylvania, Northern Illinois, Southwestern Iowa and Saskatchewan."

WOMAN ACQUITTED AT DULUTH

Woman Acquitted at Duluth of Killing Husband Gets Thirty Days.

Virginia, Minn., March 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mary Mattson, a familiar character on the range was arrested by police last night for drunkenness and sentenced to thirty days in the county jail by Judge Carey in municipal court this morning.

Nine years ago after a long trial in district court at Duluth in which she was defended by Oscar J. Larson, Mary Mattson was acquitted of the charge of murdering her husband with an ax. Her countrymen on the range applied to her the appellation of "Ax" Mary.

When arrested last night she gave her name to the desk sergeant at police station as "Ax" Mary.

Many people on the range have tried to befriend the woman, but brooding over the tragedy with which her name was linked, she contracted the liquor habit, and became a well known police court character in range cities.

Friends will interest themselves anew in her case and endeavor to afford the woman a chance to begin life over again when the present sentence is expired. She was taken to the county jail at Duluth today.

NASHWAUK LEVY MADE.

Sum of $38,000 Voted By Town Supervisors for Next Year.

Nashwauk, Minn., March 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—At the annual meeting of the supervisors of the township of Nashwauk held Tuesday the levy for 1916 was set at $35,000. A special levy of $3,000 was also made to compensate the village of Nashwauk for the use of one room set aside for the town board which will be used as an office and meeting room. Heretofore the board met in the Ollila hotel. Last year the township expended $25,669.37, but this year, owing to the promised activity of the mines and as a consequence a labor shortage, it is planned to curtail somewhat as to road work. The township roads are now in good shape and while it is necessary to spend some cash on maintenance no heavy expenditures is looked for the coming year.

ITASCA'S COURTHOUSE WORK PROGRESSING

Grand Rapids, Minn., March 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—The remodeling of the courthouse by Charles Chalberg is progressing rapidly. During the week the inside stairway to the basement has been cut out and the cement bases on the floors of the basement put down. All of the partitions in the basement are in and most of the plastering is done. The floor of the basement, which will be of a composition material similar to hardwood, but all of one piece and laid like cement, will be laid shortly. Treasurer McMahon, who moved out of his office some time ago and who moved back again for a few weeks, has again taken up quarters in other parts of the courthouse and, in the meantime, the old treasurer's office is being transformed into a vault, steel beams being placed across the top and brick arches between the beams. The windows have been changed to regulation vault windows.

CLOQUET FIVE ALL READY FOR HIBBING

Cloquet, Minn., March 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—This evening the Lincoln high school five will play the last of the scheduled games of the season with the fast quint from Hibbing. The Cloquet boys are unusually strong on their own floor and have put in a considerable practice as Hibbing has only been defeated once and that by Virginia. After the game the boys will entertain their guests at dancing in the high school auditorium.

A GIRL'S COMPLEXION

Very few girls get through their 'teens without eruptions or pimples showing on their faces.

These may be due to indigestion resulting from improper diet. If so they will quickly disappear when the proper food is adhered to. If they are accompanied by pallor and listlessness you must look to the condition of the blood.

Because these eruptions on the faces of school girls are so common they seldom receive the attention from parents that they require. When they indicate thin blood or anemia there is a ready remedy in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These tonic pills, free from harmful drugs, are pretty sure to help growing girls because they build up the blood at a time when the demand on it is greatest. As the blood is made rich and red, fickle appetites become normal, lassitude gives way to vigor, the cheeks and lips show the glow of health and the whole system is toned up. The nervous system is invigorated and with proper attention to diet many dangers are averted.

Your own druggist sells Dr. Williams' Pink Pills or they will be mailed, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. The pamphlet, "Building Up the Blood," is free on request.

SEARCHING FOR KJOS.

Strange Disappearance of Buyck Man Is Not Yet Explained.

Virginia, Minn., March 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Acting under the instructions of Sheriff John R. Meining, Chief Range Deputy Sheriff Fred Witte has begun an investigation of the disappearance of M. O. Kjos, the Buyck township homesteader, who has been mysteriously missing since last November.

No further light has been thrown on Kjos' disappearance and the settlers in the Buyck country are of the belief that his body will be found in the woods near his home when the ground is cleared of snow in the spring. Efforts are being made to get in touch with acquaintances or friends in Eau Claire, Wis., where Kjos resided before coming to the town of Buyck.

HIBBING BUYS LAND FOR WATER SYSTEM

Hibbing, Minn., March 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Samuel Scott, city attorney, returned yesterday from Duluth, where he purchased forty acres of state lands to be used in connection with the new well system.

The lands are the southeast quarter of section 36, range 57. The village paid $20 an acre for the land, the price set on it by the appraisers.

With the purchasing of the forty acres, Hibbing owns the territory on which is located the well system, said to be among the finest water systems in the Northwest by experts who have visited there.

WHEAT AGAIN SELLS DOWN

Market Slumps Sharply on Break in Cables and Foreign News.

Flaxseed Shows Strength With Steady Bidding By Crushers' Interests.

Duluth Board of Trade, March 17.—The market showed fresh weakness around the close on renewed selling. Low prices were recorded.

May wheat closed 3c off and July 2½c off.

May durum closed 2¾c off and July 2¾c off.

Oats closed 1⅝c off at 41¼@41⅝c for on the track; rye unchanged to 1c up at 88@90c and barley unchanged at from 63c to 71c for on the track.

At Winnipeg, May oats closed ⅞c off at 42½c.

At St. Louis, May wheat closed at $1.05⅝ asked and July at $1.03¾ asked.

At Kansas City, May wheat closed at $1.00½ and July at 90⅞c.

Puts on Minneapolis May wheat closed at $1.05¾ bid and calls at $1.11¼.

With Liverpool cables showing sharp declines and rumors of prospects of a separate peace between the allies and Turkey, holders were given a bad time in the wheat market today.

In consequence quotations declined nearly 3c during the first three hours trading and indications pointed to a further weakening at that. Advices were to the effect that foreigners are being influenced by heavy Argentine, Canadian and Australian offerings, with considerable selling pressure all-round. In the meantime American primary receipts are keeping up, today's figures showing 984,000 bu against 537,000 bu a year ago. Clearances have, however, been better during the last few days, outgoings of wheat and flour at the seaboard today amounting to 1,248,000 bu. No export demand for American wheat was reported under existing supply conditions, and reports of damage in some sections of the winter wheat territory were without market effect.

A few cars of bonded wheat and oats are going forward to the seaboard at present, but on account of the small difference between the all-rail and lake and rail freight rates, there is said to be no call for cars to forward domestic grain East.

Bids of 5c a bu are reported for steamer space for wheat to Buffalo for the opening of navigation and capacity has been arranged for a substantial tonnage, according to all reports.

Millers were fair bidders for good wheat on the local market today, but the lower grades were draggy. Cash No. 1 northern sold on a basis of ½c under to 2c over the May price. Cash No. 1 durum sold at ½c under the May price.

May wheat opened 1⅛c off at $1.11⅛, broke to $1.09⅞ on persistent selling and then rallied to $1.10¼ at the noon hour, July opened 1⅜c off at $1.11⅝, sold off to $1.10¾, and later firmed up ½c.

May durum opened 1c off at $1.05½, and broke to $1.04⅝. July opened ¾c off at $1.06¾, and slumped 1½c more.

Flaxseed Again Up.

Flaxseed was strong again today with good bidding by crushers reported. The feature was the strength shown in the nearby future during the greater part of the session, while July was comparatively neglected and held back in the upturn in quotations.

May flax opened unchanged at $2.29, and closed ⅝c up at $2.29¾ bid. July opened unchanged at $2.29, and closed ⅝c up at $2.29¾ bid.

At Winnipeg, May flax closed ⅜c up at $2.08⅞ bid.

At Buenos Aires, flax closed 1c off at $1.34⅝, and London 1¾c off at $2.67⅞.

MARKET GOSSIP.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool: "At the opening the market was influenced by the favorable war news and increased import arrivals. Manitobas and winters were freely offered at 1s lower, and Plates at 9d lower. There is a general lack of confidence in prices as Manitobas and winters are freely offered. Argentine offers are liberal and shipments are increasing. American receipts are large, and Canadian shipments likewise."

C. E. Lewis & Co. wired from Minneapolis: "The decline in the Liverpool market and the big break in wheat on passage emphasizes what we have said for some time past, that England will endeavor to buy her supplies elsewhere and shipments of 5,000,000 bu from Argentina and Australia is evidence of this. No great help can be expected from the other side. There is a possibility, however, that our market may get strong on crop damage news from the Southwest. Reports so far received are not very good, but they have fallen flat as far as being a market factor. It looks as if the bull side of grain had gone stale. Unless some new element is instilled into the market, the entire bull movement is liable to end in a fizzle."

The Modern Miller says: "In Texas thousands of acres of wheat have been plowed up and will be seeded to other crops. In the central states, there is growing weather. Southern portions show a weak stand and all indications are that a considerable acreage will be abandoned. Reports from growing areas are distinctly unfavorable. Reports of winter kill and weak stand are coming from Southern Kansas, Missouri, Illinois and Indiana. Kansas hard wheat acreage and Nebraska maintain their promise.

At Minneapolis choice blue stem wheat sold better. There was no change in the average market. Poor wheat was dull. Blue stem No. 1 northern sold at ½c to 4½c over May, and velvet chaff at ½c to 1½c over. Flour trade was dull.

Regarding linseed, Broomhall cabled: "Argentine shipments amount to 1,026,000 bu., including 275,000 bu to America. Stocks are 2,776,000 bu. On passage to America are 1,225,000 bu. Buenos Aires closed easy with the general demand disappointing.

John A. Todd of the Duluth board of trade has returned from a month's vacation trip spent in Cuba, Tampa, Fla., and Palm Beach, Fla. He says that remarkably prosperous conditions are everywhere evident in Cuba. This is due to the heavy sugar crop and the high prices being realized. Considerable anxiety is, however, being felt there now on account of the threatened British prohibition against tobacco importations. A serious situation for Cuban planters would thus be created.

A special train of forty cars bearing Pacific northwest wheat, the first of its kind ever to leave Puget Sound for the Atlantic coast, departed from Seattle yesterday over the Great Northern. The shipment is destined for London and amounts to 30,000 bu. The scarcity of ships and the tremendous increase in American borne commerce are the causes of this shipment of wheat by rail. The wheat will be laid down at Halifax, N. S. and by having the right-of-way as a special fast freight, only fourteen days will be consumed in the trip. Never before has wheat for the United Kingdom been sent from either Oregon or Washington other than by ship.

CHICAGO MARKET.

Chicago, March 17.—Assertions that forty-four German ships had been seized by the Brazilian government caused a decided setback today in the price of wheat. Confirmation, however, was lacking and many traders were of the opinion that the reports grew out of confusion regarding the recent wholesale seizures in Portugal. Enlarged shipments from Australia and Argentina acted as a further handicap on the bulls. Opening prices, which ranged from ¾ to 1⅜c lower, with May at $1.10 to $1.10½ and July at $1.08¼ to $1.08½, were followed by a slight rally but then a material further decline.

Gossip was current that most of the German boats said to have been seized were likely to be used in the transportation of grain. Dispatches from Berne, Switzerland, telling of an effort for separate peace between Turkey and the Anglo-French allies, led to additional weakness of prices. The close was heavy, 2½c to 3¼@3¾c net lower, with May at $1.08@1.08⅛, and July at $1.06⅝@1.06¾.

Corn gave way under heavy selling. The pressure resulted from sympathy with the weakness of wheat. After opening a shade to ⅛c lower, the market reacted a little and later suffered a substantial decline.

Commission houses were on the selling side throughout most of the day. Prices closed weak at ¾c to 1⅛@1⅜c net decline.

Oats reflected the course of other cereals. On the breaks though buying was fairly active.

Lower prices on hogs weakened pork and ribs. Lard continued to show strength, the consequence of unusual demand for greases.

ADVANCE IN STOCKS

Market Opens Higher, Reacts, But Hardens Again Near Noon.

Profit-Taking Contributes to Holding Down Prices; Close Irregular.

New York, March 17.—Material gains were registered at the outset of today's active market, war shares and allied specialties being the most conspicuous features. Advances ranged from 1 to 3 points in American Can, American Zinc, Mexican Petroleum, Colorado Fuel, Lackawanna Steel and the sugar and shipping shares. Mercantile Marine preferred was especially prominent and with Can and United States Steel was freely absorbed. Crucible Steel was inclined to react in the initial dealings but soon made full recovery. Rails manifested their usual backward tendency with fractional recessions in Reading and Great Northern.

Activity abated before the end of the first hour of today's stock market, trading falling far below yesterday's corresponding period. Prices yielded as dealings diminished, the munitions group with few exceptions canceling early gains and showing general heaviness. Profit-taking contributed to the decline, but short selling, induced by adverse Mexican rumors, also was a factor. The market hardened again toward midday, mainly in consequence of a broad demand for coalers, Norfolk & Western and Chesapeake & Ohio leading the movement with gains of 2 to 3 points. Bonds were steady.

Subject to considerable tendencies in special stocks, the market maintained its recovery of the noon hour. Rails were in further demand and other representative issues were firm to strong.

Crucible and Bethlehem Steel, express shares, and Mexican Petroleum, all at higher prices, featured the dull final hour. The closing was irregular.

NEWS, GOSSIP AND DOPE OF THE WORLD OF SPORTS

BY BRUCE.

FIGHT fans, attention—please place the rays on St. Paul and Milwaukee. As they say in the review of the coming out party, Mike Gibbons will be the cynosure of all eyes. What is left of the great amount of interest being manifested in the boxing listed for today, will be switched over to Fred Fulton. While Mike Gibbons is busily engaged in turning the flank of Jeff Smith, the large Fulton pugilistic party will be having the time of his life in attempting to dispose of that ancient fighting craft, Jim Flynn of Pueblo.

Gibbons ought to win. Class generally counts in this world, and Gibbons has all the class in the land. Smith is probably all that is claimed for him—but even if he is, the Bayonne, N. J., scrapper hasn't enough to take the measure of the greatest middleweight produced since the halcyon days of Stanley Ketchel and one of the greatest of them all since the days when Tommy Ryan burgeoned forth and licked all the fighters they could bring to meet him.

If Gibbons wins the contest of this evening, the folks will mutter, "Well, what did I tell you?" And should Smith by chance happen to win, there will be open-mouth astonishment, followed by the decided belief that Gibbons was not right and the win was of a flukey order. If Smith should knock Gibbons out, why they would pack the largest enclosure in St. Paul in a return engagement, for you can't make the majority of the fight followers of the Saintly City believe there is any man in the world able to take the measure of the great Phantom.

How About Fulton?

WHILE Mike is displaying his classy wares before the folks of his home town, Fred Fulton will be showing what he has in the way of ring prowess before the somewhat blase bunch of fight followers that compose the following the game has in the distinctly critical city of Milwaukee.

Fulton will have to show near championship caliber against the Colorado veteran to enlist the support of the Western followers of the game. Should Fulton put the kayo on the tough party from the West, the Rochester boy will leap into the running over night and will be in a position to demand a meeting with Moran or Willard.

The Age of Comeback.

TRULY this is an age of comebackism. First, and right now foremost there is Frank Gotch. Who in the world would have ever imagined that this wealthy and somewhat easy going farmer would return to the torture and drudgery that is intimately associated with training when an athlete reaches the age of Gotch? Well, behold the spectacle of the world's champion training with desperate and determined effort to reach the stage of wrestling perfection that marked his mat work for many years.

Packey McFarland successfully negotiated a comeback and every now and then talks of another attempt. Johnny Coulon, for long the bantamweight champion, is also toiling away in the effort to gain another crack at his conqueror, Kid Williams.

It wasn't so long ago that Bob Fitzsimmons tried to convince the New York boxing commissioners that he could enter the ring and whip most of the heavyweights that are fighting today.

Also, down on his farm little Freddy Beell, perhaps the greatest wrestler of his weight and inches who ever stepped on a mat, is working away for his final mat effort.

Duluthians remember when this little fellow toiled away for the Yokel contest. They also recall, doubtless, what the old master did to Yokel before a vast throng of fans that filled the big amphitheater of the curling club. If Beell ever meets Stecher, it will provide a mat study to discover what the brains, skill and wonderful speed of the little Badger can accomplish against the most deadly hold ever known to the wrestling game.

When a man is great he is extremely loath to leave the field wherein he once ruled master of all.

Well, Charles, Ye "Done" Well.

PRESIDENT CHARLES HORN dropped in yesterday to offer thanks for the boosting given the Duluth Amateur Hockey league during the present season by The Herald. This column takes the opportunity to state that Horn has labored early and late for the success of the league and has overcome obstacles during the course of the season that would have discouraged others less endowed with tenacity and sticking ability.

The path of the league has been beset with many difficulties. Factions and cross purposes have onerated at times against its success. But despite all, the amateur organization has surely achieved more than a fair measure of success. This past season should prove the turning point. Another year should find the league solidly established and an institution here to remain.

In This Case, Different.

Harry Lauder used to sing a song in which it was stated that excessive drinking was a gift rather than a habit.

Regarding the fighting of Gunboat Smith and Bomb Wells, one is inclined to believe that it is a habit and not a gift.

BIG PUNCHERS ARE GETTING IN SHAPE

Willard and Moran Have Trained Hard; Latter Easing Up.

New York, March 17.—Although the snow storm had made the roads in this vicinity almost impassable in places, neither Jess Willard nor Frank Moran shirked road work yesterday. Early in the morning each covered nearly three miles at a fairly good pace and neither showed any sign of fatigue.

In the gymnasium Willard eliminated the wrestling part of his program, but increased his boxing bouts by taking on an extra man, going through nine fast rounds altogether. A short session at the pulleys was his only other exercise. The bouts were lively.

Whitey Allen, who will meet Jack Dillon at the Brooklyn club for ten rounds next Saturday night was the added starter. The champion handed Allen a few hard knocks. Rodel, the Boer, boxed three rounds with Willard and Hemple and Monahe lively followed, each going two rounds.

At Moran's headquarters in Westchester the Pittsburgh man virtually repeated his work of Wednesday, although he had made up his mind to take a day off. Five fast rounds with his three sparring partners were all Trainer Lewis allowed Moran after a brief turn at the punching bag and some rope-skipping. Moran turned the scales at 202 pounds after he had a rub-down and was awaiting the dinner gong.

Today and Saturday he intends to take about the same amount of exercise, but Sunday is to be a day of rest.

Crack Bowlers From Twin Cities Here to Shoot at Tourney Marks.

All present high marks of the Northern Bowling association are expected to be shattered either today or tomorrow. Starting this afternoon and ending with the grand finale of bowling that will mark the termination of the tourney Saturday evening, some of the best bowlers of the Northwest will shoot at the high marks thus far set up in the tourney.

The Schmidts of St. Paul are credited with piling up a team mark of 2880 in a game played recently. The Zumalweiss team of Minneapolis will, it is expected, shoot by the mark made by the Fiats of Minneapolis early in the tourney.

Another strong five-men combination is the Centrals, while the Hook 'Em Cows of St. Paul will bear watching.

Vanna of Minneapolis is a crack single man and it is expected he will top the mark that is standing at the present time.

On today's schedule are some of the cracks from the Twin Cities. If some new records are not chalked up on the board at the conclusion of the day's rolling, there will be some surprised rail birds.

Today's and tomorrow's schedules are expected to furnish the best rolling of the tournament.

MISS BJURSTADT WINS.

Norwegian Net Wonder Defeats Opponents in Indoor Games.

New York, March 17.—Matches in the semi-finals of the singles and doubles of the women's national indoor tennis championship tournament here yesterday, returned Miss Molla Bjurstadt, the Norwegian girl, a winner in each event. Miss Bjurstadt's drives kept her opponents on the defensive. In the semi-final of the singles, Miss Bjurstadt beat Miss Marie Wagner of New York, former champion, 6-0; 6-3.

Miss Wagner and Miss Bjurstadt will pair in the doubles. They won a place in the final round by beating Mrs. D. C. Mills of Orange, and Miss George Humphreys, 6-2, 6-2.

Bresnahan and Crew Go South.

Toledo, Ohio, March 17.—Headed by Manager Roger Bresnahan, the advance guard of the Toledo American Association Baseball club left for the training camp at Bawson Springs, Ky., last night.

RECORDS FAIL TO FALL BEFORE BOWLERS' ASSAULT

Huyck Comes Near Reaching Deller's High Mark in the Singles, But the Five-Men and Doubles Scores Remain Safe From All Attempts—Present Records Compared With Last Year's.

No changes were registered yesterday in the leaders of the Northern Bowling association. Many attempts were made to set the team mark, the doubles and singles by the boards, but when the finals were chalked up late last night, it was found that the Fiats of Minneapolis still remain high in the five-man event, with Krause and Buskey, the Rhinelander, Wis., duo, holding the lead in the doubles and Joe Deller still tenaciously clinging to his lead in the singles.

Much was looked for from the Snyders of Minneapolis in the five-man event. Some of the ardent followers of the dope had been imbued with the belief that this team would supplant the Fiats in the team leadership. The Snyders fell far short of this glowing realization, scoring but 2,735, while the Hans Lienes, the other Mill City team, scored but slightly higher with a mark of 2,739.

So far it looks as if the Fiats may repeat the wins of last year and the year previous. It was under the name of the West Hotel team that these same players scored the high team marks in the 1914 and 1915 tourneys.

While Joe Deller's mark withstood all the target practice of yesterday, Huyck of Duluth came very near beating it, so near, in fact, that he tied Taylor of Virginia for second place with a score of 620, just five points short of equaling the mark set up by Deller earlier in the week.

Huyck started rather strongly with a mark of 201 for his first game, just 34 points under the mark scored by Deller in his initial game. But 174 was scored in the second game, but the local man made a truly remarkable finish and wound up his total score by the addition of 245 points for his third frame.

Scores Very Creditable.

Comparing the high scores of the tournament to date with the final high scores of last year, it will be found that the five-men mark held up to today by the Fiats is above the high mark of last year, the count being 2,833 to 2,817. Wilke and Reimer of Minneapolis walked away with the doubles last year with a mark of 1,245, while to date 1,178 is the high mark in the doubles.

Henry Martin of St. Paul last year won the singles with a mark of 642, while to date Deller's mark of 625 has defied all assaults. However, it is extremely probable that Joe's high mark will be shot down before the tournament comes to an end.

Following will be found the high scores of the present tournament to date, compared with those made in last year's tournament, together with the complete scores of yesterday's events:

ST. BONIFACE CLUB IS TRANSFERRED TO WINNIPEG

Auburn, N. Y., March 17.—Minor league changes announced here by Secretary John H. Farrell of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, include the transfer of the franchise and players of the St. Boniface club, in the Northern league, to Winnipeg, Man.

ST. PAUL WINS CUP BUT MAY NOT GET IT

Montreal, Que., March 17.—The St. Paul team defeated Lachine here yesterday 7 to 6 in the hockey contest for the Art Ross cup. Lachine may continue to hold the cup, however, as the amateur standing of three players on the St. Paul team has been questioned.

Yale Eleven Changes Captains.

New Haven, Conn., March 17.—Arthur M. Milburn yesterday resigned the captaincy of the Yale varsity baseball team and L. L. Vaughn of Haverhill, Mass., was elected to succeed him. Milburn was chosen captain last June, but with four other players, recently was declared ineligible for violating the summer baseball rule. Vaughn is an outfielder and a former Andover star.

PLAYING MANAGER IS DROPPING FROM BASEBALL

The Big League Teams of Today Show That the Bench Pilot Holds the Managerial Reins of Practically All Teams—Herzog Only Real Player Leading Big League Club.

New York, March 17.—What has become of the playing manager?

A few years ago, easily half of the teams in the major leagues were led by playing managers; but since the Federal league, all but Charley Herzog of the Cincinnati Reds have disappeared.

Next season, Cantelope Charley of Ridgely, Md., will have the distinction of being the only real out-and-out playing manager, writes Frederick G. Lieb in the Press. Miller Huggins of the Cardinals says he no longer regards himself as the regular second baseman of the club.

At one time in the game's history the playing manager was all the go, and it was seldom that a bench manager worked into the game. Frank Selee and Ned Hanlon were a few of the great bench managers of the time before the American league.

From the time the American league started until the present time, the playing and bench managers usually were closely matched until this season, Presto! the playing managers have dropped off the map.

In the season just before the Federal league started (1913) the bench managers had a slight lead, there being nine against seven. In the National league the division was equal. McGraw, Stallings, Clarke and Dahlen were benchers," and Tinker, Evers, Huggins and Dooin were playing managers. In the American league the bench managers led, five to four, Mack, Jennings, Griffith, Chance and Callahan were bench managers while Stovall, Birmingham, Stahl and Carrigan were playing managers. The last two divided the season in Boston.

Usually this average has been held, but of late the tendency has been to retire the playing managers, and no playing managers are being hired to take their places.

Herzog, a playing manager, relieved Tinker in Cincinnati, but "Herzy" almost lost his job this winter to Jack Hendricks, which would have ended the playing manager in the big leagues. Evers lost his job in Chicago, being succeeded by Hank O'Day, a benchie. Bresnahan, a playing manager, succeeded O'Day, but Roger now is succeeded by Joe Tinker, who is a bench manager.

Dooin was replaced by Moran in Philadelphia. Huggins says he may play once in a while, but most of his time will be spent on the bench.

The following shows the bench and playing managers that have won world's championships during the National-American series:

Year.	Manager.	Club.
1903	*Collins	Red Sox
1905	xMcGraw	Giants
1906	*Jones	White Sox
1907	*Chance	Cubs
1908	*Chance	Cubs
1909	*Clarke	Pirates
1910	xMack	Athletics
1911	xMack	Athletics
1912	*Stahl	Red Sox
1913	xMack	Athletics
1914	xStallings	Braves
1915	*Carrigan	Red Sox

*Playing manager. xBench manager.

In New York our playing managers during the last fifteen years have been very rare. "Griff" pitched at times during the early part of his regime as commander-in-chief at the Hilltop, and then we had Hal Chase for one year, and Harold succeeded in dropping Stallings' second-place club of 1910 to sixth in 1911. Chance intended to be playing manager when he first came here in 1913 with Hal Chase on second, but poor Husk took the count on Ebbets field before the season even opened. Then we had Peckinpaugh for a brief spell in 1914 after Chance threw up the sponge.

The Giants have stood pat on McGraw, who played a little after he first came here in 1902, but after that John J. was satisfied to do his playing while batting grounders to the infield.

The Brooklyns also have had few playing managers, Harry Lumley being their brief experiment in that line.

JIM DENEGRE FAVORS HOLDING REGATTA HERE

Minnesota Member of the Executive Rowing Committee Will Work to Bring 1916 Meet to Duluth.

James D. Denegre, former commodore of the Minnesota Boat club of St. Paul, also one of the best oarsmen in the Northwest several years ago, and a member of the executive committee of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen, left St. Paul last night for New York, where he will work in enthusiastic harmony with Julius H. Barnes in the effort to land the 1916 regatta for Duluth.

Denegre is vice president of the regatta association and a man who commands considerable influence. He is earnestly desirous of obtaining the regatta for Duluth and may be counted upon to take a firm stand in favor of bringing the big water meet to the West.

Last year at Springfield Mr. Denegre urged the advisability of awarding the next regatta to Duluth. Mr. Denegre's enthusiasm was almost equal to that displayed by the Duluth delegation. Throughout the winter the Minnesota Boat club man has been doing considerable work in behalf of the Duluth cause. If Duluth does succeed in landing the big aquatic meet, some of the credit for the accomplishment should be laid at the feet of James D. Denegre—sportsman, booster and "good scout."

LEADERS UNDISTURBED.

Bowlers at Toledo Tournament Fail to Displace Top Men.

Toledo, Ohio, March 16.—None of the leaders in the American Bowling Congress tournament, were disturbed here yesterday, ninth place in the doubles and fifth in the singles being the best negotiated by the minor event men. Christie Thies, rolling with the handicap of having a new ball, bought when Secretary Langtry ruled his original sphere out, cleaned up 672 for fifth place in the singles.

Luckensmeyer and Schillinger, the Madison, Wis., players, who ran 1,197, rolled a brilliant series after getting a poor start of 365. Only one error marred their series, Luckensmeyer opening his second game with a mistake. He had five railroads. Christie Thies and Louis Franz, two of Cleveland's famous rollers, ran 1,193 for tenth place, the former opening the series with eight strikes and then bumping into the eight-ten split on a good strike-hit.

The New Haven champions two years ago and second place winners a year ago, rolled in poor form in the early shift of five-men teams last night, winding up with 2,666 and being forced to roll 1,000 in their final game to get enough to promise to finish in the prize money.

The Vermonts of Chicago were high in the late bowling shift here last night with the score of 2,746. Their middle game totaled 1,015. The Gunds of Cleveland were next with 2,730.

CURLING SEASON NEARLY AT AN END

But Fifteen Games Remaining on the Official Schedule.

It was announced at the curling club last evening that the official season would close on March 22. There are but fifteen games remaining on the schedule. This year the weather conditions have remained exceptionally favorable to curling, which accounts for the unusual lateness of the season.

Milwaukee, Wis., March 17.—Fred Fulton, Rochester, Minn., aspirant to championship heavyweight fistic honors, is prepared to meet Fireman Jim Flynn, Pueblo boxer, in a ten-round, no-decision contest in Milwaukee tonight.

Both boxers are said to be in good condition. Fulton will weigh around 220 and Flynn about 190 pounds.

EDDIE COLLINS IS TO FOLLOW BILLY SUNDAY

Famous Second Baseman Has Taken to Religious Work; May Become Famous Pulpit Speaker.

Eddie Collins, the star second-sacker for the White Sox, recently addressed a Methodist Sunday school at Palmyra, N. J., and since that time invitations have come to him from ministers, Sunday school superintendents, Christian Endeavor workers, missionary leaders and many others interested in some form of religious work, asking him to accept invitations to speak.

Eddie and his wife have been busy sorting and filing these invitations, and he has been almost forced to hire help to take care of the correspondence. He has no desire to forsake the diamond to become a pulpit orator, but if he should do so and would accept all the invitations on hand he could be billed for at least one speech a day for several years.

One writer who lives in Washington, D. C., evidently went over the American league schedule and picked out a day when Eddie was not going to play baseball and asked that the baseball star fill a pulpit appointment on that day.

Some of the invitations Collins believes he will accept, as he figures if he can do the boys of the country any good by cautioning them to lead clean lives he will be glad to help out to that extent.

POCKET BILLIARDS TOURNEY.

Petrie, Concannon and Blankenship Take Thursday's Games.

Chicago, March 17.—Mike Petrie, Chicago, and Joe Concannon of Jersey City, were the victors in the afternoon games of the pocket billiard tournament yesterday. Petrie defeated Morris Fink of Philadelphia, 100 to 93 in fifty-two innings, and Concannon beat James Maturo of Denver, 100 to 96 in twenty-nine innings. Petrie's high run was 23 and that of Concannon, 18.

E. Blankenship, Detroit, strengthened his lead last night by defeating Charles Weston, Chicago, 100 to 42 in eighteen innings. The Detroiter's high run was 40.

Forfeits His Match.

Springfield, Ill., March 17.—Ben Reubens of Chicago forfeited his match here last night with Johnny Meyers of Sheboygan, Wis., after an hour and 32 minutes of wrestling. Reubens, who was injured a week ago, blamed a sprained ligament for his failure to continue the match.

BOILS AND PIMPLES DANGEROUS; S. S. S. YOUR REMEDY

Standard for Fifty Years.

Modern science has proven that boils and carbuncles, pimples and unsightly skin blotches are the danger signals of diseased blood. Scaly skin and itching, of Eczema, Scrofula, rashes—all skin diseases are aggravated by bad blood—It's the infected blood that's dangerous. Dont' wait for the boils. If you have pimples and blotches, take instant action. Pimples tell you that your blood is filled with impurities. You must wash out your blood, strengthen and stimulate it to healthy action with Nature's own blood tonic, S. S. S. It is the standard blood purifier of the world. Don't use any drugs, don't use ointments and salves. S. S. S. reaches the blood, drives out the impurities. It makes healthy perspiration—the poison is literally sweated out through the skin. Boils, blotches, Eczema and the Scrofula indications disappear. It does what salves and lotions can never do—it goes to the very root of the trouble by reaching the blood. Your skin becomes clear and you soon feel the vigor of the return of perfect health. S. S. S. is purely vegetable. You can get it at any druggist's, but you must take S. S. S. Let us tell you about blood diseases. Write for book of facts, "What the Mirror Tells." If yours is a long-standing case, write for expert advice to Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.

NORTHERNS WIN EASILY

Universal Hockey Team Is Beaten By One-Sided Score of 10 to 3.

In a farcical contest, a burlesque on real hockey, the Northerns defeated the Universals last evening in a hockey game that contained little real playing and a vast amount of horse play. The score of the alleged contest was 10 to 3.

Johnny Richards, goal tender of the Universals, made a great record in the contest against the Big Duluths. Last evening this star performed as if the game were a joke and it mattered not in the least whether he stopped shots or not. The spirit that characterized the playing of Richards seemed to take hold of other members of the Universal team, which may account for the lop-sided score, though credit should be given the members of the Northerns team, who played with spirit and dash and did their best to make a real contest of it.

The score and summary:

Northern (10).		Universals (3).
Hedberg	g	Richards
Stahl	p	Roberts
Clark	cp	Bartlett
Bergeson	r	Parsons
Olson	c	Harris

NEO-MALTHUSIAN LEAGUE GROWING

Claims Large Share in Increased Longevity Figures in Holland.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

The Hague, Feb. 25.—The Neo-Malthusian league, which was organized in Holland in 1881, announces that its membership has reached the 5,000 mark, and in its annual report claims for its advocacy of "parental prudence" a large share in the increased longevity figures in Holland.

The national insurance tables show that the average life to which a Dutch baby may look forward at birth is, for a boy, 51 years, and for a girl 53.40 years. It is pointed out that these figures are exceeded only by those of the Scandinavian countries, which were familiar with Malthusianism long before Holland, and by those of the white population of Australia.

The Neo-Malthusian league has been recognized in Holland by royal decree as a society of public utility, and notwithstanding occasional obstructive measures taken by previous clerical ministries, the league claims that intelligent interest in "race control" has grown greatly, especially among the laboring classes and among the great army of clerks and humble functionaries, whose small fixed incomes, where the cost of living is mounting up by leaps and bounds, make too frequent visits of the stork events to be dreaded rather than welcome.

SATURDAY WILL BE "ORANGE" DAY

Tomorrow will be "orange day." It has nothing to do with the St. Patrick's day celebration today, nor is there any attempt at competition. It is the national day set aside to "honor the orange," but it is the fruit, not the color.

In preparation for tomorrow, local commission men have cars of oranges on the sidetracks to be unloaded this afternoon and distributed in anticipation of a record consumption. The oranges are better now than at any other time and the prices are at the low point, say the commission merchants.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Safety or Convenience?

Every six months, or at least every year, every adult should undergo a complete physical examination in all respects as rigid as the most painstaking life insurance test. This is a boost for the family doctor, of course. But if it were the custom, instead of the exception, the standard of public health would be so much higher, there would be so much less sickness that the poor doctor would come out on the short end of the bargain after all.

WILLIAM BRADY M.D.

We quote from a letter written by a reader:

"I live far from the city on a rural route, but I get the paper every day and I cut out and save all your articles. It is hard to get a doctor to come where no car line passes handy by. Ten days ago I suffered a severe attack of colic soon after a hearty meal. The cramps continued more or less up to the present, though abating in severity. I am now eating only broths and liquids. Since day before yesterday, the kidney function is extremely scanty, though no pain. I would also like to know if a slight irritating discharge indicates any serious trouble. I am 49 and passing through the change of life. I have had fine health, am rather stout and florid, the mother of three children (now grown up). Please let me know what you think, as soon as possible."

In reading the meager history the woman offers we think something like this:

Ptomaine poisoning? No, more likely gallstone colic—or maybe renal (kidney stone) colic. Or—cancer! Yes, stout, florid, picture of health, mother of several children—cancer, just the type. Irritating discharge — cancer. Poor woman. Why can't she realize the vital importance of seeing her doctor at once? Why does she allow a matter of convenience to threaten her safety, her life, perhaps?

So we write a sort of frightful reply, intended to scare that woman into sudden action in her own interest.

She is evidently an intelligent, educated woman. Her letter proves that. Yet she considers convenience before safety. Why? Because it isn't the custom for women to have a regular physical examination. That is all right for automobiles, engines and other valuable property—indeed it is necessary from the standpoint of economy. But what is a woman's life worth? Is it worth an annual physical examination? What do her children think about it?

If the family doctor isn't here to prevent disease, by detecting its early or threatening signs, what then is his function in modern life?

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Red Clover Tea Theory.

Recently I read an article by a well-known writer recommending red clover tea for cancer. What is your opinion? Would it be injurious in any way?

Answer—If the "well-known" writer were as good a doctor as she is poet she would never perpetrate such an idea. Red clover tea is harmless in itself, but it will not cure or help cancer.

Oats for Man or Horse.

Oats are horse food. Can man digest them?

Answer—Samuel Johnson said, "Oats are food for horses in England and men in Scotland." "And where," asked a Scotchman, "will you find such horses as they have in England or such men as they have in Scotland?"

The Liquor Habit.

Will a correspondent who confesses to being in the thrall of the liquor habit send me a stamped, addressed envelope? I have a monograph upon the subject.

Mrs. P. J. E., H. B., if you will send a stamped, addressed envelope I shall be glad to let you have a private reply.

Operations in Pregnancy.

Is there any danger in having an operation for the removal of enlarged tonsils during pregnancy? Would there be danger of marking the child?

Answer—In spite of the older notion, any necessary operation may be safely done in the course of pregnancy. "Marking" is mere old wives' gossip. Whatever is good for the mother is good for the baby.

A "Cold" Like "Seven-Year Itch."

Three years ago I caught a cold in the head and it stopped my ears up, writes J. S., cryptically. I have a continuous ringing in the left ear. What is good for a cold that hangs on?

Answer—Your "cold" reminds us of the "seven-year itch." Forget it and consult a doctor who will examine the nasal cavity and ears. When a "cold" hangs on it isn't a "cold."

Sex as a Factor of Pneumonia.

A asserts that statistics show that women are less liable to pneumonia than men. B denies the allegation in toto. A declares this immunity of women is largely due to the current style of low necks and exposed sternums. Will you please arbitrate the question?

Answer—A wins on the statistics. But in view of the well-known habit of wrapping the chest, neck, throat, chin, mouth, and nowadays even the nose in furs, we can't follow A throughout. Rather, we suspect the males' fondness for "licker" accounts for the preponderance of the wicked sex among the pneumonia statistics.

Dr. Brady will answer all signed letters pertaining to health. If your question is of general interest it will be answered through these columns; if not it will be answered personally if stamped, addressed envelope is enclosed. Dr. Brady will not prescribe for individual cases or make diagnoses. Address, Dr. William Brady, care of this newspaper. Protected by The Adams Newspaper Service.

HIGH PRAISE FOR THE ADMINISTRATION

Senator Owen Eulogizes Work of Executive and Legislative Branches.

Concord, N. H., March 17.—A detailed eulogy of the work of the executive and legislative branches of the Federal government under Democratic control, was delivered by United States Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma at a Jackson day dinner of New Hampshire Democrats here last night. Senator Owen took up the important measures passed by congress since the inauguration of President Wilson, summarizing his conclusions thus:

"All these bills—the tariff bill, the Federal reserve act, the Clayton anti-trust bill, the Federal trade commission bill, the seamen's act,—have had one purpose,—the promotion of the common good, the abatement of monopoly, the betterment of mankind, the lowering of the cost of living, and the greater happiness of all our people."

Senator Owen praised the work of the various executive departments, continuing:

"Perhaps the greatest accomplishment, the one for which our people are more deeply grateful than any other, is that the president has kept us out of war, and in a condition of profound peace, while all the world beside seems torn with war or internal violence. Under extreme provocation the president nevertheless has used his great powers and his great influence against any act that would involve the people of the United States in war, either with the weakest of our neighbor nations, or with the strongest nations of the world, such as Great Britain and Germany, both of whom, because of the excitement and stress of a life and death struggle, have disregarded in various ways the international law and our legal rights. An administration less wise and less thoughtful might easily have been swept into war with Mexico, with Germany and Austria, or with Great Britain and its allies."

GEN. ROJAS DENIES ANY TROUBLE WITH TROOPS

Marfa, Tex., March 17.—Absolute denial that de facto Mexican government troops at Ojinaga, opposite Presidio, Tex., had created a disturbance or even expressed antagonism against Americans was made last night in telephonic messages from Gen. Rojas, Carranza commandant at Ojinaga. Recent reports stated the garrison at Ojinaga had revolted because of the American expeditionary force entering Mexico and either killed their commander or forced him to take refuge at some point near there.

DEATH WARNING IS SENT TO GOVERNOR

Jack of Spades, Mysterious Sign, in Mail of Utah Executive.

Salt Lake City, March 17.—The Jack of Spades, the death warning of the "K. O. D.," a mysterious organization which has been threatening the life of Governor William Spry, has been received at the office of Governor Spry. The governor is in New York. When his secretary, J. K. Hardy, yesterday opened an envelope addressed to the governor, the Jack of Spades fell out.

Six months ago Governor Spry received among the thousands of letters threatening him with death over the event of the execution of Joseph Hillstrom, the I. W. W. leader, several which were signed "K. O. D." In each of these letters this statement was made:

"When you receive the Jack of Spades you will know that your time has come. Your death will follow."

Following the execution of Hillstrom the threatening letters ceased coming to the governor until about two weeks ago, when he began to receive a number of vicious letters from all parts of the United States. The envelope containing the card was mailed in Salt Lake.

In the governor's mail have come a number of postcards containing a picture of the body of Hillstrom, showing the wounds made by the Utah firing squad which executed him. These postcards bear this inscription: "Murdered by the authorities of Utah. We never forget." The governor's office is informed that thousands of these postcards have been mailed from Chicago to all parts of the country.

VILLAGE TO BE NAMED AFTER FIELD MARSHAL

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

Berlin, Feb. 20.—Field Marshal von der Goltz, who has been leading the Turkish forces in the vicinity of Bagdad and who was credited with perfecting the defenses of Erzerum, is to have a village named after him. Permission has been given the Prussian village of Adlig-Bielkenfeld, the field marshal's birthplace, to change its name to Adlig-Goltzhausen.

FOODS THAT ARE UNUSUAL

Many Freak Edibles That Are Enjoyed in Other Countries.

Some Have Received Tremendous Stimulus Through the War.

Washington, March 17.—War stringencies have called forth a number of unusual foods, among them a bread made largely of potato flour, artificial protein cakes, green bone meal preparations, together with innumerable foods manufactured in the laboratory in tabloid form. So soup cubes, pudding powders, meat essences and vegetable extracts—always more or less prominent in the kitchen of the European housewife—have, according to reports from the belligerent countries, received a tremendous stimulus through the war. War may create scarcity of articles on a community's accepted menu, and, yet, there may be plenty of food about for those who eat it. For example, there may be an abundance of snails and grasshoppers on hand while a people, thoughtless of these delicacies, starve for meat. Showing somewhat of the range of foodstuffs when we consider the world by and large, a bulletin just given out by the National Geographic society at Washington enumerates a few of the freak foods enjoyed in other countries. It reads:

Freak Foods.

"There is no accounting for the freaks of human appetites. The Roosevelt story of how he got the best work out of the men with sharp-filed teeth by promising them the choicest bits of raw hippopotamus and rhinoceros steak for speed in skinning, will be recalled by many who read the articles in the magazines at the time of his African expedition. Capt. Robert H. Bartlett, commander of the Kariuk, which carried Stefanson to Arctic waters, says that on his return from Herald Island to Northern Siberia, he found raw polar bear meat tasting better than any piece de resistance he had ever eaten in the home country.

"The Frenchman likes his snails and wonders how anyone who accepts oysters can refuse them. In Canton, China, rats sell for 50 cents a dozen, and a dog steak brings more per pound than a leg of mutton. The Chinese mandarin pays $30 a pound for the birds' nests from which his soup is concocted. In parts of the West Indies the palm worm is stewed in fat, while certain African tribes are as fond of caterpillars as an American is of reed birds on toast. The Turks are as disgusted with oysters as we are with the fish the Corsican relishes.

Earth Eating.

"Eating earth, or geophagy, is a common thing in many parts of the world. In some parts of Europe a butter is made of fine clay, and in other regions various kinds of earth are sold in the open market. The Persians use some varieties of soil in making their sweetmeats, while in Mexico the eggs of certain species of flies are used by the Indians in making food paste which is regarded as a great delicacy.

"Some of the Arctic tribes allow their fish to decompose when it becomes to them the same savory delicacy that Limburger or Harzer cheese is to us, while, in point of true fragrance, the palm remains to the fish. The Arabs, and many other of the Near Eastern peoples, prepare their bread in sheets almost as thin as tissue paper and find these crisp, tasteless things pleasing. In Central America, where creeping things are regarded as clean and reasonable, the lizzard, the Iguana, forms a choice article of food. Among the tribes of Southern Russia, mare's milk soured into an acrid, strong-tasting beverage constitutes the chief article of diet, and the Westener, who at first finds it nauseating, comes to form a strong attachment for this drink. In Syria, Mesopotamia, and in Palestine, the locust now and again graces the table in a roasted condition, and those who have eaten him pronounce his meat full of the most acceptable flavor."

WILL PRACTICE AT RIFLE RANGE

First Regiment of American Riflemen Organized at Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 17.—The first regiment of American riflemen has been organized in this city. The movement is forwarded by the Young Men's Business clubs of which there is one in most of the large cities of the country and the sole object is to acquaint laymen with the handling of a military rifle. The movement is said to have originated in Cleveland and the idea was disseminated from there, but the Pittsburgh regiment is the first to complete organization.

Col. T. J. Keenan of this city took up the matter and presented it to the Young Men's Business clubs, with the result that these bodies pledged support to it throughout the country. In this city almost 600 men have enrolled for the movement. It is not to be a uniformed or drilled body, according to the promoters. All expense will be borne by the individuals, and the time required for qualification as a member of the organization is not more than one hour a week on a rifle range that is at the disposal of the organization.

Among the members of the local body are a number of National Guardsmen, who have been sharpshooters and first class marksmen for years, and several retired army officers who have offered their services in coaching and instruction with the military rifle.

It is planned to have a camp at the range, which is a few miles from the city, which will be established throughout the summer. At this camp members may go and come as they desire, being under no rigid discipline, beyond being required to qualify as an expert marksman.

Employers of men desirous of participating in this movement have expressed a willingness to give employes an opportunity to take advantage of the rifle range, and offers of assistance from regular service men have been abundant.

Col. Keenan expresses the opinion that 1,000,000 men would be participating in this training during the summer, laying a foundation for a trained citizen soldiery, against times of need.

The Pittsburgh regiment has been offered to President Wilson in this telegram which Col. Keenan sent to Washington:

"I am authorized to offer you, in case of national need, the services of the first battalion of the first regiment of American Riflemen. All the officers of the organization are of military age, and have pledged themselves to qualify at once, and at their own expense, as marksmen with the regulation rifle of the United States army. If a million Americans will so qualify during the next few months your plea for national preparedness will, supplementing congressional action, have met with a practical popular response that will help to insure our country against enforced participation either in the present or in any future war."

COL. DRIANT KILLED BY A HAND GRENADE

Berlin, March 17, wireless to Sayville.—"Col. Driant, son-in-law of the late Gen. Boulanger, who has been reported by French newspapers to be a prisoner of the Germans, is dead, the victim of a hand grenade, according to a report from Karlsruhe," says the Overseas News agency. A high German office has visited Col. Driant's tomb near Beaumont, north of Verdun, the report states.

A Paris dispatch on March 11 said that Col. Driant, who was the hero of the defense of Caures woods in the battle of Verdun, and who, it was feared had been killed, corresponded to the description of a French officer who had been picked up wounded in the leg by a German stretcher-bearer, according to German prisoners.

UNCLE SAM WILL DISPOSE OF CONNOR

Secretary of Labor Asks for Report on Case of Deserter.

The case of Mike Connor, native of Ireland, who joined the Canadian army, then deserted and fled to the United States, without passing inspection at the border, will be disposed of by the immigration bureau in the same manner as in the case of any other alien.

Connor is now in the Hennepin county jail.

The fact that Connor is a deserter from the Canadian ranks and if deported may be subjected to punishment by the military authorities of the dominion, will probably have no bearing on what the department of labor will do in the case. The question before the immigration officials is whether or not the alien violated the law when he entered the country without inspection.

The warrant for deportation, if ordered, will come from the department of labor at Washington, and it is understood that Secretary of Labor Wilson has requested the immigration authorities of Minneapolis for a report on Connor's case, which has attracted more or less attention, owing to the vigorous fight which Connor put up in the courts in an endeavor to secure his freedom under habeas corpus proceedings.

Connors resided in the United States fourteen years before going to Canada a few months ago to join the army. He never took out citizenship papers.

Portuguese Soldiers Recalled.

London, March 17.—Portuguese soldiers on leave of absence have been recalled, says a dispatch to Reuter's agency from Lourenco, Marquesas, Portuguese East Africa.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE—

Notice is hereby given, That default has been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage bearing date the 15th day of August, 1910, which mortgage is acknowledged on the 2nd day of September, 1910, made, and executed by Julia McLean, an unmarried woman, as mortgagor, to T. H. Hawkes, Trustee, mortgagee, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for St. Louis County, Minnesota, on the 14th day of September, 1910, at ten o'clock A. M. in Book 225 of Mortgages on Page 176; which mortgage was thereafter assigned by said T. H. Hawkes, Trustee, to William G. Schauffler, Jr., which assignment was dated the 29th day of November, 1912, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County on the 2nd day of December, 1912, at nine o'clock A. M. in Book 303 of Mortgages on page 558; which mortgage was thereafter assigned by said William G. Schauffler, Jr., to T. H. Hawkes, which assignment was dated the 17th day of April, 1913, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of said County on the 29th day of April, 1913, at 8:30 o'clock A. M. in Book 305 of Mortgages, on page 57.

That thereafter said T. H. Hawkes died in said County, and the Probate Court of said County thereafter in the Matter of the Estate of T. H. Hawkes, duly assigned said mortgage to Florence Curtis Hawkes, by Final Decree, dated July 22nd, 1914, a certified copy of which final decree was thereafter, and on the first day of December, 1914, at 3:30 o'clock P. M., duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County, in Book 360 of Deeds, on page 222.

Said default consists in the non-payment by said mortgagor of the principal sum secured by said mortgage, which became due on the first day of September, 1915, together with interest thereon from said date. By reason of said default, the Power of Sale in said mortgage has become operative and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise has been instituted to recover the amount secured by said mortgage. There is claimed to be due, and is due, on said mortgage on the date hereof, the sum of Fifteen Hundred Forty-five and 50-100 Dollars ($1,545.50). The property described in said mortgage and thereby mortgaged, is situated in St. Louis County, Minnesota, and is described as follows:

Lot Fourteen (14), in Block Fifty-one (51), London Addition to Duluth, according to the recorded plat thereof on file and of record in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said County.

Now, therefore, By virtue of the Power of Sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sale of said premises at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, by the Sheriff of St. Louis County, Minnesota, at the Sheriff's office in the County Court House in the City of Duluth, St. Louis County, Minnesota, on Monday, the 17th day of April, 1916, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage, and taxes, if any, on said premises, and the sum of Seventy-five Dollars ($75.00) attorneys' fees, and the costs and disbursements allowed by law.

Dated March 3rd, 1916.

SAWTAY

100% Pure Butter-of-Nuts

For Baking, Shortening, Frying & Candy-Making

WONDERFUL, wholesome, economical. And for this reason:—keep in mind the finest creamery butter you have ever used; deprive it of its bacteria and the one-fifth salt-and-water which it contains. Then you have the character of Sawtay, 100% pure butter-of-nuts, odorless, tasteless, and as white as the driven snow.

Indigestion and dyspepsia are caused by not merely the foods themselves, but mainly by the fat in which they are cooked, baked or fried. If the fat melt at a higher temperature than the temperature of the stomach it stays a solid mass. If it melt, and the stomach fail to assimilate it, the fat becomes an irritant.

Now, then, the scientists have, over their signatures, attested that the finest creamery butter manifests a digestibility of 95.8%, and that Sawtay will digest to 98%. You can determine, from your experience, the digestibility of hog-fat and the various oils. So much for digestibility.

Food is food. Whatever you use to prepare it adds to or robs it of its value as a food. Fasten this in your mind: Sawtay is a food. One pound of Sawtay is equal, in energy producing value, to 2¼ pounds of albumins, such as the white of egg or lean meat, and 2¼ pounds of carbohydrates, such as sugar, starch, et cetera.

Nor will Sawtay absorb a flavor or odor—you can use the same portion over and over—fry fish, then onions, strain through cheese cloth, and use the same portion in baking a pie or delicate cake.

Sawtay Is the Most Efficient, the Most Economical and the Most Healthful Butter You Can Use for Baking, Shortening, Frying and Candy-Making

Since it is not a compound, concoction or mixture, but wholly and solely the pure butter-of-nuts, Sawtay will not turn rancid even though the can be left open and exposed to various temperatures. Do you realize what this phase alone means to you? Just this: Cakes, biscuits, pies, doughnuts, pastry, et cetera, made with Sawtay will be without the greasy odor, taste and look, and will stay fresh and sweet much longer than if you used lard or cow butter. Even chronic dyspeptics can eat heartily of food made with Sawtay—and with never a groan.

WHAT THE SCIENTISTS AND FOOD EXPERTS HAVE SAID OF SAWTAY

Good Housekeeping Bureau of Foods, Sanitation and Health.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, Director.

The product Sawtay has been analyzed and tested by the Good Housekeeping Bureau of Foods, Sanitation and Health, Washington, D. C., with the result that it has been given the Star Rating.

We believe that this information will be of interest and very practical service.

Good Housekeeping Magazine.

Prof. Lewis B. Allyn, Chemist.

Dept. of Public Health, Westfield, Mass., says: We find no indication of any adulteration of any nature and believe Sawtay to be a product of merit. Sawtay gives a good account of itself. The analysis shows no artificial vegetable colors, no crude fibre, no preservatives, no adulteration, and the quality is excellent.

(Signed) LEWIS B. ALLYN, Analyst.

Dr. Edward S. Hodgskin, Food Expert, says:

Besides my own experience, I have the experience of seven practical house-wives from which to give you a most unqualified endorsement of Sawtay. In addition to this, the International Mutual Cooks and Pastry Cooks Association has also given its unqualified endorsement.

(Signed) EDW. S. HODGSKIN, M. D.

Alfred W. McCann, Pure Food Expert, says:

I have just completed an inspection of your plant where Sawtay is manufactured. I went through the process from top to toe... The uses to which Sawtay can be put legitimately are so numerous and their significance so profound that I cannot over-estimate the virtues of your product. It is really a wonderful foodstuff...

I congratulate you on having so much that is good and wholesome and I am sure you will safeguard its virtues with jealousy and honor.

(Signed) ALFRED W. McCANN.

THE SUPREME TEST —Make Table Butter, Icing, Candy and Cake with SAWTAY

SAWTAY AS TABLE BUTTER

For those to whom all animal fats are abhorent, and yet who would satisfy the eye relative to the cow-butter-color and look, the following simple recipe is offered:

Place the contents of a 25c tin of SAWTAY in a large egg beater; add ¼ cup of water in which one level teaspoonful of salt has been dissolved, then add contents of one butter-color capsule. Cream until the water, color and salt are thoroughly mixed and absorbed. This will produce a butter, wholesome, healthful, and free from bacteria at about half the cost of the animal butter.

"CUT" DAIRY BUTTER

To one 25c tin of SAWTAY add one pound of medium grade cow-butter. Cream until thoroughly mixed; then allow to harden in a cool place.

The odor and taste in cow-butter is due to the bacteria in it. Sawtay has no taste nor odor—nor bacteria. Therefore, the "strong", medium grade butter is "cut" so that its taste and odor are reduced to the point of a fine creamery butter. The cost is cut and reduced about one-third of the price of cow-butter.

NUT TABLE BUTTER AT 18c lb.

To make a perfect table nut-butter, closely resembling the cow product in color, look and texture follow this recipe:

Place contents of a 25c tin SAWTAY in large egg-beater together with one pint of Fer-mil-lac, Bacillac or smooth, butter-milk; cream until the SAWTAY has taken up as much as possible of the milk, then drain. Break and add small capsule of vegetable butter-color (your druggist has butter color—it is pure and harmless) and then add one level teaspoonful of salt. Cream the whole thoroughly so that the salt and color will be thoroughly mixed. Keep in cool place as you would cow-butter. This recipe will produce as good, healthful butter at about 18c the pound.

COCOANUT LAYER CAKE

½ cup Sawtay	½ cup milk
1 cup Sugar	1 2-3 cups flour
2 eggs	2½ teaspoonfuls baking powder
1 teaspoonful vanilla

Cream Sawtay, add sugar gradually and continue creaming. Add eggs beaten until light, adding milk and sifted dry ingredients alternately to first mixture. Vanilla last. Put in layer tins well greased with Sawtay and bake 15 minutes in a moderate oven. Put together with Sawtay icing and freshly grated cocoanut.

BISCUIT FILLER OR SOFT ICING

½ cup Sawtay, 1 cup powdered sugar, white of one egg, one teaspoonful vanilla extract, ½ teaspoonful grated nutmeg. Cream the Sawtay and sugar in a beater, add white of egg unbeaten, and the vanilla, beat together thoroughly. Sprinkle grated nutmeg over the top and keep in a cool place until served.

The varying degree of hardness will be determined by the quantity of egg white that is used. The vanilla may be varied with a small quantity of lemon juice, if that flavor be preferred.

CHOCOLATE FUDGE

2 cupfuls sugar, 1 cupful milk
2 ounces chocolate, tablespoon Sawtay
1 teaspoon vanilla extract, pinch of salt

Put all the ingredients except the extract into a saucepan and stir and boil until it forms a soft ball when tested in cold water. Remove from fire, add extract, allow to stand a minute then beat until creamy. Pour into Sawtayed pan and mark into squares.

He will put you wise to a great many things you should know in selecting a piano. Do not be deceived by misleading advertisements, offering something for nothing. Remember, it is characteristic with some firm to have a so-called piano sales, advertising big discounts, made possible only by inflating the original prices.

There are no such methods used in selling the Raudenbush piano, which is sold direct to the public by the manufacturers) at an actual saving of at least $100. If this statement is hard to believe, call and investigate.

GERMAN INFANTRY ATTACKS ON VERDUN CEASE AND ARTILLERY FIRE BECOMES INTERMITTENT

NO FURTHER ADVANCE BY THE TEUTONS

No Reply to Concentrated Fire By French on Enemy Trenches.

Heavy Cannonading on Other Side of Meuse Near Vaux.

Aviators of Both Sides Throw Shells of Large Caliber.

London, March 18.—Since the massed attacks of Thursday night against the village and fort of Vaux, northeast of Verdun, the Germans have not advanced at any point on the defenses of the fortress, Paris announced today.

Last night passed without infantry activity and even the artillery action is described as intermittent. The Paris war office reports that the Germans did not reply to a concentrated fire directed by the French guns against the German trenches in the Corbeaux wood and in the direction of Hill 265, which is northwest of Dead Man's hill.

On the other bank of the Meuse there has been heavy work by the artillery, notably in the region of Vaux.

Reports of developments of importance in the other war fields are lacking. There appears to be increasing military activity in the Balkans, however. Heavy troop movements in Bulgaria are reported from Bucharest, the railroads being given over to this traffic. In Roumania passenger traffic on a line from Bucharest to the Hungarian frontier has been suspended.

ALL QUIET ON BORDER EXCEPT AT TAMPICO

Secretary Baker Issues Statement Regarding Mexican Conditions.

Washington, March 18.—Secretary Baker early today issued the following statement:

"The reports received directly through military channels, and those sent to this department from other departments of the government indicate quiet along the entire border except some excitement at Tampico, which is apparently temporary and without cause.

"There are no reports of the operations of the expedition available for publication."

The secretary said he would leave Washington this afternoon for his home at Cleveland, Ohio, and would not return here until Tuesday morning. In his absence Maj.-Gen. Hugh L. Scott, chief of staff, will be acting secretary of war.

Navy department reports today from Vera Cruz say about 200 Americans from Mexico City and other interior points have arrived there, most of them acting upon advices from friends and relatives in the United States urging them to leave Mexico. Conditions at Vera Cruz, the message said, are quiet and many of the Americans after investigation of reports as to the situation are returning to the interior.

SWEAR STEAMER WAS TORPEDOED

American Consul Reports Statements of Officers of the Tubantia.

Washington, March 18.—Two officers and lookouts of the destroyed Dutch liner Tubantia, the American consul at Amsterdam reported today, "swear the steamer was torpedoed." He added that passengers were of the same opinion.

Not a German Mine.

Berlin, March 18, wireless to Sayville. —"Commenting on the Dutch report that the steamship Tubantia was sunk by a mine, German newspapers are discussing the origin of the mine," says the Overseas News agency. "They state that the latest statistics indicate that it was not a German mine. Since the beginning of the war 918 mines have been washed up on the Dutch coast. Of these 484 were of British origin, 58 French, 201 unknown and only 175 German."

Enver Pasha Returns.

Berlin, via London, March 18.—An official dispatch from Constantinople says that Enver Pasha, the Turkish war minister, has returned there from a trip of inspection to Syria, Palestine and Arabia. He had gone as far as Medina, the prophet's city, where he paid a visit to the tomb of Mohammed.

Jack Allen Killed.

Roanoke, Va., March 18.—Jack Allen, brother of Sidna and Floyd Allen, leaders of the gang that assassinated officials of the Carroll county court at Hillsville, was killed last night at the home of Mrs. Birt Martin, near Mount Airy, N. C. Will McGraw, who was with Allen and who disappeared immediately after the shot was heard, is being sought.

TIME WHEN GERMANY WOULD CONSIDER PEACE PROPOSALS IS ENDED

CONTINUANCE IS DEMANDED

German National Liberals Urge Further Use of Torpedo Warfare.

Introduce Measure to That Effect in the Reichstag.

Enemies Have Lost Day of Grace, Says Semi-Official Paper.

Declares Time Has Come to Carry Out Chancellor's Warning.

Determined to Double Energies to Open the Blindest Eyes.

Berlin, March 18, by wireless to Sayville, N. Y.—The National Liberty party has introduced the following measure in the reichstag:

"Considering that Great Britain not only makes war on the armed forces of Germany, but has taken measures in order to impede the providing of Germany with food supplies and raw material, so as to compel Germany to subinit through hunger, for which purpose Great Britain brutally violates international law and employs force against neutral countries; considering further that Germany is able through unlimited and unrestrained submarine warfare to increase the British lack of tonnage so that it can be made extraordinarily difficult and perhaps impossible for the British nation to obtain sufficient supplies of food and raw materials, considering that such warfare would bring more speedily a victorious end of the war, the imperial chancellor is required to enter into no arrangement with other countries which would hinder us in the unlimited use of the submarine weapon and to permit in the war zone, against the enemy's traders, with the exception of passenger ships, such use of submarines as arises from the peculiarity of said weapon."

Similar bills were brought forward by the Conservative and Center parties.

The National Liberals sent the following message to Admiral von Tirpitz:

"We are deeply moved by the news of the retirement of your excellency in the present difficult time. We send to the creator of our navy and the father of the German naval spirit assurance of the truest and most thankful devotion."

WANTED TO ATTACK ENGLAND; VETOED

Kaiser's Opposition to Naval Plan Caused Von Tirpitz to Resign.

London, March 18.—A wireless dispatch from Rome says that the retirement of Admiral von Tirpitz as German minister of marine was occasioned by his intention to attack Great Britain with the entire German navy. This plan was vetoed, according to these advices, by Emperor William and Prince Henry.

HEAVY MOVEMENT OF TROOPS IN BULGARIA

Passenger and Freight Traffic Stopped to Make Way for Soldiers.

Paris, March 18.—Movements of troops on a large scale in Bulgaria are reported by the Havas correspondent at Bucharest, Roumania, in a dispatch filed on Wednesday. It is said these operations are so extensive that both passenger and freight traffic have been suspended.

In Roumania the correspondent says, passenger travel has been stopped for ten days on the railroad running north from Bucharest to Prebeal on the Hungarian frontier.

FRENCH MINISTER OF WAR SAYS DECISIVE MOMENT AT HAND

ALEXANDRE RIBOT.

SAYS END OF WAR IS IN SIGHT

French Minister Highly Optimistic in Address to Deputies.

Indicates Official Opinion as to Results of Verdun Battle.

Declares That Allies Have Reached Decisive Hour of the Conflict.

Paris, March 18.—"We have reached the decisive hour," said Alexandre Ribot, minister of finance, speaking in the chamber of deputies last night on the financial and military situation. "We can say without exaggeration, without illusion and without vain optimism, that we now see the end of this horrible war."

M. Ribot's utterance is taken to be of the utmost importance, as indicating official opinion with regard to the result of the battle of Verdun. Whether peace is or is not appreciably nearer, it is unquestionable that the tension in France has relaxed and that men's thoughts are turned to the rapid development of events favorable to the allies.

SAN DIEGO EXPOSITION IS FORMALLY OPENED

San Diego, Cal., March 18.—With an aerial parade of twelve military aeroplanes, headed by four record-holding aviators, as a feature, the Panama-California International exposition was dedicated today. Franklin K. Lane, secretary of the interior, and representative of President Woodrow Wilson, delivered the address of the day.

At noon President G. A. Davidson offered a toast to peace and declared San Diego's exposition formally opened for its second year.

UNITED STATES TROOPS HAVE NO INTENTION OF OCCUPYING ANY TOWNS

Pursuit of Villa Bandits Is Entirely Punitive Expedition.

Has No Characteristics of Invasion of the Republic.

Soldiers Are Constantly on Move; No Use for Cities of Towns.

Washington, March 18.—American troops pursuing Villa and his bandits have no intention and no orders to occupy any cities or towns during their march into Mexico.

This was stated at the White House and war department today after the receipt of a report that Gen. Gavira, the Carranza commander at Juarez, had given notice that Gen. Pershing's troops would not be allowed to occupy Casas Grandes, or other towns.

It was declared by administration officials that the pursuit of Villa, being entirely a punitive expedition, had none of the characteristics of an invasion, and there was no object in occupying towns or cities, because the American troops will keep constantly on the move.

Officials said today that the situation at Tampico, where uneasiness is said to exist among Americans and other foreigners, had no bearing on the pursuit of Villa.

LARSON MAY BE ELECTED

Duluth Man May Land Place on the Republican Delegation.

Now Leads Manahan on Face of the Latest Returns.

St. Paul, Minn., March 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—On the face of the latest returns of the presidential primary received up to noon today, O. J. Larson of Duluth stands a good show of having been elected as one of the four Republican delegates-at-large, as he now has a lead of 706 over James Manahan, who was supposed to have been elected with Eberhart, Van Sant and Jacobson. These figures are based on returns from 2,831 precincts in the state. There are about 175 precincts to be heard from, many in the northern part of the state, in which the friends of Larson expect he has polled a good vote.

The returns from the 2,831 precincts show:

For Republican delegates-at-large—Eberhart, 44,288; Van Sant, 36,905; Jacobson, 32,881; Larson, 21,415; Manahan, 20,709; Stevens, 17,612; Marcus Johnson, 17,610; Rahn, 16,615.

For Democratic delegates-at-large—Lawler, 31,017; King, 22,154; Nelson, 21,179; Austin, 20,466; Just 20,131; Weiss, 18,911; Reiter, 18,661; Wessel, 18,586.

Interesting Features.

State capitol political followers are finding considerable of interest to them in the returns of the recent presidential preference primary. How the several nationalities voted, especially the Germans, has brought out a number of interesting facts.

NOT BELIEVED VILLA WILL MAKE A STAND

Mexican Bandit and His Men Fleeing Before American Troops.

Washington, March 18. — Francisco Villa and his bandits were fleeing before the American expeditionary forces in Northern Mexico today, in the opinion of army officers here.

This belief was based upon dispatches from the American columns reporting that none of the outlaws had been seen up to late yesterday and strengthened the opinion that the Villa forces would not attempt to make a stand. Army men declared that the campaign would quickly develop into guerrilla warfare if there was any opposition.

Latest dispatches to the war department make no mention of disorders on the border, according to Secretary Baker. Reports from American consular representatives, telling of generally quiet conditions in the interior of Mexico, continue to arrive. Unsettled conditions in the Tampico and Torreon districts, however, give government officials some concern.

Believed Villa Is Hiding in Fastnesses of Sierra Madres.

CRISIS PASSED.

El Paso, Tex., March 18.—Gen. Gavira, Carranza commander at Juarez, in a statement given out today to the Associated Press, declared that the crisis in the relations between the United States and Mexico was passed and there was no further need to fear trouble.

El Paso, Tex., March 18.—American cavalrymen were camped at dawn today at Colonia Dublan, one of the environs of Casas Grandes. They arrived in the night. Through Colonia Dublan ran the road to the Galeana district, twenty-five miles southeast, where Villa was last definitely reported.

The news of the encampment at Colonia Dublan dispelled fears of any disputes with Constitutionalist authorities over what position the American troops should occupy at Casas Grandes. Mormon scout outriders dashed into Colonia Dublan last night with the news that the Americans were near. The column which was first into this

NOTHING TO DO WITH MEXICAN SITUATION

Movement of Warships and Marines Entirely Separate Matter.

Washington, March 18.—Navy officials today continued to reiterate that movement of ships or marines had no concern with the Mexican situation.

They said the department was unadvised of the return of the battleship Kentucky to New Orleans after she had sailed for Vera Cruz and that they knew nothing of a report that the ship was going to Pensacola to load marines.

The naval transport Hancock is loading marines at Philadelphia for Pensacola.

PRESIDENT'S OWN MEASURE

House Military Bill Has Full Approval of Executive.

Chairman Hay So Informs House Members During Debate.

Washington, March 18.—The house military bill is President Wilson's own bill, Chairman Hay of the military committee informed the house today when debate on the measure was resumed under the ten-hour rule.

"I may say," he said in reply to a question, "in broad language that this is the president's bill, that he thoroughly approves of it."

Representative Moore of Pennsylvania, Republican, said members on both sides were eager to know whether the bill had the full approval of the administration.

"I am authorized to state," Chairman Hay replied, "that the bill meets with the approval of the president. It is his bill. It carries out the recommendations of his message. It goes a little farther."

Accomplish Same Purpose.

Mr. Hay added that while the bill did not contain the continental army provision recommended by Former Secretary Garrison and approved by President Wilson the president was satisfied that the proposed federation of the national guard would accomplish the same purpose.

The senate military bill, which probably will be taken up for debate Monday proposes a total peace strength for the army of 194,586 enlisted men and 10,726 officers. The figures are contained in the report on the bill, made public today which was compiled by the army war college. The war time strength would be 236,000 enlisted men,

CONTRACTS UP MONDAY

One paving contract and two for laying cement walks will come up for authorization at the council meeting next Monday afternoon.

The resolution awarding the contract for the West First street pavement to Rogers & McLean on their bid of $63,257 will come up for passage and indications are that it will be adopted, although members of the West End Commercial club are protesting against a thirty-foot pavement west of Twenty-third avenue. The commissioners declare that a majority of the property owners have requested this width and that the program outlined a week ago will be carried out. A delegation of West end residents is expected at the meeting Monday.

E. F. Hilliard will be awarded the contract to lay all the cement walks recently authorized east of Twelfth avenue west on his bid of $11,320 and H. O. Nyhus the contract to lay the walks west of Twelfth avenue west on his bid of $5,496. The C. O. White & Co. will be awarded the contract to haul pipes for the water and light department during 1916 on their bid of $2,615.

Commissioner Farrell, works head, will introduce a resolution ordering Minnesota avenue paved from Thirty-eighth to Forty-third street, extending the present pavement to the end of the car line. The improvement will cost approximately $12,000, according to estimates prepared by the city engineer.

The ordinance classifying the city's civil service system will come up for passage, while Commissioner Silberstein will introduce an ordinance appropriating $126 for the purchase of police caps.

The Greer Printing company will be awarded the contract to print the annual reports of the city officers on its bid of $868 and the Canton Art Metal company the contract to supply the municipal court clerk with steel filing cases on its bid of $196.

Richard Sheasby, whose application for a saloon license renewal at 220 East Superior street, was held up last week, will be granted the license, Commissioner Silberstein announced this morning.

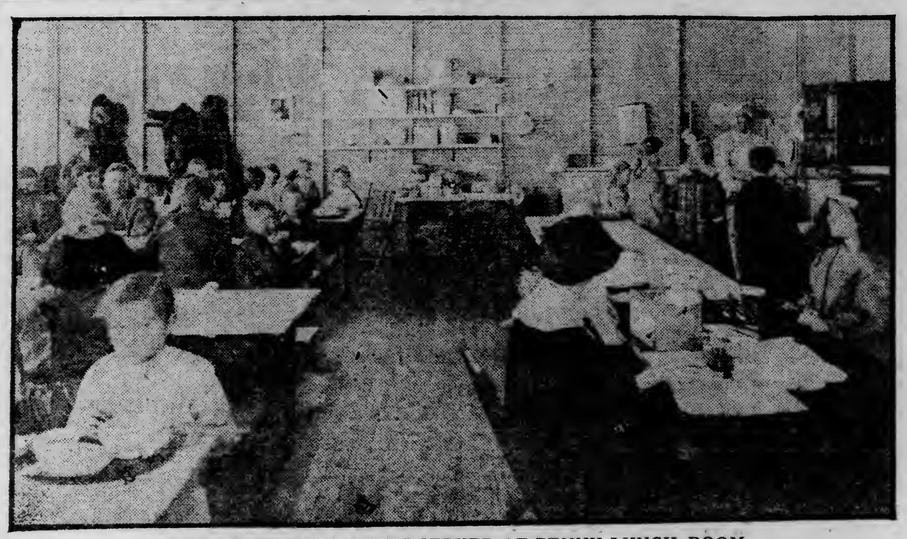
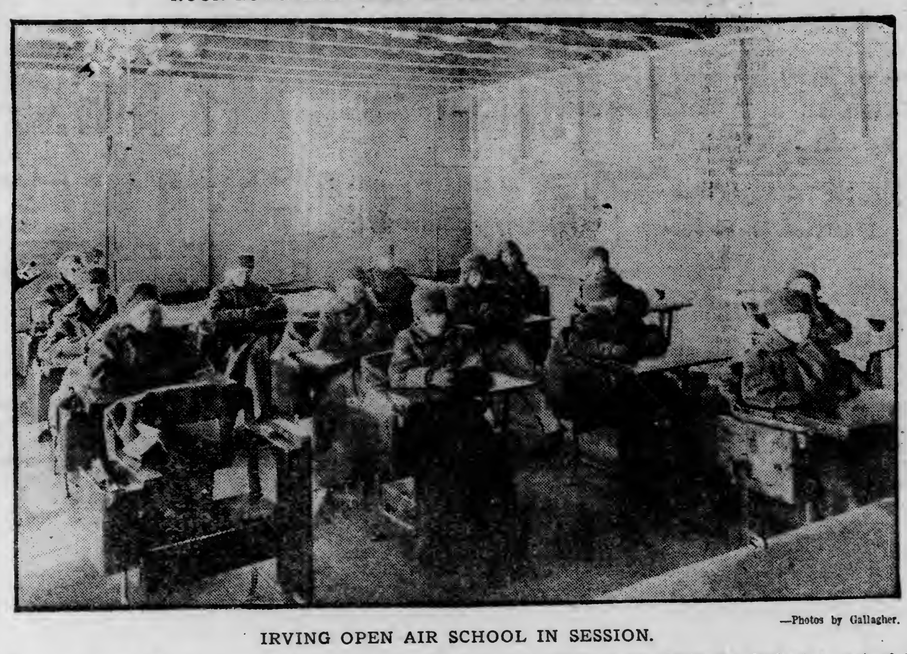
HEALTH OF THE CHILDREN PROVES SUCCESS OF WEST DULUTH'S OPEN AIR SCHOOL



NOON LUNCHEON BEING SERVED AT PENNY LUNCH ROOM.



—Photos by Gallagher.

IRVING OPEN AIR SCHOOL IN SESSION.

Fifteen children at the open air school conducted in connection with the Irving school, Fifty-seventh avenue west and Nicollet street, are showing great improvement in health since the open air school idea was inaugurated. According to tests taken daily, the children have made a steady gain, physically and mentally.

One of the two buildings is fitted up to accommodate fifteen children. In addition to the desks, each child is provided with a cot. The first hour is spent in study, then they have exercise, a small luncheon, and then they sleep for a half hour. The rest of the forenoon is spent in study. The afternoon sessions at the school are about the same as in the forenoon, light luncheon being served in the middle of the afternoon.

The other building is furnished with modern cooking apparatus, where members of the housewives' league serve penny luncheons. Between fifty and sixty children are served here daily with wholesome food at a cost of 1 cent. Soups and broths, bread, butter and milk and, at various times, fruit are on the menu. Most of the children taking advantage of these luncheons are from families where father and mother are working to support the family and no one is at home to provide a warm lunch during the noon hour. In some cases the parents are unable to furnish the proper nourishing food for the children because of poverty.

PROWLER TO WORK FARM

Demanded Admittance to West Duluth Residence at 3 A. M.

Charles Lusk, 35, was fined $30 and costs with an option of spending thirty days at the St. Louis county work farm when arraigned in the West Duluth police court this morning before Judge H. W. Lanners. Lask was picked up shortly before 3 o'clock this morning after having pounded on the door of the Anderson residence, 4302 Rene street. Lusk is said to have demanded admittance and to have threatened to burn the house down if the door was not opened at once. Mr. Anderson, a cripple, was unable to get out of bed, but Mrs. Anderson ran out of the front door and secured the services of the watchman of the People's brewery, who after a chase placed Lusk under arrest. After sleeping at the West Duluth police station Lusk this morning said he did not remember any of his performances during the night.

ARE IMPATIENT FOR NEW STATION

West Duluth Club Will Remind Soo Officers of Promises.

The cause of the delay in building the much promised passenger station at the foot of Ramsey street by the Soo railroad is to be investigated by the members of the West Duluth Commercial club, according to action taken last evening. Trains were to have been operated over this line and a station maintained west of Forty-eighth avenue west, under the terms of the franchise, according to the club members.

The committee to investigate comprises E. J. Zauft, president of the club; Thomas Olafson, Charles Kauppi and L. A. Barnes and Louis Ramsted. It is claimed that the depot was promised for last summer.

Plans for another "ladies' night" to be held on April 14, were made last evening. The committee to have charge of the affair consists of Dr. W. E. Judson, Axel Wick, H. C. Brown, David Harris, Thomas Doyle, J. A. Webber, Adolph Anderson, John L. Morrison, N. F. Nelson and Frank E. Watson.

Invitations will be extended to Postmaster W. E. McEwen and Commissioner B. Silberstein to address the club members next Friday evening. The former will be asked to speak on the mail service and the latter to speak on features of the milk ordinance.

LINEUP OF WADE'S "OLD RELIABLES"

A rink of "Old Reliables" will be organized by Frank H. Wade, president of the Western Curling club, for his "crack" rink next winter, according to a report that was circulated at the club rooms last night. Mr. Wade refused to say if the lineup as given was correct when the list was shown to him.

According to the "dope" Mr. Wade will have on his rink men who can play all positions of the game. The regular lineup will be, it is said: George J. Mallory, lead; Kenneth A. McDonald, second, and T. F. Wieland, third. It is also claimed that Charles Ilitis will be a member of the aggregation, and will play substitute whenever Mr. Wieland is unable to be present.

These five men are said to have forgotten more about the game than the average player at the club now knows. The only "weak" spot in the rink will be the "sweeping" qualities, none of the five members being able to show great speed in this line.

POSTMASTER DENIES ALLEGED FORGERY

Lake Linden, Mich., March 18.—Jacob Steffes, local postmaster and former village clerk, arrested on charges of forgery and embezzlement in connection with the village office he once held, has been held to circuit court under bonds, but he stoutly denies the charges and intimates he is made the "goat." An information filed against the accused alleges that in 1915 a difference between the bank's and clerk's figures of $4,454.45 was discovered.

It also charges that Steffes raised time checks to a total of $371.50, "doctored" merchandise checks, failed to enter the full amount of taxes and water collections and uttered orders, amounting to $463.30 in excess of the statement of a company from which meters were purchased.

The information further charges that Steffes appropriated during 1911 $2,500 that should have gone into the sinking fund and with forging and uttering forged checks on the village accounts in 1912.

Minneapolis, Minn., March 18.—Automobile robbers, apparently tired of preying upon mere private citizens, stole the automobile of Chief of Police Oscar Martinson, drove it about the city and abandoned it on a bridge, where it was not found until thirty-six hours later.

DULUTH PASTOR WILL TAKE CHARGE OF HOSPITAL APRIL 1

Dr. John A. Krantz, pastor of the Elim Swedish Lutheran church, Fifty-sixth avenue west and Ellnor street, has tendered his resignation to the church council, and it will be read to the congregation tomorrow morning. Dr. Krantz will become superintendent of the Bethesda hospital, St. Paul.

Dr. Krantz has been one of the most active workers in the Lutheran church in Northern Minnesota for twenty-five years. For the last fifteen years he has been pastor of the West Duluth congregation.

As one of the most influential members of the Augustana synod of America, Dr. Krantz served on various boards of the synod. He was president of the Minnesota conference, which embraced at that time Minnesota, part of Wisconsin, North and South Dakota, and Western Canada, for a period of seven years. He refused re-election as president of the conference two years ago.

In addition to serving as pastor of the Elim church, Dr. Krantz has at present under his direct charge, missions at Grand Lake, St. Louis county; Oak Lake, Pine county; the church at Midway, and other small places near Duluth.

Dr. Krantz expects to leave Duluth about April 1.

ALL BIDS MAY BE REJECTED

Offer of E. A. Dahl on East Superior Street Paving Declared Illegal.

All bids on the proposed East Superior street pavement may be thrown out by the city commissioners Monday afternoon and Commissioner Farrell authorized to advertise for new bids altogether.

This tentative agreement was reached by Mayor Prince, Commissioners Voss and Farrell and City Attorney Samuelson at an informal conference in the mayor's office this morning, when the city attorney declared that E. A. Dahl's bid on paving East Superior street was illegal and that the contract could not be awarded to him on Trinidad Lake asphalt.

"Mr. Dahl failed to include Trinidad Lake asphalt and the name of the company that would supply the material in his original bid," said City Attorney Samuelson when asked for an opinion. "The fact that he sent a letter shortly afterwards to Commissioner Farrell, explaining the material he would use, does not make his proposal a legal one, and the commissioners have no right to award him the contract."

As a result, the city attorney was instructed to submit a written opinion on the question, so that the matter could be taken up at the council meeting Monday, at which time the resolution to award the contract to the General Contracting company of Minneapolis will come up for action. The measure was introduced last Monday, but will be tabled by the council, if it is decided to reject all the bids submitted and to advertise for new proposals altogether.

As the commissioners reserve the right at all times to reject any and all bids, the procedure tentatively agreed upon this morning can be carried through.

In view of the controversy that has arisen over the awarding of the East Superior street contract, it is expected that the above plan will settle the difficulty. Commissioner Farrell, who introduced the resolution awarding the contract to the Minneapolis company, whose bid was about $1,900 higher than Mr. Dahl's, claims that the local man is unable to secure the specified material from the manufacturers. Three of the other commissioners have declared themselves in favor of the lowest bidder.

COUNTY AGENT'S MESSAGE TO FARMERS

Early Plowing of Corn Ground Is Advocated—Time to Test Seed Corn—Lists of Standard Seeds Available.

Early plowing of corn ground is advocated by County Agricultural Agent H. G. Larson, who advises farmers to begin as soon as possible in the spring. Early plowing, he says, should be deep, and the heavier the soil, the deeper the plowing. When the soil is plowed four or five inches deep and cultivation of the crop is two or three inches deep, there is a loose bend of soil two inches deep for the roots to grow in. Plowing six to eight inches deep doubles this bed and generally increases the yield.

Ground plowed in the spring, he says, should be disked and harrowed as early as possible. Disking and harrowing should be done every week or ten-day period from the time the ground can be worked until the seed is planted. The planting should be done as soon as the soil is warm, so as to give a growing season as long as possible. Early disking will make the ground ready for planting as soon as the season will permit. In Northern Minnesota the last ten days of May are usually considered to be the best time for planting.

There is no advantage in deep planting, according to Mr. Larson. From one to two inches is a good depth if the soil is moist. In a wet season, or on wet land, it is important that the seed be not more than one and a half inches in the ground. The plants will not root deeper on account of deep planting, and the corn planted shallow will come up earlier and grow better.

Testing Seed Corn.

March is the best month in which to test seed corn. If it will grow then it will grow at planting time. It is necessary to test now, so that other seed can be secured in case the corn tested is not good. Tests should not be made in a room that gets cold every night, a temperature of about 50 deg. being about right.

Every farmer, according to Mr. Larson, should feel that it is a part of the work of the county agent to help him find good seed corn and should call upon him freely. The state seed laboratory at the University farm, St. Paul, tests seeds free for both purity and germination.

The Minnesota Crop Improvement association at the University farm has published for free distribution a list of members having seed corn for sale. The extension division of the University farm is also aiding in finding buyers and sellers of seed corn.

The Tri-County Crop Improvement association, a branch of the Minnesota Crop Improvement association, has published its first annual catalogue. The list is made up of members of the association who grow and offer for sale seeds of standard farm crops. Copies of the list may be secured either from the county agent or M. J. Thompson, superintendent of Northeast Experiment station of this city, who is secretary of the association.

As first organized, the association included St. Louis and Carlton counties. It now has members in Koochiching and Beltrami counties as well. It supports a double standard of improved farm crops, together with improved livestock, by the use of high class strains of seed. It aims to make the Northern Minnesota country independent of other sections of the state for its seed supply. By growing seed stock here, farmers not only get hardy stock, but keep their soils clean from foul weeds. The officers of the Tri-County Crop Improvement association are: William Webb, Two Harbors, president; M. Martinson, Clover Valley, first vice president; O. Olson, Moose Lake, second vice president; M. J. Thompson, Duluth, secretary-treasurer.

DEMOCRATIC VOTE LARGER

Republican Candidates Received Three Quarters of Wilson Vote.

Official Totals For St. Louis County Announced By Canvassers.

The combined vote for Republican presidential candidates in St. Louis county last Tuesday, was less than three-quarters of the vote cast for President Wilson on the Democratic ticket.

President Wilson, with no opposition to bring out indorsement for him, received 3,687 votes in the county as a whole, while the three candidates on the Republican ticket received the following vote:

Cummins	1,664
Estabrook	841
Webster	197
Totals	2,702

Three-quarters of the Wilson vote would be 2,766.

It is known that in almost every precinct of the county, many of those who voted the Democratic ticket were men who have always been affiliated with the Republican party, and, it is understood, their chief reason for doing so was to express their approval of the president's course. It is further said that the attitude of the Minnesota congressional delegation in the recent vote of confidence, when only Senator Knute Nelson voted to support the government out of the twelve from this state, had much to do with this action on the party of Republicans who grew indignant over the affair.

Dispatches from the Twin City Press bureau in St. Paul, which is the unofficial clearing house of the vote for the state, show that O. J. Larson of Duluth has crept ahead of James Manahan, and is believed now to be one of the big four who will go as delegates-at-large to the Republican national convention in Chicago, to open June 7. In St. Louis county, Mr. Larson ran second only to Former Governor Eberhart, and considerably ahead of Former Governor Van Sant.

MAXIMUM TERM OF SEVEN YEARS

Not more than seven years in the state penitentiary was the sentence meted out by District Judge Cant this morning to Aden Hanneman, 28, who confessed that he had outraged a 17-year-old girl. Hanneman was indicted for rape but was permitted by the court to plead guilty to a lesser offense.

On Sept. 5, 1914, Hanneman met the young woman in company with a male escort. It was late in the evening and she was on her way home. Accosting the pair, he represented himself as a detective and by threats of arrest succeeded in inducing the escort to leave the girl, Hanneman stating that he would take the girl home himself. After they were alone, Hanneman assaulted her.

Hanneman attempted to take the young woman home, but meanwhile the police heard about the affair. He became suspicious when he sighted a policeman and ran. Several months later he wrote the young woman a letter in an endeavor to make a "date" with her. She turned it over to the police and a trap was laid whereby he was apprehended.

Hanneman's life history, as related to the court, is an interesting one. He said he was born in Johannesburg, South Africa. His father was killed during the early part of the Boer war and he and his mother lived for a considerable time in a refugee camp. Later he went to German Southwest Africa, where he joined the German army. After serving some time he came to the United States, where he settled in Rochester, N. Y., later moving to Marquette, Mich., and then to Duluth.

Always Moving Ahead

Thousands of the brightest minds in this country are devoted to the development and improvement of Bell Telephone service.

Steadily and constantly some fault is eliminated, some method improved, or some obstacle overcome.

To realize the steady progress that has been made one only has to compare the quality and quantity of the service today with what it was ten years ago.

Even in the last five years the number of telephones in use has been practically doubled and the distance of telephone transmission multiplied many times.

Our rates are the lowest possible and yet afford sufficient revenue to pay a reasonable return on the money invested, after paying fair wages and after providing sufficiently to rebuild or restore parts of the plant when destroyed by fires or storms, or when it is worn out or becomes obsolete.

It is our constant endeavor to give the best service at the lowest rates at which it can be furnished, so we shall be able to connect everyone who will add to the service to others.

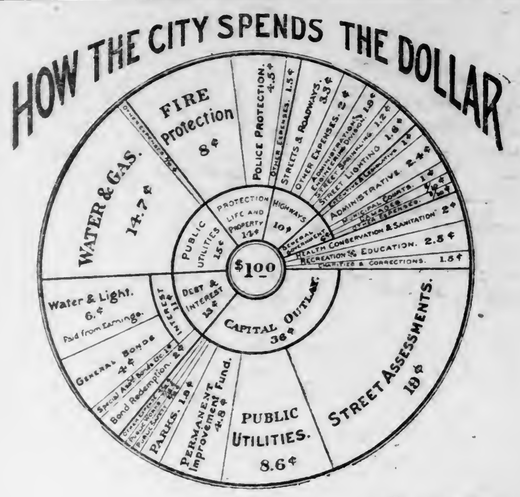
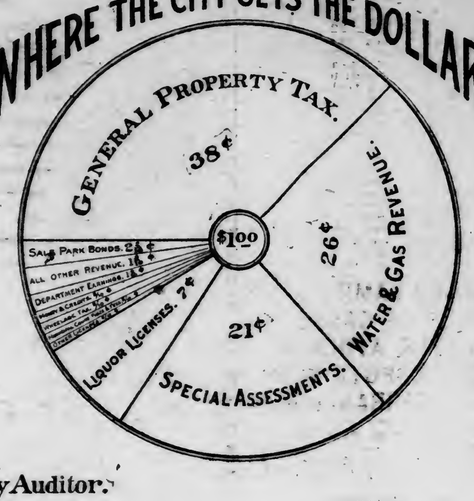
CITY AUDITOR'S FINANCIAL STATEMENT HAS INTERESTING DATA FOR TAXPAYERS





Charts Prepared by City Auditor.

B. J. Campbell.

Charts showing "where the city gets the dollar" and "how the city spends the dollar" were completed this morning by B. J. Campbell, city auditor, from his annual report now ready for the printer. The charts were officially approved by Finance Commissioner Voss.

The various sectors of the circle graphically portray the portion of each dollar received from various sources, as well as the portion expended for various purposes during 1915. The expenditures are all classified according to the system established by the United States census bureau. The expenditures represent, it will be noted, not only the operation, maintenance and interest expense of all the departments, but also money expended resulting in the acquisition of permanent properties and improvements and in reducing the bonded indebtedness of the city.

The following statements, modeled after the municipal classification established by the government census bureau, show the revenues and expenditures for the last year, compiled from the reports submitted by all the department heads:

HIGH SCHOOL ACTIVITIES

Rehearsals Are Under Way at Central for "Cricket on the Hearth"--Plans Presented for Rest Room--"Aggies" Begin Spring Work--Seniors Are Preparing Essays--Girls' Quint Will Play Two Harbors.

With the selection of the cast last Monday for "The Cricket on the Hearth," by Charles Dickens, the production to be presented this year at Central high school as the annual senior class play, rehearsals are already under way and will continue throughout the remainder of the time until the play is ready for the final presentations on Friday and Saturday evenings, April 28 and 29.

More than seventy-five members of the class of 1916 responded to the call for the tryouts for the cast, held a week ago Thursday. From this list Lee C. Rasey, who made such a success as coach of the 1915 senior class play and who has again been chosen to direct this year's attempt, selected the ten persons who will fill the important roles of the cast. Untiring efforts in the rehearsals and other arrangements will be made to assure the play's success, and it is expected that it will equal any previous attempt of Central seniors.

Harry Haines has been appointed to the position of stage manager. Although the play calls for some unusual scenic effects, Haines has had considerable experience in this work and the results in this particular should be very successful. Many professional producers leave out a certain part which calls for special curtains and effects that are very hard to produce. Arrangements to rent scenery painted especially for this part, however, have been made by Coach Rasey, and it is expected to make a decided hit.

Norman Tufty was chosen unanimously to fill the position of business and advertising manager at a meeting of the members of the senior class Monday afternoon.

The complete cast for the play will be as follows: John Perrybingle, Willard Thorp; Mr Tackleton, Philip Bergquist; Caleb Plummer, Irving Auld; Old Gentleman, Donald Alexander; Dot, Allace Cowen; Bertha, Betty Kyle; Tilly Slowboy, Katherine Birch; Mrs. Fielding, Dora Mitchell; May Fielding, Pearl Deatherage; Spirit of the Cricket, Daisy Macaskill.

Preliminary steps for the establishment of a rest room and reception quarters at Central were taken Tuesday night at a meeting of more than 100 graduate members of the class of 1915, when they decided that the big surplus, which they still have in the bank, would go towards the furnishing of such a room.

Considerable agitation has been raised recently by prominent women and women's organizations of the city to have a girls' and teachers' rest room or emergency hospital established at the local institution. Although such a place is a big necessity the plan did not meet with much response and it ws thought that the idea would have to be abandoned.

The class of 1915, which was graduated last spring, still had nearly $250 in the bank to its credit, and the meeting was called Tuesday to determine what should be done with the money. Other classes have left gifts ranging from pictures to pieces of statuary, but the 1915 "grads" if their plan is carried through, will have made one of the best gifts to the school that it has ever received. As a result of the meeting, it was the unanimous opinion of the graduates present that they would spend their money carefully for the furnishing of the rest room if the authorities of the school agreed to furnish the proper space. Although temporary quarters may only be obtained now, more space can be gotten next year when the junior high schools will have taken out some of the freshmen. It is planned to furnish two rooms for the purpose, one to be used merely as an emergency hospital and the other, when not in use as a rest room, to be used as a reception room for the various school and class commitees, clubs and societies.

Miss Margaret Taylor, who acted as advisor to the class of 1915 during its four years of high school life, suggested the plan at the meeting and it met with a hearty response. It was due to the big efforts of the Zenith board that the class finished with a large surplus, a feat which has never been duplicated in the history of the school.

Considerable progress has been made in the agricultural department during the last few weeks and with the approach of spring the "aggies" are planning on some of the most active work that they have ever attempted.

The creamery department got a late start this year, but they have been going full blast ever since and it is expected that the big total output of last season will be even exceeded this year. Students are at work in the creamery beginning early in the morning and they may still be found up to the late hours of the night. The Students' Creamery association, formed so that the work might be carried on more systematically, is gaining unexpectedly successful results and the aggies are especially enthusiastic over the work. The members of the association are paid for the work that they do and they all help to obtain customers for the butter. Already this year there have been considerably more than 1,500 pounds of butter turned out at the creamery.

Results of the winter's work in the agricultural greenhouse have been very satisfactory, and the spring work has already been started. The most important use to which the greenhouse will be put from now on will be to raise things for transplanting. The board of education has given the aggies permission to use the ground adjacent to the greenhouse for garden purposes. The greenhouse will be used to plant tomatoes and other vegetables, and as soon as the ground may be used outside, the plants which have sprung up will be transplanted.

Agricultural students have become greatly interested in the campaign for more results in the home or backyard gardens. Charts and plans for the systematic arrangement of various sized gardens have been drawn by the aggie students, and they will be used to aid Duluthians in arranging the planting of their seeds. The Central aggies have entered the work enthusiastically, and they should make a decided success of it.

The second distribution of prizes being made this year by the Zenith board was made last week, the recipients being the artists whose work had been the best submitted. A total of $30 was distributed among the four artists who had done the greater part of the work, Jack Rideout taking first with $13, Roswell King second with $9, Veronica Irvine third with $6 and Alice Nyman fourth with $2. Miss Carey is in charge of all drawings and art work being done for the Zenith this year, and she made the decision of the awards last week.

The art work this year is to be one of the big features of the Zenith, and it is expected to be by far the finest that has ever been contained in a Central annual. Some unusual departures have been made, and they are expected to prove a big hit with the students.

The first pages of the Zenith are in the hands of the printers, and the rest of the Zenith is rapidly being prepared. The book will be printed again this year by the high school printing department. The student printers will work steadily on the annual from now on, and it will be ready for distribution in June. Most of the collections for the credit slips have been made, but there are still a few persons who have not paid. Collections will be made during next week and the one following, and March 31 will be the last day on which the students may pay for their slips. If they are not paid for on that date, the slips will be canceled and the students will have to pay the outside price of $1.50 for the book. The student price is 75 cents.

Members of the senior English classes are busy preparing their annual senior essays, the themes to be ready for collection next Friday. The senior essay is the most important single piece of work of the fourth year English classes, and the authors this year have been at work on them for several weeks.

More attention will be paid to the essays by the English teachers this year than has heretofore been the custom. About four of the very best essays will be selected to be read at the commencement exercises in June. It is planned to give those persons whose essays are chosen more drill in presenting them, so that they will be able to make a more creditable showing than in former years.

The Central girls' basket ball team will play a return game with the Two Harbors girls' five tonight at the local gymnasium. Last week the local high school team defeated the Two Harbors girls' team by the score of 16 to 1. The visitors, however, have been working hard for the return game, and they are confident that they will take the scalp of the famous Red and White five tonight. The Central team has gone through two years in a victorious march without ever having even found a match for themselves. Their lineup tonight will be as follows: Kugler and Whiteside, forwards; Lutes, center; Morterud, Morey and Henley, guards.

WILL USE X-RAY TO DETERMINE INJURIES

Mrs. Marie Huber in Hospital After Being Hit By Truck.

X-ray examinations will be made at St. Luke's hospital today to determine the extent of injuries sustained by Mrs. Marie Huber, wife of John Huber, 310 East Fifth street, who was struck by an auto truck while crossing Superior street near Second avenue west at 5 p. m. yesterday.

The truck is owned by Swift & Co., meat packers, and was being driven by Joseph Melvin, 707 South Twenty-fourth avenue east. Melvin narrowly missed a head-on collision with an outbound West Duluth street car, but struck Mrs. Huber despite his efforts. She was knocked down by the fender and dragged a few feet.

Police Surgeon Harry Klein, who happened to be near the scene of the accident at the time, took the injured woman to St. Luke's hospital in his machine. An abrasion on the forehead and a wrenched back at first seemed to be the extent of her injuries.

Melvin said he was going east behind a sleigh. He turned into the eastbound car tracks to pass the slower vehicle, and as he did so, noticed Mrs. Huber but a few feet ahead. He then tried to cross to the other side of the street, he said, but was hemmed in by the west-bound car. Caught between the car and a line of east-bound traffic, he resorted to emergency brakes.

He said Mrs. Huber was looking at signs in front of a "movie" theater on the upper side of the street, and did not notice his approach.

TO TAKE EVIDENCE IN HAMMONS CASE

Testimony Will Be About the Same as in Hastings Trial.

Taking of testimony against Max Hammons, 21, charged with complicity in the murder of William Saari near Brookston on Oct. 26, last, will begin Monday morning in Judge Cant's division of the district court. The case was brought on for trial yesterday afternoon and before court adjourned for the day, the drawing of a jury had been completed.

The jurors selected are: S. J. Nygren, Willis O. Derby, L. R. McLean, C. L. Hood, J. G. Luxon, Ollie Dignus, John A. Dahlstrom, Charles W. Stewart, L. M. Willcuts, W. A. Laughton and Charles F. McDonald.

The evidence which County Attorney Greene will produce in the Hammons case will be largely a reptition of that adduced at the trial of Mike Hastings, with whom Hammons was jointly indicted. Hastings was convicted of murder in the second degree and now faces a life term in Stillwater prison.

E. J. Kenny is defending the prisoner.

HAVE BRAINS OF CHILDREN

Mexicans Devoid of Reasoning Power, Says Former Duluth Engineer.

Residents at Border Fear Complications in Handling Problem.

"Residents along the border fear the results of the childish lack of reasoning power in the Mexicans more than anything else," said Thorold Field, mining engineer, who returned to Duluth yesterday from Arizona, after passing through the district visited by the Villa raiders.

Mr. Field has for several years represented Duluth mining interests in Mexico and Arizona and is familiar with Mexico and the Mexicans.

"The average Mexican," said Mr. Field, "has the mentality of a child. He is absolutely unable to reason. He doesn't know anything about the row between this country and Villa. All he knows is that we are 'gringoes,' and if his particular leader tells him to shoot he shoots. The men who are serving in the various armies or bands in Mexico have no particular loyalty to any one faction or to their country. They think only of the present, food, money and the chance to loot. They are simply overgrown children with only the vices developed.

Americans Excited.

"The Americans along the border are wrought up to a great pitch of excitement. Just for an example there was a report one evening that Villa was on the way to one little town, with 200 men. The men all armed and went out to watch for the bandits. A little Mexican boy came riding along. They called to him to stop, but he didn't understand or was frightened and tried to ride away. He got a bullet through him from some excited member of the band.

"Nobody takes the Mexican very seriously as a fighter and American troops could whip twice their number of Mexicans, but the people along the border certainly take the situation seriously. They fear that when the American troops get some distance into Mexico the Carranza men, or large bodies of them, will desert and go over to Villa. Then it is rather hard to tell one Mexican from another, and all kinds of complications may arise. If Americans should fire on Carranza troops by mistake, it would be difficult to explain to Mexican soldiers.

"Dealing with men who are absolutely irresponsible is a most delicate problem and the residents along the border who know this and know the character of the Mexican soldiers look on the situation as grave in the extreme. But there are cool heads down there, and they are doing their best to keep the excitable ones in check and deal with the situation calmly and efficiently."

and state departments today continued to be optimistic.

New Problem Arises.

El Paso, Tex., March 18.—The American troops in Mexico faced a new problem today as they entered the region where Villa's trail is scarcely three days old. This problem came, not from the Villa chase, but from the knowledge that the Carranza authorities did not wish the Americans to occupy any Mexican city.

On the border, at least, this was regarded as the most serious development in the expedition to date. If for military reasons the army of Gen. J. J. Pershing should feel compelled to occupy a city, the Americans would be in some danger of crossing the Mexican sense of national pride.

Occupation of a city among Mexican soldiers and to the mass of the Mexican people is the sign of sovereignty.

Many Bloody Battles Over Cities.

Some of the bloody battles of the last four years in Mexico have been fought over cities whose military importance was small, but possession of which, according to the ideas of the Mexican people, indicated dominance of that region.

In making his announcement that he had asked the Americans not to enter or occupy Casas Grandes, the city whose possession means safety to the American Mormon colonists of that region, Gen. Gabriel Gavira, commander at Juarez, expressed no vexation at the presence of the troops in his territory, but he was very firm in his announcement that under his present instructions from Gen. Carranza he has no power to modify the orders to his troops against permitting the occupation of cities. The general offered no comment on what he would do provided the American troops occupied a Mexican city.

Doubt Revived.

San Antonio, Tex., March 18.—Gen. Gavira's reported refusal to permit the American troops who are pursuing Francisco Villa in Mexico to enter the town of Casas Grandes revived doubt at Fort San Houston today of the full co-operation of the de facto government's forces. The announcement of Gen. Gavira, commandant at Juarez, that Gen. Pershing's troops had arrived almost at the outskirts of Casas Grandes and planned to enter during the night was the first news received by Gen. Funston that the punitive forces had gone that far south. It was known that Gen. Pershing was pushing his column, but to have reached Casas Grandes last night indicated an average march of about thirty miles a day.

What Gen. Pershing intended to do in answer to the refusal of the Mexican commander to allow him to enter or to pass through Casas Grandes was not known at Gen. Funston's headquarters, but it was not regarded as probable that he would make an issue of the point. Here it was believed, Gen. Pershing would be content to remain beyond the city limits of the town unless the presence of his troops within the town for the protection of the Americans living there seemed advisable.

The last reports from Gen. Pershing told of no clashes with Mexicans and did not indicate the exact location of Villa. It still is believed he is in mountains of the Galeana district, but that he will continue his shifting flight without offering formal resistance, perhaps for many days.

general situation than they occupied when the chancellor expressed our readiness to enter into peace negotiations under certain conditions. These remarks, uttered with a feeling of power and a certain superiority but in no manner of weakness found a fanatical echo among our enemies.

"Hence everyone has to conclude that the leading men in the enemy camp lacked all vision of the attainable, all understanding of the hard, immutable facts which already had developed, and have since that time only accumulated in greater extent. The chancellor left no doubt that if his honorable wish to avoid further senseless blood letting should prove futile, we are determined to double our energies in order to open the blindest of our enemies' eyes."

important American settlement was said to be the cavalry from Hachita.

Villa in Mountains.

El Paso, Tex., March 18.—The second crisis in the international situation created when American troops crossed the Mexican border, was believed to have been reached today with the arrival of the advance corps of the expeditionary forces at Casas Grandes.

If the speed of thirty miles a day, at which the column has moved, is maintained the American soldiers should be in Villa territory before nightfall. Casas Grandes is twenty-five miles from the district of Guerrero, Villa's native heath. It is considered fairly certain that Villa has taken refuge in the fastnesses of the mighty Sierra Madres.

The task of the United States force will have really begun when they reach the foothills of the Sierras.

Greeted With Relief.

The arrival of the expeditionary troops in the vicinity of Casas Grandes was greeted along the border with a sigh of relief, insofar as the fate of the 500 American Mormons at Colonia Dublan and Colonia Morales is concerned. The soldiers are already south of these settlements and so all fears for the safety of the colonists have been removed.

While the expedition has passed peacefully thus far into Mexico and the Carranza officials have shown every indication of both their willingness and ability to avoid friction, the tension along the Rio Grande has by no means relaxed. It is felt here that the real test will come when fighting with the Villista bandits really starts. The lengthening lines of communication of the Americans, it is pointed out, offer tempting bait for raids by guerrillas. The refugees who throng the border towns are especially insistent that the first bloodshed will be the signal for serious trouble.

GERMAN INFANTRY ATTACKS ON VERDUN

fantry attacks were made last night in the Verdun region, the war office announced this afternoon. There was intermittent cannonading.

The text of the French official communication reads:

"In the Argonne region, sector of Courtes Chaussees, there has been fighting with mines which results to our advantage. To the west of the river Meuse we have directed a concentrated fire on the German trenches in the direction of Hill 265 and also on the Corbeaux wood. To this the enemy did not respond.

"To the east of the Meuse there has been a violent bombardment in the region of Vaux. There has been intermittent artillery firing at other points in this sector, as well as in the Woevre at Moulainville, Haudomont and Les Eparges.

Roadway Bombarded.

"To the northeast of St. Mihiel our long range artillery bombarded all last night the roadway between Apremont and Vigneulles over which it had been reported that certain regiments of the enemy were marching in a northerly direction.

"There has been no other events of importance on the remainder of the front.

"During the day of yesterday, in spite of fog and low clouds, French aviators were active in the region of Verdun. A German aeroplane of the Fokker type appeared and was seriously damaged.

"During the night of March 17-18 a group of seventeen French aeroplanes equipped for bombardments threw down fifty-four large caliber shells, forty on the railroad station at Conflans and fourteen on the station at Metz. Their shells fell accurately. A number of explosions were observed on the tracks and three fires were set in the Metz railroad station.

"The French machines were subjected to a violent cannonading during this trip, but they all returned undamaged.

"During the course of an offensive reconnaissance another of our air squadrons threw down ten shells on the aerodromes at Dieuze and five more on the railroad station at Arnaville."

CHARTER BODY IS ASKED TO RESIGN

Ely, Minn., March 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Commercial club at its meeting Thursday night instructed Secretary Merdink to write to members of the city charter commission suggesting that they have a meeting and resign as the legislative committee of the club reported that the commission is able to accomplish nothing. The sidewalk assessment question was discussed, some favoring a test in the courts, but no action was taken.

The question of commercial fishing in international waters was also discussed in response to a letter from the state game and fish commission asking for an expression of opinion from Ely, Tower and Winton people on the matter. Action was deferred until opinions of Winton members could be obtained.

Printing the By-Laws.

It was decided that the publication of the by-laws be submitted for estimate of publication and report to be given at the next meeting of the club; also that a committee of three members be appointed to look up a regular meeting place. TAKES ACTION ON SEAMEN'S LAW

Exxecutive Committee of National Chamber Adopts Recommendations.

Kansas City, Mo., March 18.—The executive board of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States yesterday approved a report of a special committee declaring against those sections of the seamen's act now in controversy in congress.

The committee made four recommendations. The first was that congress be asked to suspend those sections alleged to discriminate against American exports and American ships. The discriminations, according to the committee's report, are those which require a language test for American seamen, life-saving equipment and half pay at intermediate periods.

The second recommendation was that the state department urge all nations to abolish arrest and imprisonment for desertion. The third, that congress request the president to withdraw at once notice that the United States has given abrogation treaties and the fourth was for a Federal shipping board.

The Duluth Commercial club, a member of the National Chamber, recently voted on the matter along the line of action taken by the chamber's executive committee.

OPEN NAVIGATION ACROSS LAKE MICHIGAN

Chicago, March 18.—Shortage of freight cars and fair weather have prompted the Graham & Morton Transportation company and the Chicago & South Haven Steamship company to open lake navigation on short notice.

The Chicago-South Haven company will begin its service across the lake from Chicago on Tuesday, March 28.

"There is less ice in the lakes at present than there was at this time a year ago," said Mr. Gildersleeve, "and we opened navigation early in April in 1915. It now seems probable that our boats will be operating on their spring schedules within three weeks. A definite announcement will be made later."

SAY HEAVY SNOW MEANS THIN ICE

Ashland, Wis., March 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—About the only reason why an early opening of lake navigation is expected, is the depth of the snow, which is about four feet on the level on Lake Superior.

The snow fell before the severe weather set in, consequently the ice is much thinner than usual, and it should be possible for vessels to make their way through it, unusually early.

COMMENT ON PLAYS AND PLAYERS — WHAT THE PRESS AGENTS PROMISE

LENT is usually the dull period with the theaters, but it will bring more than the usual number of attractions to Duluth. During the next few weeks the Lyceum will present "It Pays to Advertise," "Peg o' My Heart," David Warfield, Al Wilson, Howe's pictures, and two or three burlesque bills. These bookings, three of which are for an entire week apiece, will keep the Lyceum open until the early part of May. About that time the Baldwin stock company will be reorganized for a summer's run, which will be broken but once or twice by road attractions, so that the policy of the theater is settled until next September. Next fall it is the intention to make Duluth a week or at least a three days' stand for the best dramatic bookings that can be procured.

The graduation from the one night stage to the week stand, means much to a city theatrically. It means, in the first place, that from thirty to forty companies will fill the time of the theater in place of perhaps 150 or 200. In these days of scarcity of good productions, this is an important item. Then companies that would not make the long jump to Duluth from the Twin Cities for one night, would gladly do it for three nights or a week. The railroad fare would be spread over from three to eight performances instead of being charged against one.

Duluth, this season, has surprised the powers of the theatrical world with the patronage it has accorded anything worth while. If it can firmly establish itself as a week stand, a big amusement problem may have been solved.

Duluth is also likely to have its Orpheum vaudeville back by next fall. The Orpheum management has been watching the Duluth situation very closely. It was argued that the theater was too far from the heart of the city to make a good vaudeville house, but during the last few weeks some big feature photoplays have attracted good audiences to the Second avenue playhouse. The Bluebird feature films have drawn well there, and with the greatly improved business conditions it is believed that Duluth will be able to support an Orpheum theater again and give it paying patronage.

JEANETTE BUCKLEY
With "The Americans" at the Lyceum.

BURLESQUE AT LYCEUM.

"The Americans" Will Be in Duluth for Five Days.

"See America First," is the title given the opening burletta in Barney Gerard's neutral burlesquers "The Americans" who come to the Lyceum theater for five days commencing tomorrow.

Barney Gerard, the well known producer, who is responsible for "Follies of the Day," and so many other big burlesque hits, out of friendship for Mr. Bernard, who owns the "Americans," wrote "See America First" and two other burlesques for this season's show. The two other burlettas are, "The Worth of a Nation," a parody on the sensational moving picture, "The Birth of a Nation," and "Girls and Jingles." The three playlets or burlettas are distinctly different from each other. Each has a theme that has no bearing upon the other. These skits and six vaudeville specialties, a collection of pretty choristers, and a collection of funny comedians, make up the burlesque show.

Producers have permitted their comedians to tell the same old chestnut jokes, indulge in the same old tricks to gain laughs, and even the very foundation upon which the entertainment was molded had no novelty or newness to it. "The Americans" claim the distinction of being "somewhat different." Edward Johnson, who starred in Dave Marion's "Dreamlands" two years ago, and Ben Small, who is regarded as the future "great" German comedian in burlesque. He is a brother of Sam Chip of Chip and Marble of vaudeville fame, and, like his capable brother, Mr. Small is really "small," but what he lacks in size he makes up in ability. Others in the cast are, Jeannette Buckley, William Browning, and last but not least, Hughy Bernard.

An added attraction will be Mike and Tommy Gibbons in three-round sparring exhibitions at every performance.

Lillian Gish, Who Plays the Heroine In the Triangle-Fine Arts Romantic Play, "Daphne and the Pirate."

DAVID WARFIELD COMING

Will Be Seen in New Version of "The Wandering Jew."

"Van Der Decken," the Wandering Jew of the seas, brought into being again by David Belasco in his latest play of that name, will be the attraction at the Lyceum theater Monday and Tuesday nights, March 27 and 28, with David Warfield in the character of the strangely doomed master of the phantom ship.

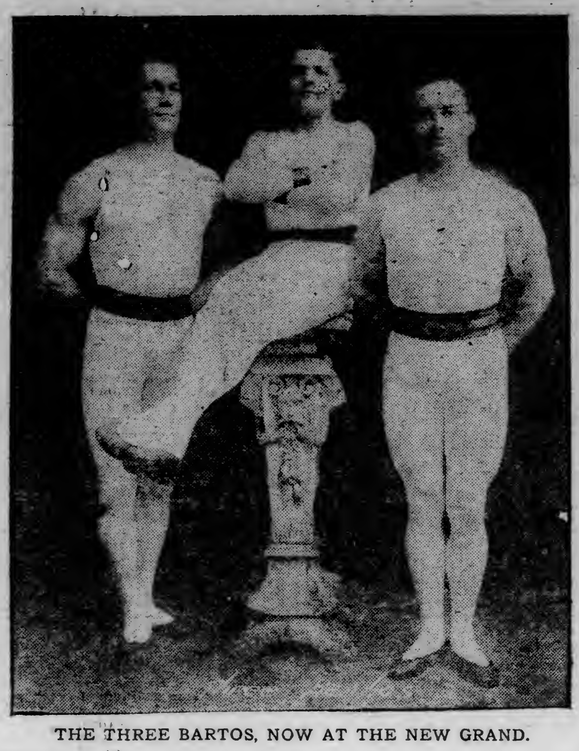
The legend of the Flying Dutchman, from which "Van Der Decken" gets its inspiration, is as old almost as fiction itself. It has been treasured for centuries in the superstitious belief of sailors and other adventurers of the seas. It has become a fixture in the lore of the ocean; has entered into many romances; has been known in nearly all languages and in all lands; and has found lodgment in many minds. It has endured through centuries, and antedates by a long period the time set in Mr. Belasco's presentation.

Wagner made use of the legend in his opera, "Der Fliegende Hollander." Heine employed it, shorn of something of its severely tragic atmosphere, while poets and writers innumerable have woven it into narratives both of the sea and the shore. It is reported that few, however, have succeeded better in endowing the tale with romance and poetry, and a high sense of imagination, than Mr. Belasco. For "Van Der Decken" is said to be a strange and fascinating tale, marked by a newness of conception and treatment that makes an irresistible appeal to both the intellect and the emotions.

There is in the Belasco interpretation a preachment of the theory of reincarnation, for the Dutchman after centuries of tempest-tossed wanderings comes back to a small seaport town on the north coast of Holland. There he encounters Trintie Staats, a beautiful girl of 18, once his wife, but born again through time; the one being through whom the curse may be lifted from his wretched life. It is a beautiful story, being an exquisite little plea for the immortality of human love.

In his impersonation of the unhappy Van Der Decken, Mr. Warfield is said to exhibit a sense of poetic beauty and dreamy solitude that mark a new chapter in his career. For in this latest Belasco play, this famous artist realizes a wholly new type of character, thus silencing for once and all those critics who have always held that Von Barwig in "The Music Master" is the apotheosis of his art.

In Mr. Warfield's support will be found a notable cast, including as it does Marie Bates, Ernest Stallard, Jane Cooper, William Boag, Fritz Lieber, Frederick Graham, Harold Russell, Horace Braham and others.



THE THREE BARTOS, NOW AT THE NEW GRAND.

CLEVER FEATURES ON GRAND BILL

Three Bartos Are Popular Athletes; Noted French Dancer Next Week.

The bill at the popular New Grand this week-end is one of many hits. The acts are clever throughout and capacity audiences have been the rule.

The three Bartos have an act that calls for the greatest of muscular effort in most of their stunts, and their work is so well done that they are in a class by themselves. They are undoubtedly the most graceful athletes ever seen in this theater. Not a single motion is lost, no energy is wasted and from each feat the next is evolved so easily, so naturally and so gracefully that the successive turns are figuratively combined into one. It is seldom that an athletic act becomes a feature of a vaudeville bill, but this case is one exception.

"The Clubman and the Suffragette," a singing and talking skit, is the offering of Brown and Jackson, who fill in twenty minutes brimful of good comedy and catchy musical numbers. Their clever vehicle gives them ample opportunity to display their versatility.

Dale and Boyle, in the "Belle and the Beau," offer a tuneful swaying bit of singing and dancing. A goodly number of catchy songs, some clever dancing and a vein of comedy that is clean and wholesome, ending with a surprise at the finish, register the act as one of the popular numbers of the program.

Karlton and Klifford offer a revelation in art painting. These clever artists paint pictures from behind the canvas and shade them with special electrical effects that bring beautiful returns for their efforts.

The irresistible Charlie Chaplin headlines among the photoplays in his latest Essanay comedy, "A Night at the Show." This is one of the funniest of all the Chaplin pictures and keeps the audiences in convulsions of laughter during the entire two reels. "The House of Darkness," a drama, and "Her Bad Quarter of an Hour," a comedy drama, are other features on the film program. The Selig-Tribune News, containing many interesting pictures from every corner of the globe, complete a dandy entertainment.

The new bill opening Monday is one of unusual interest in that it brings with it the celebrated French actress and dramatic dancer, Verna Mersereau, and her company of artists in a dramatic dancing pantomime entitled, "A Romance of Old Egypt." The Ovondo Prince Trio of novelty musicians; Carter and Water in a singing and talking skit, and Lamb's Manikins are other vaudeville offerings of note.

"Miss Warren's Brother," a three-reel subject featuring the eminent actor, Joseph Kilgore, and star cast and other interesting film stories, including another of the popular Sis Hopkins comedies, make up the remainder of the bill.

A THRILLING SCENE IN "THE GODS OF FATE," SHOWING AT THE ZELDA TONIGHT ONLY.

BLUEBIRD PLAY AT THE ORPHEUM

Helen Ware Will Follow "Hop, the Devil's Brew."

"Hop, the Devil's Brew," tonight and Sunday.

Helen Ware in "Secret Love," for four days beginning Monday.

Sarah Bernhardt for four days beginning Friday.

The foregoing is the program of Bluebird feature plays to be offered at the Orpheum-Strand for the coming week.

"Hop, the Devil's Brew," the current attraction, will close Sunday night. It is a sensational feature film telling the story of the government's fight against the opium traffic. To bring the problem home more directly with a concrete story, the producer presented a well defined plot. The heroine is the daughter of the "King of the Opium Smugglers," and the photoplay tells how the opium habit nearly wrecked her life. The United States customs offficials gave their assistance in preparing the picture, and it shows many a battle of wits between the secret service men employed by Uncle Sam and the dealers in the deadly drug. The picture incidentally exposes the effects of the drug on the human system, and it is intended to not only tell an interesting love story, and present some thrilling scenes, but to spread information regarding a menace which the government has recognized to be threatening the health and morals of a large percentage of the inhabitants of the United States. It will be shown for the last times tonight and Sunday.

Monday, Helen Ware will make her debut as a screen star in Duluth. Miss Ware made her reputation on the dramatic stage as star in such plays as "Paid in Full" and "The Third Degree."

She was secured for Bluebird feature plays, and will be seen on the screen at the Orpheum-Strand for four days beginning Monday in "Secret Love." This photoplay is based on the well known novel by France's Hodgson Burnett, "That Lass O' Lowrie's." There have been few more popular novels than this famous work of Mrs. Burnett's, and it suggests interesting possibilities from the standpoint of the photoplay producer. Miss Ware's work in "Paid in Full" and "The Third Degree" gives promise of an adequate performance of the part of "That Lass."

During the latter part of the week Mme. Sarah Bernhardt will be seen in a Bluebird photoplay. The appearance of the famous French actress on the screen will be the first opportunity Duluthians will have had to see her in photoplay.

MANY STARS TO SHOW AT ZELDA

Metro Photoplays Will Present Classy Features Next Week.

"The Gods of Fate," a stirring five-part drama, starring Richard Buhler and Rosetta Brice, will be the feature attraction at the Zelda theater for today only.

This story tells of the struggle between a man and his conscience. It hits at the great labor problems of the present time.

Frank Daniels, the comedian, will also be shown in a side-splitting comedy, "The Escape of Mr. Jack."

For three days commencing with tomorrow's matinee, the Zelda theater will present Marguerite Snow, the favorite screen star, in a five-part Metro play, "A Corner in Cotton."

Miss Snow was never seen to better advantage than in this production, it is said. In the role of "Peggy Ainslee," the daughter of a wealthy cotton broker in New York, she renounces a life of ease to do settlement work among the poor in the slums of New York.

Her interests in her charities attracts her to conditions among the cotton mill workers in the Southland, where she goes, and disguised as a mill hand, she studies conditions first hand.

Her experiences among the mill employes—the scenes for which were made in Georgia, are extremely interesting. There is a pretty love story woven into a gripping plot, wherein "Peggy" becomes a factor on the cotton exchange, and in a fight against her father, breaks a "corner" in cotton, and relieves conditions among the sufferers in the South.

Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, May Robson in her screen success "A Night Out," will be the treat offered motion picture-goers at the Zelda.

Miss Robson is cast in the role of a grandmother, who has been held in restraint all her life, and whose girlish impulses are still checked by an austere daughter. Her two grandsons find in her a real companion of goodfellows so they all three decide to escape the

A strong cast of screen favorites assist the star, which includes Hughey Mack, Flora Finch, Kate Price, George Cooper, Arthur Cozine and William Shea.

AT THE REX.

Bessie Barriscale Will Be Followed By Lillian Gish.

Miss Bessie Barriscale, will be seen for the last time in her present play, "The Last Act" today at The Rex. She undoubtedly won to herself a large number of additional friends during the last two days in her new picture. It is not a savory role to be cast in to fall in love with the husband of a woman who had befriended her—but Miss Barriscale loses nothing when the scene of her sacrifice comes, but gains the sympathy of the audience.

Great things are in store for Rex patrons during the next few days. Miss Lillian Gish on Sunday will come to the theater for two days in "Daphne and the Pirate," and to make it doubly interesting, this winsome little miss will celebrate her twenty-first birthday on Monday, March 20. The Rex will observe the occasion fittingly. "Daphne and the Pirate," shows an auction sale of brides, six of whom including Lillian, who has developed some of the spitfire in this piece, go to jail "for safe keeping" awaiting the auction sale to unknown husbands. The play is something new and those who remember Miss Gish in her leading part with "The Birth of a Nation" and other winning plays, will welcome her and wish her many "happy returns" both of birthdays and herself.

On Tuesday and Wednesday of the coming week, Miss Billie Burke will return in "Peggy," by special request of Duluthians who failed to see her in the play before. Every day there is one of Keystone comedies at The Rex—a new one, fresh from Broadway victories.

MARY PICKFORD AT LYRIC

"Poor Little Peppina" Will Be Followed by "The Marble Heart."

Mary Pickford in "Poor Little Peppina" is the treat offered Saturday matinee and night crowds at the Lyric. It is a fine combination of a thrilling story and a beautiful and realistic picture, one of Daniel Frohman's best. This famous favorite romps through strange places in strange roles, having many narrow escapes that thrill, and is always and altogether the same, loving, delightful Little Mary, even in boy's clothes.

Violet Horner as Therese Roger in "The Marble Heart," is the daughter of a West Indian planter whose parents are murdered when she is a baby. In the picture to be seen at the Lyric Sunday , Monday and Tuesday, the heroine grows up with Camille, son of her aunt who adopts her, and whom she eventually marries in deference to her aunt's wishes. He is a sickly creature, and the monotony of such a married life tells upon Therese. Because of this she falls in love with a red-blooded man and they put the sickly husband out of the way and other complications follow, all of which give the William Fox star, Miss Horner, opportunity to put life and warmth in each climax.

Burton Holmes, travelogues, the first number of which was seen this week, are to be regular features at the Lyric. This week Lyric patrons went to the New Mexican cliff dwellers' prehistoric homes with the noted traveler. Next week he will take them down the dangerous trail of the Grand Canyon.

At the Sunbeam.

For Sunday the New Sunbeam theater has an unusual program, which should prove of interest to all classes of theater goers. The chief attraction is a society drama entitled, "The House of Scandals," featuring Harold Lockwood, assisted by May Allison in Greek dances. There is also a fascinating love story, wonderful scenic effects and intense realism in the plot.

The story of the play centers about the love of Millionaire John Wright for Martha Hobbs, a beautiful country girl, whom he rescues from squalid surroundings and introduces into the poetic life of a Greek colony which he has founded in an obscure country village.

In addition to this excellent feature Charlie Chaplin will appear in one of his latest comedies.

On Monday and Tuesday Harry Watson will appear again in "The Mishaps of Musty Suffer." "Tramp" Watson gets better each week, and this strong series of comedies, featuring vaudeville stars in photoplays, is proving very interesting. Next week will bring the fifth happy whirl of the series.

The fascinating story "The Strange Case of Mary Page" is passing all expectations. Large audiences have seen each number, and Henry Walthall and Edna Mayo, the two stars, are more pleasing than ever. The mystery of the murder becomes more interesting and the "plot thickens" as the story goes on.

Lyceum Notes.

"The old story of the hen egg and the duck egg is probably responsible for the play," says Roi Cooper Megrue, co-author with Walter Hackett in Cohan and Harris' successful production, "It Pays to Advertise," which will come to the Lyceum theater for four nights and Wednesday matinee, commencing Sunday evening, April 16.

"The line always goes because it is such a patent fact," says Mr. Megrue. "Ambrose Peale asks Rodney Martin what kind of eggs he eats, and the reply is 'hen eggs, of course.'

"'Why of course?'

"'Well, I—er—I don't know!'

"I'll tell you—because they are better advertised. When a duck lays an egg she goes away like a d—— fool and keeps quiet about it. When a hen lays she makes an awful fuss and everybody knows what has happened. It's the same way in business. The man who advertises—and here the appreciative sense of the audience breaks out in a roar that drowns the rest of the sentence."

Al H. Wilson with a specially selected company will appear at the Lyceum theater March 30, 31 and April 1, in a new periodic comedy song play "As Years Roll On."

He will appear in a new character in a new play, a new production, new songs and the story of the play is one of novelty while his songs are more varied in theme than ever before. The titles are "Yesterday," "As Years Roll On," "Mother Mine," "She Left Me for a Teddy Bear" and others.

Every character in J. Hartley Manners' wonderful triumph "Peg o' My Heart," which will be seen at the Lyceum theater the entire week of April 2, is faithfully drawn, and depicts the actual daily life of a poor but ultra-fashionable English family.

The comedy is introduced by the bringing into this family a poor relation in the person of a quaint little Irish girl "Peg." Those who enjoyed and laughed at the witty sayings and mannerisms of "Peg" when the play was presented here last season, will no doubt be more than eager to take advantage of "Peg's" final visit. Florence Martin will be seen in the title role.

A pilgrimage to a never-ending wonderland—Glacier national park—forms one of the big features of Lyman H. Howe's Travel Festival to be presented at the Lyceum theater for a week in the spring.

SHORT TALKS WITH SCREEN-STRUCK GIRLS

By Beatriz Michelena.

Copyrighted January, 1916, by Beatriz Michelena.

I am receiving a surprisingly large number of letters from "Screen-Struck" girlies, whose ages range from 12 to 16 years, and they are all impatient—oh! so impatient to become screen stars.

Beatriz Michelena

"What shall we do?" they all ask in one breath, and I am answering just as fast as a limited leisure will permit me. At that, however, I am having a lively time of it trying to keep up with them, and so, for the benefit of those who have written and I have not yet had time to answer, and of those, as well, who have not written, but are intending to, I will set it down here in the most emphatic type the editor will allow me—"CONTINUE IN SCHOOL."

I know, just as well as if I were right on hand to hear and see, that this advice will be received in many quarters with petulant stampings of the foot. It has none of the rosente coloring nor high lights of romance that we are wont to associate with motion picture acting. It is, indeed, very commonplace sort of advice—and yet it is the best I shall ever be able to give. Sometimes I offer my advice with misgivings and reservation, but in this "Continue in school," addressed to my younger "Screen-Struck" friends, I am absolutely sure and unhesitating.

A big success in motion pictures calls for a very broad understanding of things and life—of books and peoples and a great many different customs and practices all over the world. The place to get the first beginnings of this knowledge is in the schoolroom. If you lay such a foundation now, you will find matters a great deal easier for you later on.

Laying foundations, I know, is not always the most enthusing kind of work, but it is often the most necessary. I am really very much interested in my "Screen-Struck Girls," and most of all, perhaps, in my younger ones. That is why I am hoping so much, for their own sakes, they will take my advice and continue in school.

CARD INDEX FOR MOVIE BACKGROUNDS

"Where do they find such lovely places?"

Frequently the question has been asked by persons who are watching a motion picture. They wonder where the photoplay producers find the scenery.

Out at the studios of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play company at Hollywood, Cal., there is one man who does nothing but ride around in his big automobile and "discover" places that are ideal for backgrounds to be used in motion picture plays. He goes to the seashore, to the fields, to the mountains, and everything he sees he carefully reports on little cards made for the purpose. He finds ideal places for love-making—lots of them—and he discovers excellent localities for battles, dark "crimes" and "accidents."

At the studio he has a big card index system by which he keeps account of all these places. It saves a lot of time. When the director of a production wants a nice, quiet place for a love scene, or a nice, noisy place for an exciting chase, all he has to do is to look it up in the card index. Then an entry is made on the card stating that the scene has been used, because the same scene is never used twice in a Lasky production. Persons who see photoplays remember scenes.

One of the chief features of the card index system of "locations" is that a photograph of every place is made and attached to the card with exact directions how to reach the location. There also is a list of beautiful residences and estates where the players are welcome any time to make scenes for production. But in all the classifications in the card index, none is so big nor so frequently added to as the list of places suitable for love scenes guaranteed to please.

"The Misleading Lady" will be produced in London shortly, the rights to the play having been acquired by Grossmith and Laurliard.

James T. Powers has had papers served on Joseph Cawthorn to enjoin him from singing "I Can Dance With Everybody But My Wife." Cawthorn uses this song in the new production of "Sibyl," and Powers claims that the song is his and that Cawthorn has no right to sing it.

Flora Zabelle, who went to Europe recently with her husband, Raymond Hitchcock, has returned to New York, saying that she found nothing over there in a professional way, but that Hitchcock has remained "over there" to play the leading part in a new municipal show entitled "He's Mr. Putt."

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

The Most Harmful Antiseptics

Gradually we are overcoming the hoary old superstition that anything with a powerful odor will keep off disease. And the best of our modern antiseptics or germicides are odorless. Carbolic acid, in solution or in salve, does have a nice, healing sort of odor, if you like that sort of smell. But it is one of the most harmful antiseptics you can use.

WILLIAM BRADY M.D.

Carbolic acid is an alcohol, not an acid. Phenol is the official name for it. It received the name of "acid," because of its caustic effect in contact with living tissue. The local antidote for that caustic or burning effect is alcohol—grain alcohol. One may bathe the finger with pure phenol for a minute, and when it has turned white, bathe it with pure alcohol, and the effect is completely neutralized. Remember that, in the event of an accidental burn with carbolic. The remedy is alcohol, freely and continuously applied.

This caustic action of phenol renders it utterly unfit for antiseptic use. No one would think of dressing a wound with carbolic dressings nowadays, unless he were willing to assume the responsibility for any poisonous effects which might ensue. A strong carbolic acid solution, kept for a considerable time on a simple cut or wound, sometimes causes gangrene. It always delays healing, because it destroys the delicate new skin cells. Carbolic was the original antiseptic introduced into surgery by the Father of Antisepsis, Lord Lister—but Lister himself eventually learned the dreadful poisonous properties of phenol. Carbolic is the type of all germicides, the standard with which any alleged germicide is compared in tests. But the drug is so exceedingly harmful that there is no longer justification for employing it as an antiseptic, whatever other uses it may have in medicine. There are plenty of safer antiseptics to take its place—for instance, boric acid solution, or tincture of iodine.

Peroxide, that other standby of the household medicine-chest, is a joke. It will grow germs if you don't watch it—and it will drive germs deeply into the wound if you do. And the watching of the bubbles constitutes the whole charm of this antiseptic. You see it work—whether to your advantage or your disadvantage doesn't matter. It looks interesting. And it comes high.

Take away the odor, the foam and the fancy price from these two chemicals and what have you left?

Just enough danger to make them exciting.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Still Outgrowing It.

I am 22 years old and have had a running ear for fifteen years. Doctors have given me medicine and told me I would outgrow it. I am almost deaf in the bad ear, and my other ear is infected. An ear specialist gave me vaccine treatment, which improved the conditions, but did not quite stop the discharge.

Answer—We supposed the doctors had outgrown the habit, but evidently they are still at it. Why not keep on with the vaccine treatment? That, plus the open-air life. Here is a rule without exceptions: No one ever outgrows any disease.

Thyroid Treatment.

What effect would thyroid tablets have on a very stout person if taken under a doctor's prescription? It worries me some, as many doctors say thyroid is harmful.

Answer—If your doctor prescribes it for you, and sees you at regular intervals, it is absolutely right. It will work miracles in proper cases. But thyroid is like a surgical scalpel—not for self-treatment.

Dr. Brady will answer all signed letters pertaining to health. If your question is of general interest it will be answered through these columns; if not it will be answered personally if stamped, addressed envelope is enclosed. Dr. Brady will not prescribe for individual cases or make diagnoses. Address, Dr. William Brady, care of this newspaper. Protected by The Adams Newspaper Service.

MACCABEE HEAD TO BE DULUTH GUEST

Supreme Commander and Others Will Be Here Monday Night.

D. P. Markey of Detroit, Mich., supreme commander of the Maccabees, accompanied by Dr. Edward H. Haas, great commander for Minnesota, and A. L. Elderkin, deputy great commander, will be guests of honor of Duluth Tent No. 1, at its review Monday evening.

D. P. MARKEY.

A feature of the evening will be a degree team contest by Virginia, Two Harbors, West Duluth and Duluth degree teams for a loving cup presented some time ago by the great camp of Minnesota to be competed for by the degree teams of Northern Minnesota. The cup is held at this time by Vermilion Tent No. 15 of Two Harbors. The team winning three consecutive times will hold the cup permanently. A committee from Duluth Review No. 1, Women's Benefit association of the Maccabees, headed by Mrs. Barbara M. Stang, will serve a banquet.

The local team has been drilling faithfully and is determined to win the prize.

Duluth Tent No. 1 has 450 members on its roster, and the members are working hard to bring the number up to 500, which they hope to do before May 1.

WILL ANALYZE CHARACTER.

Joseph Blumenthal Will Give Free Lecture Sunday.

Joseph Blumenthal, who is giving the course in character analysis at the Y. M. C. A., will speak at the Sunday afternoon meeting in the lobby at 5 o'clock.

TODAY IN HISTORY.

(Stephen) Grover Cleveland born, 1837.

Born Caldwell, N. J., son of a Presbyterian minister. Teacher, New York Institution for the Blind, 1853; lawyer in Buffalo; elected sheriff, 1870; mayor of Buffalo, 1881; governor New York, 1882; elected president, 1884, over James G. Blaine. Defeated for re-election, 1888, by Benjamin Harrison. Elected president over Harrison, 1892. Lectured at Princeton after his retirement. Died 1908.

READING (available in Duluth public library)—Richard Watson Gilder, Grover Cleveland: a Record of Friendship (the last prose work of the author, it records an intimate friendship extending over twenty years); James L. Whittle, Grover Cleveland (this sketch by an Englishman was written before the 1896 election, and is full of dramatic interest); Grover Cleveland (his writings and speeches edited by G. F. Parker).

"A MAN SOMEWHERE NEAR HIS EQUAL!"

"If it is not Roosevelt," says Boss Flinn of Pennsylvania, late Bull Mooser, "then it must be a man somewhere near his equal."

Roosevelt's equal? Or "a man somewhere near his equal?" Man, man! What are you talking about?

As well seek an equal of the sun in the solar system.

As well seek a rival for the full moon.

As well talk of something whiter than white, blacker than black, truer than truth, madder than Bedlam. As well seek a "farthest north" beyond the pole. As well postpone to a more distant time than never.

The prodigy Roosevelt is sui generis. Talk of virtue, courage, wisdom, infallibility—they are him and he is they—synonymous, co-existent, one and the same now and forever!

The prodigy Roosevelt is the pre-eminent, the transcendant, nature's crowning achievement—matchless, unparagoned, unparalleled, unapproached and unapproachable, unsurpassed and unsurpassable, inimitable, incomparable, nulli secundus, ne plus ultra.

"A man somewhere near his equal?" The mere suggestion that there can be such a thing as that is treasonable, impious, blasphemous.

"A man somewhere near his equal?" There ain't—thank heaven—no such animal!

The naval battle in the North sea is getting nearer and nearer to the "farewell performance" class.

A SCHOOL SURVEY OF DULUTH.

The Women's Council is working to have a school survey conducted in Duluth.

As a part of its campaign it is bringing in C. A. Prosser of the Dunwoody Institute of Minneapolis to talk about the purpose and method of a school survey. He will speak at the Commercial club on the evening of March 21, and every man and woman in Duluth who is interested in the public schools should be there to hear him. He is thoroughly qualified to speak on the subject assigned to him.

The Herald believes that when it is thoroughly understood what a school survey means, there will be an overwhelming demand for it.

A school survey would bring to bear upon the Duluth school system an outside, unbiased, disinterested, expert vision. It is wholesome and helpful, from time to time, to bring such a vision to bear upon any institution or system. It will be wholesome and helpful to bring it to bear upon the Duluth school system.

One hears criticism of the Duluth system and of its results. That is not peculiar to Duluth; it is heard everywhere, more or less. Some of it doubtless is captious, and not based on knowledge either of the schools as they are or of schools as they ought to be. But it would be entirely wrong to dismiss all of it on that conception. Some of it appears to be valid—pointing to errors needing correction.

If the Duluth school system is perfect, which nobody believes, the survey will disclose that fact, and it will be a triumph for the system. If it is better than the average, the survey will show that. If it is just an average system, that, too, will be disclosed. If it is inferior to the average, the survey will lay the fact bare. Whatever the result, it is important to have the survey made and the actual situation disclosed.

If the system lacks anything, the survey will show what it lacks and point out how to supply it. If it is aiming the wrong way and therefore producing not the best results, the survey will tell us of it. If it is aiming the right way but using the wrong methods, we shall learn it from the survey.

Duluth spends a good deal of money on its schools every year, and it is entitled to all results, the best results attainable for the money. Surely it is worth while to have somebody who knows come in and look the schools over and tell us whether we are getting our money's worth or not. If we are told that we ARE getting our money's worth and that the schools are good, are aiming right and working rightly to the end in view, that will stop senseless criticism and will give us a satisfaction and contentment with our school system that will be worth while. If, on the other hand, the survey shows that we are only getting seventy-five cents' worth of results for each dollar expended—or even ninety cents' worth or forty—and points the way to getting full value, its small cost will be a splendid investment.

If you, Mr. Citizen, were investing your money in as big an enterprise as this, and didn't profess to know enough about the technical side of it to be sure you were getting your money's worth, you wouldn't hesitate a minute to hire an expert to come in and tell you what you ought to know. Why hesitate to do it about so important a matter as education?

The Herald believes that when there is a full realization of the need and value of a school survey, Duluth will not hesitate to have one, but will demand it forthwith. The Women's Council is engaged in a work of great value to the community, and ought to be supported in it.

And in the meantime, those who have any doubt about the practical value of a school survey should go to hear Mr. Prosser, and should ask him questions if his talk leaves any doubt behind.

Governor Burnquist and ex-Governor Eberhart were arrested in Minneapolis the other night for violating the city's "dimmer" ordinance. The gentlemen should come to Duluth, where the "dimmer" ordinance never gets so much attention.

THE HIGHBROW.

Brander Matthews, in an interview in the New York Times, does the country the service of attempting a definition of the "highbrow."

"A highbrow," he said, "is a person who has a habitual attitude of contempt toward that which is popular. He—or she—also is a person who is educated beyond his intelligence."

That's a pretty fair definition, though many "highbrows" are quite ignorant. The highbrow is a person who poses. Hypocrisy and pretense take many forms, varying with the field. In art, the highbrow is a person who despises anything that is popular, who holds that true art is a thing accessible only to the cultivated and cultured few, who surrounds art with a patter and ritual and esoterics and forms with others of his kind a sort of secret society with passwords and grand hailing signs and all.

The highbrow has little real appreciation of art in any of its forms. Like all pretenders, his artistic appreciation is for show, not for use. His very aversion for anything that is popular is an unconscious revelation of his ignorance of the very meaning of art.

Much that is popular is trash, of course. And much that is unpopular but is highly venerated by the highbrow is trash, too. There is much in literature, for instance, that goes by the name of classic, that everybody admires and nobody reads—not even the highbrow who professes himself to be a prophet of the cult of classicism.

That a work of art—a book, a song, a musical composition or a picture—is popular does not mean that it is good art, necessarily. But it certainly does not mean that it is bad art, or no art.

Irving Berlin writes very popular songs, and they are mostly tommyrot. But Stephen Foster also wrote popular songs, many of which are today virtually American folksongs; and his best work is as truly music as some of the most elaborate symphonies. Charley Chaplin is popular, and his "comedy" is so atrocious that it might sensibly be forbidden by law. But Warfield is popular, too; and Warfield is a real artist. Harold Bell Wright's novels, unfortunately, are popular, though they are absurd. But Dickens is also popular, and Dickens was a great artist. Indeed, virtually every great novelist is "popular."

"The highbrow," says Professor Matthews, "has not been educated enough to know that in all the arts the really good things, the vital things, have always been popular. Perhaps the highbrow is not sufficiently sure of his discrimination and his ability to tell what is vital and what is not, so condemns everything popular rather than run any risk of accepting the wrong thing—a sort of safety first for highbrow reputations."

The cult of highbrowism is a reaction to the very common and easily developed trait of snobbishness—that perverted instinct which makes many long to create some fictitious attribute to distinguish them from what they call "the common herd." Like all snobbishness, it is of course thoroughly contemptible. It has a queer relation, though it is a relationship over the left shoulder, with wholesome ambition to excel and to gain distinction by pre-eminence in some particular field. Real musicians are seldom highbrows. Real novelists are never highbrows. The novelist who comes closest to life itself writes simply and with the widest possible appeal, and he is the greatest artist.

Art is valuable only as it broadens and ennobles and enriches the common life. The broader its appeal, the greater its value and the greater it is as art. Art is nothing unless it is democratic. An art which withdraws itself into a cloistered retreat to keep its skirts clear from the contamination of the world's touch is not art at all, but pretense and hypocrisy.

The highbrow—the real highbrow, not the true lover of real art but the pretender—is to art what the snob is to society. And yet, doubtless we should forgive him. He is trying to make up for his poverty of intellect by pretending to have what he lacks, and if he finds some comfort in it, God bless him; since the realities of life have nothing of satisfaction for him, let him find what satisfaction he can in pretense.

Meanwhile, this "dead or alive" order is not so very different from telling a reporter to go after a certain story and not come back till he gets it.

ADMITTING WOMAN TO THE HUMAN FAMILY.

The world do move.

Even the courts are admitting woman to the human family, and presently the law in all the states, as it does already in some states, will give full recognition to the new order of things.

The change in the legal status of a wife and mother is sharply illustrated by a recent decision of the New York supreme court.

The Rev. Burton Howard Lee, pastor of an Episcopal church in Ossining, New York, had signed a separation agreement with his wife. She was to have the children, but at specified times they were to visit him. One of them, having paid this visit, was held by the father, and the mother went into court to compel the performance of the father's specific agreement.

The clergyman's lawyers set up the claim that under the law a father is entitled to the custody of his children, and cannot sign away that right. A case absolutely in point, decided in 1842, was cited, in which the court held that no such agreement was valid. This was the position of a wife and mother in 1842, as then judicially decreed:

> The very being and legal existence of a woman is suspended during marriage; or, at least, is separated and consolidated into that of her husband. Their relative power over the person of their child follow, in consequence. A man cannot grant anything to his wife, or enter into a covenant with her, for the grant would be to suppose her separate existence, and to covenant with her would be to covenant with himself. I deny that he (the husband) had, therefore, the right to violate this duty by selling his children, or to part with their company.

This was woman's state in 1842—a chattel, or a mere appendage to a husband. This was the law.

But times change. Such a barbarous construction could no more hold that the Ancient Regime could save the Bastille or hold the floodgates against the French revolution.

Other things change, too. There was a time when the court before which this cause came would have felt compelled, because some other court in some other time had held so and so, to hold the same way. This court was different.

Justice Shearn, who wrote the opinion in the case of Lee vs. Lee, admitted the pertinence of the case cited, but denied that the principles of the opinion can be held to control today. This is what he said in this Twentieth century:

> It is claimed that the father has a paramount right to the custody of a child. This was once the law, but we have emerged from the dark ages, during which married women had the status of slaves and chattels. The only basis of the father's alleged superior right, today, is his obligation to support his children. This basis disappears when one considers what a mother gives to her children in suffering, self-sacrifice and devotion. • • • The real test should be the welfare of the child.

The woman is the moral, physical and mental equal of the man. She should be his legal equal, too; and slowly but surely the world is struggling toward that most desirable state wherein it will recognize woman as a human being in every sense of the word.

Carranza boldly insists that the United States must not do something it had no intention to do and no desire of doing. Which after all is rather diplomatic of Carranza.

BEING POPULAR.

It's rather an odd thing, this of being "popular."

Here's Jones, for instance, about as popular as a polecat in a camp meeting. His manner is cold, his conversation brief, sharp, pointed and upcordial. He is as business-like as a steel trap, and most people find him about as comfortable to have around. Jones is most decidedly not "popular."

Yet the other day a man who knows Jones inside and out talked about him—and not the way people usually talk about other people, either.

"No, Jones isn't popular," this man said, "and never will be. And yet, do you know that if there is one thing on earth he covets more than another, it's popularity; only he doesn't know how to manage it and probably never will learn. There are people like that, you know. And at that, to those who can get to know him—I'll admit they're not many—Jones is the salt of the earth. He's a whirlwind at his job, and his employers wouldn't part with him for twice his salary. He supports his old father and mother and a ne'er-do-well brother and a maiden sister, and he's mighty good to them, too. Since he got on in the world and the struggle has become easier he has taken on a few more responsibilities, and I can tell you that there are few deserving things like the Orphanage, the Children's Home and the Belgian, Polish and Jewish relief movements that don't get some of his money.

"But popular—Lord, how popular he isn't! You see when he was a youngster these burdens fell on him early, and he had to put his nose to the grindstone and keep it there. He had to count every penny, and he had neither time nor money for frivolities. Now the poor devil couldn't frivol if he had eighteen millions, and he had to keep his nose at the grindstone so long that it sharpened his temper and soured his disposition, so that all most people get out of him is a grunt or a bark. No, Jones isn't popular; but for real manhood and rightness he has it on a whole lot of people who are immensely more popular."

And that's the truth, and it's another of the queer things about popularity.

There's Smith, for instance, who is no end popular. He is hail fellow well met to everybody. He beams all over the place, and people begin to smile as soon as they see him coming. He is full of tricks and pranks and apt remarks; he is the life of every party. He has a circle of boon companions who swear by him, and the greatest delight of his life is to lead a troop of them up to the bar and tell the barkeeper to ask them what they want and give it to 'em right and right away. The nearest he ever comes to being irritable is when somebody else tries to pay for the drinks.

"Smith was sick with the grip lately," said the man who knows Jones—and who also knows Smith, "and I went up to his house to see him. Gee, I wish I hadn't! The door was opened by a tired, sad-eyed woman, worn and old beyond her years. She was dressed in bedraggled calico, and looked as if she hadn't seen a sign of Smith's goodfellowship in a decade. A tattered child clung to her skirts, and two more, poorly dressed and ill-fed, lurked in the background. The house was in keeping—a sad scene of hopelessness and discouragement. I made my call on Smith and got away as quickly as I could; but it was a heartsickening experience. I found out later from a friend of his wife's that Smith spends in buying rounds of drinks for his boon companions money that ought to go for dresses and shoes and food for his family. Smith has lost his popularity with me, at any rate."

Popularity isn't the only thing worth having. The most popular are not always the best.

Honestly, now, did you ever before see three feet of snow on the ground on St. Patrick's day?

A BETTER WAY OF REGULATING CHARITY.

The city of Los Angeles, disturbed as many cities are by the encroachments of fake charities on the funds available for cases of real need, tried to put charity under municipal control. A commission was created to deal with it, and given wide powers. One thing this commission did was to cause the arrest of a Salvation Army leader who solicited gifts after being refused a permit by the commission.

The Salvation Army man took the case into court, and the supreme court of California has just declared the Los Angeles ordinance bad.

"Surely," said the court, "here if anywhere is

> "The organized charity, scrimped and iced
> In the name of a careful, statistical Christ."

What Los Angeles tried to do needs to be done, in every community. But charity isn't a thing that can readily be adjusted to the cramped confinement of legal and official regulation—not and keep it human.

It is managed much better in Duluth. Here the Associated Charities, an excellent organization well directed and ably conducted, sifts all appeals for aid, winnowing out the undeserving, acting as a clearing house by which charitable energy reaches those that deserve help, and seeing that this aid is wisely bestowed so that it will help the afflicted to become self-supporting and not drag them down into pauperism as indiscriminate giving inevitably does.

Besides the Associated Charities, and working in co-operation with it, is a special committee of the Commercial club which passes on all applications to solicit funds for charity.

These two agencies are working powerfully for good in this community. Everybody can help in this way: First, by responding to no appeal for aid that has not the indorsement of the Associated Charities; second, by contributing to no solicitor for charity who cannot show authority from the Commercial club to solicit funds.

Isn't anybody holding a stopwatch on the groundhog?

"Hoch Moses Clapp!" says the Moose Lake Star-Gazette. "Hoch" is the correct form.

At least Portugal can't claim that she didn't know what modern wars were like.

Some of these presidential "booms" are appropriately celebrating leap year by sounding more like pops.

Rippling Rhymes

By Walt Mason

Old Songs.

Last night I heard an ancient dame hum divers songs of bygone years, and tender recollections came, which filled my old green eyes with tears. "Oh, Birdie, I am tired now, I do not care to hear you sing"; thus warbled on the withered frau, while darning socks, like everything. Beneath the bright Canadian skies I used to sing that simple lay; folks heard my boyish treble rise, and wished I'd quit, or go away. Where are the men who cried "Shut up!" and promptly sicked their dogs on me, when I, before their wickiup, turned loose that song in ecstasy? The beldame by my fireside waits, and sings old songs to you unknown, as "Wait for me at heaven's gates, sweet Belle Mahone, sweet Belle Mahone!" I used to sing the same sweet song, beneath the warm Canadian sun, and neighbors rang the chestnut gong, and put more buckshot in the gun. Old songs! Sweet songs! They blaze the track to bygone days and vanished scenes, before I had to break my back to earn the beefsteak and the beans.

More About Orators

By Savoyard.

Washington, March 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—The decadence in our country of that quality of public speaking that is called eloquence, or oratory, elocution, declamation, moved me to write some very defective and rather lame stuff about Tom Marshall, S. S. Prentiss and Ed Marshall. And that brings the speculation as to what would be the effect of their rhetoric if fired at an American audience of this generation. I think Tom Marshall would stand the test, but it is extremely doubtful if the others would, though Ed Marshall, most assuredly, would convulse his hearers with laughter by his powers of ridicule and his remarkable gifts as an actor.

When asked to define oratory Demosthenes said it was manner, manner, always manner. Danton said it was audacity, audacity, always audacity. Charles James Fox, whom Edmund Burke declared to be the greatest parliamentary debater the world ever saw, said oratory was "reason red-hot." Manner, audacity and reason are all elements that the popular orator must have at command; but there are many other qualities that should supplement these.

The English actress, Mrs. Pritchard, illustrated the effect of manner on an audience. She was a handsome and magnetic woman, gifted with a superb voice and commanding presence. But she was hopelessly ignorant and ridiculously illiterate. Dr. Johnson pronounced her "an inspired idiot." Until Mrs. Siddons appeared, Pritchard was the greatest Lady Macbeth the stage had ever known, and yet she did not know what the play was about; she did not know who wrote it; she had never read a line of it except her part; but when she played the character she thrilled her audience as no other actress up to that time had ever succeeded in doing.

I never recall a certain great oration about a cross of gold and a crown of thorns without thinking of Mrs. Pritchard. Oratory without thought is like hospitality without food, if I may steal the expression from Balzac.

The first William Pitt, in a different way, illustrates the power of manner when he employed it as a weapon of debate. The most virile minister England has produced since Cromwell, he brought as much glory to the English flag as Marlborough before him, or Nelson after him. He saved Prussia from the clutch of her enemies and humbled the house of Bourbon to the dust. He was a lordly and lofty man, the Richelieu of England. He had been instrumental in deposing Sir Robert Walpole from the head of the British cabinet, and certainly that powerful minister's son, Horace Walpole, had no love for him, but that son, after hearing Pitt's excoriation of Hume Campbell, the head demagogue of his day, wrote some verses, which I regret that I have not at hand, in which he declared that when Nature formed Pitt she had to combine Demosthenes and Cicero. Except that he was familiar with the Latin classics Pitt was an ignorant man, and accepted De Foe's novel, "The Cavalier," as authentic English history, and few who have read it will quarrel with him about that.

To show what effect Pitt's "manner" had on his hearers, a good story is told. That William Murray, who later, as Lord Mansfield, became the most eminent judge the English bench ever knew, was solicitor-general in the cabinet of the duke of Newcastle. He had a much finer intellect than Pitt; his learning surpassed that of any of his contemporaries; he was recognized as the most powerful logician in parliament; he was a lawyer of the highest rank and a statesman of the first order, the pride and the hope of the Tory party.

One day Pitt was assailing the ministry as only he was capable of assault, and after a time he halted in his torrent of invective and, drawing himself to his full height, battle in his eye and terror on his brow, he exclaimed:

"And now I have some words for Mr. Solicitor-General, and I promise him they shall be daggers!"

Then he stood gazing at his victim, who shrank from the contest, while the whole house was frozen in awe. For a full minute he fascinated his prey, who was in agony, and then allowing his voice to fall, the orator closed in these words, low and distinct:

"Felix trembles—I'll defer what I had to say to a future occasion."

Intellectually Murray was as superior to Pitt as morally Pitt was superior to him. Murray could not stand the racket, and he forced the ministry to give him the chief justiceship, and thus he was transferred to the house of lords, where he was free from the scorpion tongue of his more virile adversary.

Subsequently Pitt coalesced with that same Newcastle; but he was the real ruler of England, and he made the last seven years of the reign of George II as glorious as any other epoch in English history. It was well said of him that "He loved England as an Athenian loved the city of the Violet Crown—as a Roman loved the maxima retum Roma."

The impression that Pitt was a madman has been shrewdly debated by more than one able writer, and perhaps he was, along with many mighty geniuses—soldiers, statesmen, poets and orators. Mirabeau was much like Pitt, and there is little doubt that he was mad. A thoroughly sane man is rare. In our country we have had Jefferson and Franklin, Abraham Lincoln and Woodrow Wilson, all exquisitely balanced minds. There are mighty few of them.

It would be worth going far to witness—the presence of a real first-class orator in either house of the American congress. Our country has never produced but one, and his name was Patrick Henry. However, we have got along very well without them.

Just a Moment

Daily Strength and Cheer.

Compiled by John G. Quinlan, the Sunshine Man.

The very least and the very greatest sorrows that God ever suffers to befall thee proceed from the depths of His unspeakable love; and such great love were better for thee than the highest and best gifts besides that He has given thee, or ever could give thee, if thou couldst but see it in this light. So that if your little finger only aches, if you are cold, if you are hungry or thirsty, if others vex you by their words or deeds, or whatever happens to you that causes you distress or pain, it will all help to fit you for a noble and blessed state.—J. Tauler.

The cup which my Father has given me, shall I not drink it?—John xviii, 2.

Whatsoever is brought upon thee, take cheerfully.—Eccles. ii, 4.

Blest Be Thy Love.

Blest be Thy love, dear Lord,
That taught us this sweet way,
Only to love Thee for Thyself,
And for that love obey.

O Thou, our souls' chief hope!
We to Thy mercy fly;
Where'er we are, Thou canst protect,
Whate'er we need, supply.

Whether we sleep or wake,
To Thee we both resign;
By night we see, as well as day,
If Thy light on us shine.

Whether we live or die,
Both we submit to Thee;
In death we live, as well as life,
If Thine in death we be.

—John Austin, 1666.

Saturday Night Talk

By the Parson.

The Year the King Died.

It was in the year of a national calamity that the great Isaiah received his commission as a prophet. "In the year that King Uzziah died," he writes, "I saw the Lord high and lifted up, and His glory filled the temple." When the grand monarch, renowned both in war and in peace, who had reigned for fifty years in a perfect blaze of military and commercial prosperity, died as a leper, the shock and sorrow of the loss sent his patriotic countrymen into mourning that was no pretense.

It was in this black hour that the young Isaiah got his revelation of God. Within the temple he caught a heavenly vision and heard the seraphic choir chanting antiphonally, "The whole earth is full of Jehovah." To his sensitive mind the death of the great king brought into strong relief the presence of the Lord God Omnipotent who lives and reigns forever.

Calamity, not seldom, does just that for people. It brings them into a realizing sense of the spiritual power that undergirds the world. When every material prop has been swept away it throws them back on the support that comes from religious faith. It reveals to them the foundations of the kingdom not of this world.

A letter has been received in this country from the heart of devastated Europe which serves as a picture of what must be in the minds of thousands across the water. Let a few sentences from one paragraph indicate the writer's experience. "Everything human has failed—armies, treaties, diplomats, governments, Hague courts, money—everything has failed. There is no certainty anywhere. I have lost half my family—all my neighbors have lost someone. We have all lost our homes, although perfectly innocent people having nothing to do with the war. We, here in this stricken, impoverished, devastated country have learned one thing, and that is that there is no safety, no permanency, no refuge, no certain joy, no consolation except in religion. Those who have not Christ here are of all men most miserable, for the world has failed them." There you have a cry out of the depths, but there is a note of triumph in it. The writer is cast down, but not destroyed, for he has found, as never before, the final source of human strength.

What is the meaning of the world's pain? What is the interpretation of those "sorrows for which there is no medicine that earth can supply, no consolation that man can offer?" Men have always tried to answer such questions. The problem has been taken up by the wisest heads and the warmest hearts in each generation, not in the expectation of finding a complete solution, but only of throwing some light on the age-long mystery. One who can speak with authority on the matter will find an audience to the remotest corners of this planet that men call earth.

One fact emerges clear. When every human resource fails we are all, saint and sinner alike, thrown back on the ultimate fact of God. There comes a point when, if Providence takes no hand in our affairs, we are doomed beyond hope. It sometimes takes frightful disasters to burn the fundamental fact into men's brains. But He who orders our lives evidently counts the lesson worth the pain necessary to learn it.

Of old, fire ran along the Pyrennean mountains, destroying scores of vineyards, but as the villagers mourned for their vines they discovered that the heat had opened up fissures in the rocks through which gleamed rich veins of silver. That is a parable, the meaning of which may become clear in time to thousands of suffering lives in our modern world. That is not loss, but gain which leaves us, in the end, with a possession infinitely greater than that which has vanished.

Alexander Smith: I like flowering plants, but I like trees more, for the reason, I suppose, that they are slower in coming to maturity • • • that you can become better acquainted with them, and that in the course of years memories and associations hang as thickly on their boughs as do leaves in summer or fruits in autumn. I do not wonder that great earls value their trees and never, save in direct extremity, lift upon them the ax. Ancient descent and glory are made audible in the proud murmur of immemorial woods. There are forests in England whose leafy noises may be shaped into Agincourt and the names of the battle fields of the Roses; oaks that dropped their acorns in the year that Henry VIII held his field of the Cloth of Gold, and beeches that gave shelter to the deer when Shakespeare was a boy.

Twenty Years Ago

•••Two suits have been begun in the United States circuit court involving the ownership of the Adams mine, valued at more than $1,000,000. The plaintiffs in one suit are the fee owners, and in the other case they are defendants, the plaintiff being W. F. Vandervort, who claims that he purchased the land from the United States in 1881 and has been the owner ever since. It is claimed that Vandervort's title passed to Morris Thomas by a deed given immediately after he procured the land from the government. The existence of iron ore on the land was unknown then and it was sold for the timber on it for only a few hundred dollars. Vandervort now claims that he never transferred the title and that the deed to Thomas was not executed by him.

KAUFMAN'S DYNAMIC INSPIRATION

What you did not learn to earn, you can't defend. It's harder to maintain a position than to gain it.

We Can Always Do It

By HERBERT KAUFMAN

Nature is old-fashioned and leisurely. Some of her ways won't do for our days. We haven't time to wait for the replenishment of her diminishing stocks, so it's up to us to devise our own stills, retorts and fertilizers—to make our own mixtures and arrangements of raw materials and manufacture substitutes.

She never intended to furnish more than a few samples and expects us to puzzle out the formulas.

Every essential element for the duplication of any disappearing resource is at hand. Imagination knows where to find them.

When we are hungry, we experiment. Appetite has no curiosity in the midst of profusion. We learned about most of our foodstuffs by running short of older ones.

The difficulty of preserving butter on campaign inspired Napoleon to look for a hardy, wholesome imitation—that's how we got oleomargarine.

Rittman wouldn't have hunted for his gasoline alternative, if demand had not become a glutton.

We didn't search China for wood oil and consider naphtha, in paint and varnish making, while turpentine was still cheap.

Folks grow long-headed when they become short-handed.

Chronic drought tortured Egypt into the discovery of irrigation.

Talking machine records were originally made with shellac. One year, a blight struck the East Indies and sent the market so high that disks had to be produced with something else and the new binder proved not only superior, but more accessible and less costly.

Electricity was in our minds since the eighteenth century, but we let it lie there until the sudden mechanicalization of industry simply shrieked for a flexible and generally available form of power.

Automobiles and airships aren't recent notions. Our grandfathers willed the suggestion to us, but we were too content with existing locomotion to work them out. Then, horse-breeding couldn't keep pace with our requirements and captive balloons failed to satisfy the new tacticians, so we finished the job.

Profusion and progress are not partners. There's no ingenuity in tropical countries—it's so easy to peg along with the supplies in the back-yard.

Where all utilities are ready-made, the inventive faculty isn't exercised. Were not Germany dependent on outside nitrate sources, she wouldn't have dreamed and schemed it out of air and water.

We'll soon have plenty of potash. Now, that agriculture threatens to be handicapped by the cut-off, chemists will give the continent the fourth degree and learn where it's hiding.

Nothing is ever lost except to lazy nations.

Future engineers will again fill the Valley of the Euphrates and enverdure the ancient aridness with millet and date palms.

And at the present price of real-estate in the Great American Desert, a few thousand dollars expended in corner lots, at a penny per, will leave your grandchildren with incomes sufficient to endow a gross of foundations.

We know now, what X stands for—EXPERIMENT.

We can't be downed while our intelligence is dauntless and daring.

We can always do it when we have to.

"V" Verses by Herbert Kaufman

THINK, think, think!
If your thoughts don't mix with ink,
Then transform them into zinc.
Shape 'em into wood or brass
But don't let the idea pass.
Make a record of the notion;
Other minds will get in motion
And complete what you've begun.
That's the way big things are done.
Don't reject it, don't reject it
Let the rest of us inspect it.
We may see where you are blind,
Every man a different mind;
Every mind another view;
You can't tell what you can do
Till you start to put one through.
Work it out in brass or ink,
Set it down in steel or zinc.
Make a try at something—
THINK!

At the Grocery Store

BINS of romance and shelves of adventure! Come, peep into the packages and sacks. Here's treasure trove for imagination. The pungent aromas are laden with magic spells. Junks and proas are on the yellow seas, cargoed with perfumed spices of Sarawak and Indapur. Here are teas that knew the Yangtse and nutmegs that had nodding acquaintance with a Java god. There's a wild tale of South Seas sailor men—of raided copra stores and black orgies in Melbourne mews—buried in these tins of shortening and those cakes of laundry soap were once cocoanuts on a coral atol. A jeweled anaconda slithered her dread length across the plantation where yonder sack of coffee grew. A Malay girl pushed aside the stalks of hemp that made your clothes-line, as she hastened to the river for her love tryst.

Under the Midnight Rainbow

ASK the Dawn-walker; she knows every step of the Great White Way, clear to the last mean bend. It's the crookedest path in the world, with so many twists and turns, that a foolish little girl, dazzled by the glare, can't tell where it ends.

There is no joy here, no happiness, no peace—all is mirage, illusion.

It's a will o' the wisp land—a painted swamp. Only the ghosts are real—the phantoms who pour from out the silent by-streets when the lights go down.

There is no age as old as theirs—no scorn, no blight of body or of heart, they do not bear.

These and these alone know all the windings of the road; they are the Wise Women; their eyes have seen all mysteries.

Look upon them—the soiled and faded aftermath—the old, bedraggled hawks, who once were birds of paradise.

This is Hell's outpost.

Go back, little girl, to where there's space for dreams. Find skies that still hold stars and sunsets, crimson on pine-stabbed horizons. Where miles of God's sweet prairies stretch and empires shagged with mountains and play-grounds for winds drenched with the sweet dews of orange groves and the perfume of balsam firs.

There's a potter's field, not a pot of gold under the midnight rainbow.

BOY SCARRED FOR LIFE BECAUSE STRANGER DRANK BAD WHISKY

Brandishing a long knife, and cursing at the top of his voice, John Erickson, 24, attacked Bruno Salo of Winton, Minn., last night and slashed a cross-shaped cut in the latter's cheek before he was overpowered.

Crazed by drink, and for no other reason apparently, Erickson snatched up the knife in a saloon on South First avenue east, and ran outdoors. Salo happened to be walking past, and Erickson rushed at him.

Three slashes at the victim, who is but little more than a boy, were enough. The first cut a piece from the end of his nose and the next two crossed his cheek. Salo will wear a cross-shaped scar on his cheek for life.

Cries for help brought Patrolman Lading to the scene, followed by Patrolman John Link. Lading succeeded in overpowering the maddened man, and he was taken to police headquarters. Salo also was brought to headquarters, where Police Surgeon Harry Klein sewed up his wounds.

When arraigned before Judge F. H. Cutting in municipal court today, Erickson asked for an examination on a charge of second degree assault, and was held in $750 bail for a hearing March 21.

Salo told police he was in Duluth on a visit, and that he had been staying at the Grace hotel, West Michigan street.

PROMISE MADE TO FIREMEN

Silberstein Asks Them to Withdraw Double Platoon Petition.

"We Will Make Provision For It in 1917 Budget."

If Duluth firemen will withdraw their initiative petition for a double platoon system, an appropriation to handle the employment question may be included when the 1917 budget is made out next fall, Commissioner Silberstein, head of the safety division, told thirty members of the department at the No. 1 firehall this morning.

"The commissioners would like to make some satisfactory arrangements," he said, "but the great obstacle at present is the heavy expense. There is no need of circulating this petition and bringing an expensive election on the city at this time. If you withdraw the measure and wait until next fall, it is probable a plan can be worked out and included when the 1917 budget is adopted in October.

"A double platoon system will cost about $30,000 a year, making such a change an absolute impossibility at this time. I realize the conditions now existing in the department and so do the commissioners and I say advisedly that some satisfactory agreement can be reached by taking the matter up with the council.

"Circulating a petition and bringing the question before the voters will not help, if the city's finances prohibit additional expenses, especially since we have reached the 13-mill tax limit allowed in the charter."

SAVED FROM PRISON; SENT TO ASYLUM

Work Farm Prisoner Mentally Deranged When He Attacked Foreman.

Nick Oreskovich, county work farm prisoner who on March 2 last turned upon Waldemar Nelson, one of the foremen, with a double-bitted ax, was adjudged a maniac by District Judge Cant this morning and was committed to the state hospital for the criminal insane at St. Peter.

Oreskovich was indicted by the March grand jury for the crime of attempted assault in the second degree, but unless he recovers from his mental derangement, and it appears that he was not suffering from an unbalanced mind at the time of his alleged attack upon the work farm guard, he will never be tried.

The prisoner was brought into court this morning and was subjected to an examination as to his sanity. Doctors S. H. Boyer and Lee Barry testified that it was their opinion that the man was insane and the court took the same view and ordered him to the state detention hospital at St. Peter.

Oreskovich's particular hallucination appears to be that his enemies and other people who are conspiring against him are chasing him with flashlights and seeking to pierce his heart with nails.

The prisoner is 28 years old and is a native of Croatia. His father and mother died when he was a boy of 11, leaving him to shift for himself, he told the court. He came to this country seven years ago, he said.

C. R. Magney appeared for the prisoner and County Attorney Greene for the state.

Start on a very long trip and if you have a Reo you will have little to worry you.

PROPERTY OWNERS SHOULD DECIDE

Paving Contractor Gives His Side of Superior Street Controversy.

For the purpose of presenting his side of the East Superior street paving controversy, Arthur J. Leahy, vice president of the General Contracting company of Minneapolis, arrived in Duluth this morning.

"There has been a misunderstanding about this contract," said Mr. Leahy. "We are not trying to 'slip anything over,' and are standing merely on our rights under the rules of fair play. The city specifications were open and did not specify any particular kind of asphalt. We knew that the property owners wanted Trinidad Lake asphalt and bid on it. Mr. Dahl bid on oil asphalt, which he had a right to do under the specifications, just as much as we had a right to bid on Trinidad Lake. Now there is no question but that the property owners want Trinidad Lake asphalt. They have all said so very emphatically, and they are willing to pay for it. I personally had charge of the strip of paving between Eighth and Sixteenth avenues east, which is generally admitted to be the best asphalt job in Duluth. The property owners want our company to lay the same kind of paving, and we bid on that understanding.

"The work will not all go to an outside firm. D. G. Clough of Duluth will do the concrete work, under our supervision, and we will lay the surface, if we get the contract. That is the whole situation in a nutshell. We are simply standing on the argument that the property owners have a right to choose the kind of asphalt they want."

PUT THROUGH FOUR-HOUR DRILL

'Rookies' of Duluth's 'Blue Stocking Company' March Countless Miles.

United States soldiers who are going across Mexican sands on forced marches looking for one Francisco Villa are not having such a hard time after all, in the belief of members of A company, M. N. G.

A company is the newest one in the state national guard and was mustered in recently, replacing the old A company. It is composed almost entirely of "rookies," who are being initiated into the mysteries of military drill and the manual of arms.

Last night at the armory, Thirteenth avenue east and London road, they marched not less than 150 miles, the "rookies" said.

It was the last drill night before inspection, and the new soldiers marched and counter marched with their full equipment from 8 p. m. until midnight.

One ambitious private, said to be noted for his one-stepping ability, carried a pedometer most of the evening, determined to find out just how far his squad marched.

All went well until shortly before 12, when he dropped the instrument in his hurry to swing into line before his corporal prodded him, and lost all track of the distance.

So he doesn't know how much more than 150 miles he traveled.

Capt. John S. Danforth, U. S. A., will inspect E company Monday night, A company Tuesday and C company Wednesday. The regimental headquarters company and the supply company also will be inspected Tuesday night.

The Changelings.

THE VINDICATION. By Harriet T. Comstock, author of "Joyce of the North Woods," etc. Garden City, N. Y.: Doubleday, Page & Co. $1.35 net.

There was Chet. Supposed secretly to be the illegitimate offspring of the brute Tom de Lesser and poor little Sue Mondel, he was raised by half-breeds on a reservation and taught to steal. There was Lorraine. She was supposed to be the mysterious child that was brought to the Climbing Hills (Canada) by a man and woman. The man left and sent remittances for a time. The woman died, and the babe was left with Sue and de Lesser. Sue, thinking the baby was to die, substituted her own for it and brought it up, leaving her own to be brought up on the reservation.

There was Dr. Manton Hill, whose great conviction was that environment, not heredity, counted most. The de Lesser surroundings being vile, though Sue wasn't a bad sort at all, he adopted both Chet and Lorraine and raised them as his own. Chet was sent away to school and became a fine young man, leading the doctor, thinking Chet to be brute de Lesser's son, to think his theory vindicated.

Then, years later, came the parents of the lost child to bring new complications. Not to tell the story, which the author does very well, albeit jerkily in spots, let it suffice to say that there are complications enough to sustain the interest. The setting, in an isolated and primitive Canadian border country, is admirably set forth, and so are the characters. Chet especially is a joy.

A Foreign Policy for America.

THE CHALLENGE OF THE FUTURE. By Roland G. Usher, author of "Pan-Germanism." Boston and New York: Houghton Mifflin company. $1.75 net.

Professor Usher has set himself here no less a task than to think out for us an American foreign policy that will meet the new conditions the world upheaval has brought into existence, while saving us the burden of huge armaments.

Nothing could be more desirable than such a policy; but if refusal to accept his program means that we must either fail or assume the burden of huge armaments, then Professor Usher brings us very bad news.

Our prosperity is in danger, he says, because we are unfitted to maintain it. An unsettled foreign policy exposes us to external perils—this is an undeniable fact, though not necessarily meaning that we must adopt the Usher policy. Isolation and independence he holds to be destructive of democracy and to mean militarism and aggression—though the connection is by no means made clear. For instance: "Where the individual has stood all but supreme, the state is to take his place; where individualist ideas have reigned, collectivist policies will dominate." It is a non sequitur. America must become collectivist, but not by aggrandizing the state to the sacrifice of the individual; rather for the well-being of society and so of the individual, and under democratic control. Peoples can be consecrated to national welfare, and nations to public welfare, without sacrificing democracy or becoming military or aggressive. It means not less democracy but more, because this greater state will be of, by and for the people.

American "isolation," which one might hold to be minding our own business and treating others decently, suggests to Mr. Usher a parallel with Germany's wish to be powerful enough to secure independence by domination. It is not a parallel, but a contrast.

Mr. Usher calmly proceeds to dispose of Pan-Americanism as a fallacy; to renounce the Monroe doctrine so far as South America is concerned; to step into Mexico and police it, acquiring a road to Panama; to make Mexico and Central America ultimately a part of the Union—as if we did not have troubles enough already; to abandon any idea of an American merchant marine and let Great Britain do our hauling; to concede the Pacific to Japan, including Hawaii and the Philippines; and to arrange an alliance with Great Britain.

Most Americans, if threatened with this program, would prepare themselves to fight every item in it. Only the alliance with Great Britain is tolerable, and that only if independence is proved clearly impossible.

There is much sense in the book; "So long as anything resembling the present balance of power continues to exist no European nation can undertake the conquest of the United States without risking the loss in Europe of more than can possibly be won in America. That the present war will sufficiently alter the balance of power to abolish the restraint upon European action is improbable." Also; "War with the United States, though a possible method of furthering present ambitions, is inexpedient and unnecessary for Japan."

Though almost every item of his proposals arouses instant antagonism, it is too thoughtful a book to be dismissed lightly. Here is what the author means by his title: "Not in what we see lies the real danger, but in our unreadiness to make an effort which transcends the limitations of our present knowledge. The American nation of the future challenges the American people now alive to transmit to it unimpaired its heritage of freedom and prosperity. It defies us at the peril of its grave displeasure to neglect its interests. It demands from us of the present its rights and privileges. By each coming generation shall we be called to account for our stewardship, and the accuracy of our reckoning, its adequacy, its altruism will be challenged. Inevitably we must appear at the bar of posterity and answer the challenge of the future."

This is a bold, challenging book which will do great good by exciting larger thought; though that thought will not take the directions indicated by the author.

The Underworld Laid Bare.

THE ABYSS. By Nathan Kussy. New York: The Macmillan company.

This book is the story of the making of a criminal. It is the first of a trilogy. The second volume is to tell the story of a criminal's life, apparently, and the third is to tell of his regeneration.

It is a remarkable piece of work. It is not without faults; indeed it has many. But it is as though somebody had taken the lid of smug complacency off life in this country, and laid bare the swarming under-life beneath. The effect is about as pleasant as when you lift a stone from the earth and expose the noisome crawling life below it.

The author is a Jew, and his hero is a Jew—born in Newark, his father dying early and his mother soon after and himself left a waif in a wicked world. Samuel Goldin, later to become "the Newark Kid," is pictured first as a tiny lad—inquiring, wondering, seeing, thinking on life and seeing much of it that is spared the nine-tenths. His childish adventures are told, as when, during his study of Scripture, he hails a shiny-pated rabbi in the street as "Baldhead," and is bitterly disappointed when no bears come seeking to devour him; and as when, in school, he learned among other things this song:

Twinkle, twinkle, lit the star,
How I won the hot choo carl
Bubalub the worl' so high
Like a dime on in the sky.

There are character sketches, strongly affected by a love of Dickens, but strongly individual and original, nonetheless. There is occasional humor. Sam Goldin tells of his mother's death, of his lone wanderings among human derelicts of many sorts—fake beggars, hobos, yeggmen, crooks of varied lays. Sammy Goldin enters the worst school in the world. It is a black, convincing picture of the lees of humanity in old Mulberry Bend. Vice and cruelty unspeakable, almost totally unrelieved by any spark of affection or pity, are unsparingly described.

Very young, Sam Goldin took to the road as a hobo, having varied experiences with various companions—one of them a girl tramp of 18, who deserted him after a few weeks for a handsomer man. He is arrested, jailed, and finds jail a school of crime and a sink of cruelty. Guards kill a prisoner and throw the blame upon him. The warden, for self-protection, induces him to accept the guilt by saying it was done in a quarrel, but a shrewd district attorney worms the truth out of him and things happen. Escaping, Sam goes to New York, having no friends but thieves and hobos, but of his own clean volition revolts at the life and seeks honest work. But he has been seen by detectives with a criminal who has a record, and wherever he gets work the "bulls" drive him out of it. Finally he is taken in by a big-hearted Jew pawnbroker, and given employment. But even here his "record," pushed by the merciless detectives, finds him, and when a crime is committed he of course is blamed. He is driven out, though the kind old pawnbroker will not prosecute him; but he is nabbed, jugged and mugged—arrested, jailed and photographed for the rogues' gallery, the final humiliation. In despair, he gives up the fight, returns to his criminal associates and so ends the first large volume of the trilogy.

The story not only has a deep and absorbing human interest, but in the lessons it teaches of what slums do to humanity, of what schools of crime jails and prisons often are, and of how thick-witted policemen can turn innocent men into criminals, it carries its mighty lessons to society.

It thoroughly warrants a reading, and a demand for the other volumes of the trilogy.

The Roots of the Struggle.

THE DIPLOMACY OF THE GREAT WAR. By Arthur Bullard. New York: The Macmillan company. $1.50.

Mr. Bullard has set himself the task of contributing to an understanding of the European war by an elementary study of the diplomacy that preceded it and, indeed, created it. This purpose he has achieved admirably. His work is cool, intelligent and informed; and therefore is informing and enlightening. He develops the steps that led to the war, and the reactions of the war upon world affairs, including those of the United States. He is candid, fair, sane and well poised throughout.

One of the most interesting features of the book is its description of the German ideal—the "Deutschtum," an expression which he declares to be wholly untranslatable into English. "To the Germans," he says, "this ideal is entirely beneficent. It means orderly comfort. It means everyone finding the niche they fit. It means mutual, well-organized effort, a harmonious striving together—a force of progress which is irresistible. And in their faith that this life-giving discipline is to spread abroad and regenerate all the earth there is something a great deal finer than gross political or economic greed. To their minds it is almost, if not quite, synonymous with the millennium."

The question before Europe when war broke out was this, he says: "Will Germany preserve the peace at the cost of abandoning her large claims to leadership? Will the rest of Europe preserve peace even at the cost of accepting the overlordship of the Germans?" And both these questions were answered in the summer of 1914 by an emphatic "No."

Germans persistently declare that they fight in self-defense, and that they were attacked. This attitude, so difficult for neutrals to understand, Mr. Bullard explains. Germany was not threatened or attacked in the sense that Belgium or France were threatened and attacked. "In the summer of 1914 neither the political structure nor geographic frontiers of Germany were in danger. * * * What they worried about was the prestige of the Deutschtum. There could be no possible question but that it was threatened—worse than threatened, it was doomed. Nothing but a successful war could revive it. It is evident, from the German press, from the speeches of her statesmen—the kaiser included—that it is not the German soil they are defending, but this German ideal—this mission in the world which God has laid upon them."

Roosevelt's attack on the president's failure to step in to defend Belgium is discussed coolly and without partisan bias. The question raised, "so far as it is not simply an incident of our internal politics, an effort to influence elections," is whether we are or are not going to be a World Power. This question Mr. Bullard answers thus:

"There is little indication at present that a majority can be found in favor of Weltpolitik. Is there any predominating sentiment in our nation in favor of taking sides on the European issues of the war? I think not. We are all distressed over the fate of Belgium, full of admiration for the plucky resistance of this little people, all profoundly shocked that civilization has proved to be so weak a reed. There is among us an almost equal sympathy with France. On the battlefields of Artois, Champagne, the Meuse and the Vosges we feel that a form of government which is dear to us is fighting heroically in self-defense. Many of our more recent European citizens are on the other side. The Jewish refugees from Kishineff can hardly be expected to wish success to their butchers. Most of our citizens from the smaller European states are bitter against Great Britain. There is hardly one of us who does not know quite definitely which side he wants to win. But there is a long step from such personal partisanship to the desire to see our government identify itself with, and give unqualified support to, either the Germanic alliance or the Entente group." Which is not to be gainsaid, surely, Col. Roosevelt to the contrary notwithstanding. A reading of this volume will help much toward a clearer understanding of what is going on in Europe and our relation to it and to the future of it.

America and Japan.

JAPANESE EXPANSION AND AMERICAN POLITICS. By James Francis Abbott. New York: The Macmillan company. $1.50.

It is comforting—though not surprising—to find this author of the opinion that "war between Japan and America during the present generation is a most unlikely contingency." It strengthens the encouragement to find him speaking sanely, wisely, confidently, like a man who knows what he is talking about and with the common sense needed to make right use of his knowledge. It is still further encouraging, then, to find that his experience is such as to qualify him to speak, he having given close study to the subject for many years, having traveled extensively in the Orient, and having been an instructor in the Imperial Japanese naval academy. He is now at Washington university.

Yet Dr. Abbott admits that war with Japan "is not an impossibility," though it will be our fault if it happens. That makes it clear that the subject warrants such an informing study as he has given us.

The first chapters include a historical review, the next four are devoted to material on which is based the central thought of the book—that war with America would be national suicide for Japan. The last two chapters form an appeal to Americans to recognize Japan's aspirations as an Oriental power, made in the belief that it will be to our advantage to do so.

The message of the book is that this country should harmonize with Japan, should find a common ground of mutual respect and confidence and so promote the welfare of humanity and avoid a useless war. "In a word," he says, "we must abandon once for all the anti-Japanese policy inaugurated by Knox; more than that, we must abandon the laissez-faire, indifferent policy that many advocate today. Rather, our policy should be one of active cooperation, an alliance, if you will, though not necessarily one in the conventional military sense. * * * We have a strategic advantage over Europe in the contest for the trade of the Pacific. It remains to be seen whether we shall be fools enough to waste our opportunity by antagonizing Japan instead of dividing the field with her. America wishes the 'Open Door' in China. Japan wishes the equivalent of a Monroe doctrine for the East. If America supports Japan's contention, and Japan America's, Europe will be forced to acquiesce, and peace in the Pacific will be assured."

The book deserves the thoughtful study of every American, whether or not he agrees with its conclusions.

Japan a Menace.

JAPAN AND AMERICA. By Carl Crow. New York: Robert M. McBride company. $1.50 net.

Mr. Crow's addition to the literature—the somewhat confusing literature—of Japan and its meaning to the future of the United States has to be considered in two main relations: first, as a picture of Japan and its people and institutions; second, as a revelation of the extent of the Japanese menace to American peace. The author is a trained writer and has had much opportunity to study Japan. He has lived and worked in the Orient, and was for some time a member of the editorial staff of the Japanese Advertiser, an American newspaper published in Tokio.

As to his study of Japan, it is intimate, detailed, and not at all flattering. To choose an illustration at random:

> There is the surface Japan, the country which the tourist sees, and the country which slowly and reluctantly reveals itself to the disillusioned foreign resident. There is the Japan of the wistaria and smiling faces and beautiful scenery which the tourist who does not stay long enough to learn that it is but the outer shell of a nation which, according to a well known authority, "reeks with every species of moral filth, abomination, crime and corruption." So there are two Japanese people, the polite obliging fellow traveler or casual acquaintance who will walk blocks out of his way to show a tourist some point of interest, and the officious and sometimes insolent official understrapper with whom the foreign resident often comes in touch. While Japan is the paradise of the tourist, it proves a very nerve-racking place for many foreign residents.

Though the bulk of the book is devoted to this study of Japan as a nation, the dominant note in it, reflecting and coloring the whole, is the determination to awaken Americans to the Japanese menace to American peace; and in this respect it is the most pessimistic of the many books on Japan that have come to the reviewing table. Here again we quote:

> The United States is much more of a hindrance to the growth of Japan than England ever was to the growth of Germany. For every just cause of quarrel Germany had against England, Japan has half a dozen against us. In their hearts the Japanese believe themselves the superiors of the Americans in everything except wealth. They are destined to play a very large part in the affairs of the world and to dominate the Pacific. The ambitions of the powerful military and naval clans, and what are believed to be the economic needs of the country, call alike for a program of expansion and aggression which will eventually bring on a clash with the United States. * * * Japanese friendship for the United States exists only in the meaningless conventional phrases of diplomatic usage, in the propaganda of Japanese statesmen and American peace-at-any-price advocates, and in the wine-warmed sentiments of Japanese-American banquets. If it did exist it would prove the Japanese to be afflicted with a most maudlin and senseless sentimentality. Why should they bestow such ardent friendship on the people who stand most directly in the way of their national ambitions, and, by the immigration agreement and the restrictive legislation regarding the ownership of land, have done the most to humiliate the Japanese and affront their proud and sensitive spirit?

Thus you have the spirit of the book. Whatever influence it has will be, of course, toward provoking the conflict it predicts. Yet it should not be rejected because it does not tell us what we would prefer to hear. It must be considered with the rest; and it is pleasant to recall that the rest are more reassuring. All of them together seem to spell this: that there will be war between the United States and Japan if both peoples continue to nurse the superstition that war between them is coming, and if nothing is done to head it off—not otherwise.

Peace the Goal.

WAYS TO LASTING PEACE. By David Starr Jordan. Indianapolis: Bobbs-Merrill company. $1 net.

Nationalism is a noble stage in the development of humanity. Within its limitations it promotes peace and human well-being. Patriotism, its dominating and life-giving spirit, is a fine attribute. Yet it is perversions of nationalism that have made the present war and that stand in the way of peace. Nationalism, formed in the interests of racial prosperity, must in its turn bow to internationalism—to organization in the common interests of the human family. What form is it to take? Dr. Jordan, who, famous as a peace advocate when the argument was all one-sided, long before the present controversy began, discusses in this book all the leading methods proposed to bring about the ideal of world peace, and does it intelligently and interestingly and helpfully. Every person who believes in the achievability of world peace—and all must believe in it or disbelieve in the whole scheme of creation—will be interested and helped by this book.

A Lesson in Labor Relations.

LAW AND ORDER IN INDUSTRY. By Julius Henry Cohen. New York: The Macmillan company. $1.50.

The women's garment industry of New York employs more than 100,000 people and has a capital investment of $100,000,000. Prior to 1910 this industry was in chaos, if not anarchy, so far as the relations between labor and capital were concerned. In 1910 a great strike of extraordinary bitterness precipitated the lightning of hate generated by years of oppression and mutual suspicion. Sept. 2, 1910, a Protocol of Peace was signed, and the situation was settled on a basis of peace and contentment, still prevailing.

Surely in this story there is not only human interest but food for the thought of those eager to see industrial peace, which is possible and should be possible only on a basis of fairness and justice.

The settlement came about, first, through the initiative of Louis D. Brandeis, for a long time chairman of the board of conciliation which the Protocol provided for. Mr. Cohen, who tells the story lucidly and interestingly, was one of the attorneys for the employers. The Protocol has been copied in other industries in New York, Boston, Chicago and Philadelphia, and in its working out has been an experiment station for new methods of dealing with the relations between labor and capital.

Fundamentally, the plan is an association of employers co-operating with an association of employes—co-operative bargaining—with an effective organization for the adjudication of all differences. The story Mr. Cohen has to tell is of the highest importance, and he tells it intelligently and helpfully. It deserves careful study by all concerned in improving the relations between workers and employers.

A Lively Story of War.

ROADSIDE GLIMPSES OF THE GREAT WAR. By Arthur Sweetzer. New York: The Macmillan company. $1.25.

This is a new and refreshing picture. It has its horrors, but it has its comedies and its sentimental drama, too. Mr. Sweetzer is a newspaper man, and a good one, too, we should judge. It was the biggest assignment of his life, and he welcomed it and enjoyed it—enjoyed telling about it, too, and those who come in contact with the book will enjoy the way he does it. Through all his experience he kept his poise on straight, and so he writes sanely with a decent balance between the mad side and the merry side of war.

Mr. Sweetzer traveled from the Belgian border to Paris by bicycle, in the wake of von Kluck's invasion, which he met returning from its repulse at the Marne. He was a prisoner of the Germans amid the flames of a burning city; he was twice a prisoner of the French; during a march of twenty-eight kilometers he was handcuffed to two German prisoners. He had unusual facilities, he appears, and innumerable experiences of all imaginable varieties befell him. And out of it all he has made a highly readable story.

A Democratic Organization of Industry.

INDUSTRIAL LEADERSHIP. By H. L. Gantt. New Haven: Yale University Press. $1 net.

Taking note, as all thinking people have, of the fact that this war has shown autocracy with a far better industrial organization than democracy has yet achieved, and realizing that democracy, if it is to endure, must at least equal autocracy in this respect, the author of this book, which consists of lectures given before the senior class of the Sheffield Scientific school of Yale, addresses himself to the problem thus suggested. He believes that an industrial democracy is possible that will be far more effective than anything autocracy can create, and he endeavors to outline the principles on which such an organization can be made. An important feature of this discussion, necessarily, is vocational training; and here he believes that as much should be undertaken by industry as possible, and as little as possible left to the schools.

While the subject is too large to permit condensation into this space of a treatment which in itself is highly compact, Mr. Gantt's discussion is so lucid, so sane, so fair and so intelligent that it forms a most important contribution to what is, whether so recognized or not, the most vital problem before the American nation and people. How important it is may be realized from the fact that while "German efficiency," based on a thorough national organization of industry for national purposes, is the wonder of the world, Mr. Gantt states that as a result of a study of German industry made in 1913 by 300 American engineers, they were in substantial accord that plant for plant Germany is no match for the United States. Yet, nationally organized, she is more than a match for us because we are not nationally organized at all.

The beauty of Mr. Gantt's philosophy is that he gives full recognition not only to the right of the workman to fair play, but to the fact that national security and welfare require that that right be freely granted.

Food and People.

CHANGES IN THE FOOD SUPPLY AND THEIR RELATION TO NUTRITION. By Lafayette B. Mendel. New Haven: Yale University Press. 50 cents net.

In 1898 Sir William Crookes rather startled the world by pointing out that the wheat supply, about 1931, would prove inadequate, thus reviving thoughts akin to those of Malthus. Subsequent figures, showing unsuspected possibilities both of acreage and yield per acre, have postponed the fatal day. But what Dr. Mendel is taking about is still more reassuring—the discovery that we can vary our diet, or even greatly reduce it, without curtailing efficiency. If nothing good to eat but wheat were discovered, the time would come when there wouldn't be enough to eat. But within a few months attention has been directed to the possibility of growing in the United States at least two plant products which may serve as human foods; proso millet and grain sorghum or kaoliang, both of which have long been known in other parts of the world as constituents of the diet of mankind. * * * The peculiar value in such crops lies in the fact that they are drouth-resistant."

Improved processes of preserving foods, besides waste-saving processes of producing foods, including cold storage, dessication, canning, etc., are considered. Germany, under press of neecssity, is contributing valuable experience in short-ration efficiency which enriches the discussion. Thoroughly scientific and interesting, the chief value of this paper is to show how relatively little has been accomplished, compared with what can be accomplished, in the study of efficiency, in food supplies and diet regimens.

Adventure, Science and Religion.

THOSE ABOUT TRENCH. By Edwin Herbert Lewis. New York: The Macmillan company. $1.25 net.

This isn't the kind of a war story a glance at the title would indicate. In this day when trenches are playing a part so great in the economic and social revolution being engineered by Mars, the reader of this title might be excused for getting a wrong impression. The Trench of the title and of the story is not an excavation. He is a man, a doctor to little children, an intense scientist, a materialist—a "radical mechanist," the girl of the story calls him. He is a most engaging individual and the author has written around him a truly remarkable story that grips and holds and makes you forget the passage of time and wish there were more of it when the last page is reached.

The main setting is in Halsted street, Chicago, where this young doctor, little over 30 and famous, has set up a "Caravansery" where he houses a small group of foreign students of Lister college. A queer and most interesting group they make—Deland of Salem, Mass., and Chatterjee of Calcutta and Wu of Hong Kong and Ameen of Persia and Becker of Russia. Jaffer of Peshawar, India, is home for the time, and in his absence Saadi Sereef arrives. Saadi, to the group in the house, is son of a prime minister in Bokhara—but really he isn't. And he wins his way into the hearts of the queer students and into the heart of Dr. Trench and into the heart of a Jewish girl who finds in him an ideal born of materialistic and socialistic tendencies.

The story of Saadi's return to Bosnia, of Jaffer's wild journey across Russia in search of him, of the great events at Sarajevo on the 28th of June, 1914, of Dr. Trench's love affair and the triumph of personal love over the impersonal attitude toward life is told with a dash and mastery of the technique of language that cannot but arouse the enthusiasm of any reader.

There is a strong current of religious discussion throughout the story—perhaps it is philosophy rather than religion. Most of the characters are materialists, and though the author leaves the reader suspended so far as a definite determination of the discussion is concerned, one is inclined to believe that the materialistic philosophy is not victorious as determining the actions and ultimate state of mind of the characters.

The flavor of Orientalism, the glimpse given of the Slavic view of the great world war now raging and the events that lead up to it, the unusual nature of the two love stories involved and the action with which the story teems must add to the value of "Those About Trench" in the eyes of readers who read fiction for its first aim, entertainment.

The Romance of a Bounder.

THE BELFRY. A novel by May Sinclair, author of "The Three Sisters," "The Return of the Prodigal," etc. New York: The Macmillan company. $1.35.

Miss Sinclair has in this novel an achievement and a triumph. Furnival, journalist, who tells the story, hired Viola Tresiger to be his secretary—or, rather, Viola hired herself against his unspoken protests. Whereupon Furnival promptly fell in love with her. But along came Tasker Jevon, as quaint a character as recent fiction has disclosed. On one side of him, Jevon was a hopeless bounder, guilty of every conceivable breach of taste. On the other side of him, a genius, innocent and wholly lovable. Viola had rebelled against the conventions of her family, and Furnival was too proper for her. First thing they knew, Jevon and Viola were in Belgium together, seeing the sights. Now don't let that bad habit of jumping at conclusions lead to another mistake. Better let the story tell itself. Don't be as bad as Viola's family was. Anyway, they were married—incidentally Furnival consoled himself with Viola's younger sister and married her—and the story deals with the coming on of Tasker Jevon and of the life he and Viola led together. It is an extraordinary study of extraordinary characters—Viola has an individuality all her own, though not an especially appealing one—in an extraordinary situation. Matters began to grow bad when Reggie, Viola's brother, returned from India and refused to admit the existence of any such person as Tasker Jevon. Viola loved and feared Reggie, and it was bad going for a while. Then Jevon, prosperous, "spread himself" on a house, and managed to get into it about every evidence of bad taste that money and cockneyism could contrive. Moreover, he did awful things—things that made Viola shudder. Trouble in plenty grew slowly but certainly.

And then came the war, and the story reaches a truly "gripping" climax in the reaction of the war upon these characters and upon their relations with each other. It is a rarely vivid and absorbing story, a masterpiece of characterization.

Be Sure to Yawn and Stretch.

HOW TO ADD TEN YEARS TO YOUR LIFE, AND TO DOUBLE ITS SATISFACTIONS. By S. S. Curry, Ph. D., Litt. D. Boston: School of Expression, Pierce Building, Copley Square. $1.00.

Do you ever find, in the course of a day, that you got out of bed on the wrong side that morning? How do you wake up, anyway? What is the first thing you think of and do after waking up?

On the way you can answer these questions depends, according to Dr. Curry, a whole lot of your future as well as your present. What is more, after you have read what he has to say on the subject, you are inclined to agree with him, or at the least you will admit that he has put up a mighty good case. Briefly stated, his theory for adding ten years to your life is to exercise properly in the morning, and he tells how to do this.

But first he warns us that "true exercises are all mental and emotional," not purely physical; and he insists that these exercises he suggests be undertaken in the proper frame of mind. First of all, he urges, on waking up, take a thought of joy, of courage, of love toward all mankind, toward the day and its work." That will put you in a proper frame of mind to face things cheerfully and fairly. Then you must chuckle a little, just as an expression of that thought of joy, for he tells us that "an exercise is an expression," and by that chuckle you will loosen up something and be getting your first exercise.

From that point on he takes a good many pointers from the animals. He shows how they all have certain characteristic waking-up exercises, and especially he lauds yawning and stretching. Then he gives others with which to follow these, and by the time you have gone through them all your whole being, mental and physical, is co-ordinated for the day's efforts, and you are fit for anything.

Dr. Curry's book is worthy reading for its many practical suggestions, and to all who will join the "Morning League," which after all is more an idea than an organization, he offers additional instruction.

Melodrama in the Far North.

THE HUNTED WOMAN. By James Oliver Curwood. New York: Doubleday, Page & Co. $1.25 net.

This is a Curwood novel, which means that its setting is "north of 50;" that the heroine is a beautiful and lovable woman; that the hero is a manly man who can endure hardships and fight against great odds; that there are great mountains and roaring torrents and rough, hard-fisted men and thrilling melodramatic situations woven into it.

Joanne Gray arrives near the end of the railroad, where no woman should travel alone. The end of the railroad is characterized by vice in its worst forms and little—very, very little—of virtue. Stepping into a difficult situation immediately, Joanne is rescued by John Aldous, writer of books, a dweller in the solitude of the North. Aldous protects her through a strange quest, escapes with her from a tunnel in which they face death, accompanies her on a thrilling journey to the "Valley of Gold," and wins her in a struggle that is a thrilling climax to a series of thrills.

The thread of Mystery and the ever-impending danger with which the story holds the reader are the basis of its power. Mr. Curwood knows his North, knows the people—commonplace and strange—with which it is peopled, and he is a master of the writing craft. "The Hunted Woman" will add to his ever-increasing fame.

Life Through a Boy's Eyes.

CAM CLARKE. By John H. Walsh. New York: The Macmillan company. $1.35 net.

Lives there a man or woman who cannot appreciate a boy story? There is something about the workings of a boy's mind that few adult writers can grasp and set down on paper. But there are few adult readers who do not thrill with appreciation and with long-dormant memories as the experiences and the dreams and the scenes seen with boy's eyes are unfolded before them.

Mr. Walsh has written a real boy story. It is told by Mart Campin, uncontrolled son of a shiftless father, but the principal figure in it is Cam Clarke, son of a real woman relieved by death of a weak husband and cast in penury on a new-born Western community where saloon keepers, drunkards, cowboys and ne'er-do-wells have hearts and a brand of Christian charity that is all too scarce in highly-civilized communities.

Mart and Cam are just boys, living the lives of boys, dreaming the dreams of boys, playing the pranks of boys, in the words of Mart the story of their poverty, their joys and their friends, and also the story of the development of love between John Bradford and Cam's mother, are told. Life as seen by a wholesome boy is stripped of shallowness and artificiality, and Mr. Walsh's book is a story of life seen from that viewpoint.

It is a good story, one that the reader will enjoy. There is no attempt to teach a great lesson; no discussion of the philosophy of life; no propaganda; no fine writing—just a story of real life with real people in it. What more does one want when he reads fiction?

Four persons are possible suspects—two young women, a young man, and a dubious count whom Miss Carrington had expected to propose to her. On Bringing Up Your Boy or Girl.

WHEN CHILDREN ERR. By Elizabeth Harrison. Chicago: National Kindergarten college, 2944 Michigan Boulevard.

"A book for young mothers," is the label on the title page, but this latest of Miss Harrison's works should appeal quite as much to all parents and grandparents and cousins and uncles and aunts as to mothers, old or young. It is a comprehensive, pointed, eye-opening discussion of the treatment of children when (as sometimes happens) they do what is not right. There is a temptation to try to sum up the whole of the book by quoting the following two sentences: "Justice, absolute justice, is the child's right. Although that justice is sometimes compelled to be stern, it can always be rational; and if rational, it will in time prove its merits to the child." But although that thought is apparent in every page of the volume, there is unlimited emphasis on the necessity of evidences of affection, and one who reads the book through carefully will not fall into the mistake of not letting mercy temper justice at times.

But the best of the book is that it is not mere theory, but a series of statements of fact drawn from experience and observation. The examples given to illustrate the points are examples from actual life, and the problems considered are problems that have come up in the lives of parents and children, and have either been solved in individual instances, or in which the mistake has become apparent and the lesson is taught in that way.

"When Children Err" is one of the most practical and useful books on child training that could be imagined.

Among the Magazines.

"While in other days popes and princes built churches and palaces which are still the wonder of the world, today commerce and industry are doing work equally impressive," says Joseph Pennell in an article on "The Wonder of Work in the Northwest," in Harper's for March. Referring to the mills and elevators and docks at Duluth, Minneapolis and Chicago, he says: "It is subjects like these that make the Northwest so fine, so American; yet there are others just as fine, and absolutely different, all over the country. They are noble just as the temples, the pyramids, the cathedrals are, for this art is the expression of our time and our aims just as the temples and castles were of other times. No artists recorded the building of those temples for their own sake, for they were always to be seen. So today only a few artists pay any heed to this wonder of work around us. A wonder, too, which will soon be gone, for with every new development in manufacture the picturesqueness of chimney, converter and crane will disappear, and in a few years there will be nothing but mean, low masses of trim masonry with no effect about them—as worthy of comparison with the marvelous, mysterious masses of today as a clapboard meeting-house is with a cathedral." Other articles of interest in the March Harper's are: "A Yankee in Switzerland," by Albert Bigelow Paine; "The Master Instinct," by John Burroughs; "Top o' Smoky," by Henry Seidel Canby; "The New Wealth," by Walter E. Weyl.

Never, perhaps, in our history has the word Americanism had a vaguer meaning than it has today. Much mouth honor is paid to it, but ask a dozen Americans what America stands for, and you will have twelve different replies. In the opening pages of the March Atlantic, Agnes Repplier defines her idea of what this country should mean to its citizens, in words which Americans of the older stock will listen to with enthusiasm. In the same magazine L. P. Jacks contributes in "Our Drifting Civilization" a discussion of the utter lack of control which the present mechanism of politics retains over the nations of today. "The Syrian Christ," by Abraham Mitrie Rihbany, is an interesting interpretation of the parables by a Syrian to whom the Bible always sounds, as he says, "like a letter from home." A characteristic bit of John Burroughs' philosophy is contained in his paper, "The Still Small Voice," and in "The Gates of the East" C. William Beebe describes his adventurous search for natural history specimens in the Far East. "Music for Children" is the title of a serviceable paper by Thomas Whitney Surette, whose revolutionary ideas for the musical training of children challenge the instant attention of teachers and mothers.

The World's Work for March contains an exceptionally interesting and instructive group of articles. "The New Head of Tuskegee," by Ray Stannard Baker, gives a clear picture of Maj. Robert Moton, his aims and views for the future of the negro. Burton J. Hendrick's "Shall We Have Responsible Government?" depicts in a conclusive way the evils of the various pork barrels; especially the waste in misappropriations of army and navy monies. And once again he points out the only logical remedy, a budget system for government expenditures. "Canada in War Time," by French Strother, gives a picture of how our neighbors on the north have taken upon themselves the burdens of war and gone about it in an efficient and patriotic way. "Six Per Cent Money for Farmers," by James B. Merriam, shows the great need of Federal laws for rural credit, and suggests a method for remedying this economic fault. There are a number of cartoons by Louis Raemaekers, the famous Dutch cartoonist.

Mr. Balch, well known as an athletic director, is himself the originator of the movement. The article is fully illustrated. The March instalment of "The Boys' Life of Mark Twain," by Albert Bigelow Paine, describes the famous humorist's brief experience as a Civil war soldier. A further chapter deals with his life as a pioneer and gold-seeker in Nevada and California, and how he gradually came to take up writing as an occupation. U. S. NAVY GOOD PLACE FOR BOYS

Walter Green of Duluth Well Pleased With His Work.

Uncle Sam's navy offers attractive work from the very beginning for the enlisted man, according to Walter J. Green, Duluth, who is now at the Brooklyn navy yard receiving final instructions before entering the wireless service in the navy. In a letter to J. C. Poor, assistant recruiting officer here, Mr. Green gives warm praise to the navy insofar as his experience goes. He is stationed on the schoolship Maine, which is in the navy yard.

"The Washington is expected in next week," he writes, "to take the Maine's place, which means that I will have a new home for the rest of my school term.

"I certainly find things here just as I was told they would be. I think that if a fellow has any knowledge of electricity and he cannot afford to go to an electrical school of any kind, the navy is the best place for him to get his practical knowledge of the science. They certainly are turning out some fine operators in the school here, and as soon as they complete their course in the school and pass in their examinations, they are given the rate as third-class electrician, and draw a salary of $33.30 per month. I wish that some of the other fellows I know on the outside could see the opportunities a young man has in the navy."

We refer you to Reo owners for information regarding service.

HOLDING UP UTILITY COST

Interest on Bonds Doubles Water Prices, Says Reed.

If the outstanding bonded debt of $3,334,000 against the water and light department were paid off, Duluthians could be furnished water at one-half the present cost and gas at three-quarters of the rate charged today, according to a special bulletin, which will be issued by the department on Monday. Copies of the bulletin will be mailed with the regular monthly water and light bills, according to an announcement made today by Manager Reed.

The department has redeemed a total of $87,000 in outstanding bonds since Jan. 1, 1914, according to the bulletin, reducing the annual interest exactly $3,890. The statement on the bond payments follows:

Paid in 1914, $20,000 certificates of indebtedness at 5 per cent due in 1914, yearly interest, $1,000; paid in 1915, $20,000 certificates of indebtedness at 5 per cent due in 1915, yearly interest, $1,000; $1,000 certificates of indebtedness at 5 per cent due in 1917, yearly interest, $50; $3,000 bonds at 4 per cent due in 1928, yearly interest, $120; $3,000 bonds at 4 per cent due in 1936, yearly interest, $120.

Paid in 1916, $10,000 bonds at 4 per cent due in 1932, January interest, $400; $15,000 bonds at 4 per cent due in 1932, November interest, $600; $15,000 bonds at 4 per cent due in 1934, interest, $600. Total principal, $87,000; total interest, $3,890.

The annual interest on the remaining debt of $3,334,000 is $146,010, states the bulletin, or at the rate of $400.03 for every day of the year. This is $100 more than the wages and salaries paid the entire department each day.

The bulletin follows, in part:

"All money received from the sale of bonds has been used for the purpose of purchasing, constructing and extending the plant, and it should be gratifying to note that a start has been made toward the reduction of the debt and the consequent saving of the interest thereon. The interest saved monthly by the payments already made is as shown above, $3,890.

"The department also expects to take up during this year $40,000 of bonds and certificates of indebtedness in addition to those already paid.

"The policy of the department is to reduce the indebtedness and interest charge in order to make possible large reductions in the water and gas rates. If our indebtedness were paid off we could sell water at one-half and gas at three-quarters of the present rates."

CHIEF OF POLICE HIDES IN UNIFORM

Police Chief R. D. McKercher disguised himself last night.

No, he didn't wear an Esquimo suit, and snowshoes, because he wasn't starting out on a cross-country tramp after a hold-up man or burglar. Nor did he wear an alfalfa-like mustache, or a Luke McLuke beard. He didn't even resort to burnt cork, or brown his skin with oil.

Nevertheless, the disguise was complete, and no one would have recognized him.

"It's a good one, I'll admit," he said with a smile, as he sallied forth from headquarters, headed for a St. Patrick's eve dance.

To relieve the suspense, the chief has consented to allow The Herald to tell how he disguised himself, because he doesn't plan to use the same device again. Here it is: He wore a uniform of a chief of police of Duluth.

It was the third time (about) that he had appeared in brass buttons since assuming the duties of his office.

BIG FREIGHT TERMINAL IS MILL CITY PLAN

Minneapolis, Minn., March 18.—It is stated that the Great Northern road has tentative plans in hand for the construction, within the local zone of Minneapolis traffic, of a mammoth freight terminal to take pressure off the city proper. The plan is the first of the kind to be based upon the conception of an eventful traffic problem that can in no wise be handled in present city centered terminals, officials believe.

The Great Northern purposes laying out a terminal between Northtown Junction and Fridley, on the east bank of the Mississippi river, just over the northern boundary of the city limits, and in Anoka county. It proposes then the construction of a cutoff from the Osseo line to start somewhere in territory north and west of Glenwood Park, running straight to the river and across to the new terminal.

OPPOSES SALOONS FOR WESTERN SUBURBS

Claiming that some of the steel plant employes already have lost their positions because of liquor, Watson S. Moore of the Duluth Board of Trade this morning filed a protest with City Clerk Borgen against the granting of any more saloon licenses in New Duluth or Gary.

"The company," states the communication, "is doing all it can to protect its employes from the destructive influence of liquor."

Mr. Moore, who is a large property-holder in the western end of the city, asks the council to continue in its stand against granting any more license transfers for New Duluth and Gary.

The communication will be presented at the council meeting Monday, when two applications will be read by the clerk.

IRISH FEATURES AT BALL

Large Crowd Attends Annual Dance of Theatrical Association.

Duluth theatrical folk turned out in large numbers last night to the second annual ball given by the Duluth Theatrical Protective association at the auditorium. The St. Patrick's day program was keenly enjoyed, and green decorations were in evidence in the hall. Green ties, shamrock flags, and in some cases green gowns, plainly showed that St. Patrick is a popular patron saint. Flaaten's orchestra dispensed Irish airs, and the Boudini brothers lead the grand march.

The contests for the best dancers brought forth keen competition. Prizes amounting to $20 were awarded to the winners in the cake walk contest, four box seat tickets for the Al Wilson show at the Lyceum were given the winners of the waltz contest, and four box seat tickets for the Grand were awarded to the winners in the hesitation contest.

NORTHERN BOWLING TOURNAMENT IS FULLY UP TO THE ADVANCE DOPE

The Pin Meet of the Present Week Far Surpassed All Past Local Tourneys—Moran Must Outslug Willard to Win—Harvard Lives in Dread of Losing Services of Percy Haughton.

BY BRUCE.

LIVING up to the high expectations smeared in its behalf, the Northern Bowling association tournament has been the most successful by far ever staged here. There has been a greater number of players entered, and the bowling, taking it on the average, has been considerably above the average of the tournaments held here in the past. The 1916 tournament has conclusively demonstrated that Duluth is one of the live centers of the game and that the future holds even greater tournaments in store.

It is almost certain that new alleys will be opened here before the tournament of next year. Officials of the Northern Bowling association declare that there will be more than 100 teams entered next year. Should this prediction prove correct, there will be great need for additional facilities for accommodating out of town pin men.

During the last few years the growth of Duluth as a bowling center has been remarkable. With the growth in interest there has come an increase in the quality of play. While it is possible that some of the best of the Twin City teams shade the best teams that can be mustered here, the difference in play is comparativciy slight. Only a few seasons back the down state pin men held a big lead. Should the quality of play of the local bowlers increase correspondingly during the next year, the showing of Duluth bowlers in the 1917 tournament should be by far the best ever made in tournament play.

The Chance of Moran.

FOLLOWERS of boxing generally believe that Moran's great chance against Willard lies in the ability of the challenger to get in close and slug with the plainsman. This is rather a peculiar viewpoint to take, when it is considered that Willard will outweigh Moran nearly fifty pounds.

Most of the critics profess to believe, however, that Willard is a more clever boxer than Moran, while there are some who concede that Moran can hit harder with his right hand than the man who took the title from Jack Johnson.

Neither of the men are ring greyhounds when it comes to speed. A Corbett or McCoy would box rings around both the title holder and the challenger. But the shade in speed is given to Willard.

Outweighed, without speed or great boxing skill to recommend him, it would seem then that Moran's only chance is to get by the long left of Jess and flail away at the body of the cowpuncher with his trusty right.

Moran dropped Coffey upon two different occasions with his walloping right. Close followers of the Moran side of the argument are counting on the Pittsburger to slow the Pottowatomie man down with several well directed rights to the mid section. It is said that Moran's left is hardly an ornament. Well, it's kind of hard to figure a one-handed fighter making a serious bid for the title, but it looks as if we will have to let it go at that.

Looking back to the list of great old fighters, you will find that the majority of them possessed great left hands. A fighter with a great left hand, if he can punch at all, is almost always invincible.

They Will Have to Improve.

WHEN a really great champion arrives in any athletic line, he usually serves to show up the rest of the field. The case of Joe Stecher is apt and admirably to the point. The youthful sensation from the Nebraskan prairie country is showing up the heavyweight wrestlers of the United States in a scandalous manner. There will have to be an improvement in the general grade of wrestling, or Stecher will be left without competitors of a serious nature.

Well, Let's Watch Him Play.

FINALLY Bennie Kauff has signed a contract. For the last few months he has been telling what he would do in the National league. When Kauff was wildly chortling about his ability as a ball player, he was declaring he would never sign a contract unless paid an exorbitant sum of money. All the preliminary details are out of the way—for heaven's sake, let's be given the long-awaited opportunity of beholding just what the highly touted Federal league star is capable of doing in a field that numbers some real ball players.

They Might Win, Even at That.

JUST because R. T. Lawrence has picked the New York Yankees to win the American league pennant is not an infallible indication that they will fail to accomplish this feat. Other teams have won under a handicap almost as great. While it is rather an unfortunate prediction, 'tis true, still the Highlanders have some great ball players and may surprise a lot of fans by cutting a wide and blustery swath.

Hal Chase and John J. McGraw.

IT IS said that Johnny McGraw wants Hal Chase to play first base for the Giants. Should Chase report to the Giant squad there would be a clash of temperamental genius and bulldog tenacity and steely determination. Who would win out? No other manager in baseball has been able to accomplish much with Chase. When others have failed it is not at all uncertain that McGraw will not succeed. Another little thing, if Chase has not deteriorated far to the rear, he should make a great man for the little Napoleon of Baseball.

The Fear of Harvard.

YALE football men are chortling in expectation of hearing a great piece of football news, while the men of crimson inclinations are contrawise wailing in subdued fear of being told that Percy Haughton will not coach the Harvard football men next year. Baseball, it is believed, will consume too much of the time of the new owner of the Braves. In that case, Harold, Harvard will lose the greatest coach in the United States, or at least a man who is justly entitled to that name.

Should Harvard lose the priceless services of Haughton and Yale be reinforced by the acquisition of Tad Jones and Mike Sweeney, there is likely to be a swift and radical change in the football positions that the two great schools have occupied during the last few years.

NOT OUSTED YET.

McLoughlin, Bunday, et al, in No Danger Under Tennis Rules

New York, March 18.—Provisions of a new amateur rule and the review and arrangement of the tournament schedule, were considered by the executive committee of the United States National Lawn Tennis association at a meeting here last night. The session was behind closed doors, but such information as was obtainable indicated that Maurice E. McLoughlin, Thomas C. Bundy, F. B. Alexander and others in the sporting goods business were not in immediate danger of being declared professionals. There is the possibility that the new rule may not be enacted until next year. It was said a statement would be issued today regarding the committee's decision.

Because of several important shifts in the tournament dates, it is not likely that the list will be issued for a week or ten days.

BOTH QUINTS ARE WINNERS

First and Second Central Teams Defeat Denfeld Players.

West Duluth Boys Put Up Much Better Game Than Expected.

The Central high school basketball quint, in a hard fought game at the Washington gymnasium yesterday afternoon, defeated the Denfeld high school five of West Duluth by the score of 32 to 15. The Red and White seconds also emerged winners over the Denfeld "scrubs" by the score of 21 to 6.

The feature of the big game was the excellent showing of the Denfeld team. The West Duluthians, in their own gymnasium last week, fell before the Central quint by the score of 35 to 10. It was therefore expected that the Centralites would run away with the game in their own gymnasium. The Denfeld men, however, put up a much better argument than in the previous encounter and held their opponents to a much closer score.

The game started fast but at times it was slowed up somewhat by ragged playing on both sides. Central was leading at the conclusion of the first half by the score of 20 to 9. Starting with a rush in the second half the Red and White men piled up a big lead but they were soon heceked and the game concluded with the score 32 to 15.

The Central lineup was shifted somewhat for an experiment, Fee playing a great game at center and Captain Gogins working nicely at forward. Karon was put out in the first half for mixing with Myles and Mason returned to the game; Rosenberg and Shaw, played wonderfully both on defense and offense, each of them caging four baskets as well as checking most of their opponents rushes. For Denfeld Martin played a great game at forward, getting a total of ten points. Dormedy played a good game on defensive.

Next Friday Duluth Central takes on Superior Central in the last game of the season. Superior is at present playing at the Wisconsin state tournament, and they will come over to Duluth confident of avenging the defeat which they suffered at the hands of the locals earlier in the season. The lineups and summaries of last night's games:

New York, March 18.—There will be no change in the place for the holding of the intercollegiate regatta this season, according to formal announcement made by the board of stewards here today. The inter-varsity crew races will be held at Poughkeepsie on Saturday, June 17, the three events be staged at approximately the same hours as in past years.

The date for the regatta is the earliest on which the races have been rowed in many years, and was selected after many conferences as the only available day which would meet tidal, railroad, and other conditions and restrictions.

CHALLENGER IS READY FOR CONTEST WITH JESS WILLARD

FRANK MORAN.

After a period of rest from his training experience at Saratoga, Frank Moran has gone to work at a road house near New York preparing for his bout with Willard.

MORAN CELEBRATES HIS BIRTHDAY

Is 29 Years Old; He and Willard Working Hard.

New York, March 18.—At Madison Square Garden, where the Willard-Moran bout is to take place in a week, it is announced that the advance sale of tickets for the contest now amounts to more than $100,000. The management announced that the $5 and $3 seats will be put on sale at 10 a. m. next Thursday, and that not more than two of the seats would be sold to any applicant.

Willard did no road work yesterday but used the pulleys and spent a quarter of an hour in bending and setting up exercises in the afternoon. He then took on Jack Broad, a local heavyweight, but the newcomer was handled so roughly that he quit before the expiration of three minutes.

Willard's footwork was fast and Willie Ritchie, who was an interested spectator, declared the Kansan was in fine shape.

Moran took light exercise in the early part of the day after a four-mile run in the morning. He went to a theater in the afternoon to see an Irish play, in honor of St. Patrick's day. Today is the 29th anniversary of Moran's birth and he said he would put in a full day's training to celebrate it. He looked the picture of health and strength.

COLLEGE RELAY MEN COMPETE FOR TITLE

Louisville, Ky., March 18.—Featured by a one-mile match race between the relay teams of the University of Pennsylvania and Princeton, said to be for the national championship, and by the appearance of Ted Meredith. Pennsylvania's noted middle distance man, in the 880-yard handicap, the third annual indoor meet of the Louisville Amateur Athletic federation will be held here tonight. More than 200 athletes will compete in twenty events.

Entries include teams and individuals from Cincinnati, Chicago and other Middle Western cities.

Amateur Boxing Tourney.

Detroit, Mich., March 18.—Milwaukee and Indianapolis boxers failed to arrive in time to compete in the preliminary bouts last night in the Central A. A. U. boxing championships. They will be allowed to enter the finals tonight. The feature bout last night was that between Melicohr of Chicago and Daughetry of Detroit in the 175-pound class. Daugherty was considered Detroit's surest winner, but the Chicago boy led all the way.

Joe Tinker Injured.

Tampa, Fla., March 18.—Joe Tinker, manager of the Chicago Nationals was painfully injured here yesterday when his automobile struck a post. He was pitched against the wind shield and gashed about the head and face, a glass fragment cutting his eyelid. Physicians advised quiet, fearing possible injury to the eyeball.

REGATTA IS IN BALANCE

Meeting Called to Decide If Duluth Gets It Or Not.

New York, March 18.—At the annual meeting of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen, which will be held tonight, the date and place for holding the national regatta of 1916 will be decided.

A strong effort will be made to have this annual event awarded to Duluth, Minn., this year so that the races may be rowed over the St. Louis bay course.

The Duluth Boat club, which came near to sweeping the entire program last season at Springfield, promises to run a special train for boats and oarsmen in the East, which will pick up contestants at several points on its trip west from New York.

In addition the Western club promises magnificent trophies and expects a record entry in case the association awards the big event to Duluth.

Wins Basket Ball Title.

Chicago, March 18.—The National A. A. U. basket ball championship was won here last night by the University of Utah team, which defeated the Illinois Athletic club 26 to 27.

One-Armed Man Stars.

Milwaukee, Wis., March 18.—Wisconsin Athletic club defeated the Y. M. C. A. last night in the indoor meet, 53 to 24. Starke of the Wisconsin Athletic club was the individual star, scoring 14 points. He has only one arm.

FAMOUS BOXER TO SHOW WARES HERE

MIKE GIBBONS.

The famous Phantom will arrive in Duluth tomorrow and will remain here for five days. Mike will be accompanied by his brother Tommy. This will be the first time Mike has been here since 1910, when he fought Jack Doyle before a private club. Gibbons is generally recognized as the greatest boxer in the world.

ST. PAUL BOUT TAME AFFAIR

Gibbons Has It All His Own Way; Smith Merely Covers.

Crowd Yells for Action; Azine Outclassed; One Good Battle.

St. Paul, Minn., March 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mike Gibbons shaded Jeff Smith here last night in ten somewhat tame rounds. The phantom was content to pile up a safe lead after the third round, seldom cutting loose and failing to display the brilliant boxing that has marked some of his former bouts. Gibbons won all the way, but the fight was far from a thriller.

Smith, dazed and mystified at times by the speed and class of Gibbons, boxed on the defensive a great part of the fight. It was expected that Smith, the slugger, would make a rushing fight of it, but Gibbons carried the battle to the Eastern boy, Smith seldom using his right.

Mike used a left to head and a short right cross to the face. Smith's face was cut and marked and bore evidence of the hitting power and accuracy of the St. Paul sharpshooter.

While Gibbons won, he failed to serious damage the Eastern invader, although on two occasions right crosses shook Smith up.

Much Clinching at Opening.

In the first round there was considerable clinching, with a light exchange of blows to the face, but no damage was done by either boy. Mike swung to the jaw with a stiff left at the opening of the second session and followed it with a right. They clinched, and there was little advantage at in-fighting. Mike made Jeff miss swings for the head.

Gibbons felt for an opening in the third and missed a stiff swing, taking two light taps to the face, but immediately retaliating with a like measure.

In the fourth round Mike planted two blows on Jeff's jaw, but with little effect and the round was very tame.

Forced to Ropes.

Mike forced Smith to the ropes at the opening of the fifth and drove home a left to his jaw. In the exchange that followed, Gibbons had an advantage. Smith covering up and seeming worried.

The St. Paul lad whirled in with two blows at the outset of the sixth, landing on Smith's head. Mike had the better of a breakaway from a clinch.

Smith was too busy covering to land any blows in the seventh. There was more action in the eighth, Mike opening a cut over Smith's eye and following it with three to the head.

Smith hung on in the ninth, and in the tenth there also was much clinching and in-fighting, but no damage was done.

Azine Outclassed.

Jimmy Azine of Duluth was stopped in the third round of his scheduled eight-round contest with Kid Herman of Pekin, Ill., a solid right cross starting the undoing of the little Zenith City boy. Ulrich stopped the bout when it was plainly apparent that Azine was but a target for the punches of Herman.

Jack Burke and Jimmy Hanlon of Denver mixed it furiously for ten rounds. The bout was even at the final bell, the boys were battling so earnestly that they refused to be parted.

In the auditorium basement the boys renewed hostilities and had to be pried apart by the janitor and several assistants.

The crowd, particularly those in the $7.50 section, several times shouted for more action when the Gibbons-Smith bout was on, and at the end of the contest there was some hissing and booing.

Gibbons was uninjured at the end of the fight, while Smith had a bad cut over his left eye. He was pounded on the jaw and in the ribs a good part of the fight.

MANY RECORDS ARE HIT IN SWIMMING

All But Two Conference Marks Passed; Other College Sports.

Chicago, March 18.—The University of Chicago and Northwestern university tied for first place in the Big Nine swim last night. Each scored 44 points. Illinois was next with 12 and Wisconsin last with 6.

All conference records were broken except that for the 200-yard swim, and the 100-yard, which was equaled.

Earle, Chicago, clipped 2-5 of a second from the 40-yard swim, doing it in 20 flat. Johnson, Northwestern, took 6 4-5 seconds from the record in the 220-yard. Pavlicek, Chicago, did the 150 breast stroke in 6 1-5 seconds faster than his previous record of 1:58 3-5. The plunge for distance, 60 feet, was won by Redmon, Chicago, in 19 4-5 seconds, or 4 4-5 seconds better than the previous record. Johnson of Northwestern equaled his own record of 59 1-5 for the 100-yard. Simondsen, Northwestern, clipped 18 1-5 seconds from the 440-yard record.

Kansas City, Mo., March 18.—Missouri won over Kansas in the annual dual track meet here last night. The score was 45 to 40. A world's record was made by Simpson of Missouri, officials of the meet declared, when he won the 50-yard low hurdles in 5 4-5 seconds, lowering the former records of 6 seconds tied by him last year in the same meet.

Princeton, N. J., March 18.—The semi-finals of the intercollegiate wrestling championship held here, ended with Princeton and Cornell in the lead. By reason of falls secured, Cornell had three points. Princeton 2, Pennsylvania and Lehigh one each. In addition, Princeton placed six men for the final score, Cornell, 5; Pennsylvania, 2, and Lehigh, 1. Columbia failed to place a man.

New Haven, Conn., March 18.—Yale went into first place in the intercollegiate swimming league here last night by defeating Columbia 39 to 14.

Badger Basket Ball Tourney.

Milwaukee, Wis., March 18.—Fond du Lac defeated Edgerton, 15 to 14, and Grand Rapids won from Ellsworth, 18 to 16, in the state normal high school basket ball tourney here last night. Grand Rapids won over Galesville, 22 to 9, and Monroe over Waukesha, 31 to 16, in the morning games.

BOWLERS START ON FORTY-HOUR STRETCH, WHICH WILL END THE NORTHERN TOURNEY

Successful Meet Will End on Sunday at Midnight; Will Bowl All Night and All of Two Days; Two Changes in Leadership.

Bowlers started this morning on the final stretch of the Northern Bowling tournament, which will come to a close at midnight tomorrow.

Leaders in the tournament to date are threatened for the prize money and some of the closest contests of the tournament are expected today and tomorrow. Play began at 9 o'clock and, according to the schedule, will continue all of today, all night and all day tomorrow, with no let-up until the tournament comes to a close at midnight Sunday.

Yesterday's play brought the Zumalweiss team of Minneapolis into the second place of the five-man teams, with a total score of 2,809 and right behind the Flats of the same town, who are big contenders for the money. Anhert of Minneapolis broke into the singles leadership, getting second place with a total run of 622. Outside of these two changes, the leaders remained undisturbed as a result of yesterday's play.

The Centrals of Minneapolis and the Schmidts of St. Paul, the latter team fresh from the A. B. C. tournament at Toledo, where it landed in third place with a high score of 2,880, arrived this morning to participate in the final contests of the local tourney. Eighteen five-man teams will play tonight, while the finals in the doubles and singles are scheduled for all day tomorrow.

THREE YANKEE PLAYERS OUT FOR SECOND BASE

DANIEL BOONE. JOE GEDEON. GEORGE MULLEN.

Here are three candidates for the second base job on the New York American league team. Boone played the position last year, but he is not at all certain of the job this season. Gedeon is from the Federal league and is said to be a real ball player.

NEW YORK SPORT LETTER

Remarkable Interest in Trap Shooting Is Shown By Announcement of Schedules for Coming Season---More Than 400 Tournaments Are Arranged--Lipton to Race Yacht Shamrock IV Next Year.

New York, March 18.—The announcement of the national trap shooting schedules for the coming season supplies another demonstration of the remarkable growth of this sport. More than 400 tournaments ranging through national, sectional, state, city and club championships are already named and it is expected that the number will cross the 450 mark before the traps are set going in the northern portion of the country.

The records show that the tournaments registered to date exceed by almost 100, the entire number sanctioned during 1915, and that this excess is likely to be doubled before July. There is also shown a shift in the center of trap shooting activity during the last twelve months. A year ago Pennsylvania led all the states with 38 registered tournaments. Illinois was second with 32, and Iowa third with 29. This season Iowa has taken the lead with 48, Pennsylvania is second with 43, and Illinois is third with 42.

The dates and places for twenty-four state championship tournaments have been named and applications for a number of other titular shoots are on file for action. Those sanctioned to date are as follows:

State Tournaments.

Georgia—April 25, 26, Atlanta.

The statement by Sir Thomas Lipton that he hopes to race his yacht Shamrock IV. for the America's cup next year calls to mind the fact that the challenger is still carefully boxed and under guard on the Brooklyn waterfront. Not for a moment since Shamrock IV. was hauled into drydock, covered with canvas and boxed up late in August, 1914, has the Lipton yacht been without a guard and caretaker. American yachtsmen know no more about the lines and construction of the challenger than they did when the sloop appeared off Sandy Hook a few days after the declaration of war.

There appears to be little chance that the Shamrock IV. will be uncovered during the coming season. Reports from the other side, however, are to the effect that Sir Thomas is keeping in close touch with American yachtsmen and will put his challenger overboard early in the spring of 1917 if international conditions warrant the belief that the America's cup races can be staged. In the meantime it is expected that both the Resolute and Vanitie will be seen in a few races this summer in order to keep the prospective defenders in shape for the yachting classic when times are more propitious.

FRED FULTON KAYOS FLYNN

Rochester Giant Settles Old Trial Horse in Two Rounds.

Milwaukee, Wis., March 18.—Fred Fulton, the Rochester, Minn., heavyweight boxer last night knocked out Fireman Jim Flynn, Pueblo, in the second round of a ten-round contest.

Flynn bored in blindly in an effort to reach Fulton with infighting. He failed to get inside of Fulton's guard and the latter sent right and left jolts to the face at will.

In the second round, Flynn bored in again, and a few more jolts made him an easy prey for the first open blow of the bout, when Fulton sent a right to the jaw, knocking Flynn senseless.

CLOSE RACE FOR CONFERENCE HONORS

Wisconsin and Illinois Probable Winners at Indoor Track Meet.

Chicago, March 18.—Points scored for second, third and fourth places are likely to prove the deciding factors in the battles for leading honors in the conference indoor track meet at Evanston tonight. On past performances, the race should be a neck-and-neck contest between Wisconsin and Illinois, with Chicago a third choice and Purdue a possible contender. If the athletes run true to form displayed in dual meets this season so far, Illinois should take four first places, Wisconsin, three, and Chicago, two with one in doubt. In their dual meet Wisconsin defeated Illinois by a narrow margin, and the Badgers have a team well enough fortified to pick up a lot of smaller points.

In the fifty-yard dash, bound to be a close event, Smith of Wisconsin is considered the most likely to win first place. Previously this year he conquered Hohman, one of the Big Nine's best sprinters, doing sixty yards in 6 1-5 seconds. Carter of Wisconsin finished third in the Urbana meet, and must be considered a probable point winner. Smith's rivals compose a first-class field, with Hohman, Pershing and Agar of Chicago; Barker and Bradley of Northwestern, and the Purdue entries.

Ames of Illinois is about conceded victory in the 60-yard hurdles, in view of his world records in the fifty, made at Notre Dame last month. Dismond, the Chicago quarter-miler, is granted first place in the 440 by the critics, but in both hurdles and quarter there will be some keen competition for the trailing points. Arlie Mucks of Wisconsin, is another whose claim on his favorite event, this time the shot put, seems to be beyond dispute.

Harvey of Wisconsin has done the best half miles in conference competition this season. He beat Spink of Illinois in two minutes flat and that is faster time than made by Stout of Chicago in winning the indoor half last year. Harvey is credited with 1:55 3-5 outdoors and may do some fine work on the Patten cinders, especially with Spink and Van Aken and Campbell of Purdue as pace makers.

If Mike Mason enters both mile and two mile runs and has recovered his health, Illinois is practically sure of first place in each. Again Wisconsin looks as a rival, but Mason defeated Schardt, the Badger miler, in 4:27, and won from Felton, the Madison two-mile winner, in 9:52. Watson of Minnesota is a strong two miler, running second to Mason last year.

At least five entrants in the high jump have done 5 feet 11 inches, the mark at which M. James of Northwestern won last year. They are Webster of Illinois, Whiting of Chicago, James of Northwestern, Moersch of Minnesota and Rowe of Iowa. The records leave the outcome in doubt, so far as prophecies are concerned, except that some critics expect a mark of at least six feet.

The pole vault appears likely to prove a duel between Culp of Illinois and Huston of Wisconsin. Culp recently outvaulted the Badger at 12 feet, but Huston tied last year with Schobinger at 12 feet, 3 inches.

Chicago's fast relay quartet ought to out-distance its competitors, with Wisconsin coming close behind. The Maroon squad, Guerin, Clark, Cornwall and Dismond, running in the order named, defeated Ohio State two weeks ago in 3:19 3-5.

SHERIFF KAYOS BOUTS BY BOXOFFICE SEIZURE

Appleton, Wis., March 18.—The boxing game is dead in Appleton. The knockout blow was dealt at the match last night by Sheriff Rule, when he served papers on Matchmaker Kanis, attaching the receipts.

The papers call for $200, but there was not that much in the box office, so all was taken. The ring had not been paid for and printing bills were outstanding, attachments having been made by the Post Publishing company. Kania said the stockholders of the Appleton Athletic association would probably have to pay those who participated in the program last night.

Threaten Bowling Leaders.

Toledo, Ohio, March 18.—Spares in the wrong place saved the leaders in both the doubles and singles from being defeated yesterday in the American Bowling Congress tournament, new second place holders showing up in the two-man event in Mattie Paetz and Charlie Hildebrandt of Chicago, with 1,273, and a new sixth place in the singles in A. Ardolini of New Haven, with 666. The Clarkes Pure Rye team of Peoria took eleventh place in the standings on the late shift with the score of 2,774.

Wins at Pocket Billiards.

Chicago, March 18.—George Clark of Brooklyn outgeneraled M. A. Petrie of Chicago in the pocket billiard tournament yesterday and won a hard-fought match, 100 to 71. Clark, with an 18, scored the high run, and ran his century in fifty innings.

Lehigh, Lafayette, Massachusetts Technical, Holy Cross, Columbia and Dubuque, have listed the names of their leading star varsity athletes. Yale leads with a team of seven men, the most prominent of whom are Wesley M. Oler, John Overton and Heaton Treadway. Harvard will be represented by Westmore Wilcox and William Bingham.

FIGHTER MEETS DEATH IN RING

Andrew Crowley Chokes as Result of Blow on Throat.

Philadelphia, March 18.—Andrew Crowley, a featherweight professional boxer of this city, was almost instantly killed last night in a bout with Mike Malone, also of Philadelphia. Death, according to the police, was caused by a blow on the larynx in the third round. Up to this point, the bout had been on even terms.

Then Malone staggered Crowley with a right to the jaw, and followed it with a stinging blow to the throat. Crowley dropped to the floor and died a few minutes later.

Physicians said he was choked to death as a result of the blow on his throat. Lew Bailey, manager of the club, was arrested and later released on his own recognizance, while Malone and his seconds were locked up.

New York, March 18.—Benny Leonard of New York, aspirant for lightweight honors, knocked out Shamus O'Brien of Yonkers in the seventh round of a ten-round match here last night. Leonard outfought and outpointed O'Brien, who was helpless on the ropes when the referee stopped the bout.

Fort Worth, Texas, March 18.—Jack White, Chicago featherweight, knocked out Jimmy Bibbs of Fort Worth in the seventh round of a scheduled fourteen-round bout here yesterday.

Appleton, Wis., March 18.—Ford Munger and Dauber Yaeger, welterweights, fought ten rounds to a draw here last night.

Milwaukee, Wis., March 18.—"K. O." Brennan, Buffalo, and Billy Kramer, Milwaukee, welterweights, and Soldier Bartfield, Brooklyn, and Art Magirl, Oklahoma, also welters, will furnish a double windup at a boxing show here March 25.

Giants Defeat Waco.

Marlin, Tex., March 18.—The New York Nationals yesterday defeated Waco, pennant winners of the Texas league, 7 to 3. Doyle, Merkle and Fletcher distinguished themselves by sturdy hitting. Doyle's record for the day including a home run.

ACCUSED IN ST. PAUL.

St. Paul, Minn., March 18.—Edward Leonard and George Bissett, charged with stealing internal revenue stamps worth $574,000 and more than $3,000 cash from the St. Paul customs house Jan. 6, arrived here Friday in custody of two Federal marshals and two Chicago city detectives.

The party was met at the station by Frank W. Sommer, secret service agent, who conducted the investigation which resulted in the capture of the suspects and the return of most of the stamps.

The prisoners were lodged in the Ramsey county jail to await the action of the Federal grand jury June 6. Neither would make any statement to plans for defense.

BIG INDOOR MEET OF A. A. U. SENIORS

New York, March 18.—The annual Amateur Athletic union senior indoor championship will be held here tonight with the most representative entry in recent years. Prominent club and college athletes from the South, Middle West and New England will compete against the best track and field performers of the Metropoliten district. New records are looked for in several events, owing to the caliber of the entrants.

HERALD'S WEEKLY ROADS BUREAU AND BULLETIN

All the information at our disposal is yours for the asking. Motorists outside of Minnesota are especially invited to make use of this department.

Washington, March 18.—A total of $150,000,000 will be expended in country-wide roads improvement during the next five years, if the co-operation between the national government and the several states set forth in the measure reported to the senate by its committee on postoffices and post roads as a substitute for the Shackleford house good roads bill finds approval.

Senator Bankhead's committee dissented from the legislation passed in the house in that it preferred a definite sum per year rather than "any amount up to $25,000,000;" believed that the money should only be expended for construction or improvement and not for maintenance; and also included in the distribution to the several states the additional factor of area, besides population and post road mileage.

In both bills the states match the Federal dollars, but the Bankhead bill definitely calls for $5,000,000 in 1916; $10,000,000 in 1917; $15,000,000 in 1918; $20,000,000 in 1919, and $25,000,000 in 1920. Incidentally the senate substitute requires that a state shall establish a state highway department, though its apportionment remains to its credit for at least three years, so that the five states which have yet to adopt the policy of the other states will have ample time in which to comply with this reasonable supervision of the expenditure of the joint money.

If a state does not properly maintain a road constructed by the Federal and state authorities, which roads are decided upon by the secretary of agriculture and the state highway department, the secretary has the power to withhold a further apportionment of funds if, within six months after he has given notice in writing to the state highway department of a state, the neglected roads are not given the necessary attention.

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 18.—Systematic studies by city, county and state governments of the performances of various road materials under actual wear by means of periodical traffic censuses were suggested as a means of helping the good roads movement at the sessions this week of the sixth American Good Roads congress and the thirteenth annual convention of the American Road Builders' association, at the exposition buildings.

Other resolutions adopted at the gatherings suggested that in the future bonds for road construction be of the serial type, which may be paid off year by year, rather than the type which are wiped out at maturity by means of a sinking fund. It was also urged that the various states pass laws establishing reasonable limits for the weight, dimensions and speed of heavy motor vehicles. The association likewise went on record as favoring a system of properly located and improved highways as a matter of military preparedness.

New York towns and counties placed contracts for nearly 200 miles of concrete streets and roads last year, and more than 110 miles of these were completed. Contracts were let in thirty-two counties for 2,291,958 square yards of concrete paving, sufficient for 244 miles of 16-foot paved surface. At the end of the year 1,320,638 square yards had been completed, equivalent to 140 miles of 16-foot roads. Many of the pieces of road were put down in towns and were more than sixteen feet wide, so the actual mileage completed was a little more than 110 miles.

It is expected a larger mileage will be put down this year, as more than 970,000 square yards remain to be completed on old contracts and many new contracts doubtless will be let.

Elgin and Chicago will be connected by an all-concrete highway within two years. This was announced at a conference of highway officials between the two cities. The issuance of $2,000,000 in bonds for the improvement of the highways of Cook county has been legalized by the legislature after a fight lasting two years and work on the construction of the roads will begin without delay. Among the first will be the Higgins road from the Chicago city limits to the Kane county line, about one mile east of Dundee. The road to Elgin will connect with the Higgins road at that point. The Elgin and Kane county good roads boosters will take the necessary steps to extend the road to Elgin. When the Higgins road is completed it will be known as a century trail, extending from Chicago to Aurora via Dundee and Elgin.

Sacramento, Cal.—Between now and Dec. 31 next, the California highway commission that has been working during the last few years under the $18,000,000 bond issue, voted by the state, will have expended its present funds. Further construction will depend on the fate of the $15,000,000 issue to be voted on in November. With the $18,000,000 issue a wide cordon of permanent highways has been constructed from north to south, and a large number of gravel or graded roads has been constructed and taken over for maintenance by the commission. In addition, routes for many unconstructed units have been selected and surveys ordered.

Jefferson City, Mo.—The Missouri benefit district road law, involving the constitutionality of more than seventy road districts in Missouri, and which, it is said, will make way for permanent road improvement in the state, has been upheld by the supreme court at Washington as constitutional. Roads may now be built like city streets—by creating districts including none but the benefited property owners, assessing them in proportion to the benefit they receive and giving them ten years in which to pay. There will now be no obligation to wait on a whole county or township or city to decide to build roads.

Plans of the Daughters of the American Revolution to mark the Lincoln highway, between Springfield and Danville, are assuming definite form and the markers will be erected this year. Appropriate symbols will be placed at every cross roads, showing the trail used by the great emancipator in making the journey on horseback between the two cities while practicing his profession of attorney. The Lincoln circuit extends via Batestown, Oakwood, Champaign, Monticello and Decatur, and is one of the best known of the historic roads of Illinois.

A new motion picture producing company at Kansas City is having for its first work the filming of the Santa Fe trail, leading southwest from Kansas City to the Pacific coast. The pictures will be exhibited to arouse road-building enthusiasm along the trail and at motor gatherings. Stretches of the trail already have been taken in Kansas City and in parts of Kansas.

Brownsville, Tex., March 18.—The Diamond Loop highway, to connect San Antonio, Laredo, Brownsville and Corpus Christi, forming one of the most attractive tourist routes, will be completed within the year, it is predicted by J. A. Graham of San Benito, president of the Diamond Loop Highway association.

Clay county, Iowa, will gravel its entire system of main county highways, 163 miles in extent, during the coming season. Funds are available and materials are being gathered for the improvement.

MECHANIC CONSTRUCTS SMALLEST MOTOR CAR IN THE WORLD

P. H. Estabrook, a mechanic at Grand Rapids, Mich., has constructed what is believed to be the smallest motor car in the world. The length over all is 71 inches, the width 30 inches and the height 23 inches. It is equipped with a single cylinder motor and it responds readily to the touch of Estabrook's 4-year-old son. The tot is, without a doubt, the youngest chauffeur in Michigan.

Estabrook purchased many of the parts of the machine, but the bulk of the forging and machine work he did himself. He assembled the car in his woodshed. The machine is eqpipped with electric lights, electric horn, duplex steering gear, external contracting brakes, speedometer, clock and gas pump. It has a tread of 22½ inches and a wheel base of 50 inches. Solid rubber tires are mounted on the 14-inch wheels. It carries five dry batteries and is roller-bearing throughout.

Estabrook's son drives the machine at will about the neighborhood, and occasionally goes out for a spin of a mile or more. The gears are low and it is impossible for him to make more than eight or ten miles an hour.

TRUCKS GOOD BAROMETER.

"The astonishing growth in trucks sales is a hopeful sign for things generally. In fact, there could be imagined no better barometer of business conditions. Farmer, manufacturer, middleman, merchant, all are preparing for greater deliveries; contractors and public service corporations for extensive operations. The whole commercial and industrial world is preparing to handle its prosperity expeditiously."—H. S. Daniels of the Kissel Kar.

UNCLE SAM FAST BEING MOTORIZED

Many Cars Are Being Used in Various Federal Departments.

With the United States ranking as the leading motoring nation, with more than three times the number of automobiles running over its 2,273,000 miles of public roads as are used throughout the rest of the world, it is only natural that the Federal government should be rapidly converted into a motor vehicle user. The transportation service of the various government departments of Uncle Sam, as far as is possible, is fast being motorized, says The Horseless Age, the leading automobile trade authority.

The White House has in use six motor machines; the interior department, in its various branches, seventy-three; the department of agriculture, sixteen; the department of labor, two; the treasury department, seven; the state department, two; the war department, ninety-one; the postoffice department, 225; the commerce department, four; the government printing office, ten; the District of Columbia, thirty, and the navy department, sixty-five, or a total of 531.

These figures, even, do not represent the extent to which motor vehicles are used by the government, as in several instances rented cars are pressed into service. This is true as to the customs and the postal services in New York city. As a result of trouble which the postoffice department has had recently with the motor contract service in New York city, the government is negotiating for the purchase of at least 100 additional cars for that service, bringing the total up to 631. The department also has under rental about 100 cars in various other large cities.

New cars are being bought also for other postoffices and the rural free delivery service is being motorized as rapidly as is possible. More than 700 rural routes have already been motorized, and by the time this action is taken with respect to all of those which are to be operated by automobile, the number will have reached the thousands for this branch of the service alone. These rural free delivery automobiles, however, will be owned by the individual carriers; but, while privately owned, will stand as a testimonial to the recognition by this branch of the Federal service of the utility of the motor car.

Firestone Chosen Leader.

New York, March 18.—The Rubber Club of America has elected the following officers: President, H. S. Firestone, Firestone Tire & Rubber company; first vice president, Van H. Cartmell, Kelly-Springfield Tire company; second vice president, H. L. Hotchkiss, United States Rubber company, and secretary, H. S. Vorris.

FORD SALES FORCE WILL BE DOUBLED.

Instructions have just been issued by the Ford Motor company to each of its fifty-one sales branches throughout the country to double the number of salesmen operating in the various territories controlled by these branches. The step is taken by the Ford company to meet the constantly increasing demand for Ford cars in every section of the country. The production planned for the present year is 500,000 cars, but the demand has grown in proportion and has passed even this greatly increased output.

CORPORATION WILL EDUCATE ALIENS

Goodyear Company Will Organize Class in English and Citizenship.

The education of the employe of alien birth and the inculcation in him of American ideals are problems which the events of the last year have proved must be worked out. The Goodyear Tire & Rubber company, Akron, Ohio, recognizing the need of extending to these men the opportunity of making themselves better citizens of the land of their adoption, and thereby increasing their own efficiency as workmen, is planning to organize classes in the English language and American citizenship, for the benefit of the thousand men of alien birth who are now performing their part in keeping Goodyear in the lead in automobile tire production.

THOUSANDS ATTEND OVERLAND DANCE

When one of the big, new factory buildings of the Willys-Overland company of Toledo was completed a few days ago, it was suggested that it would be a great place to give a dance, before the machinery was moved in.

The Overland officials gave their consent, and arrangements were under way when it was found that the big structure was not large enough to accommodate all the employes who planned to come.

To take care of the crowd, three nights were set aside and more than 6,000 people participated. Music was furnished by the Overland Concert band of fifty pieces, made up entirely of Overland employes. It was entirely a family affair and probably one of the biggest parties ever attempted by an industrial organization.

Approved—by Thousands of Users

As we remarked several weeks ago—

"The Paige 'Six 46' is a good car — not merely because we say so — but because it's owners have definitely established this goodness in the grueling tests of more than a full year's road work."

If you stop and consider the matter for one minute, you will agree that no automobile can be termed a success until it has been tried and approved by owners.

Factory tests are all right — and very necessary so far as they go.

But a car only proves itself under the strain and stress of day in and day out service.

So, there is one little point that it may be well for you to bear in mind.

This year there are a number of "experimental" six cylinder cars on the market.

These cars, with their new "theories" and new engineering features, may — in time — prove altogether practical in every way.

But until that time comes—until these sixes have been thoroughly "tried out" in the hands of users—the prudent man will be inclined to buy the car with a tangible record of accomplishment behind it.

The Paige "Six 46" is an eminently safe automobile investment.

also made known that the speedster model shown at the New York and Chicago shows and called the Vitesse is not to be marketed, nor is any form of eight-cylinder roadster to be made. Besides the four, the line will include only one other model, this being an eight-cylinder four-passenger car selling at $1,175.

New York City, March 18.—An advance of $35 in the price of the Buick light sixes has been made by the Buick Motor company, Flint, Mich. The roadster will sell for $985 and the touring car for $1,020 at the factory.

USE OF GASOLINE HAS BIG INCREASE

Secretary Lane Estimates Gain of 25 Per Cent Annually.

Washington, March 18.—The most striking part of Secretary Lane's report to the senate on the shortage of gasoline is his estimate of the soaring rate of increase in consumption. He computes that 25 per cent more gasoline as used in America in 1915 than in 1914 and that 25 per cent more will be consumed in 1916. Yet this statement is borne out by available facts. In 1904 the consumption of gasoline in the United States was 6,800,000 barrels. In 1909 it was 10,800,000 barrels. In 1915 18,000,000 barrels, and experts in the industry have been estimating that 30,000,000 barrels will be required during this present year.

Our 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 motor cars are the chief consumers, but it must be remembered that there has been a great extension in the use of gas engines for motor boats, farm tractors, farm machinery and small manufactories. Added to this is the circumstance that production has diminished, due to stoppage of the direct exports from Mexico and the heavy slump of the Texas and Oklahoma oil wells, which are said to have fallen in output from 35 to 50 per cent.

It is not strange that gasoline has risen from 15 cents per gallon to 25 cents and that some authorities predict a price of 35 cents before the movement is ended. The situation makes demand upon both the skill of Americans in contriving substitutes and our ability to conserve supplies of petroleum and gas which we have hitherto exploited prodigally.

As for substitutes, Secretary Lane urges foremost the perfection of motor machinery which will consume kerosene and other heavier distillates of petroleum. Experts on internal combustion engines are said to agree that such machinery is feasible. New processes may be found for increasing the percentage of gasoline derived in the refining of crude oils, for refining oils of unusual composition and for better production of gasoline from natural gas.

MORE SIMPLICITY IN CAR DESIGN

Buyers Are Now Showing More Intelligence in Selecting Autos.

People generally know a lot more about automobiles than they did a few years ago. They are buying automobiles more intelligently.

One of the elements which figures in this changed condition is, unquestionably, a growing appreciation of the importance of simplicity in the design and construction of a motor car, and this despite the fact that the trend of talk the last year has been in the opposite direction—along the line of eight and twelve cylinders and seventy-five and 100-horsepower cars.

Herbert Chase, chief engineer of the Automobile Club of America, in a signed article recently published, says:

"Decrease in weight with a view to decreasing operating cost has been given much attention. This has been accomplished by eliminating unnecessary parts, simplifying other parts, cutting out metal wherever changes of design would admit and by the use of lighter metal, notably aluminum alloys.

"This has made it possible to use less raw materials and has not only contributed to the decrease in cost but has otherwise contributed to the value of the car to the user, for the reason that the operating cost of the car is roughly proportional to its weight, which is simply another way of saying that the lighter a car is the more economical it is to operate."

MANY EXPECTED AT SALES CONVENTION

Dealers of Northwest Are Invited to Minneapolis for Two Days.

According to Jean H. Falk, special representative of the Chalmers Motor company, the big sales convention for automobile dealers of the Northwest has been definitely scheduled for March 31 to April 1. This will probably be the largest gathering of automobile dealers ever held in the Northwest, as invitations have been sent out generally to all dealers in North Dakota, Minneapolis and South Dakota. Over 200 acceptances have already been received, and extensive arrangements are being made for the entertainment of the dealers during their stay in Minneapolis.

PLEASURE RIDING SCORED.

English Government Would Transfer Wasted Millions.

London, March 18.—Motoring for pleasure is characterized as selfish, thoughtless extravagance in an appeal issued by the government's war savings committee. In speaking of riding for recreation rather than business the appeal states:

"If this form of selfish, thoughtless extravagance is stopped, millions of pounds will be saved and many workers transferred to more useful channels."

The sponsors for war economy think motoring has a bad moral effect on the poorer classes, stating that these people cannot be asked to save as long as they see the rich enjoying such luxuries.

DRIVES WITH ONE ARM.

which the latter promoted last year. It means that this business will be conducted as a personal business of Henry Ford and his son, Edsel B. Ford, or rather by the firm Henry Ford & Son, which was formed last year.

DORT CARS POPULAR.

Trainload of Autos Received in the Mill City.

That there is an unprecedented demand for Dort cars in the Northwest is verified by the fact that a solid trainload of these popular priced cars has just been received in Minneapolis, the distributing point for Minnesota.

In business nine months and shipping cars by the train load to single distributers; this is the enviable record of the Dort Motor Car company of Flint, Mich., manufacturers of the Dort $650 touring car.

WILLYS GOES WEST FOR HIS VACATION

Los Angeles, Cal., March 18.—John N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland company, Toledo, Ohio, the largest automobile factory in the world and the second from standpoint of production, arrived in Los Angeles this week for an extended vacation on the Pacific coast. Mr. Willys will spend much of his time here, having purchased a house in Pasadena during his residence here last winter. There is a strong probability, however, that he will visit the Northwest before his return East.

SERVICE TO HERALD READERS.

Anyone interested in the purchase of a 1916 automobile can get information about the various machines and the local dealers by writing to the automobile department of The Herald. If you are interested in any machine The Herald will tell you where to buy. The Herald is the recognized medium between buyer and dealer in the Northwest.

A national car shortage and price increases are constantly reflected in reports received by local dealers from the factories.

"Put your order in now to assure delivery before summer and to avoid an increase of $50 to $100," is the advice given by a number of Duluth agents.

NOTES FROM THE FACTORIES

A million a month falls short of measuring the Packard pay roll for its great factory in Detroit. The amount of money put into the pay envelopes for the period from Feb. 1 to Feb. 15, is more than $540,000. Latest figures from the employment department show that 13,023 persons are working at the factory, and a number of these have been added since Feb. 1.

The output of the factory is fifty motor carriages each day, and more than a score of motor trucks. This is the greatest volume of output ever produced at the factory.

R. Crawford, president of the Sun Motor Car company, Elkhart, Ind., announces that B. J. Cline, who is conceded generally to be the oldest production man in the automobile industry in point of service, will join the Sun organization in the capacity of factory and production manager.

Mr. Cline has had an interesting career. He became identified with the industry as far back as 1898, at which time he assisted in building the first Pierce Arrow car. Following this he joined the E. R. Thomas Motor Car company of Buffalo, and later the Chalmers Motor Car company of Detroit, with whom he remained until the summer of 1913. Mr. Cline then joined the Chandler Motor Car company of Cleveland, which was just being organized at that time.

3400 r. p. m. Chalmers Means Gallant Going Over All Kinds of Roads

The swift, silent breathing of the unique engine of the new 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers is faster than that of any other car on the road.

Without gasp or throb, this weird, aluminum-lunged beast inhales a mist of gasoline through the tiny nostril in its carburetor so rapidly that it can spin its motor at the supreme velocity of 3400 revolutions per minute.

High engine speed in a racer means just one thing—track-burning car speed.

But the high-speed engine of the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers means automobile attributes not measured in mere speed alone.

It means the whole gamut of performance most desired by men and women who demand more from a car than a beltful of racing records.

Chalmers engineers have translated superlative engine speed into the composite boon of pick-up, poise, and power.

The versatility of this vehicle has won it the vigorous O. K. of every person I know for whom it has performed.

The 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers does everything a car should do. It wrings 18 miles of gallant going out of every gallon of gas, a mile a minute if you're keen for speed.

Always there is the feeling of velour beneath my accelerator foot.

This car has the liveliness of a spirited mare, with a Pullman-like stability that keeps your back-seat passengers from rattling around like peas in a pod, which happens in so many other light, fast cars.

This able Six is heavy enough and so finely poised that its four wheels stay always on the ground, with direction as straight as a bullet.

By transforming this car's superabundance of brute might into all-round performance, Chalmers engineering has saved you from $150 to $200 worth of fuel per year.

So it's a sane and sensible buy from every slant—and the smart ones whose sense of values hasn't been blunted by prosperity are dropping around with their check-books.

Announcement comes from Detroit that the Maxwell Motor company, Inc., has decided to enter the field of light delivery, using for the purpose the standard Maxwell chassis which is furnished complete, including cowl, instrument board and electrical equipment, but lacking body, which the buyer can have designed and built locally to fit his individual needs. With the car the Maxwell company furnishes a scale of dimensions which enable any body builder to fit exactly the standard arrangement for attaching this part to the frame.

Another indication of prosperity prevailing in the automobile industry is indicated in the announcement made yesterday by Vice President and Sales Manager W. E. Stalnaker of the Pathfinder company, who says that his company has been forced to keep their factory in full operation day and night. Mr. Stalnaker states that the problem of meeting prevailing conditions without operating the Pathfinder plant nights has been one they have been endeavoring to solve for some time, but finally they had to put on night shifts.

It seems to be quite the thing to break records around the big Willys-Overland plant these days. HOW VERMONT BREEDS DEER

The history of the success of the people of Vermont in restoring the white-tailed deer to that state after the species had been exterminated, and breeding it back to a high state of "efficiency," is a lesson that every other state may well study and put in practice.

In 1875 several public spirited gentlemen of Rutland became so dissatisfied with the results of deer extermination in Vermont that they patriotically determined to try to restore the species and redeem the reputation of the state. Accordingly they procured thirteen deer from the Adirondacks, imported them and set them free in the open forest seven miles from Rutland. About the same time a law was passed absolutely protecting all deer in Vermont until further notice.

For years the result was barely noticeable, in the fact that the original stock had survived, and was slowly multiplying. Later on, deer began to appear at frequent intervals, spreading all over the wooded portions of the state. Finally, after a lapse of twenty-two years, deer had become so numerous that it was decided that a part of the young male increase might each year legitimately be hunted and killed for food. Under a new law permitting the killing of bucks only, deer hunting began in 1896.

From that time down to the present, the greatest sport of Vermont has been deer hunting. The enforcement of the law protecting females has led to a continuous increase.

Presently the depredations of deer in gardens and orchards became serious, and the legislature responded with a law providing that each county should appraise damages by deer, and pay the amounts awarded out of the county treasury. This prevented the awarding of exorbitant sums as damages, and the law has been in successful operation for a number of years. The total amount paid out for deer damages each year amounts to less than $2,500 for the entire state, and the value of the venison taken each year, figured at $15 per carcass, amounts to more than $50,000. These figures are based on the records of the two years 1908-9, when 7,186 deer were killed, and $4,865 was paid as damages.

The Vermont experiment has proven a great success. The sanity of it and the business-like methods employed, remind us of the methods pursued in the great deer forests of Austria, where the herds are exactly regulated, and maintained generation after generation with decided profit to the people concerned.

With similar initiative and intelligence and resolute enforcement of law and order, the waste woodlands of the United States could be made to yield 2,000,000 killable deer each year, at an annual cost of not more than 10 per cent of the value of the annual catch. The question is, are the American people equal to such work in the utilization of the opportunities of nature?

AUTO TO EVERY EIGHT FAMILIES.

One automobile to every eight families will be the record reached by next year, according to statisticians of the motor vehicle industry. Sales in 1916 are expected to reach 1,000,000 cars.

The Brandywine river was first named the Fishkill. Brunce says that the stream was renamed by the Dutch to commemorate the loss at its mouth of a vessel loaded with brandy. Another authority says the name was given on account of a famous distillery on its banks.

UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA

Handling of the Student Loan Funds Properly Conducted; Commencement Exercises at the Farm School; University Battery Watching for Developments in Mexico.

Minneapolis, Minn., March 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—The several state papers recently had articles written in criticism of the handling of the student loan funds entrusted to the care of the business office of the University of Minnesota. The accusation is that $26,370 in funds loaned to students remain uncollected and that not sufficient effort has been made to prosecute the delinquent students. G. H. Hayes, comptroller of the university, in answer to this statement, says that $11,000 of this amount is not yet due, leaving only $15,000 uncollected. Further, it was not the intention of the university to make these loans cold-blooded business propositions. No security but the students' pledge to repay the funds within a year or two after graduation and a good recommendation from responsible men known to the university, could possibly be demanded in the cases of loans to poor students. The spirit of the board of regents has always been to allow a certain amount of leniency in the matter of collection, making it a matter of conscience with the borrower more than of profit with the university. In addition, the persons who provided the university with the funds from which these loans have been drawn intended that the money should be used as gifts to deserving students, and it was only on action by the business administration that the fund was invested so that the income alone should be used in loans. In view of these facts the university has never thought it worth while to proceed to law in the cases of delinquency, especially in consideration of the fact that many students are really in no position to pay as soon as their pledge specifies, but often settle at the most unexpected times after the money has been given up as lost. The original funds remain intact.

An army of fifty men is required to keep the university campus in running order. There are carpenters, plumbers, electricians, mechanics and painters who are busy all day long, keeping the numerous buildings in good condition, keeping the campus clean, repairing damages wrought by 5,000 students, and counteracting the natural devastating efforts of time.

In addition to the fifty men employed to keep the campus in ship shape, seventy-five tons of coal are burned daily during the winter in the immense heating plant which supplies the heat for the thirty-six buildings on the main campus. During January 2,269 tons were consumed and during February, 2,158.

Commencement exercises at the farm school will be held March 29 so that the incipient farmers may reach home in time for the spring plowing. The farm school is distinct from the agricultural college and is a lower form accommodating many men of high school age and qualifications. Their term begins late and ends early and deals with courses of more immediate importance to Minnesota farms, not so exhaustively as the college, but in a manner which tends to raise the standard of farming in the state. There will be 150 students graduated from the school this year. The commencement exercises will not be of the usual inspiring, long winded nature, but will consist of practical demonstrations of the work accomplished during the year. The girls of the class will give exhibitions in dressmaking and home planting, the men will operate the numerous machines with which they have become acquainted during the term and will deliver short discourses on butter making, first aid to injured cattle and the care thereof, with illustrations.

At a meeting of the board of regents held during the week a resolution was passed favoring a bill now in congress providing for the use of the United States army equipment by land grant colleges in their spring camps. The government requires that every college to which it has given land shall hold a military camp for at least one week just prior to graduation. It has been customary for over 1,000 cadets to attend such camps from Minnesota, but heretofore they have always had to supply their own blankets and cooking utensils. If this bill passes, however, the cadets will be provided with the finest equipment from the United States army arsenal at Fort Leavenworth. The bill was introduced by Senator Knute Nelson and has already passed the senate.

The university Battery "F" of the Minnesota National Guard is waiting watchfully for developments in Mexico. The battery is fully equipped with four field pieces, horse and camp equipment in readiness to entrain on twenty-four hours notice. At one time in the Mexican crisis about a year ago, every man had his trunk packed expecting a call, but matters quieted down until recently when the men are again expectant. Capt. Green of the United States army inspected the battery on Monday night and pronounced it excellent in tactics and equipment. His timing of the work of the field pieces was especially satisfactory.

St. Patrick's day was turned over to the engineers as engineers' day upon their claim that St. Patrick was an engineer. They have an annual parade made up of floats devised by their excessive engineering ability. There were peace ships, aeroplanes, dreadnaughts and submarines, bands, clowns, acrobats, trained and wild animals and the usual atmosphere is a circus celebration. After the parade a green tea was given in the engineering building and in the evening a dance in the university armory.

A meeting of representatives from various municipalities throughout the state will be held at the municipal reference bureau conducted by the extension department of the university to devise plans to meet the threatened suit of the Cameron Septic Tank company which claims that Minnesota cities have infringed upon its patent rights by using septic tanks similar to those upon which it has patents. This company won such a suit in Winchester, Ky., and the extension division intends to anticipate any such results in Minnesota courts.

Andrew A. Benton, '85, a graduate of the university and now practicing law in New York city, has offered to lend his vast collection of maps to the university library with little intention of ever demanding their return if proper provisions are made for their preservation. Mr. Benton has over 8,000 maps of all parts of the world. There are 1,956 maps of the United States, 1,794 maps of Europe and many of South America and the Eastern continents. The collection has been pronounced one of the best private collections in the country and will be an invaluable addition to the university's history laboratory.

President Charles Richard Van Hise of the University of Wisconsin spoke at the University of Minnesota Friday evening on "The Panama Canal With Special Reference to the Slides." President Van Hise was a part of the commission sent by the government to examine the slides which have been so persistent of late and to report possible remedies. He believes that the slides are practically at an end and thinks that they will no longer be a problem of importance. Mr. Van Hise is one of the foremost geologists of the country and is the pre-eminent authority on the ore deposits of the Lake Superior region, in Minnesota and in Michigan.

A MISSISSIPPI JEAN VALJEAN.

In the American Magazine C. A. Cain has a story of the Mississippi valley, telling of a poacher named Jerry Engle, who saved the life of a game warden in a curious way.

After a week of constant espionage the warden appeared on the river bank about two hundred yards from where Engle was fishing and silently watched him. The poacher suddenly picked up his rifle, fired, and not two feet from the warden's leg a rattlesnake twisted in its death struggle. The poacher's bullet had shattered its head and saved the life of his persecutor.

The FINE CAR and its Future

The future of the expensive motor car is the same as the future of any other fine thing. Persons of taste, able to afford the best, will never be satisfied with anything less than the best. Such families, who can afford the fine things of life, are never satisfied with any compromise. There is a satisfaction in owning an exclusive, aristocratic vehicle of the finest quality and in the best taste.

Human nature has always been the same and will not change in the future. The desire to own something better in a motor car, something more distinguished, something more remarkable, is unquestioned.

The matter of price has nothing to do with the future of the Fine Motor Car. The circle of those who are financially able to enjoy the ultra-luxurious motor car is growing larger, and this circle will always demand the best. The fact that the Locomobile is and must always be an expensive motor car is merely a measure of its merit, inasmuch as the price of any car is, or ought to be, merely a function of its cost.

Though it be expensive, the Locomobile is a great satisfaction. Because of this satisfaction, and because the Locomobile policy of limited production is and always will be strictly adhered to, its future is perfectly assured, like that of the fine home, the fine yacht, and other fine things of life.

The increase in the demand for the Locomobile can mean but one thing—a finer appreciation of the merits of the Car. The Locomobile is built with extreme conscientiousness. The production is limited to Four Cars a Day, and much individual time and attention is given to each Locomobile. There will always be a demand for a car conceived and executed in this spirit.

Timmy Finds His Friends

TIMMY GRAYTAIL stuck his head out of his hole and sniffed the air.

"Not quite so cold this morning," he said to himself. "I shouldn't wonder but what some children would come to see me today. I guess I'd better primp." So he set to work tidying his fur.

Now Timmy knew as well as anybody that this very day was Saturday. How did he know? Dear me, that is more than I can tell! But he certainly did know! You see, during the winter time, Timmy had no visitors except on Saturday and Sunday and he always knew when those days had come. Bright and early he would establish himself where he could see the first newcomer, for visitors meant nuts and popcorn and playful fun—no wonder Timmy liked Saturdays and Sundays and waited eagerly for them all through the week!

But for three weeks, now, he had had very little company. The weather had been stormy and cold, and very few folks had cared to brave the winds and visit the park. This bright morning the wind had gone to sleep and Timmy was sure he would have a jolly day.

He dressed his fur with painstaking care; he tidied his house, like the careful little homekeeper he was, and then he ran down the tree, through the bushes and over to the bench where he always found some friend. But nobody was there!

"Well, I'll not worry about that," resolved Timmy bravely, "for folks are often late. I'll play around here a while and somebody will come."

So he played around patiently for two hours—but nobody came!

"Now, that's a funny thing!" said Timmy in a puzzled voice. "Nice winter day" (he sniffed the weather to make sure). "No wind; snow on the trees just enough to look pretty—and nobody here! I think I'll go into some other part to investigate."

So he did.

And what do you suppose he found? He went over to the other side of the park, the side where a great lagoon was, and where he rarely ever went and—that great lagoon where the waves rippled and tossed the last time he was there was covered with ice! Beautiful, white, glistening ice that sparkled and shone in the sunshine! And more wonderful still, the ice was covered with skaters! All the boys and girls that usually came to the park and hundreds of others too were having the jolliest kind of a time.

And more wonderful still, the ice was covered with skaters!

Timmy was so surprised that he could only sit down on the edge of the ice and look!

He watched from the bank for a while, and then, so interested did he become, he crawled out on a log that was frozen in the ice. And there some of the skaters saw him! They skated over and talked to him, and, better still, gave him some of the goodies he had hoped for.

"This is a funny world," said Timmy as he munched at his crackerjack. "I get what I expect in a way I least expect it!"

Sunday's Dinner, and How to Prepare It

Chilled Oysters on the Half Shell
Cream Celery Sauce
Horseradish Sauce
Olives Bread Sticks
Baked Shad with Butter Sauce
Vegetables Hominy
Baked Virginia Ham
French String-Bean Salad with Pimentos
Charlotte Russe Candied Ginger
Coffee

It is almost the last call for oysters; to be sure, they will be in season all through April, but so many fresh, good things crowd the market that we prefer them.

Shad is prime now and bakes quickly; epicures think no other fish so fine. Shad-roe balls, made by mashing the roe fine with soft crumbs, beaten egg and seasoning and frying in deep fat make an appreciated garnish. They may be piled in a pyramid on each end of the fish platter. Lemon points should be included with this dish.

Select a medium-sized sugar or honey-cured ham and soak in warm water over night. In the morning scrub with a stiff brush and then stick a dozen or more whole cloves over the surface. Mix a teaspoon of cinnamon, half a teaspoon of salt and three tablespoons of honey or syrup together and pour over the ham. Cook in a covered roaster with very little water until the meat comes free from the bone. This may be prepared the day before it is needed and reheated.

The vegetables at this dinner should include candied sweet potatoes. Use cold boiled ones; cut in slices a quarter of an inch thick. Dip in melted butter and sprinkle with light brown sugar and bake in oven until a rich brown.

French bean salad is made from a small canned string-bean packed especially for this use. Drain the liquid from them and chill. When making the salad use individual plates; first put crisp watercress on, then dip each string-bean into French salad dressing and pile on the cress log cabin shape.

Use canned pimentos or olives stuffed with pimentos and cut crosswise for ornament. On each plate put a small ball of cream cheese. Serve cheese wafers and gherkins with this salad.

Candied or Canton ginger is always an excellent sweet to pass at the end of a heavy dinner. You may buy it from the confectioner or grocer in fancy tins. It does not deteriorate with keeping after it is opened and a small box will last some time.

Questions and Answers.

Please print again the proportion of olive oil and lemon juice you recommend for reducing or building up flesh.—Stout One.

Reply—To reduce use one tablespoon of olive oil with two spoons of lemon juice. Take this twice a day. To build flesh use two tablespoons of the olive oil and one of the lemon. This may be used on fresh salads if you cannot take it as medicine.

What is meant by steamed pudding?—M. W.

Reply—These puddings are cooked by steam. The cooking must be continuous, that is, the water must be kept boiling, and if it needs replenishing add water that is boiling. The pudding is put into a bag or a mold and placed in a steamer. If this is not available use a tightly covered sauce pan, but the mold holding the pudding must have something beneath it to allow passage of water between it and the bottom of the pan. If you have not a trivet use a few nails or an iron stand or a metal ring.

Will Sing Here After Seven Years' Study Abroad

WALTER LEON.

An announcement of special interest to Duluthians, is the news that Walter Leon will appear in recital Tuesday night, April 11, at the First Methodist church. This will be the first time that Mr. Leon will have been heard in his own city since his return from seven years of unusual preparation and operatic work abroad. Having prepared under the best masters in Berlin, Paris and Italy, all of whom predicted a brilliant future for him, he had just made an effective entry into grand opera in both Italy and England, when war was declared and the famous Moody Manners Opera company, in which he was singing leading roles, was disbanded.

Mr. Leon has permanently located in Minneapolis where he has been well received. He has one of best church positions in Minneapolis, and is in demand for solo work.

Peggy Peabody's Observations

Music at Dinners

Music hath charms we know. But whether it is desirable under all conditions and circumstances is a matter which is being given attention in some quarters at present.

Is the custom of serving music with meals, which is common to almost all first-class hotels and restaurants nowadays, a beneficial one from the standpoint of digestion? Some physicians say no. I cannot say that my digestion has been impaired through the hearing of music at meal time or that of anyone who has suffered any physical ill from that source, though I have heard several people say that a continuous musical program at the dinner hour is a positive torture to them, mentally.

They cannot hear themselves talk or the conversation of those with whom they are dining without making an effort that becomes a serious tax upon a person's strength, if continued throughout the dinner. They cannot collect their thoughts or concentrate their minds upon one subject very long at a time when a hotel orchestra is playing a melody of popular airs, some good, bad and indifferent. They find it very wearying and claim that they are actually made mentally and physically tired by listening to the strains accompanied by the din made of chatter, laughter and the clinking of silver and china that are part and parcel of a public dining room.

In this I readily agree. I have lately noticed that the lull between numbers is a positive relief. During the time the orchestra is not playing one may converse with one's companion with ease and have no difficulty in keeping the topic of conversation in mind, which sometimes gets away from one when it is being distracted by music and the confusion that seems to reign supreme when the musicians are pouring forth their notes and the guests and waiters trying to make themselves heard above the uproar.

It seems to me that pleasant conversation, conversation that provokes laughter, is better for the diner than listening to the airs of an orchestra in a hotel dining room. It should, if the statement of several physicians are worthy of consideration, promote digestion. Music, they say, is apt to upset the nerves and digestion by sending the blood to the brain when it is needed in the stomach to help in the work of digestion.

SIDE TALKS

By RUTH CAMERON

Does It Pay?

DOES it pay, in a material way I mean, in dollars and cents and material advantage, to be honest and square?

How often one hears people answer that in the negative, with the cheap cynicism which thinks it's clever to see no good in human nature.

We all know that it pays in something bigger and more real than even dollars and cents. But take the material side of the proposition. I'm not so sure that it doesn't pay in the long run. Are you?

We were speaking the other day of buying a piece of furniture. Someone mentioned having seen some good-looking pieces at a certain store. "Yes," said the buyer doubtfully, "but I think I'll go to X——'s. We may have to pay a little more, but they're so square, they stand back of anything they sell. I'd feel safer there."

Did it pay that shop to stand back of what it sold or not?

Honesty Is the Best Policy.

Judging from that and similar testimony that I have heard, I should say it did.

And I think it pays individuals just as surely to have their names stand for square dealing.

I once had dealings with a woman who handled a real estate business with an intelligence office on the side. I applied to her for a maid, telling her just the number in the family and what I could pay. The three maids she sent me had all been told by her that I would pay more and that there was a smaller number in the family. It was plainly her policy to do anything to get the business.

Later I was asked by a friend what agent she had best employ in buying a house. I thought of this woman, but remembering my experience with her, did not feel that I could recommend her. I did not feel that she would be dependable. So my friend went elsewhere and what the woman gained by placing a maid was as nothing to what the sale of the house my friend ultimately bought would have netted her.

It Paid Her to be Financially Scrupulous.

A woman told me this experience once: "I've just had something happen to me that has made mefeel that it's worth while to try to be square. There was a time when I was on the verge of doubting it. I've always paid my bills and been ultra-scrupulous about obligations of any sort, and sometimes when I've seen people who didn't, and found how well they got along, I wondered——. But yesterday I had a letter from a woman, telling me that she had suggested my name to a friend of hers as one who might like to join in a co-operative housekeeping plan. It is just the kind of thing I've always wanted to do and it would help me out this winter, but what pleased me most was what she said in the letter. Here it is: 'I told Mrs. R—— that I couldn't promise that you'd get along together, but one thing I could promise, and that was that you would be absolutely scrupulous about all financial obligations.' This thing couldn't have come my way if she hadn't known I was square. It makes me feel that after all people do notice and care."

Such Appreciation Warms the Cockles of One's Heart.

It is a pleasant feeling, isn't it, the kind that makes your heart grow warmer within you and the sunshine look brighter.

Things like this do not very often come to the surface, but I think there are more of them under the surface than most of us realize.

Courage, comrade, you who are bravely trying to keep your bills paid and all your dealings square—you cannot fail to win respect and that respect may even now be bearing fruit that shall be valuable to you.

Miss Parlow's Playing Declared to Have Charm and Breadth

KATHLEEN PARLOW.

"Masculine breadth and feminine charm" form a combination of attributes which more than one critic has found in the playing of Kathleen Parlow, who will appear at the Lyceum Saturday night, and which, they insist, distinguish her from all other woman violinists.

The last important occasion on which the phrase was used, was in London in February, when Miss Parlow played with the London Philharmonic orchestra under Conductor Mengelberg and scored a success nothing short of sensational. The Daily Star critic declared that "no violinist of either sex has made a deeper impression in London this season." "Admirable assurance" and "masterful technique" were traits which the London Times critic noted at the same concert; while the Standard praised particularly Miss Parlow's "remarkable vigor and breadth of style."

A striking feature of the young violinist's past season from the standpoint of financial and artistic success was her tour of Holland. It embraced the most important cities, and aroused much enthusiasm. At The Hague, the favor with which she was received was especially marked, as the following appreciation from the Nieuwe Courant will attest:

"After some years' absence, Kathleen Parlow comes back to us, a young woman, with hair up, and skirts lengthened. There is something symbolic in this exterior, for the talented Canadian has also ripened in her art. The external prodigy has given place to the inner mystery; conscious knowledge and original interpretation have taken the place of blind effort and subservience to rules. She has passed the transitional stage in brilliant fashion, and is now fulfilling the oft-repeated promises of a rich and splendid future."

Miss Parlow is touring America under the management of Loudon Charlton of New York.

Famous Chicago Astronomer Will Lecture at M. E. Church

"Through the clear atmosphere of Duluth, one must be attracted by the brilliance of the stars and the constellations that inhabit the heavens. One wonders what they are; how far away they may be, and whether people are promenading upon them, as they do upon our own earth," says Dr. Forest Ray Moulton, who will answer some of these perplexing questions in a lecture and by beautiful lantern slides that are photographs of the stars, Monday night, March 27, at the First Methodist church under the auspices of the Association of Collegiate Alumnae. He is among the scientific men who, it is said, can make clear to all, in simple and attractive language, that which involves a multitude of complexities.

"A master in celestial mechanics," is the expression of a great geologist when writing about Dr. Moulton. Dr. Moulton is professor of astronomy at the University of Chicago. He has had an almost meteoric rise. Today his works appear in the most important mathematical and astronomical journals and in the publications of the Carnegie institute. His textbook of astronomy is used by many high school and college students of the country. He has been signally honored by membership in a number of leading societies, including the Circolo Matematico di Palermo of Italy.

At the University of Chicago, Dr. Moulton is said to be very popular among the students. They like to hear his lectures, enjoy his unassuming attitude toward them and appreciate the privilege of studying under him. He is said to be one of the two men who have presented to the world a hypothesis relative to the origin of the solar system and the evolution of the earth. Dr. T. C. Chamberlain of the geological department of the same university conceived the hypothesis, and Dr. Moulton solved for him the many difficult and extremely complex mathematical problems. He also contributed important suggestions. When the hypothesis was presented to the scientific men of the day, as one to replace the well-known Laplacian or nebular hypothesis, an epoch in scientific progress had been marked.

Through the enthusiasm and generosity of one of its citizens, Duluth is to have an observatory. Dr. Moulton's lecture is expected to afford an excellent introduction to the study of the stars and planets.

Schubert, Tschaikowsky and Wagner on Orchestra Program

Another of the brilliant works of Franz Peter Schubert, whose "Unfinished Symphony" was presented at the first twilight concert by the Duluth orchestra, will be given tomorrow in his overture to "Rosamunde."

The overture has rather an interesting history, due to the fact that it was written for another work with another title, and only through a mistake on the part of its publishers has the present work been known as "Rosamunde." A work which was composed by Schubert for his operetta, "Alfonso and Estrella," was adopted as the real overture to "Rosamunde," although the overture to be played tomorrow is the one that has received the credit. It was written in 1825 for a melodrama called "The Magic Harp," the drama itself proving a failure, but the music was highly praised, and especially the overture, which has since been a favorite concert number.

The "Lohengrin" number, probably the most popular of Wagner's works, comprises excerpts from the opera, with all the brilliant technical orchestral arrangement of which Wagner was a master. It was Wagner who attempted to make music speak a definite language, his whole aim and desire being to make the drama impressive and intelligible, and for this he relied upon the orchestra as much as he did upon the singers, with the result that he became the greatest master of orchestration in the annals of the art. To appreciate Wagner's music, it should be heard with all the instrumental effects as it was written, which combines many turns in skillful orchestration which other composers have not dared to attempt, and which still leave Wagner pre-eminent in that particular field.

A brilliant number, which has been heard in Duluth only on one occasion, and that when given by the St. Paul Symphony orchestra a few years ago, is Tschaikowsky's "Marche Slav," which was written by the noted Russian composer for a concert for the benefit of the soldiers wounded in the war between Serbia and Turkey in 1876. This great number is impressive and powerful in its conception, and introduces in a triumphant peal the Russian national hymn played with the full strength of the orchestra, with the brasses predominating.

The program will, as usual, contain numbers of lighter colors, which have generally proved popular with the concert patrons, while an additional pleasing feature will be a French horn solo by Charles Tryner.

Following is the program:

Overture to "Rosamunde".....Schubert
Selection from "Lohengrin"....Wagner
Solo for French horn—Selected..... Charles Tryner.
"Woodland Whispers" .....Czibulka
Serenade .....Titl
French horn, Charles Tryner; flute, Victor Wurms.
Andante Cantabile .....Tschaikowsky
"Lost Happiness," for string orchestra ....Gillet
"Marche Slav" .....Tschaikowsky

An originator of ballroom and solo dances.

Prominent society woman who has had both amateur and professional stage experience.

Was formerly on the stage and took part in the "big" play of the Drama league last year.

Popular musician who was on the Scandinavian program of the Duluth orchestra.

Active in social welfare work.

Silhouettes have returned to favor again after many years, and though their popularity may never reach the height enjoyed in the middle of the last century, there is a possibility that women with clear-cut profiles will be champions of the fad.

In recent years practically all silhouette pictures were made at carnivals and those who posed for them did so in a spirit of fun, but now such portraits are taking the place of the art photographs.

When will the fad reach Duluth? No one knows that but the accompanying pictures show what would be the result if several well-known Duluth women were to have silhouettes made. They haven't done so, but it may not be long before they and many others pose between a strong light and a white screen, and the camera does the rest.

A fore runner of the present fad was an exhibit of silhouettes that was held in New York several years ago by A. S. Verney, whose collection was a large part of the pictures that were made in this country between 1339 and 1849 by August Edouart, the most famous silhouettist of his day.

Famous Silhouettes.

Edouart, who was a Bonapartist, went to England when Napoleon was banished to St. Helena. In England he made silhouettes of Dickens, Thackeray, Scott and others equally prominent. From England he came to the United States and, as he traveled much, he made silhouettes of prominent persons in both the North and South. In the ten years he was in this country he made more than 3,000 of these outline likenesses that included presidents, financial magnates, statesmen, children and even the retainers of old Southern families. Most of them were single subjects, but some were groups or "conversation pictures." The spindle legged tables and chairs in the group pictures lent themselves artistically to the outline style.

As Edouart made duplicates of all the pictures and pasted them in portfolios, he had a collection of about 3,000 when he left America in 1849. His ship was wrecked off the coast of Guernsey, but he and most of his silhouettes were saved. He was cared for by a family named Lukis, and when he went to Paris he gave his portfolios to Miss Frederika Lukis. For years they were in the Lukis attic, before they came into the possession of a Mrs. Jackson from whom they were obtained by Mr. Verney, who showed the valuable collection in New York only a few years ago. Edouart never practiced his art after he was shipwrecked. He died in Paris in 1861.

Ancient "Shadowgraphy."

Cleanthes of Corinth, Crates of Sicyon and Philocles of Egypt practiced "shadowgraphy," or "skiography," as it was called, and were probably the first to make profiles in silhouette.

The earliest silhouettes in the western world were cut out of white paper and pasted on a background of black wood, silk or velvet. Later they were painted in black on white paper or plaster of Paris. A still later form was the one with which we are familiar, black figures on a white or delicately-tinted background.

The name "silhouette" is from Etienne de Silhouette, minister of finance to Louis XV. At the end of an expensive war he instituted an economical system that was decidedly unpopular with the extravagant nobility who pretended to acquiesce by wearing short coats, using wooden snuff boxes and carrying tin swords. The artists carried on the joke by making portraits in outline only and selling them for a few francs. All economies were referred to as "a la Silhouette" and the minister became so unpopular that he resigned. The term of derision fell into disuse, except for outline portraits.

Activities of Week in Women's Clubs and Musical Circles

Federation of Mothers' Clubs Proposed.---Free Lecture on Educational Survey.---Value of Women's Clubs.

THE invitation which the Woodland Mothers' club extended to the other mothers' clubs of the city to join them for a city federation, and the bringing to Duluth of an educational survey expert by the Woman's council are two noteworthy activities in club circles during the week.

The Woodland Mothers' club members think that co-operation will help each club and will make it possible to promote movements of general interest. The matter came up at the monthly meeting that was held Thursday.

The Woman's council, always interested in the general welfare of the city, has arranged for a free lecture at the Commercial club Tuesday night, when C. A. Prosser of the Dunwoody Industrial Institute of Minneapolis will tell "What an Educational Survey Means." To quote the circular sent out by the council:

"It is the desire of the Woman's Council of Duluth to bring about a survey of the educational activities of our city, to the end that everyone may know the strength and weakness of what is now being done, and so eventually make our educational system as good as it can be made."

Value of Women's Clubs.

The suggestion for a Federation and the bringing to the city of an educational expert, coming within a week uphold Ada Patterson, who, writing of women's clubs in all parts of the country, says in the San Antonio Light:

"Well conducted women's clubs are beneficent germs in any community. They widen women's interests. They teach them humanity. They train them in the duties of citizenship. You doubt it? Let me recite some of the recent activities of women's clubs. I choose at random instances of what clubs (women's clubs) have recently done in cities remote from each other, extending a chain of good works reaching from one coast in America to the other.

"At Dallas, Texas, the clubwomen have combined to establish head quarters where employment will be given to the mothers of small children, mothers who have been deserted or their husbands are dead. The clubs are projecting a plan to extend this work into an industrial home of forty-two rooms.

The club women of Kansas City are urging a reformatory of delinquent women. They are going shrewdly about it, for they are circularizing the candidates for municipal offices and are receiving their replies. Those replies will be published.

The women's clubs of North Carolina started the first state-wide movement for a celebration of the Shakespeare Tercentenary.

Club women have been the most active factors in abolishing the smoke nuisance in all cities, according to the report of the former smoke inspector of Chicago, Osborn Monnett. Women, alive always to the menace to health, and agreeing with prominent physicians that smoke kills more persons than does any one single disease, have been persistent in their demands for its abatement, and they have succeeded. "The women of America are the leaders of the movement to abolish the smoke nuisance," Mr. Monnett reports. Aside from their intelligent recognition of the peril that inheres in smoke, women, who are natural economists, have discovered that the damage to household articles by smoke is about $60 a year for each family. With managerial wisdom they have determined to stop the leak.

"The clubwomen of Quitman, Ga., have prevailed upon the city council to beautify the city's twenty-one parks and have set the example by contributing shrubs and rose bushes to be planted in the school grounds.

Yet we hear that women have not public spirit, nor the faculty of citizenship.

Mother of Maud Adams Dies in Salt Lake City

Salt Lake City, March 18.—Mrs. Annie Asenath Adams Kiskadden, mother of Maud Adams, died here at 10 o'clock last night. Maud Adams, who cancelled her theatrical engagements in order to be at the bedside of her dying mother, was with her. The actress engaged rooms at the hospital in which her mother was a patient here and stayed at her mother's side constantly until the end came last night. Mrs. Kiskadden was born in a log cabin near Salt Lake in 1848. She was an amateur actress while a small girl, and made her professional debut in the Salt Lake Theater Stock company in the role of Grace Otis in the "People's Lawyer," July 25, 1865. She was married to James H. Kiskadden in 1869, and on Nov. 11, 1872, her only child, Maud Adams Kiskadden was born.

Maud Adams first appeared on the stage with her mother while she was yet a baby, and during her girlhood, appeared with her mother in stock in Salt Lake and Virginia City, Nev. Subsequently Mrs. Kiskadden and her daughter appeared with road companies. In 1890 Mrs. Kiskadden and Maud Adams were with Charles Frohman's stock company at the Empire theater in New York.

Subsequently Maud Adams became the star in the J. M. Barrie plays that made her famous and Mrs. Kiskadden played important parts in various road companies. Mrs. Kiskadden retired from the stage eight years ago, and since that time has lived quietly in Salt Lake City, visited twice each year by her daughter.

Mrs. Kiskadden will be remembered by Duluthians as a member of the Willard Mack Stock company which played at the Lyceum one summer.

Many Duluth Girls Are Earning the Cost of Their Own Education

How many Duluth housewives know that anytime the cook or waitress walks out on a strike and John telephones he's bringing home very important company for dinner and wants anything "just so" that a telephone call to the High School Girls' Self Help club will bring a neat and competent waitress to the door in short order? Incidentally, the housewife is helping to further a very worthy cause. The Self Help club has between 60 and 70 members and is under the auspices of the Association of Collegiate Alumnae. It has proved to be such a success that there are many more calls than can be supplied in some lines, although now that spring is slowly approaching many girls eager to earn a little money and at the same time be out of doors, are applying for nurse maid positions after school hours, still many others in the domestic science rooms are getting actual serving experience by inviting in outsiders to "practice on" and they will be ready for calls from the most exacting hostess before they are sent out.

Work as Clerks in Stores.

The majority of the girls want extra money for the many things dear to girls' hearts, and so many, who worked in the different stores during Christmas vacation, may be found each Saturday back at the stores, thus helping to swell their sum of "pin money."

A few are tutoring children outside of school hours and many in the commercial departments are anxious and ready to work after school or on Saturdays doing different kinds of office work, but it seems that these days many "rising" or even "risen" business men seem to be "hitting the keys" themselves, and there seems to be a noticeable falling off in calls for office help.

Where special talent is shown, a vocational guidance bureau is planned to help solve some of the problems of more gifted pupils. The A. C. A. keeps a list of addresses for girls either in town or out of town who want an education and yet must work for their room and board, which gives them just the little help that an organization of this sort can give.

Average Wage.

The average wage is 15 cents an hour, or sometimes where there is daily care of children after school hours a weekly arrangement is made.

Three or four of the high school girls are absolutely self-supporting, working for their room and board, and it is generally found that these girls are of the best student type. They have to be in order to keep up.

In one case the girl's mother wanted her to stop school and get married, but the girl, wanting an education and possibly thinking it would "amount to the same thing anyway," decided to work for her room and board, with this difference—she gets regularly paid for it.

Some girls are giving music lessons after school so as to be able to keep up their music themselves. Another bright girl—an honor student, by the way—found the confusion of studying at home too much for her. Her father and mother compelled her to work irregular hours getting meals, etc. So she has preferred leaving home and working for her board and room, and finds her chances for study much better under these conditions.

So it goes through a long list of ambitious, clever young women who want to get an education and at the same time need help of one kind or another.

Club Women Hear Talk On American Writers

A miscellaneous program was given yesterday at the meeting of the department of education and home of the Twentieth Century club, that was held in the library clubroom. Mrs. J. M. Martin gave a short talk on some American women writers, mentioning some of the earlier ones and reading from their works to show their styles. It being St. Patrick's day, Mrs. George Clements sketched the life and work of the saint. This was followed by an interesting discussion. Dr. Mary Conrad gave a talk on pewter and showed of what importance it has been from early times. This talk was of such interest that it probably will be repeated at one of the club meetings. Mrs. H. L. Gage brought to the meeting some of the heirlooms of her large collection.

A committee of five was appointed yesterday to consider the department's work for next year and to present the names of officers who will be named at the last meeting, which will be held next Friday afternoon. Mrs. J. H. Crowley, the chairman, has asked that persons having earlier year books of the club, notify her.

Duluth Dancer Is Lauded in the East

The Musical Courier for this week has the following interesting article regarding the dancing career of Miss Emily Schupp of this city, who is known to the stage as Lada:

"When Lada, in her recent engagement in New York, presented, for the first time here, the wildly barbarous Polowetzer dance, from the opera 'Prince Igor,' by Borodin, she presented, not the conception of some ballet master, presented in an archaic manner, by dancers better trained to other forms of the dancing art, but the result of actual life among similar tribes (the Polowetzers, themselves, being long extinct) in the mountain fastnesses of Eastern Russia. This desire to understand thoroughly the subject of any story she has to tell, any picture she has to paint, caused the young woman to go to Hungary

New York Orchestra Cosmopolitan But Race Hatreds Are Forgotten

Absolute neutrality was the keynote of the speech delivered by Walter Damrosch, conductor of the New York Symphony orchestra, to the eighty-five members who are making the transcontinental tour, the itinerary of which includes this city on the evening of March 28.

Mr. Damrosch outlined six precepts of neutrality as follows:

"As we have about thirteen nationalities represented in this orchestra including all those now at war with each other in Europe and as we shall be together in close companionship on tour for the next three months, it may not be a mistake for me to say a few words to you regarding the advisability of following our good and great president's advice and to maintain a coherent neutrality regarding the terrible Europe war. I know that such an attitude may be difficult for some of us. Artists feel all things intensely and many of you have ties of love and traditional loyalty which bind you to your mother country. But I think your life in America has taught you, as it has me, that the real cause of this war is what we consider an unreasonable race hatred which should have no place among people of today.

Race Hatred.

"This orchestra is abundant proof that life under the beneficent and impartial institutions of a free country does away with race hatred and many race prejudices. During the many years that I have traveled throughout this country with you and through the many weeks and even months that you and I have spent in closest contact on long railroad journeys, I have never known a quarrel to arise between any members of this orchestra because of the fact that one was a Teuton and the other a Slav or a Frenchman. Life in America makes us realize that we are all human beings and that there is no inherent reason why one race should hate or despise the other. As Americans, you have had the opportunity in our orchestra to come into closer friendly contact with other Americans of different birth or racial descent and you have realized that they, too, had attained their place in this orchestra because of real ability. I know that this terrible European conflict has been an extra strain on your heretofore so harmonious relations but I know that we can continue to live together with perfect good will and friendliness if we agree to remember the following:

"First, we are all Americans, no matter where we were born.

"Second, do not let us discuss, among ourselves, as to who first started the row. It is just as easy to find fault with one side as with the other and real causes of the war, after all, reach back hundreds of years.

"Third, do not think that all the patriotism and bravery demonstrated in this war are to be found only in the country you were born. These qualities have been demonstrated with equal fervor by the people of all the nations engaged in the struggle.

"Fourth, do not think that all the culture and civilization of our time comes only from the country of your birth. There are great scientists and artists to be found in every one of the contesting countries and there are also a great number of citizens in these countries to whom their great men mean nothing and who may still be classed as barbarians.

"Fifth, let us thank God that we are Americans and that we live in a country which is today free from such terrible slaughter.

"Finally, though this war and its attendant horrors, misery and desolation will continue to occupy our minds and sympathies until the end of the struggle, I hope it will only engender in our hearts, not anger or rancor, but arouse pity and a real desire to do our share towards alleviating the awful misery which the war is causing."

---

for the intimate folk dances of the Magyars and other Slavic races, and her success in the Liszt rhapsodies and the Brahms Hungarian music indicates the thoroughness of her preparation in such national dances.

"An appraisal of Lada's concert art recently given by the music critic of the Boston Transcript may be referred to here as being apropos to the discussion of the dance now going on in the public press as the result of the visit to America of the celebrated Serge de Diaghileff Ballet Russe:

"'Lada's dancing seems a blending of the two schools of the hour, much in the fashion in which the dancers of Mr. Diaghileff's ballet unite them. There are clear signs in it of training in the five positions that make the foundation of the classic ballet, and that give to any dancer technical resource and ease. There are yet more signs of the freedom of movement, the seemingly spontaneous invention of new motions, the close response not merely to the rhythms, but to the contours of the music and the bodily and spiritual immersion in the transmitted mood or emotion that distinguish the dancing of Miss Duncan and have become the tradition of those who, after her, cultivate it. The hint of the classical ballet was clearest in Lada's dancing in the green Victorian costume—a character dance, as the old terminology would have called it. The airy grace, the flowing line, the little rhythmed steps, the whole artificial seeming of the elder dancing served it well; and to them Lada added a light and bright coquetry and a pretty vivacity of her own that were far from the complacent smirking of the old ballet.

"'On the other hand, she danced to the Valse Triste, rather in the manner of Miss Duncan, with an added invention—a curious side long motion of leg and body—and an individual imagination of her own.'"

COST OF GOVERNMENT IN WISCONSIN STATE

Below Average of United States as Whole, Says Report.

Madison, Wis., March 18.—That the cost of government in Wisconsin is not as great as in some of the other states in the Union and is below the average of the United States as a whole, was the statement of T. E. Lyons, a member of the state tax commission, in an address before the Saturday Lunch club today.

"The per capita cost of all government in Wisconsin is $17.21 as against an average of $20.73 for the entire United States; $18.43 for the state of Iowa, $19.13 for Michigan, $19.57 for Illinois, and $21.98 for Minnesota," declared Commissioner Lyons. "The census bureau further classifies the cost of government by ten main functions and gives the per capita cost for each. As some of these are relatively unimportant, this statement is confined to the expenditures for the five main functions calling for the heaviest outlay—general government, proportion of person and property, construction of highways, charities and correction and education.

"On this basis the per capita expenditure for general government is $1.77 in Wisconsin as against the average of $2.18 for the entire United States, $1.85 in Iowa, $2.09 each in Michigan and Minnesota, and $2.34 in Illinois. The per capita cost for the protection of person and property is $1.60 in Wisconsin as against an average of $1.86 for the entire United States, 96 cents in Iowa, $1.56 in Michigan, $1.93 in Minnesota and $2.65 in Illinois. In 1915 the per capita expenditure for highway purposes was $1.18 in Wisconsin as compared with an average of $1.64 throughout the United States. The per capita cost for the support of charitable and penal institutions was $1.92 in Wisconsin as against an average of $1.63 for the United States, $1.50 in Michigan, $1.52 in Illinois, $1.84 in Iowa and $2.08 in Minnesota. The per capita cost of education was 5.24 in Wisconsin as against an average of $4.37 for the entire United States, $3.45 in Iowa, $3.78 in Illinois, $5.27 in Michigan and $5.29 in Minnesota."

Benovecent who owns property in Brooklyn stated that two years ago while an employe of the Philbin mine he was struck on the head by a timber and ever since that time he has not been himself. He stated that he could not sleep and that some one was always pursuing him.

He claimed that he was in the employ of the Duluth Street Railway company for a time but quit his position and jumped a fast moving car, when he "discovered that men were after him."

A doctor pronounced Benovecent insane and he will be taken to Duluth where he will be given treatment in an endeavor to help him.

VIRGINIA LIQUOR DEALERS' MEETING

Called for Next Monday to Get Views on Saloon Reduction.

Virginia, Minn., March 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—The forty-eight retail liquor dealers will have an opportunity next Monday afternoon, at a meeting at the city hall to indorse or reject Alderman E. F. Murray's ordinance providing for the reduction of retail liquor licenses in Virginia to twenty-five after July 1, 1917. A meeting of the saloon keepers was called by Alderman Murray today.

Alderman Murray's ordinance will be placed on its third and final reading before the city council at its regular meeting next Tuesday evening. Its friends are making a hard fight to have it enacted, while there is also brisk opposition to the measure. Brewing companies are said to be divided upon it.

Found Demand for Ordinance.

Alderman Murray stated today that he had sponsored the ordinance in response to a popular demand for legislation along this line. "I have called the meeting of the liquor dealers," said Murray, "so that the council may get their opinion on this ordinance. I know that many of the saloon men favor it. Others will probably oppose it."

Talk of a referendum vote is still rife. One proposition advocated is that a referendum be taken to cut the number of licenses issued to five.

The temperature has risen over South Atlantic states, lake region, Mississippi Valley, the Southwest and Utah, and has fallen over North Atlantic states and the Northwest. Killing frost occurred at Raleigh, N. C., and light frost at Jacksonville and Tampa, Fla."

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

COURT LAUGHS REPRIMANDED

Judge Presiding in Fargo Arson Case Scores Spectator's Levity.

It Develops Law Does Not Prevent Man Burning His Own Property.

Fargo, N. D., March 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—The trial of John Wyman in district court here before Judge Cooley and jury on a charge of burning his own home in this city continues to be the leading attraction in the city, the courthouse being crowded to such an extent that bailiffs are compelled to provide chairs for women spectators back of the railing.

There have been a number of tilts between counsel, which have provoked much laughter among the spectators, Judge Cooley reproving the visitors, stated that he thought it a disgrace that the people of Fargo should "take this court as an amphitheater to which they came to see John Wyman crucified."

It develops that the laws of North Dakota does not make it a crime for a man to burn his own property as long as that property is not being inhabited by human beings and this fact was referred to by ex-Judge W. S. Lauder, counsel for the defense.

Case Not Dismissed.

Former Judge Lauder referred to this provision of the law in a motion to dismiss the case after the state rested. In his argument he contended that the information was not sufficient as it stated only that the property alleged to have been burned was a dwelling house and did not show that it was inhabited by other than the defendant. The motion to dismiss was over-ruled by Judge Charles M. Cooley of Grand Forks, who is presiding at the trial as was also a motion of the defense that the court direct for acquittal.

The defense is putting up a very stiff fight and placed on the stand a number of witnesses to testify to the "financial" character of Mr. Wyman, the counsel for Wyman succeeding in preventing the state from cross examining witnesses on anything relative to the defendant's character other than as related to financial transactions.

This was the first county road established in the northern part of Beltrami county and when completed will furnish an ideal scenic road along the river as far as the mouth of the Rainy river, and will besides be the most direct route between here and the lake.

He has another one for which he has refused an offer of $275 and says will bring $350.

GOVERNMENT WILL FENCE SULLY PARK

Only Federal Park in North Dakota Is to Be Improved.

Devils Lake, N. D., March 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—The first step of the government to improve Sully's Hill park, North Dakota's only Federal playground, will be taken early this spring when the beauty spot on the south shore of Devils lake will be circled by an eight-foot park fence at a cost of about $10,000. With no appropriation from congress, the park has remained in a wild state for twelve years, but known to tourists as a natural beauty spot, second to none in the Northwest.

Embraced in the 780 acres, which was set aside by executive proclamation on April 19, 1904, is the hill named after Sully, several little lakes, including Sweet Water lake, and plenty of rugged hills. The tract of land is heavily timbered. The north boundary of the park is a two-mile shore line on Devils lake. A mile west of the park is located Fort Totten Indian school, and but a short distance south is the famous old Indian mission, where Father Jerome Hunt has administered to the reservation inhabitants for over thirty years.

ASHLAND LICENSE CAMPAIGN WARM

Dry Advocates Claim Saloons Keep Dynamite Plant Trade Away.

Ashland, Wis., March 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—Yesterday the dry forces sent out 3,000 circulars, to Catholics as much as possible, giving excerpts from statements of Catholic priests against the saloons.

The petitions for voting on the liquor question were filed today with the city clerk, marking the beginning of a red hot election on the license question. Predictions are numerous that Ashland will go dry at the spring election, but the same predictions were made a year ago and the wets won by about 300 votes.

One of the striking arguments that the dry forces are making is in relation to the rapid and seemingly continuous expansion of the big dynamite factory just across the bay from Ashland, which has increased its force of men fully five fold since the European war started, and which is expected to further increase the number of its employes this summer by about 2,000 men.

All Go to Washburn.

The dynamite people refuse to send their work trains with employes to Ashland, for the reason that Ashland is a wet city, with over fifty saloons, while Washburn is dry, consequently, all of the 2,500 workmen are taken to Washburn for lodgings, and Ashland gets none. It is claimed by the dry forces that the addition of 2,000 more workmen this summer means that they will be taken to Bayfield and Washburn and none to Ashland, hence the election will partly be a play for the labor of the dynamite plant, none of which Ashland now gets.

WHEAT TAKES FRESH SLUMP

Market Declines With Lower Cables; No Export Trade Reported.

Flaxseed Again Turns Weak With Light Support From Crushers.

Duluth Board of Trade, March 18.—There did not appear to be any end in sight to the decline in the wheat market today, and prices sold down to the lowest basis recorded since Dec. 2 last.

The break of over 1½c around the opening was prompted by a sharp slump in Liverpool cables. Figures later weakened fractionally but a recovery of moderate proportions came about during the later trading and before the close, due mainly to short-covering on the belief that the slump at Liverpool was to be attributed largely to the rumors of peace between Turkey and the Allies, and if that news was premature, the market should rally. It was also conceded that the lower Liverpool prices represented a probable shrinkage in the ocean freight rate. Winter wheat crop conditions in this country are expected to be more of a factor next week.

In the meantime it was noted that practically no new export trade is being put through and that millers are not showing any disposition to increase their holdings in view of the uncertainty regarding market developments.

Wheat stocks in Duluth elevators showed an increase of 1,209,000 bu in the last six days, bringing them up to 19,405,000 bu. Stocks of all grains in store aggregate 24,502,000 bu, a gain of 1,617,000 bu during that period. There were no new developments regarding the rail movement to the East.

May wheat opened 1¼c off at $1.08, sold ¼c lower and closed 1¼c off in the day at $1.08⅜. July opened 1½c off at $1.09, eased off ⅝c more and closed 1⅝c down at $1.08⅞ bid.

Durum was hardly as weak as spring wheat and trading was comparatively light. May durum opened 1¾c off at $1.02 and closed 1¼c off at $1.02⅝ bid. July opened 1¼c off at $1.03½ and closed at that figure asked.

Flax Weak Again.

Operations in flaxseed were on a limited scale, and its market also sagged, being affected to a certain extent by declines in cables. No especial feature developed in the course of the day's trading. May flax opened ¼c off at $2.29½ and closed 1⅜c off at $2.28⅜. July opened unchanged at $2.29¾ and closed 1¼c off at $2.28½ asked.

At Winnipeg May flax closed 1⅞c off at $2.07 asked.

At Buenos Aires flax closed 2c off at $1.32⅜ and London unchanged at $2.67⅞.

Oats closed ¾c off at 40⅝@40⅞c for on the track; rye unchanged at 88@89c and barley 2c off at from 61c to 69c for on the track.

At Winnipeg, May oats closed ¼c off at 42⅛c.

At St. Louis, May wheat closed at $1.03⅝ and July at $1.02½ asked.

At Kansas City, May wheat closed at 99½c bid and July at 98¾c.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool—"Wheat was weak, with free export offers and talk of heavy shipments this week to the United Kingdom. Manitobas, 1s lower; winters, 1s 6d lower; Plates unchanged to 9d lower. Heavy pressure came from London. Australian and Argentine offers are disappointing, and India is not offering new wheat. Corn was very weak, with declining spot, which is 2@3d lower, and parcels is 6d lower. Argentine was weak on American news and offers are disappointing. Corn was weak there with lower export bids."

CHICAGO MARKET.

Chicago, March 18.—European hints of peace possibilities brought about fresh declines today in the wheat market here. Lower quotations from Liverpool were taken as indicating to some extent a better outlook for a cessation of hostilities notwithstanding dispatches saying that rumors of peace were regarded lightly by British traders. The fact that seizures of German ships by Brazil had not been verified failed to help the bulls. Opening prices, which ranged from ½@1½c lower, with May at $1.06½@1.07¼ and July at $1.05@1.05½, were followed by a slight rally, but then a new downturn.

Despite dry weather complaints from Texas and Oklahoma and regardless of serious crop damage reports from Illinois and other central states, the market remained depressed. Closing prices were nervous, 1c to 1½@1¾c net lower, with May at $1.06¾@1.06⅞ and July at $1.05⅞.

Corn weakened with wheat. The rush to sell was general. After opening ⅜@1⅝c down the market showed but little power to rally.

Late changes were unimportant. The market closed steady at 1c to 1½c net decline.

Oats took the same course as other cereals. Buyers appeared only after a substantial decline.

Higher prices on hogs gave firmness to provisions. Pork, however, showed a tendency to lag.

Wheat—No. 2 red, $1.09; No. 3 red, $1.05@1.07; No. 2 hard, $1.07; No. 3 hard, $1.03@1.04.

EASIER TONE IN THE COPPERS

Stocks Sell Off Slightly---Cactus Consolidated Strong Feature.

Business in mining stocks was limited at Boston today and trading was restricted to a comparatively few stocks. Averaging it up moderate declines were shown at the close.

American Zinc closed $1.50 off at $89.25; Butte & Superior 37 cents off at $92.87; Calumet & Arizona a shade off at $72.87; Copper Range 25 cents up at $64.50 ;Granby 75 cents off at $90; Greene-Cananea 25 cents up at $48.50; North Butte 25 cents up at $29.50; Osceola 75 cents up at $99.75 and Shattuck a shade up at $37.75.

Cactus Consolidated was a feature in the curb list at Boston today, closing at $2 bid. The strength was brought about through the good reports coming from the property. United Verde Extension also continued its advance, selling up 50 cents to $18.25 bid.

It is expected that the directors of the North Butte Mining company will meet next Monday to act on the dividend for this quarter. It will be payable the latter part of April. North Butte paid 50c a share, disbursing $215,000, the first quarter of this year, on Jan. 26. Stockholders look for an increase when the directors act at the forthcoming meeting.

There was further news during the week on Interstate-Callahan litigation, in the supreme court of Idaho.

A. L. Warner, resident director, is in receipt of news to the effect, first, that the court has denied the Callahan Mining company a rehearing in the case of A. L. Riley vs. Callahan Mining company, in which the Interstate-Callahan stock held by the defendant company was affected, and second, that the court has ordered distribution of such stock within sixty days, or the dissolution of Callahan Mining company with ninety days.

It will be recalled that at the annual meeting of Interstate-Callahan Mining in Duluth last summer that James Callahan insisted upon voting the undistributed Interstate-Callahan stock held by the Callahan Mining company, but John A. Percival and others declared such action illegal, upon advice of their attorney, Joseph B. Cotton, and that contention is fully sustained by the supreme court of Idaho.

Commenting upon the market situation, Skillings' Mining and Market Letter of today says: "The Duluth curb stocks contain a number of stocks which look good otherwise. These include Interstate-Callahan, Big Ledge, Marsh, Butte & Zenith City, American Manganese Manufacturing, Carnegie Lead and some others. San Antonio, Sierra and Carman are fine, all going to be heard from, though temporarily the Mexican situation is unfavorable. Cactus is strong on development of antimony on the Mammoth property, and the company reports bright prospects for large earnings at present high prices for the product."

TRADE REVIEW

New York, March 18.—Dun's Review says:

"Only by the use of superlatives can existing normal and industrial conditions be adequately described. Great as are the gains shown by bank clearings, iron output, unfilled steel tonnage and similar indices, mere statistical records no longer fully reflect a situation for which there is no precedent. In some branches and sections the volume of business has reached such vast proportions that further expansion is dependent upon increased facilities for both production and distribution. Manufacturers in steel, in textiles and in other lines are rejecting additional contracts, which they cannot handle, either because capacity is already booked far ahead, or through inability to obtain necessary raw materials. The most remarkable feature is the magnitude of the current demand, in spite of prices that would ordinarily check it, urgent requests continuing to be made for immediate deliveries of leather, footwear, dry goods and especially of steel products. Weekly bank clearings, $4,124,741,698."

STOCKS ARE IRREGULAR

Pressure Against Some of More Active Issues Has Effect.

Coal Shares Strong and Oils Also Show Marked Gains.

New York, March 18.—Irregular tendencies were indicated by the early course of prices in today's market, some substantial advances being partly offset by less material declines. Norfolk & Western was the chief feature, rising 1⅛ to 123⅛, a record quotation, in connection with rumors of an early increase in the dividend. Crucible Steel and Texas company were among the other strong issues at gains of 1 and 2 points. American Zinc fell a point and Mexican Petroleum yielded a substantial fraction, soon recovering, however, to above yesterday's high figure. Elsewhere changes were mostly unimportant, secondary quotations manifesting a lower trend.

Pressure, which was directed against some of the more active issues, particularly the war group, at the outset of the trading, continued with more or less effect to the end. American and Baldwin Locomotive and the motors and metals, as well as a few of the more obscure stocks, yielded 1 to about 3 points. These declines were partly counter-balanced by the strength of coal stocks, Norfolk & Western making a new record on its advance of 2⅝ to 124⅝. Fertilizers and distilling issues also rose appreciably, and oils were again active at marked gains. A new low quotation of 71¾ for marks excited comment in banking circles. The closing was irregular.

GETTING READY FOR OPENING OF SEASON

G. L. Douglass has returned from the East, where he has spent most of the winter. He has been agent for years for the Western Transit company, which was dissolved through the divorcement order of the interstate commerce commission, under which rail and lake lines had to dissolve partnership; but Mr. Douglass comes back as agent here for the Western Express company, which will be the company through which the New York Central lines will go after business routed by lake.

Mr. Douglass does not yet know where he will have his offices. Those in the Board of Trade building, used by the Western Transit company, occupy too much space for the needs of the new company, and as they are so arranged that they cannot be subdivided, Mr. Douglass' desire to remain there cannot be gratified and other quarters will be looked for. Just at present Mr. Douglass has a number of men at work clearing up the old offices, packing books and generally closing business, for the offices will be vacated by April 1.

The Western Express company, the new organization, has not yet incorporated, for the reason, it is claimed, its attorneys are inspecting the laws of the various states to determine which are the most advantageous for such a company.

ELECTRIC PIANO WRECKED.

Owner Objected Strongly to Its Playing at 2 A. M.

Piano playing at 2 a. m. disagreed with Ole G. Larson, 51, according to the police version of an episode at the Larson residence last night, when they answered a riot call from that section.

Larson, so the story goes, came home rather late, and after a few words with Mrs. Larson, turned his attention to the electric piano. The aforesaid piano suffered great injury as a result of his attentions, it is alleged.

The husband was taken to headquarters and booked on a charge of being drunk and disorderly. Larson attempted to tell Judge Cutting about the idiosyncracies of the family home, but the court interrupted him and entered a plea of not guilty for him.

His case will be disposed of Monday.

FAVOR AMENDING DRAINAGE BILL

From The Herald Washington Bureau.

Washington, March 18.—At a meeting of the Minnesota delegation today it was decided to support a bill amending the Volstead drainage law that will give certain counties in Northern Minnesota the bonus received from the sale of swamp lands. The interior department has ruled that the Bonus should go to the Federal government, which was not intended by Representative Volstead, who framed the law. J. L. George, county auditor for Beltrami county, and and A. N. Andrews of Bemidji represented the county authorities at the meeting.

There has been much talk about the great Cactus property. For the benefit of those not acquainted, let us advise prospective investors that the Cactus as yet does not own the Mammoth property, but has an escrowed deed in the bank subject to certain conditions, among which Mammoth shareholders will be given one share of the Cactus stock for two shares of Mammoth. As we can sell you Mammoth for 50c a share which will figure out $1.00 for Cactus, why pay others $1.75 to $2.00?

BUTTE & SUPERIOR PLANS TO INCREASE MILL'S EFFICIENCY

Large Addition to Tonnage Developed on the Lower Levels.

Clark Making Big Money From Mines He Could Not Sell.

Butte, Mont., March 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—Some extensive improvements have just been announced by the Butte & Superior company that will tend to increase the efficiency of the mill materially. Five new ball mills and five new tube mills are being installed and some additions made to the flotation process. Additional filter presses are also being put in.

A new compressor with a capacity of 5,000 cubic feet per minute has been ordered and will be added to the equipment within the next sixty days.

These improvements were ordered immediately after a conference between Managing Director Jackling and J. L. Bruce, the general manager.

In the construction work and sinking for the two new shafts, work in both raising and sinking has now begun from the 1,200 and 1,100-foot levels. The plans call for the raising from that point to the 800-foot level and sinking to the 1,600-foot level. At present the shafts are down to the 300-foot level from the surface. Operations are now proceeding at three different points and when the 800-foot level is reached by those working down from the surface, it is expected that the work below will be completed and ready to connect up.

Both the new hoists will be driven from motor generator sets. No large increase in the production of the mine will be possible before this new work on the shafts is finished.

The opening of the ore body on the 1,600-foot level is about finished, and instead of the ore petering out and showing that it does not extend to greater depth, it was found that it had enlarged and was sixteen sets wide or close to eighty feet in width. This is the same ore body that has been mined on the levels above the 1,600.

The ore runs from 18 to 20 per cent zinc or about the same as in the levels above. This means a large addition to the tonnage blocked out by the Butte & Superior.

Butte & London.

At the Butte & London the shaft is now down to the 1,400-foot level. The new pump installed at the station on the 1,360-foot level is caring for the water below that point with ease, and the work is progressing. A head has been encountered near the 1,400, but the extent of it has not been determined yet. The stringers of quartz continue to indicate a good mineralization.

The Clark Properties.

The Elm Orlu and Poser mines comprise all of the producing properties of W. A. Clark in the Butte district, and they are yielding both copper and zinc at a big profit to the owner, the zinc ore being treated at the Clark concentrator and all flotation plant in Butte, and the copper being shipped to the Washoe smelter at Anaconda. The Elm Orlu is a big producer of zinc, and Clark still owns that property because he could not sell it to the Anaconda company at the time he sold the Original and Steward copper mines several years ago. The two remaining mines, the Poser and Elm Orlu, are netting Clark fully half a million dollars a month. At the time he sold his copper properties, at a price that now looks like a song, he tried hard to include the zinc properties in the sale, and also the Butte street railway system, of which he is the chief owner. The street railway was losing money at that time, and zinc ores called for a penalty at the smelters at that time, and so the Anaconda company didn't want the zinc mines at any price.

Being unable to sell them, Clark set about to make the mines profitable. He called in the best metallurgical and engineering talent and spent about $800,000 in experimenting until a system was evolved by which it was then counted a profit could be made on five-cent spelter. But calculations went wrong, and the mill was shut down for a while. Changes were made and by the time they were completed the European war sent the price of spelter skyrocketing. Since then Mr. Clark hasn't been doing anything but make money. Zinc mining became so profitable and attractive to Mr. Clark that he brought suit against the Butte & Superior to establish his ownership to a large portion of the ore bodies on which the Butte & Superior was mining, and which, as joint owner, he had sold to the Butte & Superior some years before. The court gave him a substantial decision, and unless higher courts reverse the lower court, Clark's luck will add greatly to his accumulated wealth.

The Anaconda company, years ago, also had an opportunity to buy the Butte & Superior mines, but considered them worthless. The Butte & Superior is now the biggest individual zinc producer in the world, and the Anaconda company has within the last year entered the zinc-producing field also and is opening several of its own zinc properties. It is already turning out the highest grade of zinc, a brand which is selling at a premium over other makes. In another year the Anaconda company will be the largest producer of zinc in the world.

Barnes-King.

The report of the Barnes-King Development company for the month of February shows a falling off from the showing made by the company in December and January. The tonnage at the North Moccasin properties was only about 70 per cent of that in the former months. The grade of ore ran about the same.

The reduction in the amount mined and milled was due to weather conditions which hampered the work considerably.

The production of the North Moccasin mine in February was 3,513 tons of ore from which the estimated bullion production in gold was $32,000. At the Piegan-Gloster the ore treated amounted to 2,537 tons and from this was realized bullion to the amount of $11,800. The yield per ton of ore at the North Moccasin was $9.11 and at the Piegan-Gloster was $4.65. The total bullion yield from the two was $43,800 as against $53,000 last month.

Great interest centers in the development at the Shannon mine. The development has been carried down to the 300-foot level and the car samples taken out show an average of $18 per ton. The report made at the annual meeting on the total amount of ore taken from the Shannon up to that time gave an average of about $27 to the ton.

The contract for the construction and installation of the new aerial tram to carry the ores from the Shannon mine to the Piegan-Gloster mill has been awarded to the Bibleth company. The tram will be 13,000 feet long or about two and a half miles. Under the terms the tram must be ready for operation within 120 days or before July 1.

On account of the heavy fall of snow in the mountains around Marysville it will be difficult to make much progress during March. The roads are almost impassable and it will be some time before they can be traveled to any advantage.

The new machinery for the handling of the Shannon ores at the Gloster mill has been ordered and the management expects to have it on hand and installed by the time the tram for the transportation of the ores is complete. At the meeting of the board of directors of the company, all of the old officers were re-elected. Chas. W. Goodale will continue as president and in direct charge of the management of the company.

Takes Douglas Group.

The Anaconda Copper Mining company has taken over the ten patented mining claims known as the Douglas group in the Coeur d'Alene district, and under its option will proceed with the development of the property within the next ninety days.

Capt. D. Gay Stivers of the legal department of the company has just completed an examination of the title to the property at Wallace and he found it to be all right, and on his report the necessary steps for the transfer of the option and the recording of the lease and bond were taken. The bond and option were held by J. O. Elton and these have been formally assigned to the Anaconda company and made a matter of record at Wallace.

According to the terms of the bond, the option covers a term of three years from Dec. 16, 1915, taking it to Dec. 16, 1918.

The Anaconda company under the terms of the agreement is to start operations at the property within ninety days and is to expend not less than $500 per month in development work and improvements. It is understood, however, that on the strength of the reports on the property made by the experts of the Anaconda company, a much larger amount than this will be spent, in fact several times $500 per month.

Under the terms of the lease and bond the Anaconda company agrees to pay to the Douglas company $3 for each dry ton of ore shipped from the property during the life of the lease and bond. These payments are to apply on the purchase price of the property.

A deed to the property in consideration of payment of $256,050 is placed in escrow in the First National bank of Wallace, Idaho. According to the terms of the agreement $1,000 was paid at the time of signing, $10,000 is to be paid within nine months and $50,000 every six months thereafter for two years, the last payment of $45,050 being payable within three months after the last $50,000 payment.

In case of forfeiture, all payments are to be retained by the owner as liquidated damages.

The Douglas company is capitalized at 1,200,000 shares. The stock has been selling at from 12 to 18 cents a share, although the option price that has generally been reported on the stock was 30 cents a share. On the basis of the sale price given above, the stock valuation would be 21 1-3 cents a share.

ACTIVITY ON THE CUYUNA

Capacity of Concentrator at Rowe Pit Mine Is Doubled.

Large Ore Body Is Reported Uncovered East of Woodrow.

Brainerd, Minn., March 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Rowe pit mine has doubled the capacity of its concentrator and will soon be working full blast at the opening of navigation. A. Winsness of the Allis Chalmers company of Milwaukee, Wis., built the concentrator and now leaves for Peru where he will be engaged two years in the construction of a smelter.

Culver Adams of Deerwood has a drill in the southeast quarter of the southeast quarter of section 7, township 45, range 29, east of Woodrow, at work for C. C. Cotton of St. Paul, and it is reported that an ore body 350 feet wide has been uncovered, showing up considerable 65 per cent ore. Nothing on the entire south range equals the width of the ore boly, the average being 75 to 100 feet.

Many Drills at Work.

The Adbar Exploration company has a drill in the forty west of the Tabert shaft and located in the northeast quarter of the southwest quarter of section 22, township 45, range 30. Cuyler Adams has a drill in the southwest quarter of the southeast quarter of section 14, township 45, range 30. W. Nicolaysen of Duluth reports that the Bessemer Iron company has a drill at work near the Mahnomen and Pennington pits, being operated by H. O. Johnson of Virginia.

Property near the Rowe pit mine at Riverton on the north range known as the Hennen property has been leased to Carl M. Christensen, president of the Klondyke Iron company, and associates of Superior. It is located in the east half of the northwest quarter and the northeast quarter of the southwest quarter of section 17, township 46, range 29, and composes 120 acres. The royalty is 32 cents a ton, and considerable ore has been located resembling that of the Rowe mine adjacent. The surface is from 50 to 70 feet, thus insuring cheap mining in the shape of a stripping proposition. Associated with Joseph J. Hennen of St. Paul in leasing the property, is Edward De La Hunt of Anheim, Cal.

Drilling Reveals Ore.

Drilling is being done in the southeast quarter of section 1, township 46, range 29 east of the Croft mine of Crosby, the fee owners of the land being George H. Crosby, Joseph J. Hennen and Hans Anderson. Ore up to 65 per cent has been uncovered. Two drills have been at work since late last fall and deep drilling is being carried on.

The Ferro mine, which took over the former Duluth-Brainerd mine north of Ironton, has started mining ore. A pumping station is being cut at the Meacham mine of the Rogers, Brown Ore company, Capt. G. A. Anderson being in charge. Considerable drifting has been done and employment will soon be given to 100 men.

The Croft mine in Crosby has reached the producing stage and the force may be enlarged to 150. The Soo line is building a spur track into the Mangan Iron & Steel company property. The Duluth Diamond Drilling company is reported to have started a drill in section 35, township 45, range 28, near Clearwater lake on the south range.

Dr. Shoemaker's Funeral.

St. Cloud, Minn., March 18.—Members of the state normal board, president of state normals and the state superintendent of schools, with dozens of city superintendents from all parts of the state, attended the funeral here yesterday of Dr. Shoemaker, late president of the state normal. In deference to the wishes of Dr. Shoemaker, burial will be at Main Prairie.

RESTRICTED BY STORMS

Shortage of Cars Affects Output of Michigan Copper Mines.

Rumor That the Douglas Mine Is to Be Reopened Soon.

Houghton, Mich., March 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—An occasional snowstorm with heavy winds now and then blocks the tracks where sufficient plowing has not been done since the storm of March 6 and causes a shortage of cars so that about all the mines on the Mineral Range road are off a little from their normal on that. Besides the Torch Lake which is about to resume explorations, there are some others that are quietly looking over their physical resources and finances and will probably begin soon to seek the metal again.

Douglas.

Douglas is again receiving the attentions of Dame Rumor due to the underground visits of President T. F. Cole, Director Thomas Hoatson, and Manager W. J. Uren of the Keweenaw at the Mohawk and the Ahmeek. The rumors as to the speedy opening of this mine are very persistent.

White Pine Extension.

White Pine Extension's area was incorrectly described in the letter of two weeks ago, but the following can be taken as accurate: Section 7 except the northwestern quarter and the extreme northwestern 40 of section 18, both in 50-43; the lower half of the southeastern quarter of section 12, section 13 entire, the southeast quarter of section 14, and the northeast quarter of section 23, all in 50-44.

New Arcadian.

New Arcadian the first of the week had an accident to its compressor by the breaking of a small, but important part that will be replaced in a few days. One side of the compressor had to be shut down, so that only five drills can be operated, the drill which is seeking the old Arcadian lode for data to locate the new "hill" shaft being discontinued as with the long distance of pipe between the two shafts, 1,800 feet, almost air enough for two drills was required. The drills on the crosscut at the bottom level, the 1,250-foot, are according to indications in the formations coming into the lode. The other openings are up to the average of the rock of the mine.

New Baltic.

New Baltic's third diamond drill hole is on the same dip as the other two, but farther out on the hanging-wall side so as to cut No. 3 Conglomerate at the depth of 1,000 feet. With the depth of this hole and that of the first hole the average depth of the conglomerate can be figured, and with the known distance of the New Arcadian lode from the conglomerate the former can be quite easily located. The drill is some little distance down in the ledge and progressing very smoothly.

Torch Lake.

Torch Lake, which is owned by Thatcher Loring of Boston, is likely to a short time to resume exploration after a twelve-years' lapse, the last work having been done on a small scale in 1899-1900 by a diamond drill. The property comprises Sections 35 and 36, 56-33 and lies east of the Tecumseh mine, of the La Salle between the Laurium on the north and the northern parcel of the Osceola on the south. It extends west from the Eastern sandstone across the formations to a point a little beyond the Kearsarge lode, the two sections lying side by side east and west. F. W. Nichols, who has been agent for a long time, has been made a director.

Winona.

Winona has completed the laying of the foundations of the new shaft-rock and has began to erect the framework. Owing to the severe weather and the employing of the men on the rockhouse no work had been done on the new agitator for the Slater ferric chloride process for six weeks up to March 7. It was first thought that the option had been taken by Mohawk interests and it may be possible that these other men, the same as Mr. Paine, are favorable to the Mohawk. It is a large property of 1,880 acres and extends diagnally from its northwest corner under the Gratoit, Mohawk and Seneca, southeasterly three miles and has been only explored to the depth of 957 feet at less than one-half a mile from its extreme northern boundary. It is contiguous to the Calumet & Hecla by an ownership of 11,207 shares out of a total of 20,000.

Trimountain.

Trimountain mill, which was destroyed by fire the night of March 12, was being used to keep it in condition and not from necessity, and only two stamps out of four were being employed, one on Lake rock, which will now go to the Baltic mill, and the other on Champion rock, which will now go to the Champion mill. There is very great decay in a mill when it is not being used, in the woodwork of the jigs and tables, and that is the reason why the Atlantic mill, which is owned by the Copper Range, will not be put in modern condition to replace the Trimountain—it is too old and would require too much repair, although it could be put in condition for temporary use. No action has yet been taken in regard to rebuilding and it may not be rebuilt for some time as the other two mills, the Champion and Baltic, with the Atlantic for an emergency, can handle the rock. Manager F. W. Denton, who has been taking his annual vacation in Florida, has just returned. The two stamps can probably be put in good condition again with but little repair. Their wash was of the most up-to-date order, each stamp having twenty-six of the newest patterns of the Wilfrey table and three Hardinge conical tube regrinding mills. The loss is about $300,000 and is covered by insurance.

Houghton.

Houghton Copper is cutting out a small plat at the winze on the twelfth level, the bottom, before starting to drive a crosscut to the west vein, which is about 100 feet away. This is the vein, which at the Superior, through its very rich bunches, has yielded such high grades when it was encountered with mineralization. Both the stopes, that 200 feet from the Superior boundary and that on the eastern drift on the sixth level are affording very good grades of copper at present.

Franklin.

Franklin is in about 4,400 feet on the long crosscut over the formations of the thirty-second level and should come upon the Kearsarge lode at any time. The mine is shipping now steadily, when the cars can be had, over 1,000 tons daily, and the rich ground on the southern drift appearing quite constantly, the poorer places being of the average grade, while the rich runs are of that phenomenal richness that evokes from the Cornish miner the expressions, "Just like a jewelry casket" and "You can hang your coat anywhere." Of this drift, which is about 1,100 feet long, the 400 last feet have these runs, which average very high, and which as they have so much copper that, when a large mass is broken off along its weaker lines, it is very difficult to further break it up and it has to be blasted several times before it can be reduced into manageable pieces. It seems as though this stretch would have quite an extent, vertically, as the level above and that below are coming into it. As a "sweetener" of the yield, it will undoubtedly be very effective after it can be stoped to some degree.

Osceola.

Osceola's dividend of $4, payable April 29, to stockholders of record March 31, is exceedingly satisfactory to the numerous owners here and is what was anticipated by them. It is thought that if the price of the metal continues as high as for the three months past and the same business conditions prevail, $5 will be declared three months later.

ANACONDA BUYS ROBERT EMMET

Butte, Mont., March 18.—The Robert Emmet lodes No. 1 and 2 were sold Tuesday to the Anaconda Copper Mining company at public sale for $55,500. The Anaconda company already owned a third interest in No. 1 and a two-thirds interest in the No. 2 lode, so that the purchase price that will be paid the Butte Copper company for the balance of the two will be in the neighborhood of $30,000.

With this sale the Anaconda company becomes the sole owner of the property which consists of both the mineral and surface rights of two claims located between the Butte, Anaconda & Pacific tracks along Excelsior avenue and west of Missoula gulch and running down to below Park street.

Mr. Hauswirth, who was present, has a part interest in some additional properties owned by the Butte Copper company.

Whether there will be a distribution of the funds realized from the sale or whether it will be kept in the treasury to further develop other properties of the Butte Copper company is not certain, but it is probable that there will be a distribution of the funds to the stockholders.

CORBIN COPPER TO SELL GAMBRINUS

Butte, Mont., March 18.—It is reported semi-officially that the Anaconda Copper Mining company has practically completed negotiations for the purchase of the Gambrinus claims and holdings of the Corbin Copper company in the West Butte district and adjoining the Original and Gagnon mining properties of the Anaconda.

The sale of the Robert Emmet claims Nos. 1 and 2, in which the Anaconda company owned a half interest, has already been advertised, and the taking over of the other half interest in that which is owned by the Butte Copper company and the purchase of the Gambrinus will round out the Anaconda company's property holdings in that district.

A special meeting of the stockholders of the Corbin Copper company was held, at which the authority to sell the Gambrinus claim was voted. The claim was purchased about two years ago for $150,000, and at the time $750,000 was paid in cash and a mortgage given for the rest of it.

A report sent out from Boston is to the effect that it is not the Anaconda company that is to take over the Gambrinus, but that a new company has been formed by interests associated with the Corbin Copper company that will take over and carry forward the development of the Gambrinus claim. Work at the shaft of the company on West Copper street east of Excelsior was stopped when the funds of the Corbin company ran out.

The Corbin company still owns fifty-five claims in the Corbin mining district, and the proceeds from the sale of the Gambrinus, it is said, will place it in a position to handle that property and reduce its indebtedness.

PILOT-BUTTE AND TUOLUMNE ELECT

Butte, Mont., March 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—Meetings were held this week of the Tuolumne and Pilot Butte Mining companies in the Tuolumne office here. Directors of both companies were elected as follows:

Tuolumne directors—Ed Hickey, president; M. J. Bielenberg, vice president; John W. Pratt, second vice president; Paul A. Gow, George E. Palmer, T. E. Murray of St. Paul, and William P. Jahn of Milwaukee.

Pilot Butte directors—Ed Hickey, president; William P. Jahn, vice president; A. J. Davis, Charles R. Leonard, John J. McTatton, N. J. Bielenberg, J. W. Pratt, T. E. Murray and George A. Messer, the latter of Milwaukee.

The Tuolumne company, after hearing the president's report, discussing the advisability of absorbing some other property and electing officers, adjourned to meet again May 10.

The Pilot Butte company will hold a special meeting March 30, when the proposition of selling out to the Anaconda company will be considered.

There was discussion regarding Tuolumne buying other property for the purpose of development, but this was behind closed doors and Secretary Harrington announced there was nothing to give out for publication in this connection.

The financial statement of the Tuolumne company showed that it shipped $48,072 worth of ore during the year, but the expenses were heavy and as the ore was lean the deficit was large. This was given as $56,329.

RATES MAY BE MAINTAINED

Interstate Commerce Commission Makes Important Decision on Joint Business.

What has been looked upon as an attempt of the railroads to hamper independent lake lines for the carrying of package freight, received its quietus today, when the interstate commerce commission handed down its decision in the case wherein the Grand Trunk and other railroads attempted to cancel joint rates with the Port Huron & Duluth Steamship company between Duluth and points East. The commission disapproved, which was the decision Duluth wanted. Had the cancellation been permitted, it would have resulted in material increases in rates.

The Port Huron & Duluth line, up to the formation of the Great Lakes Transit company, which will operate on the lakes during the coming season, was the only independent lake line company coming to the Head of the Lakes, the others being controlled by the railroads.

As soon as it was found that the lake-and-rail lines had to split up, under the divorcement order of the interstate commerce commission, the cancellation attempt was made. The Duluth Commercial club's traffic commission, through its traffic secretary, G. Roy Hall, intervened and asked a suspension, which was granted. A hearing was held in Duluth before an examiner of the interstate commerce commission, some time ago, with the result given in the decision of today.

Division of Rates.

As an example of what was attempted, the flour rate from Minneapolis to New York via Port Huron and the Niagara frontier is 28 cents, divided as follows:

Minneapolis to Duluth, 5.8 cents; Duluth, via the lake, to Port Huron, 5.8; Port Huron, via the Grand Trunk railroad, to the Niagara frontier, 4; Niagara frontier to New York, 7.4. The lines east of the Niagara frontier get 9.6 for flour shipped to Buffalo via lake, and they demanded the same split on business via lake to Port Huron. To maintain the through rate, the Grand Trunk people would have to carry the flour for 1.8, or the lake line would have to do it for 3.6.

The flour rate from Duluth to Buffalo is 18 cents, divided as follows: Duluth to Port Huron, 6 cents; Port Huron to Niagara frontier, via rail, 4.2; and eastern lines, frontier to New York, 6. Had the demand of the Eastern lines for an earning of 9.6 been allowed, either the steamship company would have had to carry the stuff for 4.2 instead of 6, or the Grand Trunk would have had to do it for 2.4, or a compromise reached between them, to equalize with other routes.

CHANGES SHOWN IN MARRIAGE LAW

Madison, Wis., March 18.—A reprint of the marriage laws of Wisconsin has just been published by the state board of health for the first time, and copies are available by officials and others needing accurate knowledge of legal provisions affecting marriage. Numerous amendments have been made by recent legislatures and the edition is revised to date.

One of the restrictive amendments prohibits marriage between first cousins. Another law forbids remarriage of divorced persons until one year after the decree was issued. Any one prohibited by the laws of this state from marrying may not, under a law of 1915, contract a marriage in another state and have the union validated in this state. The physical examination law for intending grooms has been changed to make it less rigid, the present statute permitting the physician to certify freedom from venereal diseases from his personal beliefs.

JANITOR RAMBLES.

Frightens Servants When He Goes Strolling Through House.

Roscoe Cameron was janitor pro tem. in a residence at 1317 East First street, but last night, police say, he forgot about his duties as guardian of the furnace, and went strolling through the rest of the house.

Servants did not know Cameron, as he merely was filling the regular janitor's place, police explained, and they became frightened when he intruded.

A burglar call to headquarters resulted, and Jailor L. A. Root, with Patrolmen Honnold and Lading and Deputy Sheriff Allen, surrounded the house.

They caught Cameron, and he was sentenced to thirty days at the work farm today by Judge F. H. Cutting. The sentence was the maximum for first offense drunkenness, to which the prisoner pleaded guilty.

BIDDING ON BIG CONTRACTS

Building Trade Operations Expand During Last Week.

Two Important Contracts Will Be Let Within Few Days.

Operations in the building trade were on a more extended scale during the last week. Figures are being taken on some important jobs, and a number of other plans are to go out to contractors for bids during the next few days.

The contract for the Hugo Manufacturing company's factory in West Duluth will be let next week. Bids upon it are now in hand at the office of Kelly & Williams, architects. The time for the reception of bids upon the Boys' Y. M. C. A. building expires this afternoon. It is expected that the contract will be let without delay and the work proceeded with immediately. Some Duluth contractors put in bids upon the Warba, Minn., school. They are due to be opened this afternoon at Grand Rapids, Minn. Holstead & Sullivan are the architects.

An extended period of activity in home building is assured during the present season. It is estimated, for example, that thirty-five houses will be built in Waverly Park alone and an equally broad campaign is promised in other parts of the city, particularly in the steel plant districts. Six houses are now in course of erection in Waverly Park, work upon them having been pushed even during the cold snaps of January and February.

Arthur Hanford, architect, is taking figures upon a frame and stucco house for C. M. Bunn, to be built at Lakeview avenue, Waverly Park.

The Hanford Construction company is building a $4,500 frame and stucco house there at No. 128 Lowry avenue.

The upstairs of the block at 15 West First street is to be remodeled into flats for the owner, J. S. Lathers. Figures are being taken by the architect, Arthur Hanford. The same architect is preparing plans for a six-room house at Benson, Minn.

A. J. Garon is preparing to build a brick and stucco home at Twenty-fifth avenue east and Third street at an estimated cost of $6,500. Figures upon it are being taken by Shurick & Hansen, architects.

Emil J. Zauft has obtained the general contract for a house for Mrs. J. K. Williams at Fifty-eighth avenue west and Elinor street. John H. de Waard is the architect.

* * *

The Bowman Building company has prepared the plans and has been awarded the contract for a brick veneer house for Roy Kent at Waverly Park. It will cost about $6,000.

* * *

The Lowry-Smith company has obtained the contract for the tile and marble work at the new Morgan Park school. The contract for the Monarch weather stripping at the school has been obtained by Clyde Fenton.

* * *

Callan & Hopkins were awarded the contract for the heating and plumbing plant to be installed in the Norwegian Lutheran church at Eleventh avenue east and Eighth street.

* * *

A Kerner incinerator has been installed by Clyde Fenton at the home of H. H. Peyton. It is expected that these incinerators will be placed in several other modern Duluth residences during the present season.

* * *

George H. Lounsberry & Co. and Alexander Nelson, the contractors for the Steck Bros., the Swenstrom and A. Hanson buildings at Superior street and Twenty-first avenue west, are making good progress with them. Work upon each building is now up to the second story.

* * *

Mark & Hanson have obtained the contract for a frame bungalow for J. Lewis Macleod, to be built on St. Andrews street, Hunter's Park. Gilluson & Carson are the architects.

* * *

W. P. Allred, architect, is taking bids upon a four-room school building to be built at Gemmel, Koochiching county, Minn. It will contain manual training and domestic science departments, and estimated to cost from $12,000 to $14,000. The same architect will have plans out for figures next week on a similar type of school for Margie, Minn.

UNIVERSITY GRADUATE WILL SELL REAL ESTATE

A. C. OTT.

The N. J. Upham company has added A. C. Ott to its staff of salesmen.

Mr. Ott is a graduate of the Central high school and also of the academic department of the University of Minnesota, class of 1915.

While at the university he was captain of the cadet company, and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, the honorary fraternity for scholastic attainments.

NEW HOSPITAL FOR DULUTH

Plans Are Under Way for $50,000 Structure in East End.

Arrangements Will Be Made for "Twilight Sleep" Treatment.

A modern hospital of fireproof construction is proposed on a site just purchased at Thirtieth avenue east and First street.

Announcement was made today that the Lakeview Hospital corporation, about to be incorporated, is preparing to erect a structure estimated to cost up to $50,000. It will be either three or four stories in height, of reinforced concrete, brick faced, with a frontage of 100 feet on the street by a depth of 36 feet.

According to the plans now being prepared by Shurick & Hansen, architects, provision will be made for thirty beds should a three-story building be decided upon and a proportionate additional number if it is made four stories. It will contain two operating rooms and in the maternal wing, arrangements are to be made for the "twilight sleep" treatment.

A feature of the hospital is that there are to be no wards and that it will be the aim of its promoters to provide for the wealthier class of patients. The hospital charges for private rooms are to range from $75 a week down to a minimum of $15, according to present ideas.

Arrangements for the proposal are now so well advanced that it is expected the plans will be ready to go out to contractors for figures in the near future.

The Texas legislature recently passed a bill appropriating $10,000 with which to buy the land on which stood the first state capitol at Old Washington, Washington county, Texas.

WITH THE BUYERS AND SELLERS OF DULUTH REAL ESTATE

Inquiry for houses and building lots in the newer residential districts was the feature in realty circles during the present week. A substantial number of transactions were closed up and others are reported to be pending.

The N. J. Upham company sold for F. A. Johnson to a local investor a house at 1704 East Fifth street at a consideration of $6,200. A 75-foot lot at the corner of Thirtieth avenue and Second street was sold to A. A. Kerr.

The Richardson, Day & Cheadle company reported the receipt of earnest money on the sale of a 36-foot frontage on Sixth street, between Second and Third avenues east. The purchaser proposes to erect a two-story flat building on the site. That office, besides, sold four lots in Norton's Fairmont Park addition, a Norton's Acre Outlot and a five-acre tract over the Duluth Heights.

* * *

A. W. Kuehnow, president of the Gary Land company, said that prospective investors had been here during the week from Michigan and Illinois points, and that some sales had been put through in Gary-Duluth. The erection of another business block on Commonwealth avenue, Gary, is under contemplation, he averred.

The Hoopes-Kohagen company sold to J. D. Schweiger a lot on Sixth street, between Seventeenth and Eighteenth avenues east, to be improved in the building of a home. Two lots at Sixth street and Twenty-third avenue west were sold to H. T. Lundgren for improvement.

The definite assurance that a bridge will be built across Chester creek was reported by that office to have led to renewed interest in the Park Drive division. C. T. Hillstrom, who purchased a lot recently, is preparing to build a $4,000 home there near the Boulevard.

* * *

The Western Realty company advised the sale of three fifty-foot lots at Forty-second avenue west and Sixth street to the Consolidated Realty company and also of a West Duluth lot to John Erickson for immediate improvement, at a consideration of $1,000.

GOOD HOUSES EASY TO SELL

Dozen Inquiries Received for One Structure at Hunter's Park.

Much Activity Expected Between Now and "Moving Day."

"Anything in the way of a well located moderate-priced house can be disposed of this spring," said a realty operator today.

As an illustration of that he mentioned that more than a dozen live inquiries have been received during the last few days for a house just listed with him in the Hunter's Park district. For another house offered in the vicinity of the Ninth street car line the interest of homeseekers has been equally as good. Similar stories were told regarding the interest being shown in the West end and in the steel plant districts.

Negotiations concerning two parcels of central Superior street property were reported to be making progress, and it is expected that deals will be closed up within the next few days.

Agreements have been entered into covering purchase of houses in the East end and in the Normal school district. With May moving day rapidly approaching, operators are looking forward to a period of activity during the next three weeks. It is pointed out that many persons contemplating moving but who may not have succeeded in finding homes to suit them, will take a chance and serve their landlords with the usual monthly notice on April 1 anyway. This will lead to strenuous efforts in house hunting during the first three weeks of April.

As attesting that Duluth's population is being rapidly augmented, real estate men comment upon the number of inquiries being received from outside points from persons contemplating taking up their homes here within the next couple of months.

In that connection, A. W. Taussig said today that he has been in receipt of outside inquiries for houses and he has had queries from Chicago during the last few days regarding business and industrial locations here.

TEACHES LESSON FOR WIVES.

Florence Stone and Bainbridge Players Score Hit at Lyceum.

That tact and diplomacy would solve most of the problems of the wife in her relations to her spouse is the lesson set forth in "The Marriage Game," a breezy and refreshing comedy presented at the Lyceum last night by Miss Florence Stone and the Bainbridge stock company of Minneapolis. Miss Stone is a prime favorite in the Mill City, and she made just as good an impression on local theater goers.

The plot of the play is worked out on board a yacht and Miss Stone as Mrs. Oliver, an "uninvited" guest who has infinite tact with men and is therefore much sought after, teaches a lesson to several wives, all of whom have their troubles with their husbands. All of these wives see in the clever Mrs. Oliver something they lack, and each takes the lesson to heart. Mrs. Oliver, while being a woman of a doubtful reputation, has many commendable traits, and the audience likes her despite conventional reasoning.

Miss Stone was most enjoyable in the part. Louise Farnum as Mrs. Frost was well cast, while Charlie Frost, played by Kenneth Bradshaw, proved an interesting character. Marie Gale was exceptionally interesting as Rachel Upegraff in all the latest Paris styles. Florence Chase took the role of Mrs. Packard, and Joseph Hollicky played the role of Jim Packard. The other members of the cast played acceptably.

ADDRESS AND PLAY AT CATHEDRAL AUDITORIUM

The crowd that packed the Cathedral auditorium to the doors last night, both up and downstairs, heard a most interesting talk on Ireland and Irish customs and wit and saw a play, "Shaun Aroon," presented by some of the best amateur talent of the city.

The address was given by Rev. R. F. O'Brien, instructor in languages in St. Thomas college, St. Paul. He made a trip through Europe in 1914, but last night dealt particularly with that portion of his visit spent in Ireland. Father O'Brien told of the sights of Ireland, of the conditions of the people and gave some samples of their wit, which were appreciated.

The play, in which eleven characters appeared, was excellently presented and each took his or her part convincingly and in a far from amateurish manner. James Lydon took the leading role and distinguished himself. Others taking part were: Charles McDonald, William Casey, James Pratt, Vincent O'Brien, Edward Casey, Francis Hayes, Michael McGraw, Anne Baucher, May Lydon and Elizabeth Donovan.

POLICE SAY METAL THEFTS ARE STOPPED

Arrest of Tony Antonovich and Mike Berbich Effective.

Metal thefts from warehouses and ships wintering along the bay front have been stopped, police believe, with the arrest of Tony Antonovich and Mike Berbich, who were bound over in $500 bail yesterday afternoon to await grand jury action on burglary charges.

After the two were arrested, Lieut. Gustav Lahti found that they had cut lead sinkers from fishing nets owned by Capt. Fred W. Whiter, a tug man, after breaking into the latter's warehouse near the old city dock. They secured 152 pounds of lead and ruined $200 worth of nets.

Antonovich and Berbich were caught in West Duluth by Special Officer Theodore Amonson, after they had burglarized a warehouse belonging to the Northern Dredge & Dock company, which is located at Forty-first avenue west and the bay front.

Lieut. Lahti found the lead sinkers at the Northern Scrap Iron company's plant, and identified Sam Lippman, a hand bill distributer, as the man who sold the stuff. Lippman said that Moses Skarlo, pawnbroker at 925 West Michigan street, had commissioned him to make the sale.

Antonovich and Berbich roomed over Skarlo's pawnshop, and when confronted with this evidence, they confessed to stealing the lead.

WHEAT "HARVEST" IS STOPPED BY POLICE

Two wheat sweepers who have been reaping a harvest in the Garfield avenue railroad yards since fall, police believe, were caught red handed by Special Officer Martinsen yesterday afternoon.

They were Arthur Boutin, 33, and Peter Bozski, 18. The fact that their sacks were empty when the officer came upon them did not save them from arrest, but mitigated their punishment, for the charge against them was trespass instead of larceny.

Bozski, an old offender, was sentenced to serve thirty days at the work farm or pay a fine of $42.50, while Boutin will pay $17.50 or serve fifteen days.

WOMAN BURNED WHEN STOVE EXPLODES

Bemidji, Minn., March 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—When an oil stove in the kitchen of the Mayer Dairy lunch restaurant exploded, Mrs. Joe Wells was severely burned by her clothing catching fire. The flames in her clothing were extinguished by Harry Mayer, proprietor of the place, who badly burned his hands in putting out the fire. Mrs. Wells was taken to St. Anthony's hospital, where her burns are receiving treatment.

LUXURIES TO BE SHUT OUT

United Kingdom Needs Room on Ship for Necessaries of Life.

London, March 18.—A far-reaching order in council, which will totally prohibit importation into the United Kingdom of a large number of articles, which come under the general heading of luxuries, will be issued by the British government at an early date.

Among the things which will be placed under the ban will be automobiles, for private use; musical instruments, cutlery of all kinds, hardware, yarns, chinaware, fancy goods and soaps. The order will apply equally to all countries, including the British dominions and colonies. This forecast of the coming order in council was given to the Associated Press yesterday in an interview by Walter Runciman, president of the board of trade. Mr. Runciman admitted that articles in addition to those named would be placed on the list of prohibited imports, but in advance of the issuance of the order, he declined to say what they are. He agreed that the decree would have considerable effect on exports from the United States, but pointed out that it applied to all countries alike and declared it was absolutely necessary to limit the shipment of bulky luxuries in order to provide room on ships for necessaries.

"But please remember," said Mr. Runciman, "that the issuance of this order, is forced on the country—not as a matter of policy, but entirely because of a shortage in tonnage. We want exports from the United States; we want your wheat; cotton and meat, and we need other things which we cannot get if the space aboard vessels is taken up with luxuries.

"Everything possible is being done to relieve the shortage in ships. Every ship flying the British flag is now controlled by the government. Immense numbers of them have been requisitioned; others are subject to direction by way of licenses. Whether it will be necessary to requisition more vessels, I cannot say; but for my own part, I hope this will not be done."

TROLLEY SCENES IN PLAY.

Street Car Employes Arrange to Stage Original Comedy.

"A Parody on Street Car Operation," an original comedy, will feature an entertainment to be given by the employes of the Duluth Street Railway company at their clubrooms on Wednesday evening, March 22. A rehearsal of the "skit," which is said to be extremely funny, took place last evening.

The characters have not been chosen, but several of the motormen and conductors are to be "tried out." A car twenty feet long has been built for a part of the "properties."

Many of the funny things that take place during a day's work will be shown. The comedy will begin with the crew pulling out in the early morning. Taking the "early bids" to work will be the first scene. The next will be hauling the students to school. Then will come the runs in bringing downtown the early shoppers, the noon crowds, the afternoon shoppers, and the women going to club sessions. Handling the 6 o'clock evening crowds will be another scene. Then will come a scene in which the young people are being taken to the shows and parties. There will also be a trip on the "interstate" and the "owl."

It is planned to have between thirty and forty persons take part. Invitations are being extended to all street car men and their families to attend. It is expected that a large number from Superior will be present.

TO PLAN BASKET SOCIAL

Women of Grace Church Will Arrange Unique Program.

"All a Mistake," the St. Patrick's play presented by the young people of St. Clement's Catholic church at the Forester hall, Twenty-first avenue west and Third street, attracted a crowd that crowded the large auditorium last night. An address also was given by Judge Martin Hughes of Virginia.

In addition to the address and the play a number of vocal and instrumental selections were given. The young people taking part in the play were: Sylvester Hances, Charles Kremer, James Lamb, Frank Evans, Miss Mae Nolan, Miss Alice Kennedy, Miss Mayme Monaghan and Miss Jane Miller.

AVOID ALL MEAT IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Uric Acid in Meat Excites Kidneys and Irritates the Bladder.

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Weakness or Kidney-Backache.

Kidney and Bladder weakness results from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which quickly relieves bladder trouble—Advertisement.

REHEARSALS FOR CANTATA.

Choirs Unite to Give Program for Easter Week.

Rehearsals are being held regularly by the joint choirs of the Trinity English Lutheran church, Bethany, First and Elim Swedish Lutheran churches for a cantata, "Light Out of Darkness," which will be presented during Easter week. Four presentations of the sacred cantata will be made, one at each of the four churches.

Prof. A. F. Lundholm, organist and choir director of the Elim Swedish church, has charge of directing the work of the choirs. A number of good soloists will appear on the program, among them being: Mrs. E. W. Lund, Trinity church; Miss Olga Johnson, First church; Daniel Olson, Bethany church, and Alfred Anderson, Elim church. The rehearsal next Monday evening will be held at the First church, Sixth avenue east and Third street. The accompanists will be Miss Magney, pianist, and Prof. Albert Palmer, pipe organist.

MILLIONS FOR STATE ROADS

About $7,453,451 Will Be Spent for Grading and Graveling.

St. Louis County Leads in Planning Expenditures of $618,000.

Minnesota's expenditure in the cause of better roads this year will approximate $7,453,451, which will go for more than 2,000 miles of grading and more than 1,000 miles of graveling highways, according to accurate figures prepared in the office of George W. Cooley, state engineer and secretary of the Minnesota highway commission.

Mr. Cooley arrived at the figures making this remarkable showing, the best in the state's history, through the total for state aid, the amount of the county road and bridge tax levies and the amount spent last year by the townships, which he believes is a pretty accurate gauge of what the townships will expend this season.

The amount of the state apportionment was $1,500,000, made up of the state roads levy and the amount received in the motor vehicle taxation. The county tax for the road and bridge funds brought in $2,753,451, and the township figures are $3,200,000.

Of the total, about $4,000,000 will be used under the supervision of the highway commission. Besides the amount raised from taxation, Winona county is planning a bond issue of $500,000 to be spent on good roads and new bridges. St. Louis county is in the van of the better highways movement, having planned $618,000 worth of work for the year. Ramsey county will spend $120,000 and Hennepin $200,000 on county roads.

Sixty-one of the eighty-six counties in the state have sent statements to the highway commission of the amount of work they will do. This includes a total of 1,371 miles of grading and 461 of graveling. When all the returns are in, the commission expects this to be swelled to the total amount of work given above. That proper drainage will be provided is shown by the fact that 1,268 reinforced concrete culverts and 1,000 small culverts will be placed.

Attention of county, town and village officers has been directed by C. E. Nagel, deputy engineer of the state highway commission in charge of bridges, to the section of the Dunn road law, which provides that printed notice of bids on bridges shall be mailed to the highway commission at least three weeks before the contract is let.

Minnesota officials are overlooking this law and are thereby overlooking opportunities for saving money on contracts, according to Mr. Nagel. The intent of the statute was to have the lists in the highway commission's offices accessible to contractors, so that the range of bids would be wider. Since the highway commission, in many instances, is not receiving notice of contracts, its lists are not in great demand.

The fact that plans and specifications are not filed also tends to destroy the uniform character of Minnesota bridges, toward which highway enthusiasts are striving, in many cases stone or wooden bridges not in accordance with the best plans being built.

URGES CARE IN SELECTING SEED

Expert Will Spend Three Weeks in Discussing Potato Culture.

Farmers should take the greatest of care in selecting seed potatoes this season and only tubers that are true to type and free from disease should be planted, according to Prof. A. G. Tolaas, potato expert at the University farm. Prof. Tolaas is expected to take this and other suggestions to the farmers of St. Louis county during the next three weeks, when it is expected that he will appear as speaker at a number of short course institutes.

"A number of diseases," says Prof. Tolaas, "such as late blight, rot, fusarium, wilt, black-leg rot, scab and rhizoctonia may live over winter on the potatoes.

"Tubers affected with late blight rot, if planted, may rot completely in the soil or produce infected plants which serve as a source of a general field infection of late blight as soon as favorable weather conditons occur. The fusarium wilt is carried over in the tubers, forming a brown ring discoloration at the stem end. If considerable wilt was present last year, the proper thing to do is to discard all seed tubers showing the brown ring discoloration.

"Tubers affected with black-leg rot, when placed in storage, rot completely and spread the disease to healthy potatoes by coming in contact with them. The disease germs, when they come in contact with bruised areas, will immediately start rotting the tuber. On unbruised tubers a film containing the disease germs will form and dry. Bruises and cracks are favorable lodging places for this disease. If a considerable amount of this rot is present in storage, select only sound potatoes. Avoid all bruised and cracked ones. The selected tubers should be cut and treated in formaldehyde, one pint to thirty gallons of water, or in corrosive sublimate, four ounces to thirty gallons of water.

"Tubers containing scab or rhizoctonia should be avoided for seed purposes. If a large amount of either one of these diseases is present, select the cleanest tubers and treat in corrosive sublimate solution for one and one-half hours.

"Selected and treated tubers should not be planted on soil that produced diseased potatoes the year before."

—TALK TO GILIUSON—

He will put you wise to a great many things you should know in selecting a piano. Do not be deceived by misleading advertisements, offering something for nothing. Remember, it is characteristic with some firm to have a so-called piano sales, advertising big discounts, made possible only by inflating the original prices.

There are no such methods used in selling the Raudenbush piano, which is sold direct to the public (by the manufacturers) at an actual saving of at least $100. If this statement is hard to believe, call and investigate.

GREAT SQUADRON OF WARPLANES OF ALLIES BOMBARDS ZEEBRUGGE

Considerable Damage Said to Have Been Done German Base.

Submarines in North Sea Directed From This Point in Belgium.

German Seaplanes Visit Coast of Kent, Killing Nine Persons.

London, March 20.—Sixty-five allied aeroplanes today bombarded the Belgian coast town of Zeebrugge. All returned.

Zeebrugge is on the Belgian coast, twelve miles northeast of Ostend. Since the German occupation this port has become of considerable importance, particularly as a German submarine base. It is one of the principal points from which submarine operations in the North sea are directed.

The following official statement was made:

"In the early hours of today a combined force of approximately fifty British, French and Belgian aeroplanes and seaplanes, accompanied by fifteen fighting machines, attacked the German seaplane station at Zeebrugge and the aerodrome at Houttane, near Zeebrugge.

"Considerable damage appears to have been done. The machines on the average carried 200 pounds of bombs. All the machines returned safely.

"One Belgian officer is reported seriously wounded.

"All the British machines referred to were naval."

Nine Killed in England.

London, March 20.—Nine persons were killed and thirty-one injured in a raid of four German seaplanes over the east coast of Kent yesterday, it was announced officially last night. A British airman brought down one raider over the sea, the German observer being killed.

According to a dispatch from Ramsgate, the two German seaplanes, which carried out a raid on that place, were attacked by a French machine before reaching the coast. The seaplanes, however, arrived over the town and dropped a number of bombs, one of which killed one man and four children.

So far as can be ascertained, the other Ramsgate casualties total one woman and eight children slightly wounded.

BANDIT CONFESSES TO ROBBING BANK

Minneapolis, Minn., March 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—Joseph Miller, arrested here yesterday, confessed, the police say, that he is the bandit who recently held up the Camden State bank here, forced two employes into the vault and escaped with $700. Police also believe Miller, single-handed and unmasked, also held up the Security State bank of St. Paul, March 8, locked three officials in the vault and escaped with $1,500.

Danish Steamer Sunk.

London, March 20, 4:27 p. m.—The Danish steamer Skodsborg of 1,697 tons, has been sunk. Seventeen members of the crew were saved, three being lost.

CHAIRMAN TO BE SELECTED

Republican Committee to Choose Temporary Presiding Officer.

Other Matters Pertaining to National Convention Considered.

Chicago, March 20.—Selection of a temporary chairman for the Republican National convention which meets here next June was the problem faced today by the members of the Republican national committee's sub-committee on convention arrangements.

With the exception of E. C. Duncan of North Carolina, every member of the sub-committee was present when Charles D. Hilles of New York, chairman, rapped for order. Western members, it was claimed, favored an immediate selection of the temporary chairman. Ralph Williams of Oregon said:

"There will be less strife if we make the selection now than there certainly will be if the selection is put off for two months."

Franklin Murphy of New Jersey brought word of the elimination of Elihu Root of New York from the temporary chairman contest.

"Mr. Root has stated positively that he is not a candidate for the temporary chairmanship," said Mr. Murphy, "and has declared that he will not attend the convention."

Chairman Hilles declined to discuss presidential possibilities. He said he favored a uniform presidential primary law which would do away with the present state primaries, that he was preparing a statement on the subject and that an effort would be made to have the convention go on record as favoring such a measure.

The sub-committee planned a two-day session here.

Williams of Oregon favored Senator W. E. Borah of Idaho as temporary chairman. Other candidates for the temporary gavel whose names appeared in the discussion were: Senator Henry C. Lodge of Massachusetts, Former Governor Chase S. Osborn of Michigan, Governor S. A. McCall of Massachusetts and P. C. Knox of Pennsylvania.

STEVENS NOW LEADS LARSON

Friends of Duluth Candidate Still Confident of His Success.

Official Returns From Only Ten Counties Are Still Missing.

St. Paul, Minn., March 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—With official returns of only ten out of the eighty-six counties of the state missing from the presidential primary, F. C. Stevens of St. Paul still maintains a lead for fourth place in the contest for Republican delegate-at-large. Additional figures compiled today by Secretary of State Schmahl give Mr. Stevens a majority of 857 over O. J. Larson of Duluth, and 905 over James Manahan of Minneapolis.

The counties which have so far failed to make official returns to Mr. Schmahl are Aitkin, Beltrami, Cass, Chippewa, Cook, Hubbard, Itasca, Koochiching,

COUNTERFEITERS ARE ARRESTED

Complete Plant for Making of Bills Seized at Frisco.

San Francisco, Cal., March 20.—The arrest of four men, two in San Francisco and two in Seattle, Wash., and the seizure here of a complete plant for the manufacture of counterfeit $5 Federal reserve bank bills disclosed, secret service officials said today, the source of a dangerous counterfeit circulated freely along the Pacific coast.

In rooms that had been occupied by Henry Davis and Charles Crooms, who were taken into custody, were found a complete counterfeiting equipment and 100 finished imitations of the reserve bank bills. Davis, an ex-convict, aged 52, was the head of the counterfeiting ring, according to the government officers. John Ryan, alias J. E. Murphy, also said to be an ex-convict, and a man giving his name as Jim Ryan, are the Seattle prisoners.

ROUMANIA MAY JOIN THE ENTENTE ALLIES

Impression Prevails That Policy of Neutrality Will Be Abandoned.

Athens, March 20, via Paris.—The impression prevails in high political circles at Athens that Roumania shortly will abandon her policy of neutrality in favor of the Entente allies.

Should Roumania enter the war Greek officials would be placed in an embarrassing position, the force of which already is felt. Military representatives of the Entente do not disguise the fact that at present they have no need for Greece and do not desire to assume responsibility for maintenance and equipment of the Greek army, unless they are assured definitely of co-operation in the event of an allied offensive in Macedonia.

The course of the fighting at Verdun has produced a marked impression on even the most determined non-interventionists, and the Royalist press is changing its tone in regard to participation of Greece in the war. The feeling of allied diplomatists seem to be that if Greece desires to enter the war now she will have to do so on her own initiative and with no conditions with respect to territorial compensation.

MILLER WANTS 220,000 ARMY

Minnesota Congressman Approves Kahn Amendment to House Bill.

Says Original Measure Does Not Provide Sufficient Men.

From The Herald Washington Bureau.

Washington, March 20.—Representative Miller today strongly advocated the adoption of the amendment to the army bill proposed by Mr. Kahn of California to increase the peace strength of the regular army to 220,000 men.

"The bill before us does not provide for an adequate army," he said. "There is no increase in the cavalry strength, and the present operations in Mexico have demonstrated strongly the need for more mounted soldiers. We now have six regiments of field artillery, an aggregate of 144 guns. The bill proposes to double that number. Two hundred and eighty-eight guns would not be sufficient for one sector of the battle line about Verdun. We had more artillery than that Heavy Bombardment By Germans in Region of Malancourt.

Spirited Cannonading at Les Eparges During the Night.

Berlin Claims Losses to French at Vaux Are Heavy.

Berlin, March 20, via London, 4:25 p. m.—An attack made by French troops on the village of Vaux, northeast of Verdun, was repulsed with heavy losses, the war office announced today.

French Statement.

Paris, March 20, 2:40 p. m.—German forces have bombarded Malancourt and an attack made by them on the French positions at Cote de Poivre has resulted in failure, according to the announcement made by the French war office this afternoon.

There has been intermittent bombardment in the region of Vaux.

The text of the statement follows:

"To the west of the river Meuse the enemy has delivered a bombardment of considerable violence in the region south of Malancourt. East of the river, after a preparatory fire from the German artillery, the enemy delivered against our positions at Cote de Poivre a small attack which resulted in complete failure. There has been an intermittent bombardment in the region of Vaux.

"In the Woevre district the night passed quietly with the exception of a fairly spirited cannonading at Les Eparges. There has been nothing else of importance to report from the remainder of the front.

"At about 4 o'clock this morning English, French and Belgian aviators bombarded the aviation field at Houttave, to the east of Ostend. Nineteen French aviators took part in this expedition and all of them returned to their base."

ORPET IS GRANTED CHANGE OF VENUE

Case Will Come Before Different Judge in Same County.

Waukegan, Ill., March 20.—Will H. Orpet, University of Wisconsin student, accused of killing his former sweetheart, Marion Frances Lambert, was granted a change of venue today from the court of Judge C. C. Edwards of Waukegan to another judge of the same circuit.

The removal from Judge Edwards' court will not take the case away from Lake county as either Judge Charles H. Donnelly of Woodstock or Judge A. H. Frost of Rockford will be selected to preside at the trial in Waukegan.

The petition for a change of venue alleged that Judge Edwards was prejudiced against Orpet.

Decision on a motion of the defense to quash the indictment, and the setting of a date for trial will rest with the judge to whom the case is next presented.

VILLA DOUBLES EAST AND SOUTH TO AVOID FIGHTING U. S. SOLDIERS WHO ARE CLOSING IN NEW PICTURE OF BANDIT WANTED BY U. S.

GEN. FRANCISCO VILLA.

MICHIGAN MAN SLAIN IN WAR ARGUMENT

Calumet, Mich., March 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—Eugene Rizzic, aged 30, married, was shot through the heart and killed at the Franklin location last night, during a quarrel following a war argument. Two men are held for the murder.

No Cards, No Butter.

Berlin, March 20, wireless to Sayville.—The new regulations in regard to distribution of butter and potatoes went into effect today and the people of Berlin are now able to purchase these supplies only on presentation of cards.

MUST HAVE RAILROADS

Use of Mexican Roads Absolutely Necessary to American Troops.

Gen. Carranza Asks More Information Before Replying to Request.

Washington, March 20.—Gen. Carranza today replied to the American government's request for use of the Mexican railroad lines for movement of supplies to the punitive expedition, with a request for more complete information of exactly what the war department wants. Gen. Carranza's reply was sent to President Wilson. The information he asks will be furnished.

Railroad Problem Serious.

El Paso, Tex., March 20.—The railroad problem overshadowed everything here in the Mexican situation today. The reply of Gen. Carranza to the request of the United States government for permission to use the railroads was expected to reach Washington today. A refusal will embarrass the operations of the American troops while

BANDIT IN VICINITY OF NAMIQUIPA

Carranza Troops Are Advancing From South and Americans From North.

Pershing's Force Strengthened By Arrival of Thirteenth Cavalry.

Garrison at Casas Grandes Reported "Friendly But Passive."

El Paso, Tex., March 20.—Villa has doubled east and south to Namiquipa, according to a telegram received here from Gen. Gavira, at Juarez. He reports that Carranza troops are advancing from the south while the Americans are making their march from the north in an effort to close the net around the bandit.

After leaving El Valle, where he had abandoned thirty of his wounded, Villa turned directly west to San Miguel Babricora; said Gavira, who explained that he had learned the Babricora where Villa was reported yesterday was San Miguel Babricora and not the Babricora near the lake of that name, some miles further to the south on Mrs. Phoebe Hearst's ranch. San Miguel Babricora is about twenty miles west of El Valle. From that point Villa made a sudden twist and struck toward Namiquipa, forty miles south.

Declines Resistance.

San Antonio, Tex., March 20.—Francisco Villa on whose indistinct trail Gen. Pershing's cavalry are riding, still declined today to offer resistance. Gen. Funston's reports told the manner in which the expeditionary forces are operating south of Casas Grandes but offered little reason for a belief that any clash with the retreating bandits would occur today or even to-

ENTENTE ALLIES TO HOLD CONFERENCE

Commanders of Various Countries Are Gathering at French Capital.

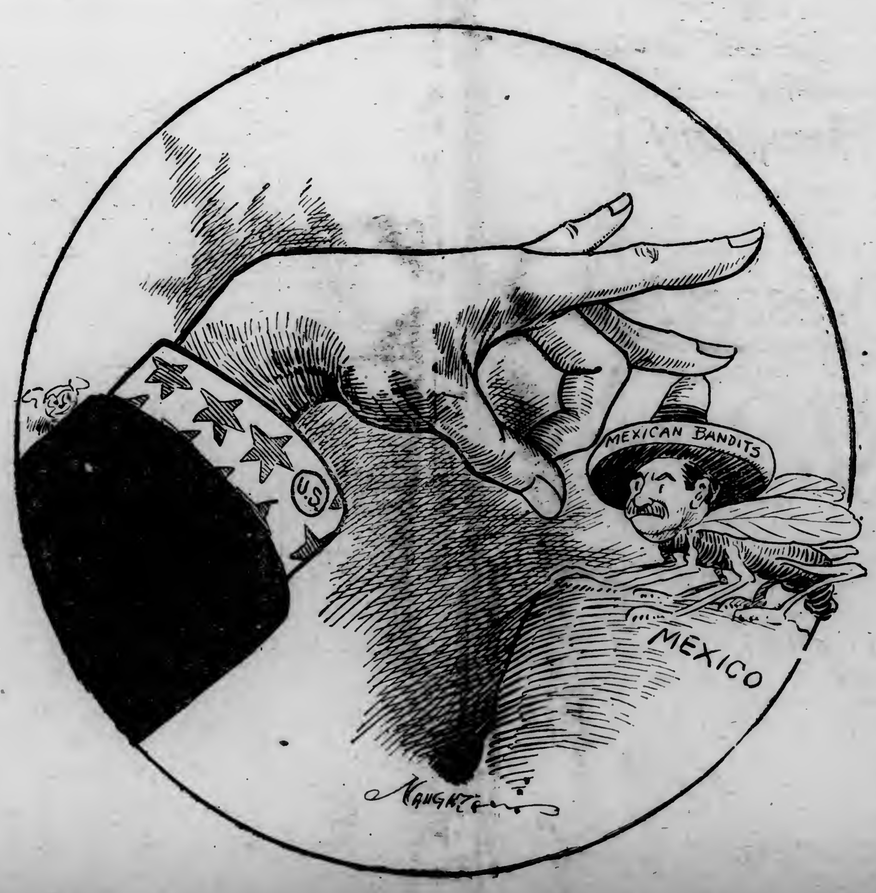
Paris, March 20.—Lieut. Gen. Count Cadorna, the Italian commander-in-chief, arrived in Paris today to take part in the military and political conference of the Entente allies. Crown Prince Alexander of Serbia is due here tomorrow with Premier Pachitch. He will be the guest of the French government.

Great Britain will be represented by Premier Asquith, several other members of the cabinet and Gen. Sir Douglas Haig, commander-in-chief of the British forces on the continent. Premier De Broqueville will attend the conference for Belgium and Gen. Gilinsky, aide de camp to Emperor Nicholas and the Russian ambassador to France, A. P. Iswolsky for Russia. Premier Briand will preside. The conference is looked upon here as of the greatest importance as it will decide the joint policies to be pursued during the next period of the year.

NORWEGIAN SHIP SENT IN AS PRIZE

London, March 20.—The arrival at Copenhagen of the Norwegian steamship Kong Inge in charge of a British prize crew of six men is reported by Reuter's Copenhagen correspondent. The Kong Inge, from Christiania, was stopped yesterday by a British submarine off Falenburg, Sweden. After the ship's papers had been examined the Kong Inge was ordered to proceed to Leith with the prize crew. Her supply of coal was insufficient, however, and she put in at Copenhagen.

SWAT 'EM EARLY.



SUMMARY OF THE WAR NEWS

A notable aerial raid was carried out early today on the German seaplane station at Zeebrugge, Belgium, and the aerodrome near there, a squadron of sixty-five allied machines—aeroplanes and seaplanes—making the attack. The British official announcement declares that considerable damage appeared to have been done by the bombs dropped. The machines carried an aggregate of about 6½ tons of these explosives, the statement indicates.

Fighting about Verdun has again slackened, according to today's Paris statement, the only infantry attack reported being an unsuccessful one by the Germans on the French positions on Pepper hill, north of the fortress. The artillery activity has been intermittent, reaching considerable violence, however, in the vicinity of Malancourt, on the west bank of the Meuse.

There is renewed activity in the Balkans, north of Saloniki, a French column having advanced from the entrenched camp and occupied villages near the Greek border which Teutonic and Bulgarian forces had entered, according to news agency advices from Saloniki.

The neutral frontier zone has not been eliminated, it appears, and the forces of the Entente and the Central powers are face to face along this part of the front.

A war conference of probable momentous importance is about to open in Paris, where military and political representatives of the Entente allies are gathering. The joint policies to be pursued by the Entente in the next period of the war will be decided upon by the conference, which will be presided over by Premier Briand of France.

Four lives were lost and several men are missing from steamers reported sunk today. Two of the vessels sent to the bottom were neutral craft—the Danish steamer Skodsborg of 1,697 tons, and the Norwegian steamer Langelie of 974 tons. Another vessel sunk was the British steamer Port Dalhousie of 1,774 tons owned in Canada.

A news agency dispatch from Rome carries a report of an unsuccessful attempt to assassinate Premier Radoslavoff of Bulgaria.

According to an Athens dispatch the impression prevails in political circles there that Roumania will shortly enter the war on the side of the Entente allies.

The uniting of all Christian churches of Duluth to handle reform problems of city-wide importance was urged today at the meeting of the ministerial association at the Y. M. C. A. by Dr. Roy B. Guild of New York, executive secretary of the Commission on Federated Movements, which has for its purpose the launching of a united organization throughout the Christian world.

Dr. Guild proposed a constructive program for all the churches, into which each sect should put best effort, backed by its most sane and modern beliefs. Social, moral, temperance, political, and other reforms were given as fields in which the churches should work unitedly, throwing aside all thought and suggestion of partisanship.

Ministers Interested.

Dr. Guild's address was listened to with marked attention by all the ministers present, and at a discussion following the speaker's departure for Superior, where he was to make another address, the movement was highly commended as presented by Dr. Guild. All those present agreed that the problems that the churches would have to deal with, could be met by any minister regardless of his belief on any question of denominationalism. Dr. Guild will speak again tonight at the First Presbyterian church, following a supper which will be served at 6:30 o'clock.

Problems of Church.

Dr. Guild discussed the problems facing the churches throughout the world in regard to the handling of missionary and reform questions, and said that the many denominations are so split up that it requires their utmost effort to maintain an existence and the most urgent needs of the various communities in reform are neglected. He spoke of the startling report on vice conditions in Minneapolis, and the reasons for the churches failing to take action. He said that he had learned from one of the leading inter-church leaders that the churches were having all they could do to take care of the work in their own communities, being split up and working through numerous denominations, and that the great problem of social reform was neglected.

"We read recently," he said, "of 250,000 people in the Turkish war zone, men, women and children, walking out of the cities into the desert—walking until they fell dead. The same conditions exist in the cities of America, only in a different form. Tens of thousands of girls are lost every year, and the prime causes are the same—greed and lust."

No one church, he said, was sufficiently strong or wealthy to meet and settle the great problems of the day. In some cases, he said, four and five churches were at work in a community where one could do the work if properly supported. Each church is given as much as can be raised, none perhaps has a regular minister, and each is "trying to beat the other church to it." With such conditions there is a great waste of money, time and energy, and the results on the community are slight if not bad.

Experience With Missions.

He told the ministers of his experience in home missions and the reasons he had for giving up the work. He said the constant strife of the denominations to get established in various fields dissipated their energies and brought forth little result for betterment of the community.

Success of Federation.

In discussing the results attained through the work of the Commission on Federated movements, he said that everywhere the public had welcomed the idea of working for a cause rather than a denomination. He said that in preaching the gospel in China, for instance, an Oriental could never understand the logic of preaching the doctrine of the Dutch Reformed Church of America in the Orient. The idea of Christianity was lost in the paraphernalia of doctrine.

He also discussed the relations of the church and press. The press of the country, he averred, was willing to give full publicity to all news matter pertaining to matters of vital importance in religion, but the news must be of "the church," and not a number of small items from various denominations, each intended to advertise a "money making" affair, such as a church supper or social. He told how an Indianapolis newspaper had worked up one of the most interesting pages in the paper by devoting it entirely to matters of religious importance to "the church," leaving out the idea of denomination entirely.

In discussing the relation of the church to merely non-religious matters, he said:

Non-religious Activity.

"The Catholic church has retained a great deal of the work it began in its early history. It has the hospital for one thing, and through this it has a hold on the community through its good works." All of the churches he said should engage in work that brings them in close touch with the people, and all of them should work together.

"Christian co-operation," he said, "has become a reality, nationally and locally. The developments have been so gradual and so natural that the mass of people are ignorant of this fact. Bitter denunciations of the divided church fill the public press and are thundered forth from pulpit and platform. True, the situation is one of which we cannot very well be proud, but a knowledge of the unifying forces now at work will give greater courage to those who pray and work for the spirit of unity in the church of Jesus Christ.

"In co-operation with the commission on state and local federations this new commission will labor for the progress of Christian efficiency through team play. Since the formation of the older commission, notable work has been done. Brief reports of this work are in the following pages. The various phases of federation work have been gathered from different cities. It must be borne in mind that each federation reporting is working along all these lines. The programs have been worked out locally, not by the federal council."

Dr. Sheldon's Successor.

Dr. Guild has been here before when acting for the Men and Religion Forward Movement. He is also widely known as taking the pastorate of the Topeka church left vacant by Dr. Sheldon, author of "In His Steps." Following Dr. Guild's resignation about a year ago to take up his present work Dr. Sheldon went back to the Topeka church.

It is thought probable that State Auditor Preus will be Mr. Eberhart's chief advisor.

PAVING BIDS ARE ILLEGAL

Proposals on East Superior Improvement Violate Charter.

All Bids May Be Rejected and New Offers Called For.

No legal bid for a class A asphalt pavement on East Superior street has been submitted by any of the contractors and a call for new proposals will be necessary, according to a written opinion handed down this noon by City Attorney Samuelson.

An oral opinion to the effect that the bid submitted by E. A. Dahl was illegal was submitted by City Attorney Samuelson at a conference of city officials last Saturday morning, but when he made an examination of the proposals preparatory to writing an opinion on the question, he found that the offer of the General Contracting company of Minneapolis also violated the provisions of the charter. This throws both bids out and indications are that Commissioner Farrell, works head, will be authorized to advertise for new bids altogether. The contractors, states the attorney, failed to include the material and company supplying same in their bids.

This morning Thomas S. Wood, one of the East Superior street owners, appeared in behalf of the Trinidad Lake asphalt, urging the commissioners to give the contract to the General Contracting company. He exhibited telegrams from several owners, who are now visiting at various winter resorts. They included: Millie Bunnell, Old Point Comfort, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. George Crosby, Pasadena, Cal.; Howard T. Abbott, Pasadena, Cal., and C. E. Mershon, Pasadena.

Mr. Wood announced that a delegation of owners would be present at the council meeting this afternoon to urge the selection of Trinidad Lake asphalt, regardless of high or low bids. The resolution introduced by Commissioner Farrell, awarding the contract to the Minneapolis company, will come up for action, but nobody at the city hall would venture to say what action will be taken. It is generally believed that all bids will be thrown out and new proposals authorized, in view of the opinion submitted by City Attorney Samuelson.

BROWN RESIGNS AGENCY OF PITTSBURGH LINE

Word comes from Cleveland that H W. Brown of Duluth has resigned his position here as agent for the Pittsburgh Steamship company, and will go to Vancouver, B. C., to engage in shipbuilding with J. W. Morcross of Toronto, Ont., and Roy M. Wolvin of Winnipeg. Mr. Brown is in Cleveland today and the only information that could be obtained of the report is that it is understood that some change is to be made. Cleveland says the report emanating from the company's office there is correct.

Mr. Brown has been agent at Duluth for eleven years. It is not known who will succeed him.

WILL REJECT APPLICANTS

No More Saloons for Western Suburbs, Says Safety Head.

Two applications for saloon licenses at New Duluth and Gary will be turned down by the city commissioners this afternoon.

Commissioner Silberstein, safety head, said this morning that he would recommend the rejection of both applications on the grounds that residents in the steel plant district are opposed to any additional saloons. There are now three in that end of the city.

The applications to come before the commissioners are from Lubratovich & Danculovich for a transfer of the former's license at 529 West Michigan street to 1313 Commonwealth avenue and from Henry C. Mason for a transfer from 1821 West Superior street to 1535 Commonwealth avenue.

The application of Lovrence Kovach for a transfer of M. Carole's license to 1½ West Superior street will be withdrawn. Joseph Remmell has applied for a transfer from the Caron saloon at 701 West Superior street to the Haley block, and this application will be granted.

The application of Richard Sheasby for a renewal of his license at 220 East Superior street, held up last week by Commissioner Silberstein, will be granted today.

FAMILY IS LEFT HOMELESS BY FIRE

Flames Destroy Residence of Guy Bellant Near Homecroft Park.

Guy Bellant, with his wife, 2-year-old daughter and baby boy, stood in the snow yesterday afternoon on the Calvary road, not far from Homecroft Park, and looked on helplessly while fire destroyed their residence.

Too far from telephones to call aid, and unable to break his way through the flames, Mr. Bellant was unable to save any of his furniture or personal belongings.

Today the members of the family are being cared for at the residence of H. C. Gallegher, a distant relative, who lives at 330 North Fifty-seventh avenue west.

Yesterday afternoon, shortly before 3 o'clock, Mr. Bellant put on his hat and coat and went out into the backyard to cut some wood. Mrs. Bellant was resting, and the baby was asleep. The little girl went with her father.

While he was away the kitchen stove became overheated, and soon the house was in flames. After rescuing his wife and baby, the father barely had time to get a few wraps for them.

There was no insurance on the furniture, which he was buying on installments. He also had been making payments on the piece of land on which the little house was situated.

Mr. Bellant is employed as a passenger brakeman.

APPROPRIATIONS MAKE NEW RECORD

U. S. Steel Corporation to Make Gigantic Expenditures This Year.

Appropriations of between $75,000,000 and $100,000,000 for new construction are reported to have been made by the United States Steel corporation for the present year. The largest previous expenditure in a single year by the Steel corporation aggregated $66,981,000, made in 1907, so that all past records will be excelled by a wide margin.

Including this year's estimates, it is computed that the United States Steel corporation will have expended 600,000,000 on new construction since its organization fifteen years ago.

Referring to capital expenditure in which Duluthians are interested, apart from the work at the Minnesota Steel company's plant, the annual report of the corporation says:

"Additions and improvements authorized by the subsidiary transportation companies include the rebuilding of ore dock No. 2, with steel superstructure, at Two Harbors, Minn., the remodeling of ore dock No. 6 and a new car repair shop at same place; at Proctor, Minn., the construction of a thirty-stall engine house, new coaling station, etc., and by the Bessemer & Lake Erie Railroad company the replacing of the Allegheny river bridge with a new double track structure. There also have been ordered by the several subsidiary railroads 70 locomotives and 4,671 cars of various kinds. The Pittsburgh Steamship company has purchased six 6,500-ton capacity ore carrying steamers and has contracted for the construction of six 12,700-ton steamers."

Will Sign Philippine Bill.

Washington, March 20.—President Wilson has told congress leaders he will sign the Philippine bill, including the Clarke amendment for independence not later than four years, despite his disapproval of some of its details. It is planned to take the measure up in the house after the army bill.

EBERHART'S VICTORY STARTS DISCUSSION REGARDING SENATORIAL SITUATION

It Makes Many Believe Him Leader, in View of Clapp's Break in Vote of Confidence in Congress; Anybody's Race Yet; President Wilson's Showing in Primary.

Every primary has its aftermath. So has every election, but the primary, as a forecaster, has it "on" the election proper, for the election finishes the matter for the time, and the country or state only awaits the actions of the men elected, to see whether or not a mistake has been made.

The leading question that follows the presidential primary of last Tuesday is: What effect will the big vote polled by Former Governor Eberhart have on the senatorial contest?

That it has advanced his stock, there is no denying. Even the strongest Clapp or Kellogg adherents cannot gainsay that.

Coupled with the fact that the former governor got by far the largest vote cast for delegate-at-large last Tuesday, running so far ahead of the others as to be away out of sight, and breaking the slate of the Cummins organization in doing it, is the false note struck by Senator Moses E. Clapp when he voted against President Wilson when the recent vote on the submarine issue was taken in congress. Of course Senator Clapp was not alone in the Minnesota delegation in this betrayal of the United States, for he had with him every other member from this state, with the exception of that level-headed patriot, Knute Nelson, who, since, has not hesitated to express his disgust and surprise at the action of the other members of congress from Minnesota.

Who Is Helped Most?

So while the popularity shown in the presidential primary vote will help Mr. Eberhart, and the action of Senator Clapp will hurt the latter, the question is: How much effect will either have, and who will be the chief beneficiary?

All kinds of views are taken of the situation, but the most popular one, so far as discussions heard would indicate, is that it gives the former governor the present point of vantage. Others point to the fact that he conducted a thorough and systematic campaign to get out a heavy vote for himself, for his entrance to the presidential primaries was really a trial heat, and say that that will discount his victory. It is a fact that he sent letters to voters promiscuously throughout the state, asking their support at last Tuesday's primary, so it would help him in the senatorship. One of his opponents at least is mean enough to charge that these letters went largely to voters having Swedish and German names.

However that may be, the fact remains that he won and won heavily. It is not improbable that his situation will be like that of McCarthy's credit, when the barkeeper shouted to the proprietor:

"Is McCarthy good for a drink?"

"Has he got it?"

"He has."

"He is."

The former governor "has got" whatever prestige attaches to a very handsome lead in the presidential primary.

Too Early for Elimination.

Early comment on the situation—for it is pretty early, when one comes to think of it—almost eliminates Mr. Clapp unless he redeems himself, and puts the contest between Eberhart and Kellogg. However, that is rather hasty, for Mr. Clapp certainly has a large following in the state, so has Mr. Eberhart, and it is supposed that Mr. Kellogg will show that he has, too. The latter must make his showing, while the two former have already done so, and have something of a basis on which to figure. And to eliminate anybody this early in a three-cornered race between well known, strong and able men, is rather crowding things and showing a disposition that does not go well with political sagacity.

It is not expected that the senatorial campaign, which will end its first lap on June 19, will really get going good before the middle of next month. It is true that Former Governor Eberhart is already at work, for his campaign for delegateship started it, and it is also true that he starts off with a considerable advantage; but eighty-four days intervene between today and June 19, and big changes have been made in twenty-four hours.

Looking at it from any angle just now, it is anybody's race, with Eberhart a foot or two in advance at the start.

William E. Lee of Long Prairie, who once upon a time thought he had a chance to be governor, has declared himself for Frank B. Kellogg in the senatorial race. Some people were foolish enough to talk about Mr. Lee entering the race himself, but on his return from Florida a few days ago, he announced in St. Paul that he would not be a candidate and would support Mr. Kellogg most heartily.

"Mr. Kellogg is by far the most desirable candidate that could be named," said Mr. Lee. "He has the ability, the honesty and the fearless independence to make him a great senator. He has been an active citizen of Minnesota all his life and a close student of every problem affecting her interests. I predict for him a leading position in the senate of the United States."

Aside from the glamor it cast over Former Governor Eberhart, the chief feature of the Tuesday primary was the strength which President Wilson showed. In St. Louis county he received far more presidential preference votes than the three men named as candidates on the Republican ticket; in fact, they, combined, mustered less than three-quarters as many votes as the president. He received more than the three combined in each of the Twin Cities and ran very strongly in the districts outside of the three cities. The vote Mr. Wilson got, despite the fact that more Republicans voted than did Democrats, does not furnish a pleasant prospect for the Republicans in the November election. A very notable fact, reported everywhere, is that thousands of Republicans asked for "Wilson tickets," and voted them.

* * *

It looks at this time as though several of the anti-Lynch men have been elected delegates to the Democratic national convention, but it will be nothing like that claimed by one of the anti-Lynch leaders, who declared that twelve of the twenty-four would be anti-Lynch. In fact the majority of the delegation will be supporters of Fred B. Lynch, and it looks as though it will take the official count to decide the case of several who are claimed by the anti-Lynch crowd.

The official canvassing board of the state must meet, by the way, according to the law, seven days after the primary.

In state politics, outside of the senatorial contest, matters are pretty quiet. Sam Iverson has not been heard of lately, and nobody knows whether he will persist in opposing Governor Burnquist for the nomination. The general feeling is, however, that whether he does or not, the governor will be nominated to succeed himself.

It is expected that Julius A. Schmahl will file for secretary of state again; and it is announced from St. Paul that the attorney general, Lyndon A. Smith, who has been talked of for the supreme bench, will likely file for his present office. The nomination for the state treasurership is generally accorded A. C. Gooding, whom Governor Burnquist appointed to the office recently, and so it goes all the way down the line.

On the Democratic side, little is being said regarding state offices. The Winona Independent has given publicity to talk of Robert W. Hargadine for the Democratic nomination for governor. Mr. Hargadine is pretty well known all over the state and has made a remarkably good record as state fire marshal, so good in fact that business interests everywhere are commending him and his men with enthusiasm. In him the state is having a real fire marshal, one who is attending strictly to his duties and accomplishing great things. Concerning him, the Winona Independent said in a recent issue:

Robert W. Hargadine, state fire marshal appointed by the late Governor Hammond, is being mentioned by his friends as a likely candidate for governor on the Democratic ticket this fall. Mr. Hargadine, they say, has shown by his handling of the state fire marshal's office that he has the stuff in him to make a good governor. Of pleasing personality and with the ability to make a good impression as a platform speaker; with a record of personal and political success back of him, they want to know what is the reason Bob Hargadine won't make a good candidate? And, to do him justice, no one up to date has produced a reason.

Mr. Hargadine is a firm and loyal supporter of President Wilson, but believes in non-partisan government in state and local affairs. He was the secretary of the Democratic state central committee in the campaign that elected Hammond, and though his activity Hammond non-partisan clubs were organized in nearly every county in Minnesota. The success of the state fire marshal's office has attracted nation-wide notice since Hargadine has been at its head. At the recent convention of the Fire Marshal's Association of North America, held in Chicago, Mr. Hargadine was elected vice president and selected as one of the five members of the executive committee. At that time he was the youngest state fire marshal present, and one of the newest appointees.

To his unpopular positions on several recent questions Congressman Miller of the Eighth district has added his vote against the president in the vote of confidence of recent date, and people in and out of his party are beginning to ask:

"What's the matter with Miller, anyway? Doesn't he want to go back to congress?"

It was suggested some time ago that perhaps Mr. Miller was so sure of Republican victory in November and of his appointment as governor-general of the Philippines, in which he has been specializing, together with that other specialty of "Japan bewaring," that he doesn't give a hoot for the Eighth any more. There may be something in it.

Mr. Miller is not the only man in the Eighth who would like to be this district's representative in congress, and he may find a real fight on his hands before long. In fact, several are already making a noise like candidates—very like indeed, though as yet faint.

In the meantime, one thing which the people of the northern part of the state, but particularly the northeastern part, are overlooking, and which is more important in an intimate way than even Mr. Miller and his fate, is the selection of candidates for state representatives. They will be chosen in June for ultimate selection in November, and it is important that the best men obtainable should be urged to come out. Too many things are at stake in every term of the legislature to trust to weaklings, and so far nobody seems to have taken a thought as to who to put up. The time between now and the primaries is too meager to permit of much further delay.

Pine City Poker: Douglas Greeley, former auditor of Pine county, was selected at the presidential preference primary, Tuesday, as one of the delegates to represent the Duluth congressional district at the Democratic national convention. "Dug" has also been elected president of the big Virginia Commercial club—and people there figure that he will give them the best year of the club's history.

By the way, if the people of that part of the state want to send a man down to the state senate, two years from now, who will do less talking and more work than anyone there that we know of, they ought to unite on Douglas Greeley and make it unanimous.

PLANS CLEARING HOUSE FOR FARMERS

H. G. Larson Will Establish Produce Exchange on April 1.

Some time ago H. G. Larson, county agricultural agent, directed attention of the farmers to some account books, which could be obtained, whereby they might keep a better record of their business affairs, in order to determine where their greatest profits as well as most severe losses came in. In order to help this matter still further, beginning April 1, the county agent, in co-operation with Supt. M. J. Thompson of the Northeast Experiment station, will prepare, under the auspices of the St. Louis County club, which includes members of every farmers' club and Commercial club in the county, a list of stock, poultry, seed potatoes, seed grain, clover seed, etc., offered for sale, also names of parties who wish to purchase anything which might properly be classed as farm products or farm equipment.

Requests should be sent to the county agent's office, 109 courthouse, where they will be put in shape for circulation. This will be done free of charge to begin with and continued so, unless it should prove to develop into such a far-reaching enterprise that it should be handled on a more elaborate scale, in which case a nominal charge may eventually be made.

President L. B. Arnold and Secretary R. L. Giffin of the St. Louis County club are very enthusiastic about this move and every one connected with it hopes to see it prove a big thing for the development along agricultural lines.

ITALIAN RANCHER KILLED IN MEXICO

El Paso, Texas, March 20.—Enrico Visconti, an Italian subject and one of the best known foreign ranchers in Mexico, was murdered by Mexican bandits on his ranch at Encinillias, Chihuahua, last Tuesday. News of the murder reached here today in a telegram sent by Vincenzo Visconti, brother of the murdered man.

The telegram was sent from Presidio by Venceras Garcia, a brother of the head cattleman on the ranch. The cattleman escaped when Visconti was murdered, and made his way safely to Ojinaga, where he communicated with Vinceslas Garcia.

Visconti's ranch was 75,000 acres in extent and located 100 miles south of Ojinaga and about an equal distance east of Chihuahua city.

The murder of the ranch owner aroused deep indignation in the Italian colony here, where he is well known and respected. He had lived twenty-five years in Mexico, never having been molested before.

AUTO-STAGE ROBBED BY MASKED BANDIT

San Diego, Cal., March 30.—An auto-stage carrying six passengers, one woman, was held up last night a half mile this side of the Mexican line by a masked bandit believed to be an American. The robber took all of the money and valuables carried by his victims and escaped.

A second stage, which appeared on the scene during the holdup, was not molested although the highwayman ordered the driver to proceed at full speed. It is believed the robber crossed the border.

The Year-Old Baby

WILLIAM BRADY M.D.

What should a baby have to eat when he is one year old? Here is a menu upon which he will thrive:

6:30 a. m.—Father creeps downstairs and gets a bottle of certified, tuberculin-tested, pasteurized or otherwise guaranteed clean milk, warms it up, mixes some barley or oatmeal gruel with it, and feeds it to the baby.

9 a. m.—Mother feeds baby one or two ounces of orange juice.

10 a. m.—Aunt Mary mixes him up the following: Milk, two parts; oatmeal or barley gruel, one part; patience and cheery smiles, ninety-nine parts. Aunt Mary sits down and feeds baby about ten or twelve ounces of this from a cup—under no circumstances should he have a bottle.

2 p. m.—Two ounces of beef juice; or the white of one egg, soft-boiled or poached (whole egg after 15 months); or four ounces of mutton broth or chicken broth.

Four to six ounces of milk and gruel again.

6 p. m.—Father rides baby on his knee to get up an appetite. Same bill of fare as for 10 a. m.

10 p. m.—Same bill of fare as for 6 a. m.—with this important exception: Father should NOT be disturbed—his pipe might go out, and besides he has got to get rested up for the 6 a. m. duty which hangs over his head like an evil omen.

This good-night meal had better not be given from the bottle. In fact a baby at 12 months should be made to take his food from a cup or spoon altogether. When you see babies 15 or 20 or more months old still on the bottle you may be sure they will make trouble for their misguided parents later on.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Tubercle Bacilli Present.

The family doctor had some sputum from our little boy examined, and the report read, "Two or three tubercle bacilli to the slide." The doctor was astonished. Does that signify anything serious?

Answer—It would suggest tuberculosis. If tubercle bacilli are present in the sputum it doesn't matter whether there are a few or a great many—that is, the number of bacilli in no wise determines the degree of infection.

Rupture and the Safest Treatment.

My brother, aged 25 years, has had a rupture for years, and every little while it lays him up for a day or two. He is almost decided to have it operated on, but first wishes your opinion as to the danger involved.

Answer—It is dangerous to have a rupture. It is a daily menace to life itself. The safest, and, for a man under middle age, the only sensible treatment, is the radical operation for permanent cure. By all means, if he must work for his living, he should have the operation done at once.

MORAL EQUALITY BETWEEN SEXES

Central Baptist Pastor Preaches on Seventh Commandment.

"A White Life for Both" was the subject of a sermon last night by Rev. Milton Fish, pastor of the Central Baptist church, Twentieth avenue west and First street. He spoke, in relation to the seventh commandment, which was used for the text. Mr. Fish said that marriage is the basis of all social loyalties. The control of bodily appetites by moral laws, he declared, is the power that upholds character.

"Out from an adulterous civilization God called the Israelites to the life of purity," said Mr. Fish. "The Lord said, 'Thou shalt not commit adultery.' This sin is fully explained in the books of Moses and more closely defined by Christ. It consists of those relations, acts and thoughts that attack the purity of marriage.

"The integrity of the home with clean sex relationship is an organic part of man's love and worship of God. Polygamy and remarriage after divorce are adulterous relations. Polygamy contradicts the Edenic picture of marriage and has resulted in a dreadful record of sorrow. Christ's law of divorce permits remarriage only to the innocent sufferer from a carnally unfaithful consort.

"Adulterous acts are possible before as well as after marriage. The unmarried youth who sows wild oats is cursing children yet unborn and unfitting himself for honorable marriage. If an impure young man has any right to wedlock, he should be united only to a young woman of his own kind. It is the climax of sin when he persuades a pure maiden to become his wife.

"A man or woman who has guilty memories is polluted in mind, liable to suspicions of others and so far incapable of the bonds of perfect trust. A true marriage calls not only for healthy bodies but a union of clean minds and loyal hearts. The first word of a true home is not sensation but duty."

WEALTH NO CURSE; ITS USE IS TEST

Rev. J. Emmett Porter Closes Revival Sermons, Preaching on "Rich Fool."

"A Rich Fool" was the subject of the final sermon, last night, of a series of revivals which have been conducted during the last two weeks at Grace Methodist church, Twenty-second avenue west and Third street by Rev. J. Emmett Porter, pastor of the church.

Mr. Porter said that because a man is wealthy, the fact should not condemn him as wholly unrighteous, but that it laid the possessor open to reasonable suspicion. The wealthy man, he said, could vindicate himself by showing wisdom in the use of his money.

"To own property is not a sin," said Mr. Porter, "nor is it sinful to be gifted with the power to accumulate property. It is not the amount of wealth which any individual has accumulated that calls for scrutiny so much as the manner in which it was amassed and the use to which it is put. So universally popular has grown the man of wealth, that the masses of today make it the standard of judging wisdom. If you ask the average man of today to tell you of the eminent men he knows of, men noted for their wisdom, a large percentage of them will name men who are world-famous for the fortunes which they possess. The fact that a man owns wealth does not, or should not, condemn him as a wholly unrighteous man, but it raises a reasonable suspicion, until he vindicates his right to be made the guardian of such resources, by a wise and righteous use of them.

"A man's responsibility to society is always measured by the ability which has been given to him to respond to the needs of society. If God gives a full harvest, he does not expect that some brute who is in a position to hire police or to take possession by force, will drive away and crush the heads of the children of nature with the brutal club of hunger."

BIBLE TOO LITTLE READ AND TOO SOON FORGOTTEN

In a sermon last night on "Servants of God," Rev. H. A. Ofstie, pastor of the First Norwegian-Danish M. E. church, Twenty-fourth avenue west and Third street, said that the Bible is little read and soon forgotten. The Word of God, he said, is being replaced by books and thought of commercialism.

"The Bible is God's word," said Mr. Ofstie. "In it we have the voice of God from the ages of the past. Here are found the plans of God. The Bible is too much a forgotten book today. People read much, but little of that which the Bible gives the mind.

"Christ came into the world and called folks to follow Him in service. 'Take my yoke upon you and learn of me,' were His words, and then He proceeded to show them how one, 'Meek and lowly heart,' serves his time. This was the call of His disciples. Whatever there was to do for them, it must bear the spirit of meekness and lowliness of heart. This means more than a haughty spirit. No servant can serve his master unless he learns of him. So the Christian must learn of Christ."

ASSESSMENT DOES NOT APPLY TO MILWAUKEE

Madison, Wis., March 20.—That the 10 cents assessment out of the seventenths mill tax for the support of the teachers' retirement fund does not apply to the city of Milwaukee is the opinion of Attorney General Owen to R. E. Loveland, secretary of the fund. The original law specifically exempted the city of Milwaukee.

An amendment was incorporated by the last legislature, which left the matter in doubt. The attorney general holds that the general tenure of the reading of the law is to exempt Milwaukee, which has a separate system of its own.

at Gettysburg. The proposed increase in coast artillery is not sufficient and more men should be provided for that branch of the service."

Need More Men.

"We have 8,000 men in Hawaii and there should be not less than 15,000. I was there several years ago when there was a flurry over foreign complications and I remember that Gen. Funston was frantically urging the war department to send more troops to defend the islands.

"Suppose troops should be needed for the defense of Hawaii where would we get them? We are not adequately protected in the Panama canal zone. I believe we should have a peace strength of not less than the number advocated by the gentleman from California, Mr. Kahn, and that the army should be maintained at that strength for at least ten years."

Two Hours' Debate.

Representative Kahn's amendment to the house army bill to make the peace strength of the army 220,000 men instead of 140,000, was taken up for two hours debate today when the house resumed work on the measure.

As the amendment would bring the house bill up to the proposals of the senate bill, a vote was regarded as a test on the disposition of the house to agree with the larger proposals of the senate. The two hours debate was divided equally between those who favor and those who oppose the increase.

Chairman Chamberlain of the senate military committee has decided not to call up his army reorganization bill until the house bill comes up.

"It may be that we will take some portions of the house bill and revise our own, or we may merely submit the senate bill as a substitute for the house measure," said he. "In any event I think I shall wait until the house acts before attempting to start general discussion of the subject in the senate."

STEVENS NOW LEADS LARSON

Marshall and Todd. Most all of the counties named are in the northern part of the state, and friends of the Duluth candidate seem confident of his success. Others say that Mr. Stevens will prevail by about 250 votes.

Figures By Schmahl.

Official returns from the seventy-six counties listed to date by Secretary of State Schmahl give the following:

Eberhart, 46,447; Van Sant, 36,706; Jacobson, 35,445; Stevens, 23,475; Larson, 22,618; Mannahan, 22,570; Lundquist, 20,812; Marcus Johnson, 18,753; Rahn, 17,187.

The vote given C. C. Lundquist of Minneapolis, candidate for delegate-at-large, was made public for the first time, and its size was a surprise to many. Lundquist was not an organization delegate. He noses out not only Marcus Johnson, but A. A. D. Rahn.

Democratic Vote Close.

It will probably demand the full count to determine who is fourth on the list for Democratic delegates-at-large. The vote so far is unusually close, and the Democratic leaders are making no claims as to the outcome. At noon today returns from seventy-six counties, as compiled by Secretary of State Schmahl, gave the Democratic candidates the following:

D. W. Lawler, 34,430; B. F. Nelson, 24,346; C. M. King, 24,200; Z. H. Austin, 22,416; W. A. Just, 21,732; A. C. Weiss, 21,626; J. J. Reiter, 21,024; H. F. Wessel, 20,840.

In the case of several of the missing counties, it may be a week before they report. This especially so in the case of Cook county, communication with which is difficult. Mr. Schmahl today sent out hurry-up calls to all the missing counties.

Crow Wing Complete.

Brainerd, Minn., March 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—Following is the complete vote of Crow Wing county at the presidential primary.

Democratic—For delegates-at-large: Austin 251, Just 226, King 270, Lawler 308, Nelson 196, Weiss 171, Reiter 179, Wessel 157. For district delegates—Schliplin 190, Galarneault 210, Donahue 265, Baer 235.

MUST HAVE RAILROADS

acquiescence would be bound to be seriously misconstrued by a considerable section of the Mexican people and to be exploited by the enemies of Gen. Carranza.

The unexpected rapid advance of the expeditionary columns under Gen. Pershing has forced the railroad question to an issue. Americans familiar with the country where the columns are now assert it is imperative the railroads be placed at the army's disposal for bringing up supplies.

Dr. I. J. Bush, formerly chief surgeon of Madero's army, asserted today that speedy transportation facilities were essential to further progress by the American soldiers.

Reported at Galeana.

"The American forces are reported at Galeana," said Dr. Bush. "Twenty miles south of there is El Valle and from that point the only practicable way of bringing up supplies is by railroad. The valley converges there into a narrow deep gorge in which about 2,000 people live. The territory in which Villa probably will remain is embraced in an imaginary line between Chihuahua and Minaca, with the Mexican Central railroad on one side and the Sierra Madre on the other. His soldiers have the advantage over the Americans in that they will travel light with only a few days provisions and are seasoned men well able to stand the hardships of mountain campaigning in that climate."

Dr. Bush said that he had no doubt that Villa was spreading stories of his wonderful victories over the Americans, of how he had captured Texas and that Carranza had gone over to the United States. It would be easy, he said, for him to make the ignorant peons believe the wildest stories.

Demand Mine Be Opened.

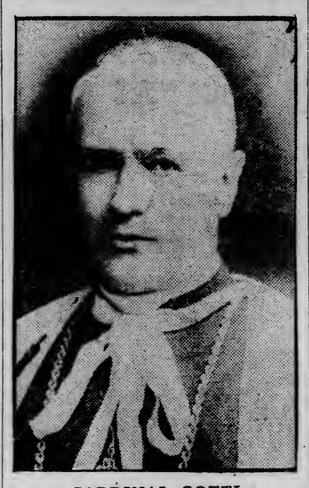
Another serious situation has been caused by the demand of Gen. Calles, military governor of Sonora, that the La Colorada Mining company of New York reopen their mine at Hermosillo at once. He has wired the company that if the mine is not reopened immediately he will take it over and run it.

The property is said to be a very rich gold mine and formerly employed 1,000 Mexicans, according to Gen. Calles. He declared today that he had no intention of confiscating the mine, but that the Mexicans were suffering through being thrown out of work and that he intended to put them back to work. The governor said that the La Colorada company was the only one that had suspended operations in Sonora and that there was no reason for their action as he could and would give them ample protection.

ASK NINE-HOUR DAY; THREATEN TO STRIKE

Paterson, N. J., March 20.—The executive committee of the Brotherhood of American Silk Workers, which claims to include in its membership virtually every worker in all branches of the silk industry of Paterson, announced today that the manufacturers have been given until Wednesday to reply favorably to a demand for a nine-hour day. Unless the demand is granted, a strike will tie up all of the silk plants, the brotherhood committee declares.

PREFECT OF THE PROPAGANDA DIES AFTER A LONG ILLNESS



CARDINAL GOTTI.

Rome, March 20, via Paris.—Cardinal Jerome Mary Gotti, prefect of the propaganda, died yesterday. Cardinal Gotti was born in 1834 at Genoa and was made a cardinal in 1895. He had been ill for some time. The office of prefect of the propaganda is one of the most influential in the Catholic church.

VILLA DOUBLES EAST AND SOUTH TO AVOID FIGHTING U. S. SOLDIERS WHO ARE CLOSING IN

morrow. Most reports indicated Villa was heading for the mountains in the Guerrero district.

Americans who have spent many years in that part of Mexico are being used as scouts and guides over the trails that lead to the south and east of Casas Grandes. The force actually in the chase of Villa was strengthened today by the arrival at Casas Grandes of detachments of the Thirteenth infantry and Fourth field artillery and the aero squadron. It has been assumed at army headquarters that the Carranza troops are joining heartily in the task of running down Villa, but what the Mexican troops are doing is unknown by the Americans.

"Friendly, But Passive."

Gen. Pershing reported today that the garrison at Casas Grandes was "friendly, but passive." In the same report he said that the Mormon colonists there looked upon the Americans as their "rescuers." New estimates by Gen. Pershing placed Villa's losses in killed, wounded and deserted since crossing the line to attack Columbus at 200.

Instructions from Washington not to occupy towns or cities met with no opposition in comment at army headquarters.

Col. Sibley reported that yesterday he talked with Col. Rojas, the commander of the garrison at Ojinaga, who was reported killed by his own men last week and was assured that conditions along that part of the line were good.

Answer to Carranza.

Washington, March 20.—Gen. Carranza has formally protested against American troops occupying Casas Grandes in their pursuit of Villa, and the American government has replied that the troops have been ordered specifically not to occupy Casas Grandes or any other towns or cities in Mexico.

The protest and reply were included in an exchange of notes between Acting Secretary Polk of the state department and Eliseo Arrendondo, ambassador designate to the United States from Mexico.

After a conference early today between President Wilson and Mr. Polk, it became known that Mr. Polk in a note forwarded to Mexico yesterday said instructions had been sent to Gen. Funston to keep his troops away from all towns.

The state department today had not received a reply to the request sent to Carranza for the use of Mexican railroads in transporting supplies to the expeditionary force.

It has been pointed out to the Carranza government that similar permission was granted Carranza troops for the use of railroads in the United States last year.

Not a Demand.

Mr. Polk denied that the United States proposed to take over any railroads in Mexico or that the request was in any sense a demand or an ultimatum.

The administration realizes fully the difficulty of Gen. Carranza's position because of feeling in Mexico. For that reason every effort is being made by the state department to disseminate in Mexico the information that the United States has no motives of aggression in sending troops across the border. Following out the same policy the American troops now in Mexico have been given instructions to be careful in their dealings with Mexicans generally. All acts which might be construed as offensive to the Mexican population are to be avoided.

Generally, reports from Mexico today were optimistic. Mr. Polk denied emphatically reports that the government had information of plots to bring about armed intervention. Gen. Carranza, it was learned today, had been urged to offer a large reward for the apprehension of Villa.

More Troops Arriving.

Columbus, N. M., March 20.—Increased activity on the part of troops stationed here and the arrival during the night of a number of troops and supply trains indicated today that additional forces shortly will be on their way to augment the punitive American expeditionary force now in the field of Northern Mexico.

In addition to the troops which detrained here, many passed on through, bound apparently for points westward along the border.

Soldiers were busy today preparing combat and hospital trains and carrying equipment to the field force.

The large motor trucks, the equipping of which has occupied military and civilian mechanics for two days, were ready for service today. The additional hospital and signal units also were said to be ready for field service.

All Must Be Censored.

Instructions have been issued that not only communications sent out by newspaper correspondents must be censored, but also those of officers and men of the army and residents of Columbus must be passed upon. All incoming telegraph messages also are censored.

Every preparation is being made to care speedily for the injured.

Nor has the possibility of members of the expedition becoming infected with the diseases which have followed in the wake of civil war in Mexico been overlooked. Every soldier in the expedition has been vaccinated against smallpox and given the army prophylaxis treatment to prevent typhoid fever. Especially attention is being given by army medical officers to prevent typhus.

Washington Awaits News.

Washington, March 20.—Information that the American expeditionary forces in Mexico have established contact with Francisco Villa and his band of outlaws was anxiously awaited today by the war department.

Unofficial advices received here said that Villa and his bandits fleeing before the American advance had reached his own country in the Guerrero district, where army officers say he could find a retreat in the mountains or, in the garb of a peon go so far south as to make his apprehension impossible.

Elaborate scouting plans, it is said, have been made by Gen. Pershing to meet such a situation. As a last resort, trusted Mexican scouts who know the retreats of the bandits, would be employed to run Villa down.

Instructions have gone forward to the forces in Mexico not to occupy Mexican towns so as to prevent the possibility of stirring up resentment among the natives.

FRENCH OCCUPY GREEK VILLAGES

Encroachment of Central Powers Brings Enemies Face to Face.

London, March 20.—A strong French column from the Saloniki entrenched camp has attacked and occupied the villages of Mackovo, Karadagh and Kozuna, which had been entered by Teutonic and Bulgarian forces, according to a Reuter dispatch from Saloniki, dated March 18.

Owing to the encroachment of the Teuton allies into Greek territory and the consequent advance of the French, the neutral frontier zone which had been agreed upon between the Greek and Bulgarian governments is now eliminated.

Forces of the Central powers and of the Entente allies are face to face, the dispatch adds, and shelling, sniping and grenade-throwing are in progress near these villages, about thirty miles north of Saloniki, as on the other fronts where the adversary forces are in contact.

TAGGART NAMED AS U. S. SENATOR

Appointed By Governor to Fill Term of Late B. F. Shively.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 20.—Thomas Taggart, Democratic national committeeman, was appointed United States senator to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Benjamin F. Shively by Governor Ralston today.

Mr. Taggart expects to leave for Washington immediately.

The new senator has been prominent in politics in Indiana for twenty-five years and has maintained the leadership of the Democratic party in Indiana practically all of that time. The only offices Mr. Taggart has ever held were auditor of this (Marion) county, for two terms and three times mayor of Indianapolis.

THINK TUBANTIA SUNK BY BRITISH SUBMARINE

German Paper Says One Was Seen Near Noordhinder Lightship.

Berlin, March 20, wireless to Sayville.—"The Cologne Volks Zeitung reports that several credible witnesses stated that shortly before and after the sinking of the Dutch steamship Tubantia a British submarine was observed near Noordhinder lightship," says the Overseas News agency. "There is good reason to believe that a British submarine sank the Tubantia.

"Count von Reventlow in the Tages Zeitung also expresses a suspicion that a British submarine sank the Tubantia, particularly in view of the statements of officers of the vessel that they observed the course of a torpedo. Count von Reventlow says that in several similar cases previously there were indications that British submarines destroyed neutral steamers, while the press at the same time was spreading reports that German submarines were responsible, thus creating ill-feeling against Germany in neutral countries."

In response to similar reports previously from German sources, the British government last week denied there was any ground for conjecture that the Tubantia might have been sunk by a British submarine.

LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE IF SICK, CROSS, FEVERISH

Hurry, Mother! Remove Poisons From Little Stomach, Liver, Bowels.

Give "California Syrup of Figs" at Once If Bilious or Constipated.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative;" they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.—Advertisement.

CHILD DIES IN GREAT AGONY

Fatally Scalded While Playing in Kitchen of Her Home.

Bernice Cadel, the 3½-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cadel of New Duluth, was fatally scalded by falling into a vat of hot water shortly before 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and died yesterday noon after suffering terrible agony.

The child was playing in the kitchen during the afternoon. Mrs. Cadel had just lifted a large pan of hot water from the stove, which she set on the floor, preparing to scrub the kitchen floor. The little girl, playing about the room, backed into the pan while the mother had stepped out of the room momentarily to get the scrubbing brush and soap.

Dr. Oliver S. Olson, surgeon at the steel plant, was called immediately, but the burns, which covered the left leg and arm, the child's neck and abdomen, were of such nature that it was impossible to do more than relieve the pain and suffering. The physician arrived at the home about twenty minutes after the accident happened.

The funeral will be held Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence. Interment will be in Oneota cemetery.

ARE OPPOSED TO PREPAREDNESS

Good Templars Adopt Resolutions Against Increase in Armament.

Because preparedness and an increase in the military strength of the United States are believed to be likely to bring on war, Lysglimt lodge, No. 7, I. O. G. T., has gone on record as being unalterably opposed to the preparedness program outlined by the United States government. The following resolutions were adopted:

"Whereas, the International Order of Good Templars, of which this lodge is a unit, standing for progress and betterment of all races, nations and individuals, an order extending over the greatest part of the civilized world, working for total abstinence and enlightenment among humanity, with faith, hope and charity as its motto, and

"Whereas, we members of this organization and true to its principles oppose war and barbarism and wish to promote peace and brotherhood among all mankind, and

"Whereas, it is generally admitted that "war is hell," and if the word hell signifies worst conditions imaginable, we hold that such war is not justified under any circumstances, as no one would of free will choose the worst, and

"Whereas, military preparedness has never promoted peace, but, to the contrary, that such preparedness will often lead to war, as now in Europe, where the people for years have been compelled to carry enormous burdens for military preparedness, which they have been taught was necessary to preserve peace, and are now nevertheless engaged in the most terrible war that has ever been fought, and

"Whereas, th great agitation now going on in the United States for preparedness is, we believe, incited partly by people trying to promote their own selfish interests, partly by others, who are deceived into believing that this country is in danger of foreign invasion and thinking that this could be prevented by a threatening attitude, (but we believe this preparedness agitation is, to its greatest extent, perpetrated by those who would like to see the United States involved in the European war), and

"Whereas, this preparedness, if carried through, would place great burdens on the people, burdens which in the last instance would chiefly be put on the working classes, and the preparedness, we are convinced, would be a grave danger to a peaceful land, and

"Whereas, the United States in the past has been fully able to defend itself when necessary without militarism, and as we believe a country's strongest defense is a good moral people enjoying liberty and justice, governed by laws that promote the true welfare of all the people, among these laws we believe the abolishing of the liquor traffic to be of great importance, and

"Whereas, we, as true citizens and prospective citizens of the United States, desire to promote the best interests of our country,

"Be it resolved, that we most earnestly protest agains any increase of the United States military forces as opposed to the welfare of the country and a menace to the peace of the land; that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the president of the United States and to our representatives in the United States senate and congress and also published in local papers."

Mayor Prince announced this morning that many Duluthians are interesting themselves in such a campaign this spring and that shortly he will issue a proclamation, urging the public to clean up for the coming year.

"The campaign last spring did a world of good," said Mayor Prince this morning, "and I am heartily in accord with such a movement. Local merchants, I understand, will institute the campaign shortly with a series of letters to be sent broadcast throughout the city and at that time I will gladly take any official move in behalf of the proposition."

All city departments, especially the health division, will be directed to aid in the movement to clean up this spring, Mayor Prince announced.

"Clean-up and paint-up" week last year was declared a success, the plan having been taken up by hundreds of Duluthians, who painted their houses, cleaned their yards and aided in making Duluth a "city beautiful."

LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF POLICE COURT

"BUSTED" WITH TOO MUCH LAND; INSANE

Drunk So Profuse in Excuses for Poverty, Probate Court Results.

"I'm land poor," said Frank McDermott, depot tender at Morgan Park, when Judge Harry Lanners sentenced him to five days in jail for being drunk.

McDermott couldn't pay his fine, and so Lieut. Robert McDermott of New Duluth, brought him to police headquarters, preparatory to the trip to jail.

"Too much land, I've got," McDermott repeated, "and no ready cash. Now if I had a little cash, instead of so much land, I wouldn't have to go to jail."

"What land have you?" asked the lieutenant, growing curious.

"Well," was the reply, "I've got a quarter section right in the heart of Chicago, and a quarter section in St. Paul, and half a section near Osakis, Minn., and 15,000,000 acres in Alaska and I don't know how much in Mexico, and——"

"That's enough," said the officer.

Instead of going to jail McDermott will be taken into probate court this afternoon, when an examination will be made as to his mental condition.

BACK TO THE FARM.

Cows and Chickens for Fred Masur After This.

About once a year Fred Masur, 59, leaves his farm on the Pike Lake road and comes to town.

Friday was such an occasion, and following the usual custom, the bright lights proved too much for him. He landed in the police station Saturday, under the care of Patrolmen O. Olson and Gleason.

When Judge Smallwood learned that Masur was a bachelor, and that his livestock had not been cared for since Friday, he suspended a sentence, so that Masur could return home and care for them.

"The simple life for me," said Masur when the jail door opened. "I love the cows and chickens and there is no 'but' about it."

FOLLOW TRAIL IN SNOW.

Police Get Hot Scent But It Leads to Patrol Box.

At 2:07 a. m. today all was quiet at police headquarters.

Jailor L. A. Root, with Patrolmen Honnold and Harling, were swapping yarns and taking it easy, for there weren't even any stray lodgers.

At 2:08 a. m., the alarm rang. "Burglar at Twenty-ninth avenue west and Third street," said Otto R. Blais, telephone operator.

A minute later the three men were going west, and the emergency was hitting the high spots only, in an attempt to arrive on the scene before the burglar finished his work.

At Twenty-eighth avenue west they were joined by Patrolman Fred Mahlen and the four swooped down upon the Wellberg Hardware store at 2816 West Third street.

"Here are his tracks," said Root. "Wow, look at those feet."

Fresh footprints in the newly fallen snow led to the front door of the store, and then on down the street.

The four followed the tracks, prepared for a desperate battle with a desperate "crook," and it began to look interesting. Then the trail turned the corner, left the sidewalk and ended at a police patrol box.

The "cop" on the beat had been making his rounds and tried the door, to be sure that it was locked. The tracks were his.

At 2:20 a. m. everything was quiet again, and Jailer Root went on with his story.

TALENT IS MISUSED.

Skill With Pen Shown in Forgery; Check Is Made Good.

Richard Granville Boyington, 47, is something of a penman.

His ability as an advocate of the Spencerian system led him into trouble Saturday, for the check he made out was returned as a forgery.

Not long afterwards Detectives Roberg and Barber tapped Boyington on the shoulder, and said: "Come on."

A charge of forgery was placed against his name, but it probably will be dismissed, police admitted today, because the check, which was nominal in "size," had been made good.

Charles Wickstrom, 10 Lake avenue south, was the complainant in the case, and agreed not to press charges.

CHANCE FOR DON QUIXOTE.

Girl Declares Youth "Rude" and Appeals to Court.

Because he was too rude in saying "good night" after a dance Saturday night, Ray C. Forrest, 18, was arrested on a complaint sworn to today by Miss Inez Stenberg of 3240 Minnesota avenue.

The girl told police she met Forrest at the dance for the first time, but that she accepted his offer to escort her home. She did not know his name, but furnished a description through which police identified the boy.

Forrest said that someone in the house opened a window suddenly while they were talking together, and that the girl screamed.

He was arraigned before Judge W. H. Smallwood in municipal court on a charge of third degree assault and was held in $100 bail after pleading not guilty. He will be tried tomorrow morning.

PATIENT CHANGES MIND.

"Sick" Man Decides He Isn't and Vanishes From Hospital.

After walking 140 miles, from International Falls to Duluth, along snow covered roads, William Joseph Hunter, lumberjack, staggered into a West end drug store last night and said he was sick.

The druggist evidently though Hunter looked the part of a sick man, for he sent in a hurry-up call for the police, and the pedestrian was rushed to St. Luke's hospital.

"I don't see that anything is wrong with you," said Police Surgeon Harry Klein later, after an examination, "except that you probably are tired."

"Tired," sniffed Hunter, "I'm a sick man, I tell you. If you don't think I'm sick, I won't stay in your hospital."

"If you're sick, you can stay," said the surgeon.

This morning when the latter went to the hospital Hunter had disappeared.

Nurses said he dressed and left in a hurry early this morning, and that he evidently had decided he wasn't sick, after all.

Carl Martin Missing.

Detectives began looking for Carl Martin, 26, this morning.

John Carlson, 1905 West Fifth street, asked police to find him this morning, saying that he was very anxious to communicate with him.

Martin has not been seen around Duluth since August, 1914, Carlson said, and friends have been worrying about him for some time. He is described as being dark complexioned, with dark eyes. He weighs between 160 and 170 pounds, and is a Norwegian.

Duluth Women Receiving Letters From Soldiers, Acknowledging Gifts

THEUNISSEN STATUE.

This famous statue by Theunissen, the great sculptor, who is president of l'Alliance Septentrionale and a member of the Comite du Refuges du Nord, was shown at the 1914 salon, having been made to commemorate the war of 1814. It is in Saint Quentin and is still standing, as the Germans built a wall around it to protect it from shells. A post card of this statute was received Saturday by Mrs. Sargent from the secretary of the Comite du Refuges du Nord.

As many Duluth women who have contributed to the Comite des Refuges du Nord have received letters from French soldiers acknowledging their gifts, many women have asked Mrs. C. S. Sargent of 1613 Jefferson street, who is in charge of the Duluth contributions, how they can receive letters from the front.

As Mrs. Sargent explains, about $2 is necessary to buy a package of necessities and comforts for a soldier. Everyone who gives this amount receives a reply from the soldiers to whom it is sent, but smaller contributions, though just as acceptable, are not acknowledged as the postage of 5 cents a letter makes it inadvisable to take anything from gifts of 25 cents or even greater. Soldiers' letters are sent without charge from the front to Paris, but the committee must pay the regular rate of 5 cents a letter on each piece of mail from Paris to America. Often letters from French soldiers acknowledging the receipt of packages, are delayed, as a large battle always delays mail between the front and Paris. If several women band together and give sufficient money to buy one package, one of them, or the group, will receive a reply from the soldier who receives it.

Correspondence Develops.

When a soldier acknowledges a package he gives his name and in this way a correspondence is often begun between America and the front that cheers the soldier, who perhaps has no relatives to write to him. The Comite de Nord writes to every soldier who otherwise would receive no letters.

The system of the Comite des Refuges du Nord is so perfect that the name of each soldier who receives a package is known. Sometimes one soldier needs only a shirt, another needs only gloves, and so on. In such a case one package is divided among several.

As a rule two packages are sent together, each one addressed to a particular soldier. If he has died between the time the package was sent from the Paris headquarters and the time it reaches the front, the officer holds it until he learns from Paris whether he may give it to a comrade of the dead man or whether the committee wishes it returned to headquarters.

In addition to Mrs. Sargent, Mrs. T. J. Davis and Mrs. W. A. McGonagle will receive contributions for this cause. No special sum of money is required of those wishing to help, as contributions and pledges are voluntary. The pledges make it possible for those in charge of the work to know what they have to go on.

Established By Sculptor.

The Comite des Refuges du Nord was established at the beginning of the war by Corneille Theunissen, the famous sculptor, who for many years had been president of l'Alliance Septentrionale, which has been in existence twenty-five years. The alliance has for its objects the beautifying of cities in the northern part of France and the assisting of artists who have been born and bred in that part of the country. As the effects of the war were felt first in the north of France, it was natural that a relief organization for refugees, soldiers and their families, should be the outgrowth of l'Alliance Septentrionale.

As many of the soldiers who have been in the army since the beginning of the war are now entitled to furloughs, the Comite du Nord is furnishing the money to bring them to Paris and to entertain them while they are there. To many this is a great treat and also their first trip to Paris.

Another great work the comite is doing is taking the soldiers who are on furloughs, to the refugee camps that they may look for members of their families from whom they have not been able to hear. One soldier found his wife and baby in one of these camps, the two other children having died.

Mrs. Sargent is at the head of other relief work in which Duluthians and persons on the range are interested. This is the British-American Y. W. C. A. Relief association for women and children. Residents of Hibbing contributed $200.50, which was sent to Paris to buy ticking and hospital supplies for poor outlying hospitals in France that are in charge of Americans.

"Best Program of Series" Is Verdict of Orchestra Patrons

The best program yet given was the verdict of many enthusiastic concert-goers yesterday after the ninth twilight concert by the Duluth orchestra.

Perhaps the most thoroughly enjoyed numbers were the "Lohengrin" selection, which was given an inspiring rendition, and the ever appealing "Andante Cantabile," of Tschaikowsky, beautifully melodic in a characteristic Russian folk vein, affective in construction and device, and which was admirably handled by Mr. Bradbury and his men.

The soloist, Charles Tryner, played Mueller's "Cradle Song" on the French horn, which made a decided hit with the audience. Titl's "Serenade," a duet with flute, played by Victor Wurms, as an addition to the French horn, also seemed to particularly appeal.

"Woodland Whispers," by Czibulka; "Lost Happiness," by Gillett, followed by Tschalkowsky's stirring "March Slav" ended a program which was both artistic and popular in its appeal and most satisfying to the regular attendants who have watched with pleasure and interest the steady growth and beauty of the orchestra readings.

Next Sunday the last concert of the series will be given. It will be a "request" program, the audience yesterday voting on the numbers to be presented.

Famous Music Teacher Dies in Paris

Mrs. C. S. Sargent of 1613 Jefferson street received word Friday of the death of Maestro Spriglia, with whom she studied voice in Paris just before the breaking out of the war. The funeral was held Feb. 23 from l'Eglise de la Trinite.

The letter was written by the son of the famous instructor who numbered among his pupils Jean de Reske, whose voice he changed from baritone to tenor, his brother Edouard and their sister; Nordica, whom he presented at the Wagner festival in Bayreuth, and who was the first American to be so honored; Plancon, Melba, Sibyl Sanderson and d'Aubigne, and all the great men and women of that school. D'Aubigne was an instructor of George Suffel of this city.

Spriglia was 86 years old at the time of his death. His old pupils returned to him year after year, and Jean de Reske studied with him no less than fifteen years.

Mrs. Sargent was one of his last pupils. She studied with him in Paris about a year and a half, she and Mr. Sargent making their home with his family. After the war began Mr. and Mrs. Sargent went with the great master and his family to Saint Addresse.

Dainty Date Desserts

EVERY-DAY meals may be as plain and matter-of-fact as you please to make them, and the family will take them without complaint, so long as you give them a different dessert every day. By the time dessert appears, keen hunger has been satisfied and a critical mood has been reached. The same sort of pies two days in succession or too much bread-pudding will make the whole family as mad as March hares. But know how to make attractive little sweets and serve them nicely, and you will hear yourself called a "jewel," "queen of women" or "peerless cook" by Dad. Big brother will declare, "Sis is sure some provider," and the kiddies look at you to imploringly you give them a second helping without argument.

Dates are excellent in puddings; they give a sort of maple flavor that is delicious, and their wholesomeness and true food value make them appreciated.

One of the best desserts made with dates that I have eaten is made in this way by Mrs. George V. Meyers of this city. Pour boiling water upon a pound of dates and let them stand until cool in it. This makes them plump and tender. Break a cupful of English walnut meats in half. Beat the yolks and the whites of two eggs separately. Drain, stone and cut the dates in small bits. Mix one cup of granulated sugar, the walnuts, dates, eggs, one tablespoon of flour and one teaspoon of baking powder, and flavoring to suit, together. Butter a baking tin or dish that is not more than an inch in depth and spread the pudding over it. Bake thirty minutes in a moderate oven. Serve with cream or foamy sauce.

Rice pudding with dates is more substantial and the following directions give satisfactory results:

Scald a pint of milk and thicken it slightly with a level tablespoon of corn starch moistened with cold water. Remove from fire and stir in two and a half cups of boiled rice, one cup of sugar or more as you like, the beaten yolks of two eggs and one cup of chopped dates. Return to fire and cook gently until thickened, flavor and turn into a mold if it is to be served cold. The corn starch gives a creamy taste to the pudding that is agreeable when one does not use much cream in cooking. If cream is used instead of milk, the starch may be omitted, as the eggs thicken the mixture sufficiently.

The following recipe is for nut bread made with baking powder. It has been tested and found to be right in proportions and excellent in taste:

Sift four cups of flour, four teaspoons of baking powder, one teaspoon of salt, one tablespoon of sugar together. Add one cup of broken nut meats, two eggs and a cup of milk. Turn into buttered molds and bake twenty minutes. This will make two medium-sized loaves of bread. They are best hot, but may be reheated by placing in a moist paper bag in a hot oven.

Questions and Answers.

Can a water bag be mended at home? Please give directions.—Miss Xenia.

Reply—Go to an automobile supply store and purchase rubber cement and small patches. These patches last some time, but if the bag is a good one, you should have it vulcanized.

How can one tell when they have eaten poisonous mushrooms, and what is the remedy?—Alicia.

Reply—This is something I have not experienced, but understand the convulsions are so severe that they cannot be mistaken as arising from anything but mushroom poisoning. Give mustard and water for an emetic, followed by Epsom salts, and get a doctor as quickly as possible.

Bed Time Tales

Mrs. South Wind Spoils the Night Caps

JACK FROST, with the help of kind Mr. North Wind, had at last finished his work.

He had covered the rivers, locked up all the creeks, powdered the hillsides with snow, and put night caps of ice on all the posts and pillars near the lake.

He took one last careful look over his work and then he said to himself, "Now that work is done, and I for one am tired. I mean to slip right under this hillside and go to sleep."

And so he did.

He had not been sleeping very long before Mr. North Wind blew along that very same way.

"Oh! ho!" said he, with a great big yawn. "I'm pretty tired this morning! Been working too hard—that's what is the matter with me! Everything is done just as it should be though, so I guess I can take a little rest. I'll leave everything to Jack Frost while I take a nap right here in this valley."

And he settled down to sleep in the valley just below the hillside where Jack Frost was sleeping—think of that!

For one day nothing happened.

For two days nothing happened—winter went right on as it always did, and everything was frozen up just as tightly as ever.

But on the third day, word came to Mrs. South Wind, away down in her southland home, that Jack Frost and Mr. North Wind had both gone away.

"That's not possible!" exclaimed Mrs. South Wind, and she took a careful look at her calendar. "I know they must be hiding 'round somewhere, but it will do no harm for me to blow up there and be sure!"

So she blew up north in her very softest, tip-toe-y-est fashion.

And she found the rivers covered with ice, the creeks locked up tightly, the hillsides powdered with snow, and the posts and pillars all along the lakes and rivers covered with night caps pulled down tight.

"I see my job!" she exclaimed to herself with a soft little south-wind laugh, "and here's where I go right to work!"

So she blew up north in her very softest, tip-toe-y-est fashion.

And she did.

The very first thing of all she melted off those night caps! They leaked and leaked, till the ice was all gone—till it had run down and hid itself in the water at the foot of the very pillars and posts it had covered. And then Mrs. South Wind turned her attention to the hillsides; she melted off the snow in a hurry and swept down upon the rivers and creeks. "These will be easy!" she cried, and she quite forgot to be careful about noise.

With a crash and a bang the ice broke up and—what do you suppose?—waked up Mr. North Wind and Jack Frost both at once and they came and drove Mrs. South Wind back south and froze everything up again!

Duluthian Writes on Labor and Suffrage

The attitude of labor toward woman suffrage and the history of the campaign for the suffrage amendment in the last legislature of this state are discussed by State Senator Richard Jones in an article published in the New Republic, issued March 11. He also discusses the attitude of the Minnesota State Federation of Labor in refusing to pass a resolution favoring suffrage, "after supporting" the measure for years.

Mr. Jones is now in Louisiana, where he is giving a series of addresses on political questions.

Wins Wellesley Honors.

Princeton, Minn., March 20.—Miss Grace Dunn, daughter of Senator Robert C. Dunn of this village, has just been awarded a fellowship by Wellesley college for research work in botany.

The fellowship carries with it a fund of $1,000, which the recipient may use in travel or study. Miss Dunn expects to use the money in pursuing botanical research either at Johns Hopkins or Chicago university.

Miss Dunn was graduated from Hamline university in 1900 and attended Johns Hopkins university for three years. She conducted the research work which won her the Wellesley fellowship alone.

"St. Louis' Gain Is Duluth's Loss"

Philip Gordon Brown, who went from Duluth recently to St. Louis to make his home, received the following mention in the Scottish-American of March 15, relative to his singing at a meeting of Clan Campbell, No. 1, of St. Louis:

"Clansman Philip Gordon Brown of Clan Stewart, No. 50, Duluth, was present, and delighted all by his excellent singing of 'Mary of Argyle,' 'The Lea Rig,' and 'Gae Bring tae Me a Pint o' Wine.' Clansman Brown is now a resident of St. Louis, and is a decided acquisition to the Scottish colony. We extend our chuckling sympathy to Duluth, cheerfully realizing that St. Louis' gain is Duluth's loss."

An Unnatural Mother

"Take the children somewhere into the country, among green grass and yellow wheat, among trees, by hills and streams, if you wish their highest education, that of the heart and soul to be completed."—Richard Jeffries.

One of the most pathetic children I ever saw was a little girl whose father probably makes $5,000 a year.

The family lives in a New York apartment, five or six stories up. It is one of those apartments with a dark bedroom, and of course no veranda. The street below is a congested city street, so it is impossible for the little girl to play here, and there wasn't so much as a foot of yard to be divided between the thirty or forty families who occupied that human hive.

So the little girl's whole playground was the tiny apartment; and this for the year round, with the exception of a few short weeks in summer, when the family went to a fashionable hotel.

She Had Never Been Coasting.

Of all the sports of winter, of all the wonders of awakening spring, of all the joys of autumn woods and fields, this child knew absolutely nothing. And she was 7 years old.

Moreover, her mother did not care much for the other families in the apartment house, so the little girl had neither playground nor playmates. The day I called, she was sent from the room with a scolding because she teased her mother. And the burden of her teasing was this, "You promised to take me out to walk today, mother, and you haven't, and we didn't go yesterday, either. I want to go outdoors."

Could anything be more pathetic?

More Pathetic Than the Child of the Slums.

We pity the child of the slums, and with good reason, but the child of the slums has at least the streets for playground, and her tenement neighbors for playmates.

This child was a frail little thing, who would have been pretty if she hadn't been so pale and sickly-looking. She reminded me of a flower grown in a room without sun. She came from healthy stock—both her parents had been brought up in a normal way and showed in their own vitality and resistant power the result of the normal life they were denying their child.

The Father Was Willing to Move.

Incidentally the father is willing to move out, but the mother doesn't like the idea of being alone in the house in the evening in case her husband should be detained and besides she would be too far from the shopping district.

There are a great many kinds of crimes in the world, and legal crimes are not always the worst. To bring up a child in any place where it can't have its share of the outdoor world isn't an offense against the laws of man, but it certainly is against the laws of nature.

And lest that shall not be a strong appeal to some women (I hesitate to give them the name "mother"), let me add another word. It is also an offense against style and breeding. It is "the thing" now to give the child a chance, and it is a mark of good breeding (superficial as well as real) to have children with healthy bodies and sound, rosy cheeks.

Peggy Peabody's Observations

It's Monotony That Kills

It's monotony that kills. A large preponderance of civilized humans do not exhaust by wearing out, but because of the everlasting sameness of their lives. They rise in the morning and go to their labors, and whether by train, by trolley, or on foot, it is always over the selfsame route. The character of their daily toil does not vary in any noteworthy particular, and they return to their homes at night feeling that the work is too hard or the hours too long.

In reality it is the ceaseless monotony of their lives that is wearing them out more than the actual amount of mental or physical energy expended. The routine of the following day is the same as that of the one that preceded it, and so it is week after week, month after month, and year after year, until the wearisome grind exhausts the machinery of humane sensibilities.

What is the remedy? To change the work and the scene as much and as often as our strength and our waking hours will permit—to create other interests than the toil for our daily bread. You may say that this in itself is all that your powers can cope with—that when you are finished with the day's work you are too tired to think of anything but rest. This is so with some, but the number is relatively small. Even though you labor ten hours a day, if before or after you devote an hour or two to a work of an entirely different nature than that which occupies those ten hours, it will be just as much of a rest and more beneficial than idling and lounging.

The human body is capable of enduring far more than we realize, but to get the most out of it and yet keep properly within the limits of our powers, the work must be diversified. I do not mean that we should draw upon our hours of sleep. A fair amount of refreshing sleep is most essential, but an hour outdoors working around your grounds is worth more to you than the last "cat nap" in the morning.

Living in a rut makes us narrow and self-centered. It makes us grow to feel that our own little sphere is about all there is that is worth while. Of course, in a vague, unconscious sort of way we realize that there is something else, but unless we are sometimes brought in contact with it the idea becomes more and more obscure. You will find that changing the scene of action and the humdrum of a daily routine will be the most beneficial feature of your life.

Bayha & Co. Offer

$500 Reward

For a Sterling Dead or Alive!

We all know that leather must come from some animal, and when we see stores advertising furniture upholstered with genuine Imperial leather, we stop and wonder where that animal comes from. It must be common. There must be a whole herd of such animals known only to certain furniture dealers. Among them are the Sterlings, Morrocolines, Bostons, Japanettes, Chases, etc., for in nearly every furniture advertisement you will read of furniture upholstered with the skins of the above named animals—leather is skin, skin comes from some animal.

Now why can't they be honest, say the furniture is covered with imitation leather? Why try to deceive the public by trying to make them think they are getting something better than ordinary leather by adding some of these high-sounding names?

The day is coming in Duluth, and soon, too, when "imitation leather" will have to be sold and labeled as "imitation leather." The public should not be humbugged in this way, and if Bayha & Co. can stop it they are going to do it.

We are offering this $500 for a Sterling or an Imperial, dead or alive. We could just as well say $1,000, for there are no such animals. There are unscrupulous dealers who do not say so, but who do let people go away believing "mule skin," a certain imitation leather, is real leather.

Why should anyone be allowed to go out with these impressions?

We have in stock imitation leather goods, but you can depend upon it that we always tell a customer whether it's the real or the imitation. Further, we show you the difference and show you also that the fact of a piece of covering being genuine leather means absolutely nothing. We have the imitation leather that we positively guarantee to outwear some grades of genuine leather. Let us show you how many hides a cow has; which are good and which are worthless for furniture covering.

You can shop all over the city, looking at furniture and prices, but when you go the rounds, you'll come back and say you have learned more, seen better goods at lower prices than any place you have been in.

Kathleen Parlow Arouses Small Audience to Great Enthusiasm

With her real abilities known to but few Duluthians, and with the public at large having no way of judging in advance what might be expected, Kathleen Parlow, the Canadian violinist, was greeted by but a small audience at the Lyceum Saturday night.

Miss Parlow won instantaneous success and recognition through her fine musicianship, technical mastery and marvelous beauty of tone. It was to be regretted that such a small audience heard the recital, but those who were present, being almost entirely musicians, were so appreciative and demonstrative in their applause that they must have been an inspiration to the artist.

The program opened with Paganini's concerto in D major, which showed first of all Miss Parlow's complete self-effacement. During her performance one did not think of technique—it did not seem to exist for her—and the whole attention is given to her noble tone and fascinating delivery.

Free From Mannerisms.

The outstanding feature of Miss Parlow's playing is her sincerity. She is entirely absorbed in her work, never even attempting to effect mannerisms, which might win the favor of indiscriminating audiences. Her attack is sudden and precise. She has a steel-like quality in her finger work which makes especially clear and sure the most involved passages, while she interprets with authority and conviction in a straightforward manner, which is deeply poetic in feeling.

Her second number, Romanze in G major (Beethoven), was played with sweeping success, followed by the exquisite, delicately-done minuet of Mozart's.

Tortini's variations on a theme of Corelli's was given with refreshing catholicity and exuberant feeling, which will leave an impression of her genuine high art for a long, long time. As an encore Miss Parlow responded with Weber's "Larghetto."

The two Kreisler numbers which followed, "Caprice Viennois" and "Tambourin Chinois," were delightfully treated, the spirit and abandon of the latter being quite irresistible, and the insistent applause bringing forth Kreisler's well-known "Liebesfreud" in response.

The Chopin nocturne, given with rare beauty, was followed by Sarasate's sparkling Spanish dance, played with wonderful skill, after which came Schubert's lovely "Ave Maria," which was given tone of velvety quality, splendid precision and loftiness. Wieniawsky's "Polonaise," superbly done, was the closing number, but the audience was so insatiable in its demands for more that Miss Parlow graciously responded with two additional encores, Schubert's "Moment Musicale" and Drigo-Auer's "Serenade," which left the audience completely satisfied that they had heard "not a sensation, but an artist of the foremost rank."

Miss Carol Robinson at the piano was an ideal background for the soloist, and her artistic accompanying was no small part of the evening's success. Miss Robinson is a pupil of Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler of Chicago and was the winner from the Middle West district in the National Federation of Musicale Clubs contest held last spring.

New York Musical Critics Show How to Insult Visiting Musicians

How to insult an orchestra was shown by some of the musical critics of New York on the occasion of the recent visit there of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, which has returned from its eastern tour.

Some of the critics fairly frothed over the temerity of Mr. Oberhoffer in visiting New York which they admit is the center of education, culture, music, refinement, the arts, the drama, business, banking, and lobster palaces. Others took a kindly, patronizing attitude, and a few were genuinely appreciative.

The reviews of Musical America and The Musical Courier are two good examples of the two extremes. They follow in part:

Musical Courier: The Musical Courier has always taken great interest in the development of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra because it was practically the first, outside of the three big cities on the Atlantic seaboard and Chicago, to be brought to the size of a real symphonic organization. On this Eastern trip the orchestra has carried eighty-two men, hence when the organization returned to Eastern cities for the first time in two years the Musical Courier sent a special representative (hereinafter known as "The Willing Pilgrim") to listen to its work and to write about it. The Willing Pilgrim journed first to Boston, then to Springfeld, Mass., and then back to New York, thus hearng the orchestra on three successive evenings. He had, by the way, never heard it before.

The organization which Emil Oberhoffer has built up after years of work performed with unflagging energy, is one which will readily stand comparison with any other orchestra in this country. This or that orchestra excels in this or that way. In one point, such and such an orchestra may perhaps be better than the Minneapolis orchestra; in another, the Minneapolis holds the superiority. But "taking one consideration with another" the Willing Pilgrim is willing to class the Minneapolis orchestra with anything which this country can show—and anything in Europe, with the possible exception of the Vienna Philharmonic—for all around excellence. Life, vitality—these are the keynotes of all its playing and they emanate from the splendidly vital readings and the personal magnetism of Conductor Oberhoffer. The strings have a vibrant, living quality and a supply of vigor such as one rarely hears in any string band, due perhaps to the fact that the players (and practically all the members of the orchestra) are young men. Precision in bowing is of course a mechanical detail, but it shows the presence of a good concertmaster and of good principal players in the various divisions of the strings.

Musical America: The visit, after an absence of a year, of the Minneapolis orchestra, under the conductorship of Emil Oberhoffer, to this city, is interesting for many reasons.

In the first place, can you imagine the shock it must have been to the genial Emil and his entourage, when, expecting the entire front page of each morning newspaper to be filled with the report of their coming and their performance, they found that several of the big dailies had not noticed them at all?

One, the Sun, dealt with the situation in a humorously sarcastic manner, and only two, the Times and the Herald, were kindly and appreciative.

As for the Tribune, it must have sent the Dog Fight Reporter, for the heading of the article was as follows: "Minneapolis Men Sing." Perhaps the gentleman who put the heading on the criticism did not take the trouble to read the article, and let it go at that.

Here, as I have endeavored to tell you before, it all depends upon the point of view.

If Mr. Oberhoffer and his organization came to New York with the idea of showing us, as the center of things musical, what they are doing in the Northwest in the way of serious music, and if Mr. Oberhoffer also had the idea of giving his organization an opportunity to hear some good music in New York, as well as to visit the lobster palaces of Broadway, the enterprise is to be commended.

But if Mr. Oberhoffer came with the idea of receiving recognition on the ground that the Minneapolis orchestra is entitled to rank with the leading symphonic orchestras of the country, he must, by this time, realize that not only the critics, but the musically elect here cannot honor his claim.

However, it may be said on Mr. Oberhoffer's behalf, that he deserves well of music lovers generally.

He has managed to extract from a number of Minneapolis business men and from one particular lumberman, sufficient money to keep his organization going. That is to his credit.

In the next place, his orchestra plays better than it did, and is not, today, almost drowned out by the brass, as it used to be. Indeed, it shows such improvement, that Mr. Oberhoffer deserves all due credit and praise.

LORIMER DEFENSE OUTLINED TO JURY

Attorney Says He Had Nothing to Do With Loaning Bank's Money.

Chicago, March 20.—William Lorimer, on trial in connection with the failure of the La Salle Street Trust & Savings bank, had, according to the opening statement of the defense, made today by Attorney Albert Fink, absolutely nothing to do with the loaning of the bank's money during the time between April, 1910, and July, 1912. At that time, Mr. Fink said, Mr. Lorimer was too busy with his fight to retain his senate seat to take part in the management of the bank other than to preside at its directors' meetings. Mr. Fink brought out other points on which the defense will be based. Two of the indictments charge that Mr. Lorimer received deposits after the bank was insolvent, and the defense, said the attorney, will challenge the state to show that the institution was insolvent when it closed in 1914, and will try to show that the officials had no reason to believe that it was insolvent.

AMUSEMENTS

HELEN WARE WILL MAKE HER SCREEN DEBUT IN "SECRET LOVE" AT ORPHEUM

HELEN WARE.

Helen Ware, America's leading emotional actress in a heart-thrilling story, "Secret Love," a picturization of the famous novel, "That Lass O'Lowrie's," by Frances Hogdson Burnett, is offered at the Orpheum-Strand theater tonight beginning a four-day engagement.

"Secret Love" and the Sara Bernhardt picture which will follow it are claimed to be the highest priced screen productions now on the market. They are two of the Bluebird features which will be offered patrons of the Orpheum-Strand, during the next few weeks.

Helen Ware, who through her portrayal of the leading roles in "Paid in Full," "The Third Degree" and "The Price" has been proclaimed, by many prominent critics, as America's leading emotional actress, will make her initial appearance as a screen star in this Bluebird photoplay "Secret Love."

The story of the novel is familiar to many, and it should offer great opportunities to photoplay producers.

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTIONS.

IS EAGER TO PLEASE HER "HOME FOLKS"

Miss Edna Munsey will be seen in Duluth in "The Only Girl" on April 21, 22 and 23.

"I am so happy to tell you we play Duluth for three days," she writes a friend here. "I am so excited at the prospect of getting home and showing 'home folks' what I can do in a regular show. They have been so kind to me whenever I have appeared there, perhaps sometimes kinder than I deserved just because I was a Duluth girl. I do so hope they will like me in this part, for I want so much to please them, that the rest of this dandy trip we have had will seem like a failure, if we don't score a big success in Duluth."

MISS EDNA MUNSEY.

BURLESQUE AT LYCEUM.

Not Entertainment to Appeal to Theater's Regular Patrons.

Burlesque at its best is seldom free from vulgarity; at its worst is vilely indecent.

Regular Lyceum patrons, for the most part, knew this and act accordingly. Some who do not know it, are learning it at the cost of some rather embarrasing experiences. Those who do not know it, are entitled to a warning.

"The Americans," an organization which opened at the Lyceum yesterday afternoon for a five days' run, offer burlesque neither at its best nor at its worst. The performance as given last evening, is certainly not one that the regular clientele of the Lyceum would sit through. It is the same type of entertainment that is offered in the Star theater in St. Paul, and was formerly given at the old Metropolitan here. The only feature missing is the permission to smoke. That it is popular was evidenced by two capacity audiences yesterday.

Ed Johnston and Ben Small are clever comedians and entertainers, with a repertory of specialties that scored a hit last evening. Their musical novelty in the second act was encored time and again. William Browning as the duke presented a clever character impersonation of an Englishman.

Patriotism is the keynote of "The Americans" and several of the song numbers are featured with the American flag.

At the close of the show, Mike and Tommy Gibbons of St. Paul staged a fast three-round boxing exhibition.

"The Americans" will play until Thursday night, with daily matinees.

Theater Gossip.

With the legend of the "Flying Dutchman" as a basis for the new play, "Van Der Decken,"

DAVID WARFIELD IN "VAN DER DECKEN."

in which David Warfield will come to the Lyceum theater for an engagement of two nights, commencing Monday evening, March 27, and interpreting the endless and lonely wanderings of this most fascinating figure of legendary history, simply as the love of all mankind for home, and the desire that never dies in the heart to return to it, Mr. Belasco is said to have fashioned a beautiful and impressive drama which is told partly in words, partly in action, and more than all in wonderfully ordered stage pictures.

The material source of pleasure derived from Mr. Belasco's esthetic sense of beauty as revealed in the stage settings of "Van Der Decken" is said to be one of the notable features of this newest production. Beginning with the old tavern in Holland of "The Three Gulls," a view which at once invokes the imagination of the audience and places it in harmony with the conditions at an old Dutch seaport more than 100 years ago, the spell is created that lasts all through the drama, and the audience is said to find itself living in a world of romance, mystery and symbolism. The entire play is reported to be on a highly imaginative plane.

Mary Pickford created a "jam" at the Lyric on both Friday and Saturday when she was seen in "Poor Little Peppina." The ticket sellers, doormen and ushers were put to a severe test to handle the crowds that would not be turned way. While the price was advanced to 15 cents, because of the cost of the eight-reel picture, the throngs insisted upon seeing "Little Mary."

"LITTLE MARY" CAUSES "JAM" AT LYRIC.

Miss Violet Horner will be seen today, tonight and tomorrow at the Lyric in "The Marble Heart." Miss Horner is, perhaps, as much admired in Duluth as her prototype, Miss Blanche Sweet. The story of the play is full of warm interest, and as it is a William Fox production, its staging and lighting effects are expected to prove admirable.

In a series of daring and graceful dances, Mlle. Verna Mercereau, the dainty French danseuse and her associates head the new bill at the popular New Grand in what is expected to be one of the best terpsichorean exhibitions ever witnessed on the stage of that theater. Mlle. Mercereau is an exponent of the Grecian and Egyptian style of dancing, being a student of the art as practiced in the temples of Athens and Delphi. Among the numbers a dramatic dancing pantomime entitled "A Romance of Old Egypt," is featured, showing dances of that land. During the action the "Dance of Death," "Victory" and "Vengeance" are interpreted, and the "Dances of the Temple," "The Departing Day," the "Dance of Honor" and "Night" tell dramatic stories in pantomime. The whole is embellished with beautiful scenery and impressive lighting effects.

FRENCH DANSEUSE HEADS NEW BILL AT GRAND.

Carter and Waters, offering a pleasing specialty, entitled, "The Hunger Strike," which scintillates with bright comedy and catchy song numbers. With strings on his fingers and strings on his nose and even strings on his toes, there's a man in Lamb's Manikin act who introduces a set of real comedy marionettes. These tiny stars from toyland are in the shape of cute little clowns, skeletons, Indians and beautiful dolls which go through a series of dances and comical gyrations that are a delight to the children and bring roars of laughter from the grownups. The Avonda Prince Trio have an instrumental offering employing the xylophone, accordion and piano.

Joseph Kilgore is seen in the stellar role in "Miss Warren's Brother," a stirring drama in three reels. Rose Melville, famous as Sis Hopkins, is seen in that character in her second comedy effort on the screen in "She Came, She Saw, She Conquered." "A Chance Deception," a Biograph drama, rounds out a dandy entertainment.

Saturday night Bessie Barriscale, in "The Last Act," closed her engagement at the Rex.

LILLIAN GISH DRAWS CROWDS TO THE REX

Miss Lillian Gish, who renewed her fame in her leading part in "The Birth of a Nation," was enjoyed Sunday by capacity crowds at the Rex, and will be seen again today and tonight in "Daphne and the Pirate." Those who saw the picture pronounce it well worthy of Miss Gish's talents. This is the twenty-first birthday anniversary of this little lady, who has become so popular.

Tomorrow Billie Burke is back again at the Rex in "Peggy," and those who did not have the opportunity of seeing this favorite star before when appearing here in her first film play, will have another chance.

Miss Marguerite Snow, the talented screen actress, who opened a three days' engagement yesterday at the Zelda theater in her latest picture play, "A Corner in Cotton," was greeted with capacity houses at each performance.

STOCK EXCHANGE FILM AT ZELDA.

Miss Snow was never seen to better advantage than in this drama, and in the role of Peggy Ainslee, a society belle who renounces a life of ease so she may help the poor and unfortunate, she has a part in which she is allowed full opportunity to display her versatility.

There is a pretty love story woven into a gripping plot, wherein Peggy becomes a factor on the cotton exchange, and in a fight against her father breaks a corner in cotton.

"A Corner in Cotton" will show for the last times today and tomorrow.

CHOOSING AN ARCHITECT

County Board Considering Proposals for the Hibbing Courthouse.

Preliminary steps to secure an architect for the construction of a new county courthouse in Hibbing this year were taken this morning at a meeting of the special committee of the county board at which proposals from a number of Duluth architects were considered.

The committee, which consists of Commissioners Charles Kauppi T. H. Little, R. S. O'Neil and Charles Pentilla, will probably choose an architect and recommend to the county board at its next meeting on April 7. Any selection of the committee, if unanimous, will be the choice of the board because four of the seven commissioners are on the committee.

The building and equipment will cost not to exceed $100,000 and the architect who will be selected will be asked to submit plans and specifications which will keep the cost within that figure so as not to exceed the amount provided for in the levy which was spread last fall and which will be collected in taxes this year.

The site was purchased several months ago for $4,000. It is located on Garfield street within a short distance from the Duluth, Missabe & Northern Railway company passenger station.

The Hibbing courthouse will be St. Louis county's third. There are now courthouses in this city and at Virginia.

The architects who appeared before the committee at its session this morning were: C. E. Nystrom, J. J. Wangenstein, Holstead & Sullivan, Vernon J. Price, Clyde W. Kelly and Arthur N. Starin.

THE BRANDEIS OPPOSITION.

Former President Taft and six other former presidents of the American Bar association have expressed the opinion that Louis D. Brandeis is not a fit man to be a member of the supreme court of the United States.

That looks like formidable opposition. It isn't, at all. It is just such opposition as you must expect whenever it is proposed to put a radical on the supreme bench. The conservatives can always be expected to froth at the mouth about it, and all these seven eminent lawyers and Republicans are conservatives. Moreover, Judge Taft has, to inspire his opposition, vivid recollections of how objectionable Mr. Brandeis made himself in the Ballinger matter.

When a lawyer is nominated for a place on the supreme bench of the United States, lawyers naturally divide on the question of his fitness. If he is a conservative, all the conservative lawyers will be for him, and the radical lawyers against him. If he is a radical, all the conservative lawyers will be against him and the radical lawyers for him.

Brandeis is a radical, so the conservative lawyers are dead against his confirmation.

And if there is anything on earth more conservative than a conservative lawyer, it has not yet been discovered. That's his job, he's paid for it, and he works at it waking or sleeping.

Seven ex-presidents of the American Bar association opposing Brandeis simply means that there are seven conservative ex-presidents of the American Bar association. That is ALL it means.

Their conception of a proper man for justice of the supreme court is a man whose motto is laissez faire; who believes that the world is finished and must never be changed; who holds that property is the great god which humanity must bow down to and serve.

Mr. Brandeis, happily, believes otherwise; so of course he is objectionable—"not a fit man to be put upon the supreme bench."

By the same token he is most acceptable to the vast majority of Americans.

No, Mehitable, the inauguration of the double platoon system for Duluth's firemen would not mean that they would have to put in twice as many hours as they do at present.

PERSHING.

The punitive expedition of the United States army now in Mexico after the bandit Villa is headed by John J. Pershing, brigadier-general. It is a tough job, and Pershing's the man to do it. It will take time, and there will be grief associated with it, but all will come right in the end. It is a comfort to have the word of experts that there isn't a better man in the army for the job.

For General Pershing has a record. He was senior cadet captain of the class of 1886 at West Point. He was in the Geronimo campaign, and General Miles complimented him "for marching his troop, with pack train, over rough country, a hundred and forty miles in forty-six hours, bringing in every man and animal in good condition." He had a brush with the Zunis, and his superior, General Carr, highly recommended him for discretion. In the Cree campaign of 1893, again his work attracted praise from his superiors. Ten years service in the department of Arizona gave him knowledge and experience and training that are going to help a lot in this Mexican enterprise.

Pershing was in the Santiago campaign, too, and his colonel then said: "I have been in many fights and was all through the Civil war, but on my word he is the bravest and coolest man under fire I ever saw in my life."

Pershing was in the Philippines when the service there was real, and he gained his grade of brigadier-general by a short, sharp and brilliant campaign against the Moros of Mindanao, followed by an achievement in pacification that proved him a shrewd diplomat as well as brave soldier. He had five years' service in that wild, rough country, both as commander of the department and as governor. In 1905 he was with Kuroki in Manchuria as American military observer.

Here is what an authority who knows what he is talking about says of him: "At home in the desert country, familiar with the ruses of savage warfare, a regular of regulars, sound in judgment as in physique, a born cavalryman, John J. Pershing is an ideal commander for the pursuit into Mexico."

Uncle Sam's delicate task in the mountainous wilds of Sonora and Chihuahua is in skilled hands and under a cool, deliberate and wise head. It is well.

It's time to begin to lay plans for the big regatta here in August.

THE NATIONAL REGATTA COMES HOME.

Thanks to the enterprise of Julius Barnes, Mr. Ten Eyck and others, the national rowing regatta will be held in Duluth August 11 and 12.

That's good to hear, and Duluth will promptly show its appreciation by getting ready to make this year's regatta so overwhelmingly superior to its predecessors that having it in Duluth will become a habit.

Moreover, besides making the regatta a huge success that will make those who come here wonder why they never thought before of having it in Duluth, those two August days can be and ought to be made a gala occasion that will bring to Duluth thousands of people from all directions. Whatever midsummer fete Duluth has this year should be held in connection with the regatta. What Duluth ought to advertise to the world above all things associated with sport is not ice and cold, but its glorious summer weather and its relation to a great empire of sporting and outing possibilities. The regatta offers a splendid chance to do a lot of far-reaching advertising of that kind.

While the boat club, with everybody's help, is arranging the regatta, everybody else, in association with the boat club, ought to be preparing a week-end celebration that will send the fame of Duluth as a summer resort—and as an all-year place to live—ringing over the continent.

The regatta should be the central attraction, but it should not be the only attraction.

Another air raid on England. Therefore another boost for the work of the recruiting stations.

WHAT THE PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARY PROVED.

Those who are opposed to the whole primary system say that the light vote cast in the presidential preference primary proves their case; that the primary system is a failure.

The light vote is not surprising when it is remembered that the Republican managers very carefully kept off the Republican ticket the name of every man who stands the remotest chance of getting the nomination, and that on the Democratic ticket President Wilson stood alone, without a single opponent or any talk of any.

The vote was almost entirely a vote for delegates, and so it was a light vote.

Yet these same critics of the primary system would abolish the primary choice for candidates for office, which always brings out a good vote, and substitute a convention system with the delegates elected at primary elections.

If the presidential primary election proved anything, it proved that this anti-primary plan of a primary for the election of delegates only would be a melancholy farce.

The primary system of direct nominations has its faults. They are neither so numerous nor so grave as the faults of the convention system. Effort should be directed to improvement of the primary system. Those who pretend to be suggesting improvements in it are really seeking its overthrow. The primary system may be amended, but it should be amended by its friends, not its enemies.

But this country is not yet ready to change the second "i" to an "a" in "vilify."

THE LOCAL HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The Northeastern Minnesota Horticultural society is an organization of local people interested in agriculture and horticulture—all the way from the scope of a back yard flower bed or kitchen garden up to a farm. Its purpose is to organize this interest so that it may co-operate to the proper development of all branches of horticulture hereabouts. It is an auxiliary of the Minnesota State Horticultural society, and membership in it carries membership in the state society.

The local society seeks more members, and it ought to have them. Not to speak of the premiums offered by it and by the state society, which comfortably balance the cost of membership, nor of the publications received by members, membership in it affords an opportunity to get and to give help in the proper development of this important local interest.

Those who are interested in growing plants, flowers and trees will do well to accept the society's invitation to join.

If Villa has as many wives as is reported, it will be a wonder if there isn't a Delilah somewhere in the lot.

A Welcome Intruder.

Muskegon, Mich., Times: The man in the next flat was pounding on the wall.

"Look here!" he cried. "I can't sleep with that kid yelling like that. If you don't make him stop I will."

"Come right in," said the baby's father. "You'll be as welcome as the flowers in spring."

Sounds Familiar.

Judge: Husband—"Now, then, what are our needs?"

Wife—"Well, the house needs painting, we are all out of kitchen utensils, the dining room rug is threadbare, the bathroom must be decorated, and I've simply had to order some clothes."

We shudder as we read the news from the war front:

> For forty-eight hours streams of dangerously wounded have been making their way toward Germany. * * * Trainloads of wounded, moving Parisward today, are bringing evidence of the fearfulness of the carnage north of the French fortress.

From the battle field of Verdun a stream of wounded men pouring eastward, and another pouring westward, day and night, without ceasing.

But, if this battle had been fought seventy-five years ago, there would have been no men with stretchers to hunt out and carry away the wounded; no ambulances; no hospitals; few surgeons; no nurses. The wounded would have been left upon the field with the dead, to perish from cold, hunger and thirst, or from gangrene.

In all the Napoleonic wars there were no nurses, no field hospitals and only a few surgeons. The wounded dragged themselves off the field if they could, otherwise they slowly died where they lay. For days after those big battles groans and wails and shrieks went up from the field, the sounds gradually diminishing as the wounded died. Even so late as 1859 the battle of Solferino was fought with only a few surgeons to care for the wounded. Henri Dunant was there and has described the horrors of that field after the battle. Wounded officers were cared for, the rank and file got little attention. "In the silence of that night could be heard the sighing, the stifled cries of anguish, despairing appeals for help and water. What pen can describe the agonies of that night," writes Dunant. For days wounded lay because there were so many the small staff of surgeons could not attend to them. "The great majority perished where they lay."

That it is not so today is due largely to the influence and example of women. The first war nurse was a woman, Florence Nightingale. In the winter of 1854 England was stirred to its depths by reports of the sufferings of the sick and wounded in the Crimea. Miss Nightingale, a nurse who had been trained in Germany, volunteered to go. The government accepted her offer. She took thirty-four women nurses with her and arrived in Scutari in time to receive the wounded from Balaklava, and a few days later six hundred shattered men from Inkerman. What she did is history now. The world never knew such self-sacrifice, such devotion before. She used to work twenty hours at a stretch with the wounded. Each night she made her solitary round of the big barn-like hospital with a lamp, ready for any complaint. The men called her the "Lady of the Lamp," and kissed the hem of her garment. Gradually she collected ten thousand men under her. They adored her. "The angel of the trenches," "the soldiers' friend," "our good angel," "Saint Florence," they called her.

Every man wounded in battle since then owes much to her. Every trained nurse in the world should reverence her name. Before her time only the poorest and most stupid women were nurses. Nursing was considered one of the meanest of callings. She raised the dignity of it so that women of the best rank were proud to go into it. To ignorance has succeeded scientific training.

Her example led to the founding of the Red Cross by Henri Dunant, who acknowledged his debt to her and said, "The influence of this woman is precious for the welfare of the human race."

Last week a memorial to Miss Nightingale was unveiled in St. Paul's cathedral in London, and the queen of England, in her tribute to this heroine, quoted from the tribute of the American poet, Longfellow:

> "Lo! in that house of misery
> A lady with a lamp I see
> Pass through the glimmering gloom,
> And flit from room to room.
>
> "And slow, as in a dream of bliss,
> The speechless sufferer turns to kiss
> Her shadow as it falls
> Upon the darkening walls."

The Hope of the Future

Guglielmo Ferrero: The normal condition may be war, as Germany thinks, or peace, as the rest of the world believes; but for friendly relations between nations the only basis is a body of international law. In time of war the duty of enforcing international law, if it is to stand, rests in large measure with neutral nations. The hope of the future lies in the acceptance of the idea that it is the duty of a nation which is not involved in an international dispute to intervene in favor of those international agreements to which all should be subject and that make for a normal condition of peace. Otherwise we are facing the proposition of universal international enmity, when nations spend half their earnings arming themselves that every forty years they may destroy the rest of their earnings with the armaments.

The War's Greatest Spectacle.

Gregory Mason in the Outlook: For me the sight of huge, stumbling Russia learning to use her tremendous strength and direct her tremendous limbs to the ends urged by her awakening national consciousness, after the sight of the unflagging and uncomplaining courage of "decadent" France, is the pre-eminent spectacle of this war.

Irony of Fate.

Little Rock Gazette: After years of hard and confining work a man reaches the point where he can afford to own an automobile, only to find that in reaching it his health has been so impaired that his doctor insists he must walk.

Rippling Rhymes

By Walt Mason

Schooling.

At school I learned a lot that helped me not at all; I conned, till I was hot, cheap maps upon the wall, and learned the names of hills in Lapland and Cathay, to trace the creeks and rills that wander near Bombay. I learned a lot of dates (when finished with the map), when kings and other skates went forth to have a scrap. The midnight oil I burned, and bucked the Rule of Three, and all the things I learned were not worth shucks to me. I learned some Latin roots, but never did they aid to buy a pair of boots, a bucksaw or a spade. I dug a while in Greek, and when I went to work I earned three bones a week, as haberdasher's clerk. They never used to teach the things that really count; the youth who tried to reach the top of learning's mount, would find, in after days, the knowledge he'd acquired obstructed all his ways, and made his wishbone tired.

Aboard a Zeppelin

From Ueber Land and Meer.

The order is given, the hall is quiet as ever, but inside the hangar the people are working day and night to complete some more machinery meant for destruction. The propellers are examined, everything is in order, the men are ready and all those who are going to fly go first to church. Everything is ready and slowly the giant bird flies into the night. Heavy and wavering, the heavy weight requires all the strength of the machinery to lift the giant from the ground. The pilot is satisfied; he can trust in the strength of his machine.

The radio telegraph of the airship works, a godspeed is wired and the apparatus is quiet, so as not to betray the airship to the enemy. The ammunition is issued and everything works smoothly. From time to time the machinist looks to the oiling of the machine. The man on the steering wheel reads the velocity of the wind and calculates. Within a short time we will be there. We hear the splashing of the water, but we cannot see it, although the ship almost touches it, for heavy clouds prevent us from seeing below. Better so; we can reach our destination without being seen. The wind blows strong, the clouds have lifted, going towards the west. Looking at the chart, the wind suits us nicely. An English patrol boat is below us. It will not pay to waste a bomb on her; she cannot see us and the wind carries the sound of the propellers westward.

We have arrived in England, here is Gravesend on the River Thames. A short, singing noise and the ship goes quickly forward. Below us, flames. We have heard the explosion, the bomb has done its work.

The searchlights from London spread out over the horizon. They have not seen us yet. Down below we hear some shots fired which do not disturb us in the least. On we go towards the arsenal and docks at Woolwich. From below machine guns are fired without effect. We have arrived at Woolwich, our bombs are dropped. A few seconds afterwards we notice a big fire below us, our bombs have struck. All at once everything is dark in London. The only light comes from the flames at the docks. Further on we go to the heart of the city; the Bank of England is our goal. We hear alarm signals from below, cannons are fired, the workmen from the ammunition factories leave the building. Darkness, darkness everywhere. The bombs we are throwing now take effect; the flames go up high in the air, taking in their flight all which comes in their way. The London fire brigades rattle along the streets on their way to extinguish the fire, hard work for them, for many of the factories are hard hit. Sounds of new explosions come to our ears. Stored ammunition must have exploded. Ambulance columns are hurrying up the streets to bring aid to the wounded or those buried beneath the debris of fallen walls.

Pavements and Horses

Francis H. Rowley, president Massachusetts S. P. C. A., in the Boston Journal: The greatest cruelty from which the horses are suffering today is due to the pavements the cities have laid. It is difficult to write with moderation with the scenes of yesterday fresh in mind. There were sections where it was positive torture for the horses to travel. Even horses well shod and drawing empty wagons were slipping, losing their footing and straining every nerve to keep from falling. The society's agents, trying to cover the city as best they could, reached the locality above referred to a little before 4 o'clock. In an hour they had helped to their feet a score of fallen horses.

By continuing to lay the wooden block and asphalt pavements through the streets where the heavy teaming is done, the city of Boston is inflicting upon the horses that must travel those streets a cruelty that is unworthy a humane community. In no better way can it waste and ruin our horses and destroy the livelihood of those dependent upon the teaming business for a living. Who is responsible? Largely the owners of the buildings abutting on these streets, who, after urging the city with all the influence at their command that such so-called noiseless and dustless pavements be laid, wonder why horses are constantly falling, and lay the blame upon improper shoeing. Grant that many team owners neglect to have their horses properly shod, that some overload, there are days when it is not a question of sharp calks or of the load on the wagon, but simply of pavements upon which traffic with safety is utterly impossible.

However in the future the auto truck may supplant the draught horse; it is doing it now in a slight degree, and that not for short hauls. At the best it will be years during which our horses must travel our streets, and justice and humanity, as well as economy, demand that while they serve us with an unquestioned fidelity and are being worn out for the prosperity of the city, they be given some fair opportunity to do their work without having added to the load the torture of the worst pavements over which horses were ever asked to travel.

If the hundreds who protest to us about the conditions, and complain because we do not change them, would be present with us at hearings before the street commissioners when new pavements are considered, and join their plea with ours for safe roads for horses, this evil could be, in part at least, prevented for the future.

Does Belgium Still Need Help?

Vernon L. Kellogg in the Atlantic: The military and diplomatic situation today is the same as that of a year ago. The steel ring is still there, as impregnable as ever. Save for the single hole in it, which is the Belgian commission's hole and through which only commission foods and clothing can enter, there is no other break in Belgium's commercial isolation from the world. Through this hole can pass no imports of raw materials for Belgium's factories, nor out of it can pass any product of her manufacture. Just certain fixed quantities of certain agreed-to foodstuffs and clothing can pass through it. This was the condition when the commission began its work, this is the condition today; that will remain the condition apparently as long as the war lasts, or the military conditions affecting Belgium remain unchanged. Time instead of bettering conditions tends to make them worse, in that with time the original stocks of traders, the means and credit of Belgian men of wealth, the clothing and shoes in the houses of the people become used up. The Belgians, like the French in the north of France, are not starving—because the commission is bringing enough food to them to keep them alive. But that bringing must be constant, must be regular. One hundred and twenty-five thousand tons of foodstuffs must reach Rotterdam each month, and from Rotterdam be conveyed by canal boats, railway wagons and carts to all the thousands of communes of Belgium and North France. Today more than one million Belgians are on the soup and breadlines—two hundred thousand in Brussels alone.

A Test of Youth.

Rupert Blue in The Youth's Companion: You often see a woman at the market pinching the end of a chicken's breastbone to find out how tender—in other words, how young—the fowl is. Oddly enough, the same test with human beings is one of the most reliable known. If in advanced life the lower end of your breastbone feels elastic when pushed inward, you may assume that no important changes have yet taken place in your arteries, or otherwise in your anatomical make-up.

The human breastbone is shaped like an ancient Roman sword, and the upper part of it is like the sword handle. Its point is a piece of cartilage, which anatomists call the "xiphoid" cartilage. The early hardening and stiffening of it indicates that the changes that accompany old age have prematurely begun.

Keeping Up With Minnesota Editors

Scattered Comments By and About Newspapers In the Gopher State.

There Is Something

positively cheerful about the way some men can hail an unlimited supply of the things they like best. For instance, here is the New Ulm Review exulting as follows: "An Ohio editor defends the kiss by saying that it is just as good today as it was two thousand years ago. Yes, and we might add, the purveyorine can never put you off with the statement, 'just out of kisses, but I have something just as good.'" isn't dead by a long shot. It may have been sleeping, but it's wide awake again when things like this from the Redwood Falls Gazette are producible: "Laugh and the world laughs with you'—or if it doesn't you'll be having such a grand time all by yourself that you won't notice whether it does or not."

Philosophy

They Just Won't Stop

kidding Minneapolis. Now the Bemidji Sentinel has joined the chorus, thus: "From the manner in which Jean Crones, the Chicago soup prisoner, eludes the police, it seems almost certain that he must be in Minneapolis."

Get This

from the Little Falls Transcript at the first reading, and prove you're competent to contest at the polls with the women: "A few days ago we received a document from a facetious friend who simply requested (in writing) that we 'Jane Pankhurst it on the back.' What would you have done, good reader? We unhesitatingly placed our illustrious name there on the back and dispatched it on its happy return route. Humph! That sort of vocabulary is the very plainest to us!"

Safety First

can be applied mentally and professionally as well as otherwise, if we are to believe the following from the Warroad Pioneer: "A sneer is the weapon of the weak. Like other devil's weapons it is always cunningly ready at our hand, and there is more poison in the handle than in the point." At least that sentiment should appeal to members of the "League of the Kindly Tongue."

It's Not Impossible.

to overdo even some good things, as will appear from the following from the Melrose Beacon: "We've never been in Little Falls, but after a careful perusal of the Transcript for the last year we would describe it as a city inhabited by C. A. Lindbergh, C. B. Buckman, the Herald editor, the Transcript, two thousand suffragists and about two thousand hen-pecked husbands."

"How Can You Tell Till You Try?"

asked George Cohan or somebody in a popular song. Which same might apply to this dictum from the Sauk Rapids Sentinel: "We all like to cuss out the Pampered Rich for the way they waste their money. But if we had it we would make just as big fools of ourselves."

And Then

there is the kind of editor-publisher who scatters three or four mastheads through his paper and doesn't put any editorial matter under any of them.

North Dakota Notions

Various Views Expressed by Newspapers of That State.

And They Aren't Accomplicing By a Good Deal.

Fargo Courier-News: International law is not dead because all the countries at war have violated it any more than the law against murder is dead in the United States because 7,500 people were murdered in this country in 1915. International law can only be killed by the neutrals—by the countries at peace becoming accomplices in its assassination.

Fire When You Are Ready, Girls.

Valley City Times-Record: One reason given to account for the slowness of leap year marriages is that the girls were all prepaired.

They've Often Found It Handy.

Fargo Democrat: The president is advocating a non-partisan tariff commission. This the Republican party has claimed to be for, but now when one could be provided, the Republicans have lost their claimed enthusiasm. Now why? Echo answers "why?" The Republicans want the tariff question forever in politics because it helps to confuse the voters.

Now Who Ever Heard of Squandering Road Money?

Devils Lake World: The fellow who will go down to Bismarck this winter and spend his time in passing some road building law which will give the people value received for the money they spend in road building, will make a lasting record for himself. At the present time a large portion of our road money is being squandered.

Back to Back.

Wimbledon News: Back up the president and Stars and Stripes will never back down.

Few Things Beat the Dutch.

Bismarck Tribune: Haarlem, Holland, is going to hold a national exposition next summer. It's pleasant to find one European country still able to do something peaceful and useful.

The Groundhog in Peril.

Valley City Times-Record: Now that the groundhog has been proven a reckless and unconscionable prevaricator, it would seem feasible to have him nominated for something.

Cummins Is Named.

Fargo Forum: The returns from the Minnesota preferential primary show that Cummins has been named over Estabrook by an overwhelming vote. This was to be expected. The Estabrook boom has fallen rather flat in the Northwest. There is a strong suspicion that Estabrook's real backing is too closely allied with Wall Street.

The people of the Northwest do not want to have their delegations at Chicago vote for a man of reactionary principles.

The Two Prayers.

A youth stood with uplifted arms and faced the rising sun,
"O God," he prayed with earnest eyes, "ere my short day be done,
O God of power, grant me power! O God of strength, grant me strength
To forge my way to fame, to claim a conqueror's crown at length,
Till when death's shadow creeps a-near, my name may show on high
Peerless amid earth's mightiest—then could I gayly die!"

A man, still strong, but tanned by care, by tempering sorrow tried,
Knelt, ere he slept, in humbleness a spirit purified.
"Grant, God of Love," he murmured low, "grant me the power to love,
The power to lighten tired hearts, the power cold hearts to move,
The sense compassionate, and ere my working soul taker flight,
Let me forget myself, to wake sun-startled by thy light."

The History of Gasoline

Forrest Crissey in the Saturday Evening Post.

Gasoline first compelled public attention in the role of the little demon in the kerosene or coal oil lamp. In this capacity it kept the coroner and the insurance adjuster working overtime.

When crude oil was first discovered in the Pennsylvania district the public received it as a cure-all for diseases instead of a fuel or an illuminant.

Then it was discovered that by subjecting it to distillation a certain portion of it could be used for lighting purposes, to supplant candles and lamps using whale oil and vegetable oils.

But it was found that a considerable fraction—about 20 per cent—of this oil had so low a boiling point, was so volatile and explosive, that it was extremely dangerous in lamps. At the sign of the coal oil lamp of that pioneer period fires and explosions were the prevailing program.

It was soon seen by the refiners that, if kerosene was to become a popular illuminant, the "light boiling point fraction" must be taken off the top and disposed of in some other way. For a considerable time it was turned into the nearest streams and allowed to dispose of itself by evaporation. The refiners were forced to recognize the fact that in some way they must find a legitimate commercial outlet for this volatile fluid, which was so explosive that it could not be dumped without great peril to life and property.

Under the pressure of this economic necessity, about 1875, a man named Hull, who was in touch with the Cleveland refineries, invented a vapor stove which was the father of the gasoline stove of today. For a time this furnished a very considerable outlet. A considerable quantity of gasoline was also consumed at this period in street lamps and out-of-door lighting systems.

About 1903 the motor car, with its internal combustion engine, appeared on the scene—just in time to rescue gasoline consumption from a decided setback, due to the fact that gas had come into general use for lighting and heating purposes and was able, on account of its greater cheapness and safety, to push gasoline out of competition to a great extent.

Gasoline has, in short, pushed King Kerosene from the throne. The outcast, the infant terror of the oil industry, has now become the czar of the whole empire of petroleum commerce, and there are few who do not pause at the sign of the garage pump to pay him tribute.

Just a Moment

Daily Strength and Cheer.

Compiled by John G. Quinlus, the Sunshine Man.

The Shadow and the Light.

Ah, me! we doubt the shining skies
Seen through our shadows of offense,
And drown with our poor childish cries
The cradle hymn of kindly Providence.

And still we love the evil cause,
And of the just effect complain;
We tread upon life's broken laws,
And murmur at our self-inflicted pain!

We turn us from the light, and find
Our spectral shapes before us thrown,
As they who leave the sun behind
Walk in the shadows of themselves alone.

* * * * * * *

Oh, Love Divine!—whose constant beam
Shines on the eyes that will not see,
And waits to bless us, while we dream
Thou leavest us because we turn from thee!

All souls that struggle and aspire,
All hearts of prayer by thee are lit;
And, dim or clear, thy tongues of fire
On dusky tribes and twilight centuries sit.

Nor bounds, nor clime, nor creed thou know'st
Wide as our needs thy favors fall;
The white wings of the Holy Ghost
Stoop, seen or unseen, o'er the heads of all.

THE OPEN COURT

Readers of The Herald are invited to make free use of this column to express their ideas about the topics of general interest, but discussion of sectarian religious differences are barred. Letters must not exceed 300 words—the shorter the better. They must be written on one side of the paper only, and they must be accompanied in every case by the name and address of the writter though these need not be published. A signed letter is always more effective, however.

The Herald does not publish original verse. Contributions of this nature that are submitted for the editor's perusal must be accompanied by a stamped and addressed envelope, if their return is desired. Otherwise no manuscript will be returned.

No Name Is Signed.

A communication from a man in Duluth who signs it merely "Yours truly, A Friend," will have to be withheld from publication because it is not accompanied by the name of the writer. The Herald would suggest, however, that in the case mentioned in the letter, in which a man was injured and was laid up for a month, it would be well to see Frank Hicks, head of the city's free legal aid bureau. If anything can be done for the man, Mr. Hicks will be able to take care of it. His office is at 201 Christie building.—The Editor.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT.

To the Editor of The Herald:

There were many able and good men who supported the commission government when it came before the people for adoption. They were just as honest in their opinions as to the great advantage it had over the old system, as were those who opposed it.

Now that it has been working for three years it should be shown what has been accomplished by it. The moral gains, if any, would be sufficient were it possible to show that any gains exist along that line, as a result of the workings of the commission form. It would also be pleasing to learn what has been gained in efficiency as relates to the workings of the different departments.

A very pleasing item of information would be, what have the people gained in an economical or social way, for the great increase in taxes? Of course it is well known that the common people will receive much enjoyment riding around the city in those high-priced cars, gasoline selling at 20 cents per gallon and rubber tires which cost about $130 per set, and of course it is also well known that those who will be unable to ride in those cars in the daytime can have a smell of gasoline in the evening.

I should like to see some who still have faith in the commission form and who believe that it still has virtues, write them up in the Open Court. If they will do this from the viewpoint of the business man I shall attempt to state its faults from the workingman's standpoint.

"INNOCENT BYSTANDER" ACCEPTS THE CHALLENGE

To the Editor of The Herald:

Your gentle correspondent at Schroeder, who promises to put an end to war when man is dethroned, expresses impatience with the weakness and indefiniteness of certain of my observations to which you have amiably given space. Particularly she points out that there is much violence in the world now, that much has been gotten by violence in the past, and that much deference must be given to violence in the future.

Her list of things that have been done by violence might have been lengthened immensely without fear of contradiction. It is the very length of the catalogue that should most impel us to establish the reign of law in place of anarchy. See what the generations which came before us have done to narrow the scope of violence.

If the lady had been living at Schroeder 100 years ago, she could not have gone fifty miles in any direction without depending on violence or the threat of violence. Now she can go wherever she will, in any direction, to any distance, within the United States, under protection of ideas embodied in the reign of law.

If she had been living in the country of her ancestors 500 years ago, I imagine she could not have gone twenty-five miles in any direction except with violence or the threat of violence. Now, and for some centuries past, it is possible for anyone to traverse the entire length of that country in complete safety under the protection of the laws, which are the embodiment of ideas.

Even after the American colonists had won their war of independence, if she had been a citizen of Connecticut, for example, living in Pennsylvania, her life would not have been safe except as she maintained her rights by violence or the threat of violence.

While it is true that violence once restrained part of the American states from secession, it is not by violence that they are now held together in the union but by willingness.

It is not by violence or the threat of violence that peace is maintained between Canada and the United States. It is not by violence or the threat of violence that the American republics are working out common purposes through joint agencies.

It is not by violence or the threat of violence that the members of the British empire are held together—the same is not true of British dependencies. It is by no means uncommon to hear Englishmen say, and say it proudly, that if Canada or Australia willed to depart, it would not be restrained.

Among sane people, co-operation is a stronger force than compulsion. Among sane nations agreement can reach ends that violence cannot approach. In a sane world, the reign of law must succeed the selfwill of nations.

The gentle correspondent from Schroeder must believe that the world is sane and that gentleness is a greater force than violence, or how can she hope to dethrone man?

If it is a sane world, all the force that has pressed mankind toward civilization from century to century is back of the effort that is to establish the reign of law and smother this anarchy of wild nations.

I would not urge any man to lay aside his gun who believes in guns—nor the lady from Schroeder neither if she is so minded. If we know no force more potent than violence, let us depend on violence. But since humankind has enlarged the space within which a man may live securely under the law, from the individual to the clan, from the clan to the tribe, from the tribe to the nation, from the nation to the group of nations—since the United States has reduced the possible sources of attack from all the world to not more than two, since all the world is one society—what hinders our joining with other people to make the world hereafter war proof?

And why should we hesitate beginning now to go as far toward that end as we can and dare?

THE INNOCENT BYSTANDER.

"NO MORE SALOONS IN STEEL PLANT DISTRICT"

To the Editor of The Herald:

The pressure upon the city commission by the liquor interests to grant more saloon licenses in the steel plant district is very strong.

The commissioner of public safety has declared a policy of "no more saloons in that district," and it seems to me all citizens interested in the welfare of the city should rally to the support of this position.

The Minnesota Steel company will not allow the sale of liquor in Morgan Park, and they are doing everything they possibly can to protect their employes from the influences of drink. Some men residing in the Gary district have already lost their position with the company, due to liquor.

Instead of granting any additional licenses, the ones now operating in that district should be refused a renewal. It may be that the liquor interests, by endeavoring at the very beginning of the great steel activity in Duluth to fasten their business upon the industrial population of our city, will force the wet and dry issue upon Duluth. Maybe it is time we were thinking about moving in that direction anyway.

Yours truly, WATSON S. MOORE.

"FOR WILSON" REPLIES TO HIS TWO CRITICS

To the Editor of The Herald:

In The Herald of the 17th inst., "Ignorant" is asking for enlightenment, and probably J. Janes will be somewhat enlightened when I say that America, by sending supplies and ammunition to the allies, is thereby maintaining neutrality, not breaking it, unless "ignorant" knows more about international law than the heads of the United States government. Probably "Ignorant" would like to see this one of the international laws torn up as being just another scrap of paper. Another thing, Mr. "Ignorant," it's my opinion that if we were not shipping steel to Europe, we fellows on the ranges, instead of getting a raise in pay, would be on the tramp, looking for something to eat.

I have the greatest respect for a Civil war veteran, Mr. Janes; but if the money that is being spent by the embargo conference were sent to the destitute Belgians, or to the Red Cross society, I think it would do far more for humanity, neutrality and America.

You may not like it, but I am still

The Little Mohee.

As I was out roving for pleasure one day,
Through a sweet recreation to while time away,
And as I was amusing myself on the grass,
Oh, who should come near me but an Indian lass.

She sat down beside me, taking hold of my hand.
Said, "You are a stranger, and not of this land,
But if you will follow you're welcome to come
And live in a cottage that I call my home."

The sun was fast sinking far o'er the deep sea
As I wandered along with my pretty Mohee.
Together we rambled, together we rove
Till we came to a hut in the cocoanut grove.

The kindest expression she made unto me,
Saying, "If you'll consent, sir, to stay here with me,
And go no more roving upon the salt sea,
I'll teach you the language of the little Mohee."

"Oh, no, my fair maiden, that never can be;
For I have a true love in my own country,
And I'll not forsake her, for I know she loves me
And her heart is as true as yours is, Mohee."

It was early one morning, a morning in May,
That to this fair maiden these words I did say:
"I'm going to leave you, so farewell, my dear;
My ship's sails are spreading and home I must steer."

The last time I saw her she stood on the strand
And as my boat passed her she waved me her hand,
Saying, "When you get home to the one that you love,
Think of a Mohee in the cocoanut grove."

And now I am anchored on my own native shore
With friends and relations around me once more.
Amid friends and relations, but none could I see
That I could compare with my pretty Mohee.

And the girl that I trusted, proved untrue to me,
So I'll turn my course backward far o'er the deep sea,
I'll turn my course backward; from this land I'll flee,
And spend all my days with my pretty Mohee.

Forty-five Minutes From Broadway.

The West, so they say, is the home of the jay,
And Missouri's the state that can grind them.
This may all be, but just take it from me,
You don't have to go out West to find them.

If you want to see the real jay delegation,
The place where the real Reubens dwell,
Just hop on a train at the Grand Central station;
Get off when they shout "New Rochelle."

Chorus.

Only forty-five minutes from Broadway,
Think of the changes it brings;
For the short time it takes, what a difference it makes
In the ways of the people and things.
Oh! what a fine bunch of Reubens!
Oh! what a jay atmosphere!
They have whiskers like hay—and imagine Broadway
Only forty-five minutes from here.

When the bunco men hear that their game is so near,
They'll be swarming here thicker than bees are;
In Barnum's best days, why he never saw jays
That were easier to get to than these are.
You tell them old jokes and they laugh till they sicken;
There's giggles and grins to let.
I told them that one about "Why does a chicken——"
The Reubens are all laughing yet.

Chorus.

Only forty-five minutes from Broadway,
Not a cafe in the town;
Oh! the place is a bird, no one here ever heard
Of Delmonico, Rector or Browne.
With a ten-dollar bill you're a spendthrift;
If you open a bottle of beer
You're a sport, so they say, and imagine Broadway
Only forty-five minutes from here.

(The correspondent who submits the following asks who wrote it, and says it is at least sixty-five years old. Can any reader tell the author's name?)

Hope.

Oh, hope is a Paradise bird; she flies
Adown from the glorious sky,
With her pinions of soft Elysian dyes
And her heavenly melody;
And softly she fans, with her radiant wings,
The heart of the sorrowing one,
Till up from the cave of despair he springs
To list to her soothing tone.

Lone wanderer, say: Has the warbler flown?
Do the hours seem weary and long
Since her sun-bright pinions above thee shone,
And she warbled to thee her song?
O, cheer thee! She's only gone home to the sky,
New notes of the seraph to learn;
And to thee with her burden of melody
Will the beautiful bird return.

The Christian's Call.

The Lord had a job for me,
But I had so much to do,
I said: "You get somebody else,
Or wait till I get through."
I don't know how the Lord came out,
But He seemed to get along;
But I felt a kind o' sneakin'-like—
Knowed I'd done God wrong.

One day I needed the Lord,
Needed Him right away;
But He never answered me at all,
And I could hear Him say,
Down in my accusing heart:
"Nigger, I'se got too much to do,
You get somebody else,
Or wait till I get through."

Now, when the Lord, He have a job for me,
I never tries to shirk;
I drops what I have on hand
And does the good Lord's work.
And my affairs can run along,
Or wait till I get through.
Nobody else can do the work
That God marked out for you.

From Maine to California, from Texas to Hudson Bay, millions of people have been asking "What is the 7th Point in Sterling Gum?"

In practically every town, city and village in the United States and Canada, the published six points of superiority have brought Sterling Gum fast-growing popularity.

But the seventh point still remains a riddle.

Point ⑦ What?

Now, we are offering liberal prizes to those who send us the best suggestions for the Sterling Gum Point 7.

Before you make your suggestion for the 7th Point, read the following:

The Following Story Unfolds the Secret of the Famous Point 7

To most people chewing gum is a mystery. They may know that different chewing gums are made from different ingredients. But that is about all. Here are facts which we believe you will be glad to know about Sterling Gum:

Your Sterling Gum is made from the following materials:

The basis is the pure sap of the tropical Sapota Tree—a natural gum.

This natural Sapota Tree sap is boiled, sweetened and flavored. The sweetening is simply pure cane sugar and pure corn syrup.

The flavoring is of two kinds—Peppermint (in red wrappers), Cinnamon (in blue wrappers).

There are some twenty varieties of the mint plant. The Sterling Peppermint is a product of the choicest, smoothest-flavored of these many mint varieties.

The spicy Cinnamon flavor is extracted from the Cassia bush which grows in the tropics.

The sap of the Sapota Tree, the cane sugar, the corn syrup, the Peppermint and Cinnamon flavors all come from the sap of some plant or tree. Nature herself supplies these delicious materials from which your Sterling Gum is made.

Requirements for Winning Phrase

When you read the above facts on the materials that Sterling Gum is made of, you will know all that it is necessary for you to know in entering this contest.

SUNDAY SERMONS IN DULUTH PULPITS

GULLIBILITY CAUSE OF SIN

Crooks Abound Because Men Willing to Be "Humbugged," Says Pastor.

Sound Moral Character Is Bulwark Against Evil, Declares Dr. Gebauer.

Because there are so many people looking for a chance to get a gold watch for a nickel, the crook finds ready material upon which to ply his craft. Gullibility encourages and stimulates dishonesty, while the strong mind reinforced by a sound moral character thwarts and discourages crookedness and all attempts at deception. This was the gist of the sermon on "The Sin of Gullibility," preached by Dr. George R. Gebauer, pastor of the First Unitarian church, yesterday morning. He said in part:

"Barring absolute or pure science, we may well contend that the attainment of truth is not merely dependent upon the clearness and strength of brain, but also upon the lucidity of the moral life, the character of man; as Jesus puts it, 'the pure in heart shall see God.' And the stronger the human element is in the pursuit of knowledge, the more danger there is of losing the truth through self-consideration, through greed and through fear. Certainly, epochs in history and conditions in which selfish greed prevail constitute the most fertile ground out of which spring the lying prophet, the crook and the cheat, the liar, imposter and charlatan. Times and conditions call forth great and true men; and times and conditions, mean in themselves, call forth a generation of vipers. Where credulity prevails, there thrives the liar; and where prejudice is prominent, there prospers the slanderer; and where greed stretches forth its grasping hand, there is the cheat with the prize package; and where there is moral cowardice and apprehension, there absurd doctrines grow up. The world will be deceived so long as there are weak and deceivable people in it. The hands of the law may get hold of the crook, but it cannot take hold of the people who invite crookedness. The field is always ripe for the harvest of the cheat, because people are so cheatable. Think of how otherwise brainy men will indulge in the most stupid transactions, in almost impossible enterprises and speculations, in buying orange groves in Alaska, in all sorts of games in which the partner plays with loaded dice. Filled with the greed of possession, their eyes are blinded to the most obvious danger; they will try to catch the golden bird on the very verge of a precipice. They will believe every liar that owns a hole in the ground, and any good-looking crook that presents a still better looking check and makes no fuss about the price. Men are taken in, as we say, not merely because the other fellow is a rascal, but because something in themselves invites that rascality. We may be quite sure that the cheating tradesman would soon have to go out of business if there were not so many people who wanted something for nothing; so many who are eager to get a gold watch for the price of a nickel one; so many who like to play the old game of turning base metal into precious gold.

"Of course this does not justify cheating and lying, but it to no small degree accounts for it. We may even heartily condemn the crook, but in spite of our pity for his victim, we can help feeling that he is not altogether blameless. You see then that there exists a real interrelation between truth and a man's character, between himself and the thing he accepts as true. Strange as it may seem, the dishonest man is often most easily taken advantage of, and the liar most easily deceived. Where there is no truth in the inward parts, untruth finds the doors open.

Philosophy Based on Character.

"All this applies in the religion of philisophical and religious thought. A man's philosophy is no little the response of his character to the facts of life. Man thinks as he is. And so in the vast realm of religion the truth of doctrines are and must be tested by the very soul of man, by the truth that is in him. The teachings of the church do not find their real test by the textual or the higher criticism of the Bible, or by what St. Augustine believed or by what Jesus even is supposed to have taught. It makes in the end very little difference to one, who puts truth above all things, if the master believed in a place of eternal torment or no. When we are through with all arguing, after we have listened to the glib stupidity of learned doctors, we take to the doctrine to the tribunal of our own souls and by its verdict it must stand or fall. The verdict will depend upon what we are. I do not believe that any truly good man will ever take that doctrine seriously. His innermost soul will arise in revolt against a God, who taught us to love our enemies, but who himself would torment a soul, because it believes in his eternal goodness. No, good people never believe that doctrine, at best they believe that they believe. But even that shows that there is something wrong with them. The credulous believer may have many virtues, but he ever will be a moral weakling. And if you should really find a man, who truly and heartily believes in a God of wrath and vengeance, you have before you a man who does not know what love is, you have one whose moral self is perverted, who has no living truth in the inward path. Indeed so impossible has become that hoary doctrine that the Roman Catholics have invented a purgatory, where the souls of men are purified through pain for their final and eternal joy.

Case of Dives.

"But if, worse still, you should find a man who in our day contends what some of the old Protestant saints contended, that the joys of the blessed and saved are enhanced by the thought of eternal suffering of the damned, then such a man, even if he be the highest dignitary in the church, either belongs in the lunatic asylum or better the penitentiary, for he is a devil at heart. And where such souls congregate, who could rejoice in the torture of others, no matter how wicked, there, indeed, is direst hell, even though the place be at the very footstool of God, as on the other hand that place, where a miserable Dives prays Abraham that he might send a messenger to warn his brethren of this place of torment. Here is the abode of heaven in spite of pain and suffering. For heaven is the place of love, and wherever love is there is heaven. Make yourself strong in the inward parts, fill your soul with love of truth and faith in eternal goodness, and you will become immune against the spirits of falsity and untruth which fill our world."

PATH OF HONOR WAY TO PEACE

Jacob Given as Example of Trickster's Failure By Dr. Ryan.

Could Have Been Rich and Happy By Living Honest Life.

Rev. A. W. Ryan, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church, delivered a sermon on "The Trickster" yesterday morning. His theme was a disclosure on the punishment suffered by those who endeavor to defraud others of what is rightfully theirs. Dr. Ryan took Jacob as a subject to build his sermon around. Among other things he said:

"Jacob is one of the forthstanding characters of the Old Testament. His story is one of the most illuminative of all. His weaknesses, his great points are alike given to us. When he was born he took hold of the heel of his twin brother, born just before himself. It was typical of his life, tricky, over-reaching, unscrupulous. When his brother Esau came hungry from the field, Jacob bought the birthright, for a mess of pottage. It might be said that Esau would have lost it anyhow, and it had been foretold that the elder would serve the younger. Jacob would force the hand of providence and enter upon his heritage the quicker thereby.

"So men often try to push the designs of providence and always with sin and defeat. For Rebekah won for her favorite son the blessing, but that son had to flee for his life and to spend the next years expatriated. So far as we know, Rebekah never looked upon her son again in this world. And she ought to have known better, he ought to have known better himself. For it had been promised that the elder should serve the younger. He had only to wait on the plans of God and all would have been his. As it was, for twenty years and more, Jacob was a stranger to his own land, and in another country was cheated in fine shape by his own relative. By bargain he served seven years for Rachel, and at the end of the time found that he had been given an elder sister, Leah. Then he served other seven years for his beloved Rachel and then had naught but his wives and his children. Still longer he served the crafty Laban, until the flocks multiplied with marvelous success and again Jacob had to run for his life and property and go back to his brother in the old home, uncertain as to what his welcome would be. But that was better than staying where Laban might take him and all he had at any time.

"Had Jacob remained at home and been strictly honest and bided the ways of providence, he might have been rich and happy. As it was he passed a strenuous life, full of vicissitudes and he was not allowed to enjoy what he had. 'He was what has been called a child of destiny. He could not wait to gain his own with honor, but by craft and guile took away all possibility of a rightful and enjoyable inheritance. But he learned his lesson and after became a loyal son of Jehovah. And so he stands as an example of the failure of the trickster and the practical value of the life which knows that the path of honor and uprightness is the sole way to peace and joy and satisfaction."

GREED IS BASIS OF WORLD'S SIN

Woodland M. E. Pastor Preaches on "Evaluation of Eden."

Discontent was the beginning of the world's sin, according to Rev. R. E. Miller, who preached at Woodland M. E. church yesterday on the "Evaluation of Eden." He read the story of the fall of man as told in Genesis, and said that though Adam and Eve did not actually die at once after eating the forbidden fruit, they brought death into the world by that action; that it seems to have been the Creator's plan to translate men to heaven after they had developed in this life to the necessary point, as was done with Enoch and Moses. The pastor said in part:

"The forbidden tree was necessary because man was created with certain attributes previously possessed by none but God himself—personality, self-consciousness, self-direction, self-control, reason and will. This tree was necessary to develop these qualities, for they were not given to man fully developed, or it would not have been necessary for him to live on the earth to develop them.

"Then we see that man became discontented—or rather the woman did. I suppose curiosity is present in all of us. But something, or some voice, prompted Eve to ask herself why the fruit of that one tree was forbidden, and in doing this she flirted with temptation—and that is the sure way to fall.

"The fall of man was the curse of greed. Adam and Eve had much, but they wanted more, and in trying to satisfy this discontent they lost the luxury they already had. Eden was the scene of the original application of the principle given in Aesop's fable of the dog and the bone. And yet Eden was also the scene of preparation for the coming of Christ.

"But there is another principle, born on this earth in Eden, and still living and active today, and that is that death is the fruit of disobedience. Adam and Eve did not die at once, but their disobedience made death necessary; and today disobedience may not bring immediate punishment, but God's word still holds good—that those who eat of the fruit of the forbidden tree must not expect to escape paying the penalty for their wrong-doing."

RELIGION CAN STAND TEST

Christianity Must Not Fear Investigation, Says Rev. Mr. Sayles.

Declares Bible Is Guide in Faith But Not in Science.

Christianity must not be afraid of investigation and thought, Rev. R. Edward Sayles, pastor of the First Baptist church, told his congregation in his Sunday morning sermon. Scholars are investigating religion and people are concentrating their thought on religion more at the present day than ever before, he said.

"People are applying their thought to religion today as never before. People fear less to think today than formerly. Religion is being investigated by scholars as never before. Christianity must not be afraid of investigation and thought. Thinking today begins with facts and experience. Doubt and criticism have their legitimate place in discovery and elimination of untruth. It is the duty of Christians to be able to give a reason for the faith that is within them. Paul said: 'When I became a man I put away childish things.' No man can support an adult life on a child's religious ideas. Liberty of conscience gives every man this right to and duty of thoughtfulness on the deep theme of religion.

"God is a spirit, personal, perfect in goodness. He is 'nearer than breathing and closer than hands and feet.' He is imminent in the physical universe rather than absent from it. He is the force at work in evolution. He is imminent in the ideals of a man. He was in Jesus supremely. This makes prayer possible. There is no place where God is not."

"There are some who sneer at faith," he declared. "It is necessary to life. The man who sneers at it, exercises it; It is necessary to the development of the physical life; a man must trust the testimony of his senses. A man must trust his mind and the world before there can be mental life.

"Science is grounded in faith just as well as in religion. The first step of a materialist is a faith as well as the religious man's first step. Religious faith cannot be proved right or wrong. It is asserted by the best spirits. It is asserted in our best hours. There is something in man which science cannot illuminate or darken. 'The spiritual life is as much its own proof as the natural life.' It is awakened by many agencies. It comes from association with men of faith, from study of the faith expressed in the Bible, and from association with Jesus Christ.

"The Bible is a library of sixty-six books. In it are all forms of literature. These books have been selected by experience. The truth in the Bible is given through experience. It is marked by progress. This conception removes many so-called difficulties and contradictions. It is for our guidance in matters of faith and religion, but not in science. The Spirit of the eternal God was in the men whose faith is expressed in it. It is inspired spiritually, but not literally and mechanically.

PROPHECY BORNE OUT BY HISTORY

Pastor White Preaches Sermon on "The Seven Trumpets."

"The Seven Trumpets" of the revelation prophecy was the subject presented last evening by Pastor Stemple White of the Seventh Day Adventist church, corner of Tenth avenue east and Sixth street. Illustrating with historical cartoons, the address before a big audience he said in part:

"The trumpet is the symbol of war. As in the 'seven churches' and 'seven seals' of revelation, Jesus foretold the conflicts and trials of the Christian church through the seven periods of the intervening time between the first and second advents of Christ, even so in the seven trumpet series, Jesus foretold the warlike elements that would break loose during the Christian era on down to a revolted world's waterloo on the fields of Armageddon.

"What was prophetically announced in the symbolic language of the revelator is all completely recorded by Gibbon, the historian, in his decline and fall of the Roman empire. The sounding of the first trumpet angel with all its terrible results, met its fulfillment in the first great barbarian raid against Rome by the Goths under Alaric.

"Under the second trumpet, comes Genseric, king of the Vandals and 'Monarch of the Sea,' who, in a single night bottled up and burned the whole formidable fleet of Rome and her allies, who had spent three years in maritime preparedness. The very word 'vandalism' to this day is synonomous with ruthless destruction. Under the third trumpet Attila, who called himself the 'Scourge of God' with the 'sword of Mars,'—like a flashing meteor, led the Huns against the empire, particularly devastating the region of the Alps known as the 'fountains of waters.' Then comes Odaocer under the fourth trumpet, leading on the Herull hordes so furiously and successfully that eventually the Western empire fell to rise no more, and the seat of influence then shifts to Constantinople.

Invasion of Saracens.

"Under the fifth and sixth trumpets, the Saracen 'locusts' pour into Europe from the barren wastes of Arabia. Europe is long tormented by the people, who eventually capture Constantinople, and in spite of the crusades, to drive them out, firmly hold on to the coveted prize, until that time when, according to Bible prophecy, the 'Sick Man of the East' will be driven from the Dardanelles, after which he will make his last stand in Palestine. Gunpowder and cannon were first used in war, when the Turks captured Constantinople in 1453, and in spite of the twentieth century weapons of warfare, the drive of the Dardanelles by the allies has been held in check. But the city will shortly pass into other hands, and Turkey's 'wishbone' is today coveted by all the European warlogs.

"Under the seventh trumpet, Jesus Christ returns to earth accompanied by an innumerable company of holy angels to reap the harvest of the earth. He sounds a mighty trumpet, and the sleeping saints of all the ages arise from their dusty beds, immortalized. Those who have corrupted the earth, and made of it one vast cemetery, are destroyed, and in the kingdom of God in the renewed earth, war will be no more."

Mr. White will speak on "Turkey and her Future" next Sunday night.

EVELETH CHESS PLAYERS WIN

Defeat Duluth Men By Score of Eight to Six.

The Eveleth-Duluth chess tournament, which was played at the Y. M. C. A. Saturday afternoon and evening, resulted in eight games won by Eveleth players and six by Duluth. The matches seemingly were enjoyed as much by other chess players as the ones in the tournament, for at 11 o'clock there were still more than fifteen spectators awaiting the outcome.

F. C. Bryant, Morris Shanberg and Charles L. Mueller were the Eveleth players and M. B. Cullum, William Honigman, Frank Russell, A. B. Hostetter and F. C. Baluss represented Duluth. Several weeks ago Mr. Mueller tied for second place in the state tournament at St. Paul.

Mr. Mueller won from Russell, Hostetter and Ballus and lost to Honigman and Cullum. Mr. Bryant won from Hostetter and Cullum, and lost to Russell, Honigman and Ballus. Mr. Shanberg won from Honigman, Ballus and Cullum, and lost to Hostetter.

Plans are being made for the Duluth players to go to Eveleth some time in the near future to play the Eveleth men there.

DULUTH PRINTERS' PLAN IS INDORSED

Members of International Union Voting in Favor of Project.

Duluth is getting into the habit of "starting something" in various lines, which prove popular.

The latest to do it was the Duluth local of the International Typographical union, and the printers of the United States and its possessions, and Canada, on a referendum vote taken last Wednesday, seem to be giving the Duluth project their approval.

The project was to have three auditors elected by referendum vote of the International to audit the books of the union twice a year, instead of continuing the present system of having the books audited by men appointed by the international officers. The matter was submitted by the Duluth printers three months ago. It had to be adopted by 100 locals, but a safer margin than that was obtained, for 146 locals saw it the same way as the Duluth local, so the matter was submitted to vote last Wednesday.

Today returns began to come in, and the Duluth printers believe that their idea will be overwhelmingly favored, for the returns up to now are all that way. Chicago voted over 2 to 1 in favor of it, the Duluth local voted 95 to 0 for it, Minneapolis favored it heavily, and similar returns are being received from other points. It was submitted to the entire membership, which numbers about 60,000.

The Duluth printers began the agitation, believing that the officers should not be empowered to appoint the men to audit their own books, in view of the fact that the International union has several millions of dollars in its treasury and invested, and besides that has a big home in Colorado for sick and disabled members, which involves a large sum annually.

TUESDAY WILL BE FIRST DAY OF SPRING; WINTER "OFFICIALLY DEAD"

With today, winter ends, officially speaking, of course, for nobody can tell when winter weather will end. Tomorrow will be the first official day of spring, the time when the sun crosses the line on its way north to spend the summer.

Whether storms will be due with the spring equinox is always a question, but the predictions for tomorrow are for partly cloudy and warmer weather. However, the popular idea of the result of the sun crossing the line, in the fall or spring, is that there should be equinoctial gales. This idea the weather bureau scoffs, but thousands hold to it anyway.

Today is spring-like enough, with melting ice and snow, but a year ago today snow fell, and the following day was fair. The year before that, storms occurred, so one never can tell.

THINKS LAW'S DELAY UNFAIR

John Kobron, Held for Assault, Tired of Waiting in Jail.

Sues Out Habeas Corpus Writ; Complaining Witness Is Missing.

John Kobron does not relish the idea of languishing in jail while the authorities who are seeking to prosecute him are scouring the country to find their complaining witness. And because his case was not presented to the last grand jury for action, Kobron today sued out a writ of habeas corpus in district court, claiming that he is being illegally detained as a prisoner at the county jail.

Kobron was arrested for an assault he is alleged to have committed on one John Roscoe. He is charged with having struck Roscoe with a beer bottle during a quarrel which was staged in a saloon at 419 West Michigan street. On Jan. 21 last he was bound over to await the action of the March grand jury and, being unable to furnish $200 bail, was committed to the county jail.

When the grand jury convened, County Attorney Greene was unable to find Roscoe, the complaining witness, and he did not present the case to the investigating body. Consequently no action was taken in the case by the March grand jurors and Kobron saw prospects of lying in jail until the May grand jury considered his case.

Kobron is satisfied that, had he been given a speedy trial, he would have demonstrated to the satisfaction of any jury that Roscoe was the aggressor and that he was innocent of any attempt to attack Roscoe except in self defense. His attorneys, McCoy & Hansen, today served notice of the habeas corpus hearing on County Attorney Greene. The writ is returnable before the district court on Wednesday morning.

MUST CHANGE THE CHARTER

Double Platoon System Impossible Under Present Conditions, Says Voss.

Commissioner Discusses Financial and Taxation End of Plan.

If Duluth firemen insist upon a double-platoon system, being established at once, it will mean an annual additional expense of from $50,000 to $75,000, which will necessitate increasing the city's tax levy maximum of 13 mills, according to Finance Commissioner Voss.

"In the first place, I don't know exactly what the firemen want," said Commissioner Voss this morning, "and I would very much like to see their petition or talk the matter over with some of their representatives. The question has never been brought before the council.

"If their plan—and I am judging merely from accounts in the newspapers—is to establish a complete double platoon, it means an annual additional expense of nearly $75,000. The present payroll of the fire department is $124,620. That increase is out of the question altogether under present conditions, with the charter prohibiting a levy of over 13 mills.

"On the other hand, if the plan does not involve such an expense, it is possible we can work out a satisfactory plan when the 1917 budget is made next fall. We could appropriate say $10,000 a year for the next three or four years, thus working up to the system gradually.

Up to Citizens.

"If they want the system at once, it will be up to the citizens to vote for an amendment to the charter, increasing the tax levy maximum. I am absolutely in the dark as to what is the exact nature of the petition and I understand the other commissioners are in the same boat. I may recommend to the council this afternoon that a committee of firemen be invited to present their request to the commission."

Commissioner Voss pointed out this morning that firemen in Minneapolis and St. Paul do not have double-platoon systems, while they answer from six to ten times as many alarms every day.

WOULD HAVE PEACE ENFORCEMENT PLANK

INSERTED IN PLATFORMS OF ALL PARTIES

The League to Enforce Peace, of which Former President Taft is head, has started a movement to have the political parties in the coming national conventions at St. Louis and Chicago insert planks in their platforms indorsing the proposal that a league of nations be formed for the purpose of insuring future world peace, by the establishment of international tribunals to which international disputes can be referred, such nations to pledge their joint armed and economic forces against any signatory which declares war or begins hostilities prior to a recourse to such tribunals.

The League to Enforce Peace is not an anti-preparedness organization, nor is its aim to end the present European war.

For the purpose of gaining recognition at St. Louis and Chicago the Taft Peace League has begun an active campaign in each state to have introduced in local party platforms the following uniform plank prepared by the League's national executive committee:

"We indorse the proposal that a league of nations be formed for joint action under such regulations as such league shall adopt against any nation which proposes to make war without prior recourse to such world tribunals and methods of conciliation as such league of nations shall have duly approved."

Among those in Minnesota who are expected to co-operate are: Prof. Edward Dana Durand, John Lind, Cyrus Northrop, Charles S. Pillsbury, John S. Pillsbury, George E. Vincent, W. J. McCabe of Duluth, Adolph C. Eberhart, Dr. Samuel F. Kerfoot, and Bishop William A. Quayle.

The platform of the Taft league, in full, as adopted last June at Philadelphia in Independence hall, is:

"We believe it to be desirable for the United States to join a league of nations binding the signatories to the following:

"First. All justiciable questions arising between the signatory powers, not settled by negotiation, shall, subject to the limitations of treaties, be submitted to a judicial tribunal for hearing and judgment, both upon the merits and upon any issue as to its jurisdiction of the question.

"Second. All other questions arising between the signatories and not settled by negotiation, shall be submitted to a council of conciliation for hearing, consideration and recommendation.

"Third. The signatory powers shall jointly use forthwith both their economic and military forces against any one of their number that goes to war, or commits acts of hostility, against another of the signatories before any question arising shall be submitted as provided in the foregoing."

No provision is made for the enforcement of the decree, however. Under the plan nations may fight after arbitration, if they feel that justice demands it.

"Fourth. Conferences between the signatory powers shall be held from time to time to formulate and codify rules of international law, which, unless some signatory shall signify its dissent within a stated period, shall thereafter govern in the decisions of the judicial tribunal mentioned in Article 1."

DULUTH TO HAVE CITY AMBULANCE

Will Soon Advertise for Bids, Says Safety Head.

Duluth will have a city ambulance some time this spring.

This announcement was made today by Commissioner Silberstein, safety head, in answer to a query in connection with the proposed plan to purchase a city ambulance to replace the police emergency patrol, which is now used for that purpose.

"Our original plan to build an ambulance body on the fire chief's car will not work out satisfactorily," said the safety head, "and we will shortly advertise for bids to furnish the city with a complete ambulance, or a chassis with a specially constructed ambulance top."

It is estimated that the ambulance will cost about $2,000.

FORT BILLS IN NORTHERN

Canadian Club Magnate Pays Money to President John Burmeister.

A late train from Milwaukee kept Charles Moll from arriving in Duluth early enough today for the Northern league meeting, which was scheduled to begin at 10 o'clock. As Mr. Moll has one of the real schedule drafts in his pocket, it was decided to await his arrival before proceeding with any business of importance. Hence the meeting did not get under way until late this afternoon.

Dr. D. N. Mitchell paid his money over before the start of the afternoon session of the magnates. Thus it was assured that Fort William would be in the league before the meeting was called. Representatives of Grand Forks were on the wire and in earnest conversation with Burmeister. But right now it looks as if there will be nothing provided for Grand Forks during the present Northern league season.

The Spalding baseball will this year supplant the Goldsmith ball, which has been used in the Northern for the last several seasons. That and the fact that Fort William is in the league and also that Dr. Mitchell is trying to trade Pitcher Hawkins to Duluth constitute about all the news that broke loose during the lobby session of the morning.

J. TEN EYCK IS DUE HERE

Coach of Duluth Crews Expected in Duluth Tuesday.

James E. Ten Eyck is expected to arrive in Duluth tomorrow. The coach of the boat club crews wired Ned Ten Eyck that he is on his way. If he keeps to his schedule, Jimmy will arrive in Duluth some time Tuesday.

Now that the regatta is assured for Duluth, the great cry is for heavier candidates for the crews. Ned Ten Eyck declared today that many more men are needed for the crews. If the showing of Duluth this year is to be up to the standard of past years, it is stated openly that more candidates will have to come out.

"This is the year we need candidates more than ever," said Ned Ten Eyck. "The weeding process will start presently, and here we have not near enough men to fill out the various places. For the sake of Duluth and for the good of the game here, I would like to see about 100 more men out for places in the boat."

ONLY TWO DEATHS AT CITY HOSPITAL

Remarkable Record Being Made in Handling Contagious Diseases.

The second death at the city's contagious hospital since the Silberstein regime was inaugurated was reported early this morning. It was that of Miss Georgiana Gibeau of 1532 West Superior street.

Aside from the death of an infant, a few days after Commissioner Silberstein and Health Director E. W. Fahey took charge on March 20, last, the hospital's record was perfect until today. Both of these cases were in charge of private physicians, and Miss Gibeau was in the hospital but a few days, authorities said.

City physicians have made a remarkable record at the contagious hospital during the last year, as they have not lost a single case of scarlet fever or typhoid which was cared for at the municipal institution.

Miss Gibeau was 23 years old, and leaves her mother, four brothers and three sisters. The sisters are: Mrs. L. Gagne of Wellington street, Mrs. J. M. Frink and Miss Amelia Gibeau, all of Duluth. the brothers are: Moses, Louis, Sabien and Napoleon.

Funeral services were held from M. J. Fillatrault's chapel in West Duluth at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Miss Gibeau was well known in the West end, having lived there several years.

DULUTH TO SHOW EAST HOW TO STAGE A REGATTA

Awarding of National to Zenith City Means That One of the Greatest Aquatic Meets in the History of the National Rowing Association Will Be Staged—The Great Mike Gibbons Is Here.

BY BRUCE.

DULUTH has secured the 1916 national association rowing regatta—and this means that the regatta will be one of the greatest held in the history of the association. When you stop to consider that the association has been doing business in various sections of the country for the last forty-one years, the largeness of this statement may be realized. But in the matter of rowing Duluth surely does not do things by halves, nor does it lack enthusiasm and excess of energy. Unless a lot of people are greatly mistaken, it will remain for the West to show the effete East how to properly stage a great rowing meet.

It is only after the general layman has an idea of the strong predeliction for the East and all that is Eastern that is held by the directors of the national rowing association—and nearly every one of the directors are Eastern men—that he can have even a hazy comprehension of the remarkable feat that has been accomplished by Duluth in the securing of the next regatta. After coming to the realization that Duluth has pulled off a big stunt, then credit the great, the wonderful showing of the Duluth crews during the last four years with the accomplishment of pulling the regatta West, because in the face of that remarkable showing it was hardly possible for the directors of the association to overlook Duluth.

Bringing the regatta out here probably means that for the first time in a number of years the followers of rowing here will see some close contests. It is a fact—though hardly a lamentable one—that the crews of the Duluth Boat club have been so good that the outside crews have never been in the contests. If the home officials go through with their large plans, the 1916 national will be one of the greatest regattas ever held in the United States, so that it is almost certain that even if Duluth does succeed in winning a majority of the events on the two days' program, there will be some real races.

It Will Be a Big Affair.

FROM an athletic standpoint the regatta to be staged on St. Louis bay will surely prove one of the great sporting events of 1916. This statement is not confined to sectional limitations, but includes the entire country. Duluth has finally leaped blithely into the national calcium and is about to set upon the labor of staging one of the big athletic events of the country.

Awarding the regatta to Duluth is a fitting recognition of the unprecedented victories of the crews of the Duluth Boat club. In the past the Argonauts, Unions of Boston and the New York Athletic club crews have dominated the national rowing circles and held sway. But for the last four years the crews of the Duluth club have swept all before them, compelling the Eastern followers of rowing to first wonder, then become awestruck, and finally to succumb to frank and open admiration of the remarkable rowing of the Western men.

Bringing the regatta west will possibly mean that more Western oarsmen will be seen in action than has been the case in a number of years. If some of the ambitious plans that have been talked over hatch out, crews from as far to the South as New Orleans and as far to the West as California, will compete here with crews from the Atlantic shore.

It has always been promised by the local club rowing men that if Duluth were but awarded the regatta that she would show the country one of the greatest rowing meets ever held in the United States. Well, Duluth has been awarded the regatta, and there is no doubt in the world but that all promises will be made good in regard to the general class and magnitude of the big meet.

Gibbons, Smith —Gibbons.

Darcy, McGoorty —Darcy.

You might figure Dillon in the running. As a future opponent for Mike, perhaps, but as a middleweight contender, no. It is a safe and sane bet that Dillon will never make the middleweight poundage.

Maybe he will meet Michael, because they are sure up against it in St. Paul to provide an opponent for Mike who will excite the interest of the populace.

Every time the name of some one is mentioned, like Chip, for instance, the home folks yawn, stretch and then remark, "Say, Mike would make that guy look like a fool."

Most of the boxing fans of St. Paul refused to believe Jeff Smith possessed a chance in the world to beat Gibbons. This, too, despite the impressive record of the Eastern boy. That's the reason the house failed to be as big as the Ahearn gate, and Smith is a greater fighter by several city blocks than the boy Mike kayoed in a round.

Darcy is the one bird left for Gibbons. The war has somewhat fettered the activities of the rising young Australian blacksmith. If he ever invades the U. S. A., a contest between him and Gibbons will arouse a tremendous amount of interest.

Jim Jeffries retired for the lack of opponents. It begins to appear as if Mike Gibbons, right in the very height of his prime, may be forced to go without frequent contests, because there are no middleweights left that can make the Phantom extend himself.

Mike Gibbons is here today for the first time in a number of years. Once, several years ago, he came without acclaim, silently like the Arabs in the night, and attracted little notice. That was back in the days before fans kissed Mike on the forehead and threw a shining golden mantle over his shoulders. Now how different. The great Gibbons comes hailed as the greatest middleweight of his time, one of the greatest of all time, and lo and behold, the populace take exceeding notice and cheer.

Fame, indeed, is one of the best advance agents in the world.

BOTH ARE FIT FOR BIG FIGHT TEST

Jess Willard and Frank Moran Letting Up on Training.

New York, March 20.—Jess Willard, perfectly satisfied with his condition, said yesterday that he was physically fit to enter the ring at any moment to defend his title of world's champion.

He did not take any gym or other exercises except what Tom Jones, his manager, called "an energetic walk" of three and a half miles. The big Kansan then rested quietly at his uptown quarters near Central park.

Moran put in one of the busiest sessions of his training at his Westchester camp. Yesterday morning, after a cross-country run of four miles, he had made up his mind to take it easy, but a host of his newsboy friends from the city appeared and he was unable to resist their earnest requests to let them see him work out.

He donned his training clothes and punched the bag for fully ten minutes and then skipped the rope for five more. The newsboys cheered him and in response to their entreaties, Moran boxed five rounds in which he took on Madden, McKinnon and Kendall at a lively pace.

TWO NEW AUTO RECORDS MADE

Bob Burman and Barney Oldfield Chalk Up New Marks.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 20.—Two world's records for automobile speedways were established yesterday at the racing meet at the new Ascot speedway here.

Barney Oldfield lowered the world's record for a mile from a flying start by almost three-quarters of a second, and Bob Burman slipped 4 4-5 seconds off the world's record for the same distance from a standing start, according to the official time.

Officials said Oldfield's time for the mile was 45 seconds flat. The best previous record was 45.73 seconds. It was made at Providence, R. I., by Burman.

Burman drove a mile from a standing start in 58 1-5 seconds, lowering the record of 1 minute and 3 seconds, previously held by Louis Disbrow. The latter's record was made at St. Louis.

Both records were made during special trials for world's automobile speed records.

Eddie O'Donnell won the 50-mile sweepstakes, which was the feature event of the meet. His time was 43 minutes 5 seconds.

THIS MAN LABORED HARD FOR REGATTA

JULIUS H. BARNES.

Mr. Barnes has done more than any one man to secure the National regatta for Duluth, just as he has done more than any other man to bring rowing to its present height in Duluth. It has long been the ambition of Mr. Barnes to bring a national regatta to Duluth, and he has labored long and diligently to accomplish this end. The awarding of a national regatta to this city is a tribute to Mr. Barnes.

SMITH WINS SPEED TITLE

Controversy Over Auto Contest Two Weeks Ago Is Settled.

Bayliss and Dr. Park Are Defeated; Peterson Fails to Appear.

Norman Smith yesterday afternoon proved that he is the automobile "speed king" of Duluth.

Ever since the ice races two weeks ago there has been a controversy over the merits of the contest, claims having been made by friends of Harry Peterson, Case driver, that he was not given a square deal in the main event won by Andrew Bayliss. Peterson refused to participate in the award of prizes last week, and local drivers decided to hold a contest yesterday afternoon. A purse of $400 was to have been raised, in addition to several side bets.

Peterson failed to appear for the contest yesterday, and three of the drivers decided to hold a friendly race to determine the driving leadership of Duluth. Those who took part were: Andrew Bayliss, Mathewson; Norman Smith, National, and Ray Buchanan, Locomobile.

The three machines started together, and for the first few laps the contest was close, with first one machine getting the lead and then another. On the sixth lap, Dr. Park's car was disabled, and he was compelled to drop out, leaving Bayliss and Smith to fight it out for supremacy.

The two drivers fought hard for the lead, but in the thirteenth lap, Bayliss was forced to drop out with a broken wheel, leaving Smith the only contender for the title. The latter finished the remaining two laps in easy fashion, winning the title of "speed king of Duluth" and a $150 purse raised by the three contenders.

FAST GAME PROMISED.

Unbeaten Duluth Y. M. C. A. Basket Ball Team Will Play Proctor.

The Y. M. C. A. All-Stars, one of the fastest basket ball teams that has ever represented the local association, have not lost a game during the present season. They will meet the Proctor Y. M. C. A. Wednesday evening, March 23, in the local association gymnasium. As the Proctor quint is very fast and has played some very good games during the season, it is expected that the meeting between the rival association teams will provide some excellent sport. It is probably that this contest will be the last of the present season.

BLANKENSHIP IN SIGHT OF WORLD CHAMPIONSHIP

Chicago, March 20.—One more victory will give Emmett Blankenship of Detroit possession of the medal emblematic of the world's pocket billiard championship, and on form, he should win from Ralph Greenleaf, the youth from Monmouth, Ill., in his final game of the tournament here today. The meet proper winds up with Monday's games, but in case of ties, extra games will be played.

Today Concannon meets Fink, Clark plays Allen, Blankenship and Greenleaf clash in the first night games, and Taberski and Ralph close the schedule.

MAGNATES IN SESSION HERE

Final Action Expected on the Northern League Schedule.

Special Consent May Be Secured to Raise Salary Limit.

Northern league baseball magnates are in session here today. The meeting of the club owners is being held in the Spalding for the purpose of passing upon the schedule, agreeing on salaries and settling definitely on the league makeup.

While it is almost certain that Fort William will be in the league during the approaching season, a definite and final decision in regard to the attitude of the Canadian club will be arrived at some time during the day.

One important announcement was that coming from President John Burmeister. The league executive stated that in all probability the salary limit would be raised from $1,400 per month to $1,600. This is exclusive of the manager.

"The Northern league circuit has sufficient population to make it a Class B circuit," said President Burmeister. "In that case it is possible to secure the privilege of increasing the salary limit of the clubs. Last year the Northern league salary limit was $1,400. We will probably increase the salary limit to $1,600."

Declaring that there were a multitude of fast baseball players on the market this season, President Burmeister was loud in his declaration that the coming season would prove one of the best in the history of the league.

To Decide on Schedule.

President Burmeister has half a dozen schedules in his possession. One of these will be adopted in toto or in modified form. All business pertaining to the schedule and to the affairs of the club is expected to be settled today. The question of mileage is one that is expected to come in for long and arduous discussion before the final adoption of a schedule.

Among the magnates present are: H. A. Blume, president of the Duluth club; Charles Armstead, president of the Superior club; Dr. D. N. Mitchell, president of the Fort William club; J. P. Hardy, secretary of the Fargo club; A. B. Coates of the Virginia club, and Charles Moll, active manager of the Winnipeg club.

MAY INVADE AUSTRALIA

Mike Gibbons Declares He May Box Darcy in Never Never Land.

Michael J. Gibbons arrived in Duluth yesterday morning and will give boxing exhibitions here during the first five days of the week with his brother, Tommy, who is almost as well known as the famous phantom.

In discussing the Smith contest today, Mike declared that he tried every possible means to make a battle of it, but that he found it quite impossible to draw the New Jersey boy out of his shell.

"Smith didn't hurt me," said Mike. "I know I hurt him on several occasions. It was after I clipped Jeff on the jaw that he covered up and refused to lead at all. When a fellow goes entirely on the defensive and refuses to lead or carry the fight to you, he is very hard to hit.

"I left myself open on several occasions, hoping that Smith would take a healthy swing at me, but he refused to take a chance. When a man fights that kind of a bout, believe me, he can make any fight uninteresting."

May Visit the Antipodes.

A trip to Australia is vaguely contemplated by Mike. While the St. Paul boy has not definitely made up his mind as yet, if Darcy does not come to the United States, it is possible that Gibbons, like Mahomet of old, who went to the mountain, may move to the Never Never land.

"I kind of think this Darcy is made for me," said Gibbons. "I have heard a lot of him and have tried to get a line on his style. The dope that comes to me impresses me with the belief that Darcy would prove a nice match."

If anyone is of the impression that Gibbons does not bear the marks of a fighting trade, one close-up look at the Phantom's face will quickly disabuse him of this opinion. Gibbons has a flattened nose and as fine a cauliflower ear as ever adorned a pugilist. While considered the cleverest man in the ring, at the same time Gibbons has taken them good and hard. One of the reasons why Gibbons is great is that he is both a boxer and a fighter.

NO NEW LEADERS.

Bowling at Toledo Sunday Develops Some Heroic Attempts.

Toledo, Ohio, March 20.—Minor event leaders rode through another long day's schedule in the American Bowling Congress tournament here yesterday without having their colors lowered, although some heavy charges were launched. The best attack came from the work of William and George Dernbach, two Chicago brothers, who posted 1,266 for third place. W. D. Drehr of Rockford landed 667 in the singles for sixth place, while Omaha made its best bid so far with a 1,874 mark that installed A. Wartchow in third place in all events.

William Drehr of Rockford, Ill., was high individual of the day with 667 that ran him sixth. Hart Reinke of Milwaukee was second high with 652, a split and an error holding him back. The Dimlings of Pittsburgh led the late squad with the score of 2,760.

Russian Minister Resigns.

London, March 20.—An imperial ukase announces the resignation of Alex I. Kvostoff, Russian minister of interior, according to a Reuter dispatch from Petrograd. Premier Sturmer is assigned the portfolio, adds the dispatch, assuming its duties in addition to those of the premiership.

CENTRALS OF MINNEAPOLIS ARE TOURNAMENT WINNERS

Five-Men Mark of Fiats Passed By Centrals in Final Lap of Week's Bowling—Stasch of Mill City Wins Singles, While Webb and Freedel of Chisholm Are Winners in Doubles—Tourney Was Great Success.

Bowling marks were shattered yesterday, the final day in the Northern League Bowling tournament, when the five-man team record, the singles and the doubles were all replaced by fresh marks.

The Centrals of Minneapolis came through with some of the best bowling of the tournament and set the team mark at 2,927, almost 100 points more than the score set up earlier in the week by the Flats of the same city. The mark made by the Flats withstood all assaults until the Centrals began hitting the wood. Some of the very best bowling of the tournament was witnessed when the Mill City boys got under way.

While no particularly high individual scores were made by the members of the winning Central team, the playing of the Minneapolis men was very consistent and no member of the team fell down on the job.

Hopes that Joe Deller's mark of 625 would hold and the honor of winning the singles would go to a Duluth man were shattered, as well as the record hung up by Joe, when Stasch of Minneapolis hit the maple for a count of 663. Lamphear of Minneapolis turned in a score but ten points behind his fellow townsman, with Chandler of St. Paul at 638. Deller was left in fourth place.

Not only did Stasch win the first money in the singles, but he was also the winner of the all events first prize.

Northern Minnesota found representation among the winners in the Webb and Freedel combination of Chisholm, this pair winning the doubles with the score of 1,193. Krause and Buskey of Rhinelander, Wis., the pair that remained in front the greater part of the tournament, finally landed in third place.

Minneapolis Shows Well.

Chief honors of the tournament were carried off by Mill City bowlers. Three of the four first prizes went to the Minneapolis men. Of the $1,750 prize money hung up by the prize committee, the Mill City bowlers carried off considerably more than half.

The tournament was by far the most successful ever held in the bowling history of Northeastern Minnesota. There were more than 3,500 games played from a week ago Friday evening until midnight this morning. The tournament was run off without delay or confusion, despite the fact that the large number of entries compelled the officials to operate the bowlers in shifts. Not only were there more bowlers entered than in any other previous tournament, but the quality of play was by far the best ever witnessed here. The assault on the records made on the final day of the tournament gave a Garrison finish to the week of play.

Many of the best known figures in Northwestern bowling were here. "Dad" Hull, a veteran follower of the pin game, who toured the United States with a team as far back as 1884, and who has contributed columns regarding the game, was one of the conspicuous figures.

Great Credit to Duluth.

The tournament was a great credit to Duluth and to the bowling officials chiefly responsible for its success. It served to place the game on a very firm basis here and also demonstrated that Duluth is a live center of the game. The tournament that came to a conclusion yesterday was one of the greatest held in the United States this season. Great enthusiasm for the pin game was created here by the success of the tourney and the quality of play witnessed.

While visiting bowlers were profuse in their congratulations on the success of the tournament, Duluth officials of the Northern Bowling association declared last night, at the conclusion of play, that the tournament to be held next season will be even larger. It has been proved that a great tournament can be staged here, and with the success of the 1916 tournament as an inspiration, there is little doubt but that the 1917 tourney will be one of the greatest in the United States.

Following are the high scores of the tournament and the individual scores of the members of the winning Centrals of Minneapolis:

DULUTH BOY IS WINNER

Louis Ardouin Takes First Place in St. Paul Swimming Contest.

Louis Ardouin won the 200-yard swimming contest staged in the St. Paul Y. M. C. A. swimming pool Saturday afternoon. The time was 2:28, which is considered very fair time. Oliver Maggard also represented the local association, but failed to win any event.

Ardouin was second in the fastest heat of the 25-yard dash, scratching in the finals. Harry Warner beat Ardouin in the fastest heat of this contest, the time being 11 3-5 seconds, equaling the world's record. The Duluth boy was beaten by inches in one of the greatest contests ever seen in the Saintly City. Claiming that the warm water in the tank affected him so that he was not at his best, Ardouin was beaten in the 100-yard contest. The event was won by H. Tabor in 1:25, while Ardouin has often made the distance in 1:09.

The meet was held under the auspices of the A. A. U., and some of the festest swimmers of the Northwest competed. The Minneapolis Athletic club, Shattuck, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis and St. Paul Y. M. C. A.s, as well as other institutions, entered crack men, there being more than fifty entrants competing.

Detroit, Mich., March 20.—Twelve race horses were burned to death in a fire which destroyed six barns at the Michigan state fair grounds early yesterday. The horses were valued at $25,000 and the loss on the buildings was about $30,000. The cause of the fire has not been determined.

Most of the horses burned were be-

Making roofing is the General's chief business. He makes one third of all roll roofing made in America—39 other manufacturers make the balance. Such predominance is due to the General's ability to make the highest quality roofing at the lowest cost.
Every advantage that men, money, mills and machinery can offer is used to increase production, maintain quality and lower the cost.
The result is that today CERTAIN-TEED, the world's best quality, costs less than inferior roofing cost 10 years ago.
CERTAIN-TEED is made of the best quality roofing felt, thoroughly saturated with a scientific blend of soft asphalts, the formula of the General's board of expert chemists. It is then coated with a blend of harder asphalts, which keeps the inner saturation soft and prevents the drying-out process so destructive to ordinary roofing.
CERTAIN-TEED is guaranteed for 5, 10 or 15 years, according to ply (1, 2 or 3). Experience proves that it lasts longer.
CERTAIN-TEED is made in rolls, also in slate-surfaced shingles. There is a type of CERTAIN-TEED for every kind of building, with flat or pitched roofs, from the largest sky-scraper to the smallest residence or out-building.

JEWS OBSERVE PURIM.

Feast of Deliverance By Queen Esther Celebrated in Synagogues.

Duluth Jews yesterday celebrated the feast of Purim, which commemorates the deliverance of the Jews of Persia, through the intervention of Queen Esther and her kinsman, Mordecai, from a threatened massacre planned by Haman, the king's vizier.

At the Adas Israel synagogue, the Book of Esther was read Saturday evening and yesterday morning, while special Purim services were held at Temple Emanuel last Friday evening.

The feast bears the name of "Purim" because it is recorded that Haman, the arch enemy of the Jews, sought to fix the day of their destruction by casting "Purim," which, according to a popular etymology given in the Book of Esther, means "Lots." The feast is more social in character than religious. It does not require cessation from labor or any special religious ceremony other than the reading of the Book of Esther and the reciting of a few special prayers inspired by the event commemorated.

DULUTH WOMAN ENJOYS HER CIGARETTE AT ST. PATRICK'S DAY CLUB PARTY

"Yes, she certainly is smoking," said the woman with the St. Patrick's flag in her waist.

"It looks like a 'nail'; it smells like a 'nail'; it is a nail,'" said her escort.

"Good for her," said the woman who had been "abroad." "In England or France they wouldn't think anything of it."

"Well, many of you do it in secret anway," said the escort. "Why shouldn't you have the nerve to do it in the open. If you want to smoke, why don't you smoke in restaurants, or in clubs, or on the street?"

"Shocking," said the woman with the flag. "What an example for young girls!"

"Well, what an example for young boys when men smoke."

"Oh, but it's different," said the woman.

"We are horribly provincial," said the woman who had been abroad. "Here we are chattering like a lot of parrots about a woman smoking a cigarette. In Paris it wouldn't attract any more attention than a man smoking a cigar after dinner. Why can't we act sensibly about it?"

"I'm for it," said the escort. "My wife has her cigarette occasionally in our own house, after a dinner party, but she hasn't had the nerve to do it any place else."

"Our mothers never did it," said the woman with the flag.

"My grandmother did," said the escort, "only she used a clay pipe."

"Your daughter may be back there," said the woman who had been abroad, tartly. "Three generations from shirt sleeves to shirt sleeves."

"She's safe as long as coppers keep acting the way they are," responded the escort cheerfully.

The cause of it all was that at a St. Patrick's day party at one of Duluth's clubs last Friday evening, a well known Duluth woman smoked a cigarette after dinner.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OFFERS ITS MEMBERS MANY VALUABLE PRIVILEGES

Homecrofters and homeowners of Duluth who are interested in growing trees, fruits and flowers in their gardens, are being urged to join the Northeastern Minnesota Horticultural society, an organization which has for its purpose the securing and dissemination of knowledge pertaining to tree, fruit and plant culture in this portion of the state.

The local society is a branch of the Minnesota State Horticultural society and the payment of an annual membership fee of $1 to the secretary of the local society makes one a member of both the state and local organizations. The society holds its annual meeting and banquet in November of each year. During the summer a picnic will be held at the Northeast Experiment station.

Each member is entitled to premiums offered by the state and local society, lists of which may be secured from E. L. Kimball, 604 First National bank building. The present officers of the society are: O. S. Andresen, president; C. E. Roe, vice president; E. L. Kimball, secretary; J. A. Neal, treasurer; Mrs. Henry Nesbitt and Mrs. S. George Stevens, members of the executive board.

The present membership of the state society is more than 3,000 and includes the most active and wide-awake professional and amateur horticulturists throughout the Northwest. CITY CLERK SUGGESTS DEPARTMENT CONFERENCES

Weekly conferences of department heads are urged by City Clerk Borgen to establish a mutual understanding between city employes and avoid conflicts between the division.

Clerk Borgen will take the matter up with Mayor Prince and if the plan is advisable, will send out notices to all the officials, pointing out the desirability of these weekly sessions and suggesting Friday afternoon as the best time for holding the meetings.

"Many conflicts between the different departments might be avoided if the officials would hold a regular weekly conference to discuss matters pertaining to their work," said Mr. Borgen. "Handling of requisitions, petitions, assessments and various other features of our work would be greatly facilitated by a mutual understanding.

"In nearly every big business the department heads hold such conferences at regular intervals, and I don't see why the scheme wouldn't be a great help in conducting the city's affairs."

Chicago, March 20.—Judges, merchants, lawyers and amateur diplomats rubbed elbows at the first session of a class in international law which was opened today under the direction of Prof. Charles Cheney Hyde of the Northwestern university law school.

The rights and wrongs of Mexican intervention, the German submarine problem, President Roosevelt's intervention in Panama and other current international problems will be made the subject of the course of twenty lectures by Prof. Hyde.

Among the latter are importers and exporters, whose business is affected by the unusual international complications growing out of the European war and the situation in Mexico.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

NORTH DAKOTA PRIMARY TAME

Republicans Evidence Little Interest in La Follette or Estabrook.

Enthusiasm for Badger Senator, Apparent Four Years Ago, Not Shown.

Bismarck, N. D., March 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—The vote at tomorrow's presidential primaries will scarcely be half that of four years ago, when excitement was high over the claims of La Follette, Taft, Roosevelt and others. With only La Follette and Estabrook filed and little enthusiasm for either, Republican voters appear indifferent. The contrast over La Follette sentiment between now and 1912 is pronounced. Then his partisans swept the state with their enthusiasm. Today the following La Follette has in North Dakota is sentimental as political leaders do not believe he has the possibility of winning the presidential nomination.

Six speeches were made last week in North Dakota by Estabrook and his audiences were large, liberal in their applause and favorably impressed but he left no enthusiasm behind him. President Wilson being unopposed, Democrats are solidly supporting him.

Not Interested in Election.

No one cares who are the presidential electors. The Republicans have two sets, one announced by the state Republican central committee, another urged by the combined forces of the Equity leaders and the remnants of the once powerful faction of insurgent Republicans. The Democrats, too, have two sets of presidential candidates in the field, both for Wilson.

The only interest among Republicans is over the Republican national committeeman. Gundor Olson, former state treasurer, seeks that place. He has a large number of personal friends over the state and if a representative vote were cast he would be easily elected. William Lempke of Fargo is out for the place and has the Equity and insurgent Republican support, although he is said to have always been a Democrat.

The Democrats are divided over the national committeemanship with the McArthur faction supporting Breugger, the Doyle-Dulis-McLean crowd backing State Chairman Perry, and the Equity crowd supporting William Olson of Valley City. While Breugger and Lenpke are fighting for the place Olson may capture the honor.

The Republicans are more harmonious, or rather they are less antagonistic, now than any time within a dozen years. The Democratic differences are more acute than ever and there is a larger element of personal bitterness than ever before.

Tomorrow's vote is unlikely to be large enough to indicate anything.

NORTH STAR COLLEGE HAS PAID OFF DEBT

Raises Enough to Secure Hill Donation and Students Celebrate.

Warren, Minn., March 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—North Star college has raised enough funds by popular subscription to pay off its entire indebtedness. The total amount raised is practically $37,000 including a donation of $9,000 by J. J. Hill. The business men of Warren and farmers of the northern part of the Red River valley raised the other $27,000.

North Star college is a Swedish Lutheran institution and has had a hard struggle since the year of its organization to maintain its existence. Now since the large debt has been paid the school directors look for a rapid growth for the school.

As the valley is largely populated with Scandinavians there has always been somewhat of a demand for an institution of this kind in this section.

The students celebrated the victory in great style Saturday, building a monstrous bonfire on the campus and parading the streets, giving college yells and songs.

ESCAPES RUSSIA BY USING SKIS

Travels Miles Over Snow-Covered Ground and Comes to America.

Crystal Falls, Mich., March 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—Using skis as a means of escaping from Russian tyranny, and making it possible to come to the "land of the free," is the latest, according to John Beck, a young Finn, who has just reached here to join his uncle, Erick Erickson.

Young Beck tells a story of getting away from Finland that would make a thriller.

Beck and two companions attempted to come to America by sailing from their home town in Finland but were denied passage.

The three young men then went by train to Uleaborg in an attempt to get out of Russia by the northern route but soldiers met them there and turned them back. The boys went back and a big party was given at their home near Wasa to which all their young friends, the country round, were invited. The party was given to celebrate their return home, it being the common impression about the community that John and his companions had given up the idea of leaving for America.

Had Different Plans.

But the boys had different plans and after the guests had left in the early morning hours, a horse and rig appeared and the three drove away to some islands out from Wasa in the Gulf of Bothnia. Here they dismissed their horse and hired another to drive them out on the ice as far as it was safe for the horse to go. They took with them a small bag of provisions and a pair of skis. Beck had about $100 on his person, and the other boys were provided with funds also. At a distance of twenty-eight miles from shore the driver of the horse stopped and the boys bade him goodby, buckled on their skis and struck out due west across the Gulf of Bothnia, a distance of 120 miles, in the dead of a Russian winter.

One Boy Exhausted.

They stuck resolutely at their tramp for five long days. Their provisions froze solid and they had no way of warming it. One of the party became exhausted and it was thought that they would have to leave him. But, they slackened their pace and late on the fifth day they met a Swede fisherman, who helped them carry their companion to shore. Once ashore and again in a house the reaction began and it was five days before they could leave the fisherman's cabin.

Once more rested they sold their skis for $1, hired a horse and drove to the nearest railroad station, where they took passage for Christiania, where they had to wait several days for a boat.

WOULD MAKE WASHBURN DRY

Washburn, Wis., March 20.—A petition is being circulated here for the purpose of having the license question submitted to the vote of the people.

The Commercial club, the manufacturers, the Dupont company, every merchants in the city, and practically every person who has the least interest in Washburn—citizens, who want to avoid the strife that a license campaign will undoubtedly bring—are opposed to the question submitted to a vote this spring, not because they are interested in the wet and dry question, but because they believe that a campaign on the question would be detrimental to the best interests of Washburn.

THIEF RIVER TO VOTE ON BUILDING SCHOOL

Thief River Falls, Minn., March 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—A $50,000 bond issue to enable the board of education to supply sufficient school facilities will be asked, according to a resolution passed by the board. That there has been no increase in room for teaching in this city for the past five years, during which time the city has had its greatest growth, that there are six illegal rooms in the city, that others are crowded beyond the limit which the state board permits, that children are being taught in the hallways and in musty basements, and that almost all of the buildings are in pressing need of improvements are some of the facts called to the attention of parents and voters by members of the board and others interested in proper educational facilities.

The proposed bond issue will provide for a ten-room school on the site in Oakland addition, for a four-room addition to the Knew school and for repairs to the Central school. This work, it is thought, will relieve the congestion and be sufficient for several years to come.

Thief River Falls, Minn., March 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—Jens Dahle, held under a manslaughter charge for the grand jury in connection with the death of Olaf Vatue, is still in the county jail, having been refused bail by Municipal Judge Nick Tarrant. Dahle's bail was at first set by Judge Tarrant at $500, but the judge was misinformed as to his powers in this matter, not being a court of record, and did not hesitate to refuse bail when it was tendered. Dahle's friends have offered to put up as much as $700 bail to no avail. Judge Grindeland probably will be asked to fix bail as soon as possible, when he is here this week for a day's sitting.

Sometime ago I felt so run down, had pains in my back and side, was very irregular, tired, nervous, had such bad dreams, did not feel like eating and had short breath. I read your advertisement in the newspapers and decided to try a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It worked from the first bottle, so I took a second and a third, also a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Purifier, and now I am just as well as any other woman. Spread Rapidly on Shoulders and Body. Itching and Burning Intense. Completely

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"My trouble began in small red pimples which soon grew larger, festered and came to a head, then dried and formed a crust somewhat of a yellowish color. My neck and face were entirely covered with eruptions which spread rapidly on my shoulders and body. They were in the form of blotches and the itching and burning were so intense that I was obliged to scratch and irritate the affected parts.

"A friend recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment. They instantly cooled and relieved the trouble and one week's use completely healed me." (Signed) Miss Cecilia Wells, Valeene, Ind., July 21, 1915.

ITASCA LIFER IS SEEKING FREEDOM

William Coddington, Sentenced for Murder Near Bena, Wants Liberty.

St. Paul, Minn., March 20.—William E. Coddington, sent to state prison for life twelve years ago for killing Henry Kehring near Bena, Itasca county, Aug. 4, 1903, is seeking a pardon, and his application will come before the state board of pardons next month. Coddington always claimed self-defense, alleging his victim had a loaded pistol in his hand when slain. The difference that ended in the tragedy started over $10, according to the evidence adduced at the trial before Judge Spooner at Grand Rapids in December, 1903.

Coddington was with several other settlers, raising a cabin for a neighbor on Aug. 3, 1903, when Kehring suddenly appeared among them with a rifle on his arm and a pistol on his hip. He called Coddington a thief, the witness said, cursed him and said he would kill him. As Coddington backed away, Kehring followed, drew his revolver and pressed it against Coddington's body.

Too surprised to move, the other members of the party stood spellbound while all this was taking place.

"I will kill you tonight," Kehring finally said, according to the witnesses, as he walked away.

That night Coddington and James Myers drove in a buckboard past Kehring's place, Kehring, according to both, rushed out waving a pistol. They whipped up their horse and left him far behind. Next day Coddington, while at Vance's postoffice in Itasca county, was advised to have Kehring placed under bonds to keep the peace. The advice seemed good and he started home to dress for the journey to the county seat.

The Fatal Fight.

As Coddington drove along the road his rifle lay across his knee, a custom of the north country in those days. According to Coddington's story, he was half way across the Kehring clearing when he heard Kehring tearing along through the brush, his dog barking at his heels.

"I've got you now," Kehring shouted, according to Coddington. Coddington's horse, frightened, bolted and collided with a stump. Coddington was thrown to the ground, still grasping his rifle, he said.

When he looked up, he said, he saw Kehring, who was only fifty feet distant, coming rapidly toward him and aiming a pistol at him. Coddington said he moved rapidly away from his approaching foeman, firing his rifle as he retreated, and that at the third shot Kehring dropped.

Coddington himself reported the tragedy to the sheriff of the county and that official led a party that found the body, the pistol and cartridges as Coddington had described them and even found a wheel mark on a stump to verify Coddington's story of the frightened horse.

SEEK CONTINUANCE FOR ACCUSED NINE

Attorney Will Ask to Have Hibbing Cases Put Over Till June.

Hibbing, Minn., March 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—Attorney M. H. McMahon of Virginia, representing the nine defendants arrested in Hibbing late Saturday afternoon for being inmates of disorderly houses, conducting unlicensed drinking places and houses of ill fame on indictments returned by the Duluth grand jury, will appear before Judge Hughes tomorrow morning and ask the court that the trial be postponed until the next term of district court here in June.

Attorney McMahon will have full charge of the defense and will not be assisted by Mayor Victor Power as was erroneously stated in a Duluth publication.

It was 12 o'clock Saturday night before all the accused were released on bonds furnished by Hibbing citizens.

Judge Martin Hughes fixed the bonds for those charged with conducting disorderly houses at $2,000, those having obscene pictures at $500 and for those operating unlicensed drinking places at $300.

It is hinted that two Duluth sleuths, the same who visited Virginia on a still hunt for offenders of the law reported their findings to the grand jury at Duluth.

The last arrests Saturday were made at 6:30. James Sullivan was arrested for conducting an unlicensed drinking place. James Robinson was arrested on the same charge.

Those Who Were Arrested.

Those indicted arrested Saturday afternoon and the charges are: "China" Joe, running disorderly house; Len Sen, running disorderly house; Lottie Doe, inmate of disorderly house; Mary Knight, inmate of disorderly house; James Sullivan, selling liquor without license; Joseph Flower, selling liquor without license and having slot machines with obscene pictures; Julia Thomas, conducting unlicensed drinking place; Mike Sullivan, conducting unlicensed drinking place; James Robins, conducting unlicensed drinking place.

Look and Feel Clean, Sweet and Fresh Every Day

Drink a glass of real hot water before breakfast to wash out poisons.

Life is not merely to live, but to live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store, which will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

VIRGINIA MAY HAVE BIG OPEN PIT MINE

Reported Huge Mesaba Mountain Mine May Be Opened Up.

Virginia, Minn., March 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—Speculation is rife in local mining circles as to whether the development of the great Mesaba Mountain mine as one of the largest open cut properties on the Mesaba range will be begun this season and while there is no official announcement as to when this work will begin it is generally believed that stripping operations will begin within the present year, in addition to the development work that has already been conducted. Diamond drills have been working on the property for some time and it is said others will be added within the week. The development of the Mesaba Mountain, Minnewas and Sauntry mine properties will give Virginia an open cut mine as large as some in the Hibbing district and will vastly increase its importance as an iron mining center.

VIRGINIA PAIR IN HAWKEYE JAIL

Youths Who Started Out "to See World" Halted at West Union.

Virginia, Minn., March 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—The adventures of two Virginia youths named Perry and Rogers, who started out to see the world without funds and beat their way from place to place on freight trains culminated at West Union, Iowa, in their arrest and sentence to six months at hard labor on the county roads. Both boys bore excellent reputations here and Mayor Boylan and Assistant County Attorney Boyle have wired the governor of Iowa, asking that their sentences be suspended and they be allowed to return to their homes here.

Arrested in Depot.

The lads were apprehended while washing up in the lavatory of the West Union depot. They told the officer frankly they were without money and were promptly taken before a magistrate and arraigned, drawing sentences of six months each.

The two lads, in letters to their Virginia relatives, are penitent, say they have seen quite enough of the world and are anxious to be absolved from their present plight. They had made quite an extensive tour before they were picked up at West Union and left Virginia to join a carnival concern which has its winter headquarters in an Iowa city.

HIS MONEY RETURNED.

Inebriated Alice Man Glad Chisholm Police Locked Him Up.

Chisholm, Minn., March 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—Charles Caljula, claiming to be a resident of Alice, was found by Officer Carlson at the Mesaba electric railway station at night in a helpless state of intoxication and when taken to the police station and searched $150 in cash and a gold watch was found in his clothes. Later when he had sobered sufficiently to look for his money and found it gone he was so grieved over his loss that he tried to commit suicide by butting his head against the steel door of the cell. The noise attracted Sergeant Leighty and when the prisoner explained the reason for his despondency it took Leighty considerable time to persuade the drunken man that his money was in safe hands.

When arraigned before Judge Masters Caljula pleaded guilty to a charge of drunkenness and was fined $5. He was so highly elated over the return of his money that he left the court room vowing he would reward the police officer who was so considerate as to place him in jail and thereby insure the safety of his money.

RANGE COMMUNITIES TO RESIST LAW ACTION

Chisholm, Minn., March 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—Virginia, Ely, Eveleth, Gilbert and this village intend to contest the claims of the Cameron Septic company, who allege infringements of their patent rights on septic tank sewage disposal systems as now installed in several range municipalities. According to Alger R. Syme, former village attorney, who has returned from Minneapolis where he represented this village at a meeting of the League of Minnesota Municipalities for the purpose of securing cooperation among the municipalities of the state in opposing the legal actions instituted by the Cameron Septic company.

According to Mr. Syme the Minnesota league adopted a motion, which he made, directing all representatives to report to the governing bodies of the city or village they represented recommending those cities or villages joining the National League of Municipalities, who are contesting the Cameron Septic company's claims, and which was formed last Tuesday at the Iowa league meeting and acting with the national body directly through the secretary of the Minnesota league.

Chisholm, Minn., March 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—The new village council, Saturday evening, appointed Former Day Sergeant James Leighty, chief of police, and Henry Letchel, day sergeant. There were four for assistant health officer. Applications laid before the council were: For policeman, Henry Lackaby and Frank Globuchar; for night sergeant, John Kelly and Sam Murray; for firemen, Elmer Okas and Gervals Pispa; for health officer, Dr. A. W. Graham; for assistant health officer, Albert Hirstio, John Leary, Ben Roth and O. W. Sundstrom; for assistant street commissioner, Mike Talus, Frank Pajunen and Leo Starliha; for cow catcher, John Hren; for meat inspector, H. H. Schafer; for sexton, Jack Rice and Frank Barkonich; for foreman, John Pasenda; for fireman, incinerator plant, John Pikkarainen; for caretaker, detention hospital. James Duncan; for alley inspector, Fred Porter, the last named position applied for being an entirely new one.

It was explained by President Webber that all of the positions applied for were not of a class that would be taken up then, but would be given careful consideration when appointments were made at some future meeting.

The bond of the village treasurer was set at $20,000, that of the recorder at $2,000 and that of the deputy recorder at $2,000, all bonds to be furnished by a surety company.

McAlpin Fire Chief.

The other appointments made were: Albert McAlpin, chief of the fire department; George Nitch, assistant chief; Ozmun Abbey, street commissioner, reappointed; George K. Trask, village attorney.

President Webber said all appointments were made for the ensuing year or until further action should be taken. As all members held the same view, President Webber directed that the motion covering each appointment be so amended, for he did not desire any persons to think the appointments were a year contract when in reality the continuance of the appointment depended entirely upon the service rendered by the appointee.

LONGYEAR LAKE FISH CHURNING UP WATER

Released From Icy Covering, They Furnish Chisholm Spectacle.

Chisholm, Minn., March 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—Warm weather of the past week has melted the ice and opened a stretch of water about 100 feet in length on the west shore of Longyear lake and this water is filled with schools of fish crowded into the open space in one writhing mass which keeps the water churned to a foam.

Some persons say that it is common for fish to come from under the ice to the open water for air but as the sight is an unusual one here, and it is viewed by many people each day.

HIBBING MAN SAW VILLA BULLET MARKS

Hibbing, Minn., March 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—Frank Dear and his son, Herbert, have returned to Hibbing, after an extended stay in the South and in old Mexico.

Mr. Dear was planning on a trip to Mexico City but American consuls at various Mexican cities advised him to turn back as there would be many dangers connected with a visit at this time to the Mexican metropolis.

"It is surprising the censorship Uncle Sam has established in Mexico and along the border," stated Mr. Dear. "Every telegraph office is watched while the news that is appearing in American papers or at least was for the first part of the period, when American troops entered Mexico could not be authentic, as I personally know that no news was given out."

Mr. Dear visited cities where Villa's men had been and where they had fought battles with the Carranza troops. In some of these cities, Mr. Dear states that only walls of the principal buildings had remained, after the vigorous bombardment they had undergone.

THERE IS A VAST ARMY of men and women who really never know what it is to enjoy sound, vibrating health—who would be surprised to suddenly gain that exhilarating vitality that robust health brings.

Literally thousands without any particular sickness live in "general debility", as the doctors call it—have headaches, are tired and indifferent. To all such people we say with unmistakable earnestness—"Take Scott's Emulsion after meals for one month and allow its rare oil-food to enrich and enliven your blood, quicken your circulation, stimulate nutrition, and aid nature to develop that real red-blooded life that means activity, enjoyment, success."

Scott's Emulsion is not a drug, but a pleasant food-tonic—free from alcohol. One bottle may help you.

COUNTY DITCH NO. 7 HAS BEEN SURVEYED

Viewers Now Looking Over Proposed Itasca County Work.

Grand Rapids, Minn., March 20.—(Special to The Herald.)—P. C. Warner has just completed the survey of County Ditch No. 7 in the towns of Bearville and Carpenter in the northeastern part of the county. The ditch will be about ten miles long, starting on the line between sections 17 and 20, 62-22, and going southeast a distance of four miles, thence in an easterly direction some two miles, and then northeast a distance of some four miles more. The outlet is into a creek across the line in St. Louis county.

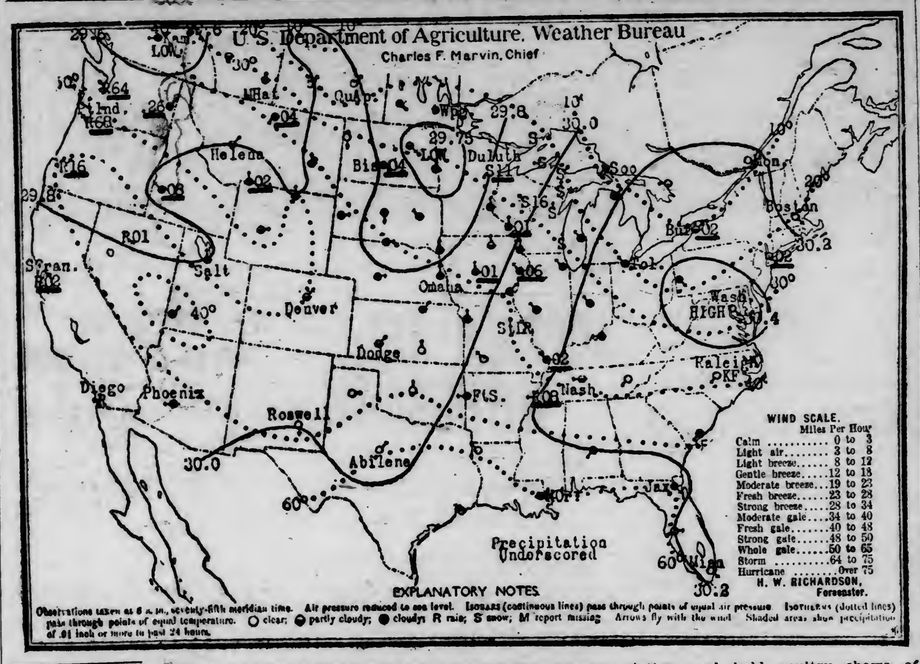
This ditch will relieve the lands of water along the line of the Sourdough creek, which has not enough fall and capacity to carry off all the water that comes in times of spring thaws or heavy rains, and which overflows its banks on the least provocation.

Will Cost $22,429.

The cost of the ditch will be $22,429.60, according to the estimates submitted by Engineer Warner. There will be a road along only a part of the route, as the territory through which the ditch runs is well supplied with roads, there being at least three sections in the town around which there are roads all the way, and several others which are almost entirely surrounded by roads, most of which were built by the township.

The appraisers on this ditch left Saturday to go over the route.

OFFICIAL MAP OF THE WEATHER



Observations taken at 8 a. m., seventy-fifth meridian time. Air pressure reduced to sea level. Isobars (continuous lines) pass through points of equal air pressure. Isotherms (dotted lines) pass through points of equal temperature. ○ clear; ◐ partly cloudy; ● cloudy; R rain; S snow; M report missing. Arrows fly with the wind. Shaded areas show precipitation of .01 inch or more in past 24 hours.

These perfect days are making Duluthians form a habit of expectation, which will result in a howl, most probably, when there is a deviation from the near-established rule. Sunday was beautiful, and even though not so very warm, considerable damage was done the snow and ice where the sun shone. Today is much the same, although the temperature is warmer. A week of this weather would do wonders on the streets and avenues of the city.

Snow fell a year ago today. The sun rose this morning at 6:09 and will set this evening at 6:22, giving twelve hours and thirteen minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"During the last twenty-four to forty-eight hours light snow fell over the Lake region and New York, and light rain over the Mississippi valley states and most districts west of the Rocky mountains. Colder weather prevails in Eastern Canada and North Atlantic states. Temperatures have risen considerably over the Western Lake region, Upper Mississippi valley and the greater portion of the Northwest. Mild weather is the rule in the West and Southwest, but east of Michigan and north of Virginia temperatures are somewhat under the normal."

General Forecasts.

Chicago, March 20.—Forecasts for the twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Tuesday:

Minnesota—Partly cloudy tonight and Tuesday; somewhat colder in west and south portions tonight; warmer Tuesday.

Iowa—Partly cloudy tonight and Tuesday; warmer Tuesday.

North Dakota—Generally fair tonight and Tuesday; warmer Tuesday.

South Dakota—Generally fair tonight and Tuesday; warmer Tuesday in east and central portions.

Montana—Partly cloudy tonight and Tuesday, probably rain west of the divide; cooler Tuesday in west and central portions.

TIRED ALL THE TIME

It is good to feel tired sometimes, when you have exercised sufficiently to cause a healthful feeling of fatigue.

But, you should be refreshed by rest. A tired feeling that does not disappear even after a night's sleep is abnormal. It means that you are anemic or debilitated, that you need a tonic to build you up and fortify your system against such a condition. If you do not you are inviting disease because thin blood means that the body's defense against the inroads of disease is lowered.

Thin blood is largely the sufferer's own fault. It results from neglect, because the blood can be built up. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills supply the elements that the blood needs to make it rich and red and to enable it to carry more oxygen. Building up the red portion of the blood is simple but because thin blood does not call attention to itself is often neglected. Have you seriously considered taking a course of treatment with these blood-making pills? If you are in doubt write for information.

Your own druggist sells Dr. Williams' Pink Pills or they will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price 50 cents per box; six boxes $2.50 by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. Write now for the free booklet "Building Up the Blood."

COMPLICITY IN KILLING

Max Hammons on Trial for Part in Saari's Murder.

State Holds Him Equally Guilty With Hastings, Convicted.

Repeating his story of how he and his neighbor, William Saari, were held up by two highwaymen on a lonely stretch of tote road, three miles south of the village of Brookston, shortly before noon on Oct. 26 last, and of Saari's murder, which followed, Matt Niemi occupied the witness chair in Judge Cant's division of district court today to testify against Max Hammons, the 20-year-old boy charged with complicity in the killing.

Hammons' alleged companion in the crime, Michael F. Hastings, was tried last week and was convicted of murder in the second degree, the punishment for which is a life term in the state penitentiary. Hastings admitted that he and Hammons were at the scene of the shooting, but declared that Hammons, and not he, handled the gun.

Niemi's testimony on this point was that it was Hastings, not Hammons, who fired the revolver and that while engaged in the act of shooting, Hammons stepped behind Hastings and tugged at his arm, presumably to restrain him. The contention of the state is that Hammons set out upon a joint enterprise with Hastings and that he is equally guilty of the crime with Hastings.

The state will probably finish its case tomorrow.

RESERVE BANK TO BE FACTOR

Expected to Help Develop Overseas' Commerce After the War.

The accumulation of approximately $650,000 in acceptances arising out of the foreign trade of the United States in the Federal Reserve bank of Minneapolis draws attention to the probability that the reserve banks, at the close of the conflict in Europe, will perform a very important function in the development of American overseas commerce, comments the Minneapolis Tribune.

Foreign acceptances are based on credits previously arranged, drawn by the exporter, payable to himself or a bank, usually in ninety days, and "accepted" by the indorsement of an American bank or trust company with which the credit has been arranged. The rate is low, but the quality of the bill is unquestioned. It is the low rate that promises to drive these bills largely into the reserve banks, which offer a very broad market for them, as soon as stiffened interest rates permit commercial banks to substitute paper carrying a better return for the acceptances which they have accumulated.

These bills, formerly drawn largely upon London and payable in pounds sterling, are now being drawn in dollars upon Boston, New York, San Francisco and other American centers. The interference with the former arrangements with English financial houses has worked to the benefit of strong banks and trust companies in the United States, which with the encouragement of the market created by the Federal reserve act, were prompt to buy acceptances and encourage the growth of American financing of this trade. The reserve banks have been willing to absorb any surplus of paper thus created, and have accumulated, as their last consolidated statement shows, a total of $33,000,000, which is a substantial participation in import and export trade.

The bills accumulated by the Minneapolis Reserve bank are quaint documents, many of them in French or Spanish, coming from all parts of the world. Esetvan, Ruiz & Co. are Chilean exporters of tungsten ore. Their acceptance for $29,000, with the indorsement of a New York trust company, is among these bills, although the exporters possibly never heard of Minneapolis. Other bills cover raw silk from Japan, merchandise and novelties from China, coffee from Brazil, hides from Argentina, finished goods from France and odds and ends of imports from the far corners of the earth. They also cover exports of machinery to Ecuador, merchandise to Brazil, cotton to Russia, Italy and England, and a long list of other commodities moving to foreign consignees.

In the home field the domestic trade acceptance movement is gaining ground. The reserve bank of Minneapolis has established a rate of 3½ per cent on trade acceptances of ninety days' maturity and has taken steps to interest leading commercial enterprises in this old-time but recently revived method of settling balances.

ENORMOUS GAIN FOR BETHLEHEM STEEL

Increase of 260 Per Cent Shown in Net Earnings for Year.

New York, March 20.—The annual report of the Bethlehem Steel corporation for 1915, issued here, disclosed that the net earnings of the corporation and its subsidiary companies, after deducting expenditures, amounted to $24,821,408, as compared with $9,649,667 in 1914, an increase of nearly 260 per cent. Orders on hand Dec. 31, 1915, aggregated $175,432,895, as against $46,518,189 on the corresponding date of the previous year.

According to the report, the expenditures during 1915 for ordinary and extraordinary repairs and maintenance were approximately $4,391,000. Aside from this deduction from the earnings there also were deductions representing interest on bonds and notes of subsidiary companies, amounting to $2,342,596. Appropriations were made as follows: Provision for extinguishment of mining investments, amortization of patents, etc., $338,999; provision for depreciation of other properties and accruing renewals, $4,377,000, a total of $4,715,999, leaving as net income for the year $17,762,812, as compared with $5,590,020 for 1914.

"In view of the earnings of last year," the report says, "dividends were declared of 7 per cent on the preferred stock and 30 per cent on the common stock of your corporation, payable in quarterly installments during 1916.

"With the recent extraordinary market for all classes of steel products and for ships, the various plants of your corporation enter the year 1916 with all departments with one exception, running at full capacity. That exception is the armor plate department. Bethlehem Steel company has practically completed deliveries to the government on all pending armor contracts. Contracts for the current year have not been awarded.

GREATEST AERIAL BATTLE OF WAR

Fifty Machines Fight at Close Quarters at Mulhouse.

Basel, Switzerland, March 20, via Paris.—When twenty-three allied aeroplanes raided Mulhouse, Upper Alsace, the greatest aerial battle of the war took place.

Accounts just reaching here declare that more than fifty machines were fighting at such close quarters that the German anti-aircraft guns had to cease fire in order to avoid hitting their own machines. One French airman rammed a German machine which fell in flames. Five German aeroplanes, and three French fell, the occupants of all being killed. Even while the allied air men were fighting they dropped a number of bombs upon military positions.

Many thousands of persons witnessed the combat.

The allied air raid on Mulhouse was reported in yesterday afternoon's French official statement.

The arguments were begun Friday and an adjournment taken until today.

SCORES TELEGRAPH THANKS TO JULIUS BARNES FOR REGATTA

Scores of telegrams of congratulation were sent yesterday and today to Julius H. Barnes at New York, as a result of his landing of the national regatta for Duluth for the coming summer. It is recognized that the cinching of the regatta for Duluth is due almost wholly to the efforts of Mr. Barnes, who is the patron saint of rowing at the Head of the Lakes, and to whose good offices Duluth owes its supremacy in the rowing world.

The telegraph companies had such an unusual load of business on the New York wire, because of the messages sent to Mr. Barnes, that they put an extra man on to handle it yesterday afternoon and this morning.

Many were sent from the board of trade pit room this morning and before the close of the board a general message of congratulation and thanks was sent, and signed by most of the traders, so Mr. Barnes got it all in a bunch.

That he is deserving of all the gratitude Duluth can show him, is the generally expressed opinion.

APPEALS ARE WITHDRAWN

Brick Paving Award for West First Street May Result.

Park Point Paving May Be Ordered; Other Council Business.

All the thirty-eight West First street property owners have withdrawn their assessment appeals and unless unforeseen obstacles arise this afternoon the city commissioners will award the paving contract to Rogers & McLean on their bid of $63,257 for a class A brick pavement. Other city contracts are scheduled for authorization this afternoon.

Last week city commissioners adopted an amendment to the resolution awarding the contract to D. H. Clough for a creosoted block pavement, on condition that the thirty-eight assessment appeals be withdrawn during the week. This morning City Attorney Samuelson announced that each of the owners has signed a withdrawal.

Want Wider Pavement.
A delegation of West First street owners called on the commissioners this morning in behalf of a creosoted block pavement, while it was reported today that a committee from the West End Commercial club will appear at the meeting this afternoon to urge a wider pavement west of Twenty-third avenue west. Members of the club at a meeting last week voted against a 30-foot pavement beyond Twenty-third avenue, but property owners along the thoroughfare have signed for a 38-foot roadway from Twentieth to Twenty-third and a 30-foot pavement from the division line to Thirtieth avenue west.

E. F. Hilliard and H. O. Nyhus will be awarded the contracts to lay 119 cement walks each side and west of Twelfth avenue west, respectively, on their bids of $11,320 and $4,496. C. O. White & Co., will be awarded the contract to haul pipe for the water and light department.

Park Point Paving.
Minnesota avenue will be ordered paved from Thirty-eighth to Forty-third street, the end of the Park Point car line.

City Auditor Campbell will submit his annual report to the council this afternoon. The report was outlined in The Herald Saturday afternoon.

A resolution establishing the thirteen sprinkling districts, as published in The Herald Saturday, will be introduced by Commissioner Farrell.

The ordinance classifying the city's civil service system will come up for passage, while Commissioner Silberstein will introduce an ordinance appropriating $126 for the purchase of police caps.

WALKED HIS FIRST BEAT TWENTY-FOUR YEARS AGO

"Twenty-four years tonight," said Police Lieut. N. U. G. Terry, "Duluth had a big snow storm.

"Twenty-two years ago tonight we had a sleet and rain storm that was one of the worst I ever saw."

Lieut. Terry had occasion to remember both storms, because he is celebrating two anniversaries today.

On March 20, 1892, he was appointed a patrolman for the village of West Duluth, under Mayor Albert Rockwell, and the night of March 20 was the first one on which he walked a beat.

He served a year, and then was dropped when the administration ended, only to be reappointed on March 20, 1894, when the village of West Duluth was incorporated with the city under Mayor R. T. Lewis.

Lieut. Terry was appointed to the West Duluth force before any member of the present force, excepting Patrolman Robert Smollett, was on duty.

Capt. A. G. Fiskett is second to Patrolman Smollett in point of continuous service, although Lieut. Terry's first appointment came about six months before the captain started. Former Detective Donald Irvin, recently appointed municipal court officer, shared honors with Capt. Fiskett and Lieut. Terry when he left the active force.

A YEAR OF GAIN FOR WOMEN.

Woman's World: In the United States nineteen hundred and fifteen saw a tremendous gain in the economic and physical welfare of women and children. Eight states passed laws providing for pensions for mothers. In six others the divorce laws were strengthened. Seven states took the first steps toward giving women equal suffrage and although the movement was defeated in Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, this year it is expected Iowa, South Dakota and West Virginia will reverse the result. Three states passed laws creating more political offices to women. Four states, including Kansas and Massachusetts, passed new labor laws for women and children, limiting the hours, and the maximum wage movement made distinct advance. Three states put wife and husband on an equal footing in property rights. New Jersey authorized women policemen. Oregon passed a law forbidding discrimination in salaries between male and female public school teachers. California's legislature declared by vote that woman suffrage in that state had been an unqualified success. In the records of woman's progress in America 1915 will be accounted an important year.

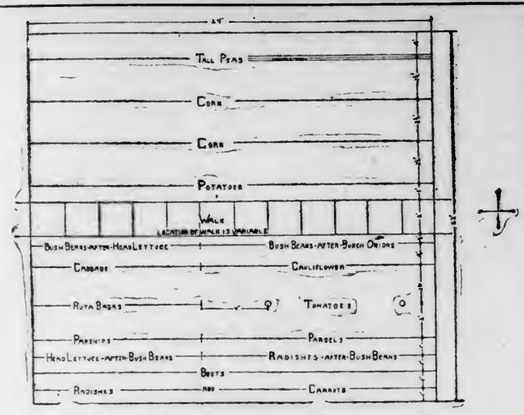
ACTIVE GARDEN CAMPAIGN AMONG "AGGIE" STUDENTS



PLAN OF MODEL BACKYARD GARDEN.

The home or backyard garden is due to come into its own this year. Its popularity is increasing greatly and already the garden enthusiasts of the city are going over their early spring plans.

One of the first problems which faces the back lot farmer is the correct arrangement of his garden. As a result the man who plans his garden beforehand in a systematic arrangement is the man who will meet with the greatest success.

Agriculture students of Central high school, under the supervision of Prof. E. P. Gibson, are planning one of the most active spring campaigns that they have ever attempted. Realizing the growing importance of the small garden this year, the "aggie" classes at Central are at work planning systematic arrangements for various sized lots. The charts will undoubtedly prove a great aid to those who experience difficulty in arranging their gardens. The originator of the above reproduced plan for a 22x25-foot lot explains his chart as follows:

Essentials of Garden.

"The first thing to be considered when planning a home garden is the location, the need of sunshine to be taken into important consideration. It is best to have the garden near the house. Much of the care may fall upon the housewife and children, while the tired business man, who gardens for profit, pleasure or recreation, wants the plot near the house so that he will not waste any of the precious moments which he has before and after office hours.

"The rows should run north and south to give the plants the greatest possible amount of sunshine. The water in most Duluth lots, when running off, will not cut through the rows if they are arranged north and south, because of the south slope of the city. In this part of the country, also, the taller plants should be planted on the east side so that they will not shut off any sunlight from the smaller ones. They will also serve as a break against the chilly northeast winds which are so common in Duluth.

"Since corn is pollinated by the wind it is best to plant two rows of it, thus providing an effective cross-pollination. If only one row is wanted, two half rows should be planted.

"Arrangements have been made in the accompanying plan for an early and late crop of head lettuce and radishes, two of the most popular of the backyard products. By this plan good variety of vegetables may be raised in the garden. The head lettuce and bunch onions are early crops and will be ready for the table in a short time. Since the rows are left vacant when these are through yielding, one may plant a row of bush beans, thus utilizing all of the land. Radishes and carrots are planted in the bottom row. The radishes come up quickly and break the hard crusty surface for the carrots. By the time the carrots are getting to be of any size the radishes will all have been taken out. Only one row of potatoes is provided, but that should provide several meals and give the gardener considerable experience in the growing of the mainstay of all vegetables.

"In this plan the walk is variable and it may be placed wherever it is most convenient for the back door of the house."

BABIES THREATENED BY THE SAME PERILS IN WINTER MONTHS AS DURING SUMMER

Although in hearty accord with the summer baby-saving campaign, Miss Edna G. Meeker, secretary of the Associated Charities, believes that attention should be called to the hitherto almost unnoticed fact that the babies of Duluth and other cities are being killed during the winter by the same diseases that cause so many deaths of infants during summer months.

Within the last two weeks, the whole country has been engaged in a baby-saving campaign and the week of March 6 in Duluth was devoted to the consideration of ways and means of saving the babies of Duluth during the coming summer months. The commissioner of health in Chicago has prepared some statistics which show that winter babies as well as summer babies are in need of saving.

In a bulletin issued from the office of the Chicago health commissioner, which has been received by Miss Meeker it is asserted that the principal causes of infant mortality during the hot weather season are diarrhoea and enteritis, diseases due largely to spoiled food or improper feeding.

"But these same diseases," says the Chicago health commissioner, "are killing a great many babies of Chicago during the winter months.

"Statistics show nearly two-thirds as many infant deaths during the cold weather months and from the same causes as occurred during the three warm weather months, July, August and September.

"It is just as important that milk should be kept cool during the winter months as in the summer months. There are too many families in Chicago who are not taking proper winter care of the baby's milk. There is still a crying need for wider knowledge of the maintenance of proper indoor conditions during the cold weather season.

"Overheated air, bad air, always means sickness and death. In houses that are kept tightly closed, the air is not only bad, but it is also invariably too dry. The continued warmth takes all the moisture or water out of the air, making it unsafe for people to breathe. So while people are talking about saving summer babies, let us not forget the winter babies. They and their mothers, many of them, are in need of advice and information as to how to properly care for the little ones in winter time as well as in summer time."

EAT BIG MEALS! NO INDIGESTION OR BAD STOMACH

"Pape's Diapepsin" Makes Weak Stomachs Strong and Healthy at Once.

Instantly Stops Sourness, Gases, Heartburn, Acidity, Dyspepsia.

There would not be a case of indigestion or dyspepsia here if readers who are subject to stomach trouble knew the tremendous anti-ferment and digestive virtuo contained in Pape's Diapepsin. This harmless preparation will digest a heavy meal without the slightest fuss or discomfort, and relieve the sourest, acid stomach in five minutes, besides overcoming all foul, nauseous odors from the breath.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula plainly printed on each 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will readily understand why this promptly overcomes indigestion and removes such symptoms as heartburn, a feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach, belching of gas and eructations of undigested food, water brash, acidity, nausea, headache, billousness and many other bad symptoms; and, besides, you will not need laxatives to keep your stomach, liver and intestines clean and fresh.

If your stomach is sour and full of gas or your food doesn't digest, and your meals don't seem to fit, why not get a 50-cent case from your druggist and make life worth living? Absolute relief from stomach misery and perfect digestion of anything you eat is sure to follow five minutes after, and besides, one case is sufficient to rid a whole family of such trouble.

Surely, a harmless, inexpensive preparation like Diapepsin, which will always, either at daytime or during night, relieve your stomach misery and digest your meals, is about as handy and valuable a thing as you could have in the house.—Advertisement.

INDIANS' REQUESTS MAY BE GRANTED

Chippewa Representative Returns After Presenting Petition to Government.

William H. Lyons of the White Oak Point, Mississippi band of Chippewa Indians of Minnesota, was in the city today en route to his home at Ballclub on the reservation in Itasca county after a trip to Washington where he represented his tribe before the Indian department at the national capitol.

Mr. Lyon's mission in Washington was to confer with the commissioner of Indian affairs and other officials with reference to securing from the government an additional allotment of eighty acres for the members of his tribe. The original allotment was eighty acres. Mr. Lyon declares that a bill will probably be introduced at this congress providing for this allotment.

Mr. Lyon also conferred with the Indian department with reference to securing a portion of the Indian apportionment which was provided for in a bill which recently passed both houses of congress. The money, he has been assured will be ready for distribution about May and will amount to about $160 per head for the Minnesota Indians.

WHEAT ADVANCES SHARPLY ON ALL GRAIN MARKETS

Prices Bulge on Crop Damage Reports and Peace Denials.

Flaxseed Easier With Light Trading; Crushers' Interests Hold Back.

Duluth Board of Trade, March 20.—The market was slightly easier at the close on the appearance of more peace rumors, and final prices were below the high levels of the day.

May wheat closed, 2¼@2¾c up, and July, 2⅝c up.

May durum closed, 2¾c up, and July, 3c up.

Oats closed, ½c up at 40⅞@41⅜c for on the track; rye, unchanged at 88@90c, and barley, unchanged at from 61c to 69c for on the track.

At Winnipeg, May oats closed ⅞c up at 43¼c bid.

At St. Louis May wheat closed at $1.06⅞, and July at $1.05⅝.

At Kansas City May wheat closed at $1.01⅝, and July at $1.01¼.

Puts on Minneapolis May wheat closed at $1.09, and calls at $1.13⅜.

That traders had become unduly bearish at the end of last week was shown in a sharp reaction in the wheat market today. Prices advanced 3c above Saturday's close during the first three hours' trading. The bulge was brought through realization that the peace talk that proved such a potent influence for the bears a few days ago, was premature. Traders who had put out short lines therefore rushed to cover around the opening, and initial prices were substantially up.

To aid operators on the long side, there were reports of crop damage in areas of the winter wheat territory, particularly in Illinois. The last crop report of that state showed a severe depreciation in condition between Feb. 1 and March 1, and it is said that the appearance of the plant has become worse since the beginning of the month.

Contrary to expectations in view of the foreign situation, cables did not budge, the Liverpool market being unchanged today. Buyers over there were influenced by the increasing shipments from Argentina and Australia, and expectations of abundant supplies being available for the present at least. On that account little export trade has developed lately. New York advices said, as might have been expected after the recent severe break. Clearances were, however, better, amounting to 1,465,000 bu of wheat and flour. Duluth operators noted an improvement in the number of freight cars available for shipment of grain to the seaboard, as evidenced in the better shipments from the elevators. Forwardings of grain all-rail to the East will be made for about ten days yet, after which shippers will await the opening of navigation.

The movement of bonded grain this way continues liberal, there being 235 cars of Canadian wheat on the tracks here today. May wheat opened 1⅜c up at $1.09¾, and advanced to $1.11⅜ at the noon hour. July opened 1⅛c up at $1.10, and sold up to $1.12.

Trading in durum was active and its market kept pace with the bulge in spring wheat. May durum opened ¾c up at 1.03, and advanced 2⅝c more. July opened 1c up at $1.04½ and bulged 2c more.

Flaxseed Weakens.

Flaxseed market was easy and dragy, with only moderate bidding by crushers, while there was some selling in evidence by operators who had become tired of waiting for the advance that had been forecasted some time ago.

There was not much change in cables. At Buenos Aires, flax closed ½c off at $1.81⅞, and London unchanged at $2.67⅞.

May flax opened ½c up at $2.28½ and closed ⅞c off at $2.27½ bid.

July opened ½c off at $2.28 and closed 1c off at $2.27½.

At Winnipeg, May flax closed ¼c off at $2.06¾c.

A Boston wire said: "Although the English markets are a shade steadier, they are so hopelessly out of line that at this rate it will take weeks to work new business. We have no workable bids or inquiries today."

* * *

At Minneapolis, choice wheat was in fair demand. Blue stem No. 1 northern sold at ½c to 4c over May, and velvet chaff at ½@1c over. One moderate sized milling company reported good flour sales, but the rest said it was quiet to dull.

C. E. Lewis & Co. had the following from Chicago: "Think there is a large amount of July wheat sold here against Winnipeg July. Watch our July, and should it start to gain on Winnipeg these spreaders will become alarmed. Bad crop news would tighten up our July quickly."

United States export, wheat and flour during February are reported at 25,000,000 bu. This would suggest 166,000,000 bu from July 1 to March 1 against 241,000,000 bu last year. The February total as reported is friendly to wheat, being larger than expected.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool: "Market was dull, but inclined lower with free export arrivals and buyers indifferent. Spot market was dull, nominally unchanged. Cargo market was easy, winters 3 to 6d lower, and Manitobas 6d lower. There is less selling pressure but buyers are indifferent as prospects are assured of large import arrivals, with Argentina and Australia offering freely, and American shipments liberal. English offers are large at one shilling decline. Parcel market was unchanged, with spot demand slow."

CHICAGO MARKET.

Chicago, March 20.—Wheat prices took a decided upward swing today, influenced largely by the bullish nature of the Illinois state crop report. Crop damage advices from Missouri and denials that German vessels had been seized in Brazil tended also to give strength to the market. Besides there appeared to be less optimism in regard to chances of peace. The opening, which ranged from ⅝c to 1⅞c higher, with May at $1.08 to $1.08¾ and July at $1.06 to $1.07½, was followed by a substantial further upturn.

Assertions that foreigners were buying futures here followed subsequently to a greater advance. The bears were handicapped by reports of bad crop conditions in Ohio and Indiana and in the Southwest and by a material decrease in the United States visible supply total. Trade at the last, however, was much unsettled and the market closed weak at 2½@2⅜c net advance, with May at $1.09⅝ and July at $1.08¼.

Corn responded to the strength of wheat. Offerings were light. After opening ⅜@½c to ⅞@1c higher, the market scored a moderate additional upturn.

Slowness of Eastern shipping demand acted later as a check on the bulls. Prices closed easy at ⅝@¾c to ⅞c net advance.

Oats shared the firmness of other grains. A leading elevator company, however, sold freely on the advance.

Continued demand for large carried the provision market higher all around. Trade in pork and ribs, though, was small.

DULLNESS IN FLAX MARKET

Nothing Exciting in the Seed; Play Waiting Game.

There is nothing about the flax market these days to excite anything but curiosity, and not much of that. The crushers buy on recessions, but not strongly enough to shoot the price very high, and sags are frequent.

Nobody seems overly anxious for the seed, although the crushers cannot resist the temptation to take it if it is cheap; but they are not scrambling for it. There has been some talk of returning a cargo or two from Buffalo to this end of the lakes, which has served to hold the market down and caused the break of last Wednesday, but the news has not been confirmed. The prospect was credited to Spencer Kellogg & Sons.

It is generally believed that in a very short time there will be an advance in the market as the present conditions cannot long remain with spring improvements in sight.

The closing prices for the past six trading days, compared with the same period a year ago, were:

WEAKNESS IN STOCKS

Early Gains Effaced and Losses Recorded Throughout the List.

War Issues and Kindred Specialties Drop Two to Six Points.

New York, March 20.—The week in the stock market opened with some striking gains in those specialties which recently claimed speculative attention, but elsewhere the undertone was irregular. United States Industrial Alcohol made an initial gain of over 5 points and Crucible Steel, Studebaker, Westinghouse, Mexican Petroleum and Distillers' Securities rose 1 to 3. Metals were fractionally higher and equipments made similar advances. United States Steel manifested further restraint and Canadian Pacific fell a point. Union Pacific and Erie were the only rails to show firmness. Anglo-French bonds were strong. Recessions extending to a point or more were recorded before the end of the first half hour.

Offerings increased during the forenoon in today's stock market, the heaviness of Steel, Reading and a few other leaders having its effect on the general list. Not only were most early gains effaced, but prices of the more active specialties were a point or more under last week's final quotations. Bethlehem Steel fell 14 to 520. The decline seemed to be based in part on intangible rumors dealing with the foreign situation, but Mexican affairs so far as they were reflected in those issues, were not a pronounced factor. Business diminished at midday and some stocks scored substantial recoveries. Bonds were heavy.

The market was almost at a standstill during the mid-season, with no material change in prices from the noon levels, except in Mexican Petroleum and American Smelting, which were active and strong.

Lowest levels were recorded in the last hour, war issues and kindred specialties showing extreme losses of 2@6 points. The closing was weak.

RUSS TROOPS WIN VICTORY IN GALICIA

Capture Austrian Bridgehead Near the Border of Bukowina.

Fortification Is Evacuated After Being Held for Six Months.

Austrians Forced to Abandon Transports in Their Flight.

London, March 21.—Austrian forces, operating northwest of Uscieczko on the Dniester river, near the Bukowina border, were forced by the pressure of the Russians to evacuate the bridgehead fortifications and to abandon their transports. Under cover of night they succeeded in reaching the Austrian advance posts northwest of Zale Szczyky, north of Czernowitz, according to the Austrian official statement issued today.

The official statement pays a tribute of admiration to the bravery of the Austrian troops, who gave way only on account of the superior strength of the Russian attacking forces. It adds that the only means left to the Austrians to avoid capture was to break through the Russian positions at Uscieczko and this they did with complete success.

Fortifications Evacuated.

The statement follows: "After six months of brave defense the bridge fortifications northwest of Usieczko collapsed on Sunday evening and were evacuated. Although the Russians succeeded in the morning in causing, by means of explosions, a breach 300 meters wide, the garrison, which was attacked by forces eight-fold superior, held out seven hours longer, notwithstanding all losses in the face of the

AUSTRIANS BREAK ITALIAN ATTACKS

Heavy Fighting Continues All Along Austro-Italian Front.

Berlin, March 21, by wireless to Sayville.—Heavy fighting continues on the Austro-Italian front. The official Austrian statement of yesterday says that Italian attacks broke down before the Austrian fire. The announcement follows:

"On the Gorizia bridgehead Austro-Hungary troops yesterday morning set fire to a position of the enemy before the southern part of Podgora height. In the afternoon Austro-Hungarian artillery shelled heavily the enemy's front before the bridgehead. During the night they ejected the enemy from a trench before Bevma.

"Fighting continued at the Tolmino bridgehead as a result of the enemy's efforts to conquer positions firmly in Austro-Hungarian hands. The number of Italians captured reached 925 and the number of machine guns taken was increased to seven. Several attacks by the enemy against Mrzlivrh and Krn broke down. At Romson the Austro-Hungarians captured a position and took 145 Italians and two machine guns.

"Lively fighting continues on the Carinthian front. In the Tyrol frontier district the enemy held the Col di Lana section and some points south of the front under his artillery fire."

CHANCELLOR IN CONTROL

Von Bethmann-Hollweg No Longer Fears Crisis in Reichstag.

Trouble Growing Out of Displacement of Von Tirpitz Well in Hand.

Berlin, March 21, via London.—Friends of the imperial chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg are now quite confident that he has well in hand the political situation connected with the displacement of Admiral von Tirpitz as minister of marine, and that there need be no fear that it will develop into what is termed a chancellor's crisis. They believe the National Liberal and Conservative resolutions, calling for unlimited use of submarines against hostile vessels with the exception of passenger ships, may not even come to the point of open discussion and a vote in the reichstag.

Avoid Interpellations.

The prime movers in the agitation—Herr von Heydebrand, Conservative leader in the reichstag, and Maj. Ernst Basserman, National Liberal leader—have avoided introduction of inter-

GERMANS MAKE STRONG DRIVE ON FRENCH FLANK TO NORTH OF VERDUN, GAINING SOME GROUND

GEN. GEORGE BELL, JR.

Gen. George Bell, Jr., has taken command of the forces at El Paso in the absence of Gen. Pershing with the first expedition into Mexico.

MIGHT HAVE BEEN FEINT

Difficulty Confronting the French Staff in Attack on Verdun.

First Successes of Germans Due to Numerical Superiority.

Paris, March 21.—"Relatively numerical superiority from which an assailant always profits at the beginning of an action, was given semi-officially to the Associated Press today as the explanation for the initial German success in the battle of Verdun.

"At the moment the Germans took the offensive, we could not engage more than the forces we had provided for holding the line," says the memorandum, "because the Germans might merely have feinted before Verdun and attacked Nancy en masse, or they might have made their principal assault in the direction of Amiens or Calais.

"The greatest difficulty of the general staff in such emergencies is to master its nerves to a reasonable appreciation of the shock that probably is coming and the counterblow it is necessary to deliver.

Not Surprised at Verdun.

"The French staff was not surprised ta Verdun. What it could not know was whether this was to be the principal attack; whether ten corps were not ready to strike elsewhere while seven

DESTROYERS BATTLE OFF BELGIAN COAST

Four British and Three German Warships Have Engagement in North Sea.

London, March 21.—An engagement occurred yesterday off the Belgian coast between four British and three German destroyers. Two of the German vessels were hit. Four men on the British boats were wounded.

The official announcement of the action was:

"Yesterday morning four British destroyers sighted three German destroyers off the Belgian coast. The German destroyers at once turned and ran for Zeebrugge, chased by our own destroyers. Shots were exchanged. During this short running fight two enemy boats were observed to have been hit. Our casualties were four men wounded."

German Version.

Berlin, March 21, via London.—The German admiralty account of the battle between British destroyers and German torpedo boats off the Belgian coast follows:

"On March 20, off the coast of Flanders, a fight which was successful for us took place between three German torpedo boats and a division of five British destroyers.

"The enemy broke off the engagement after he had received several direct hits and he steamed out of sight at full speed.

"We suffered only unimportant damage."

ATTACK OF GREATEST VIOLENCE

French Say Losses to Teuton Troops Are Exceedingly Heavy.

Avocourt Wood, Southern Section of Malancourt, Occupied By Germans.

Assault Follows Heavy Bombardment By Guns of Large Caliber.

London, March 21.—The Germans before Verdun are making a strong drive at the French left flank well toward the border of the neighboring Argonne region and have gained ground south of Malancourt, some ten miles northwest of Verdun.

Their first attacks took them into the Malancourt wood and today's official statement from Paris shows them to have pushed some distance further southward, occupying the Avocourt wood, the southern section of the Malancourt wooded district.

The attacks have been made with important forces, with the support of a heavy bombardment by shells of large caliber and the throwing of liquid fire by detachments carrying special devices for the purpose.

The Germans attempted a further advance southward, but, according to Paris, their attempts to debouch from the Avocourt wood were failures.

BULGARIANS BUSY ON ROUMANIAN BORDER

BELGIUM TO BE IN ON PEACE NEGOTIATIONS

Will Be Invited to Participate By the Entente Allies.

London, March 21.—The Entente allies have promised Belgium she will be invited to participate in the peace negotiations.

The announcement regarding Belgium was made by Sir Edward Grey, the minister of foreign affairs, who informed the house of commons today that Great Britain, France and Russia had made the declaration to Belgium that when the time came she would be invited to participate in the peace negotiations.

London, March 21.—A Reuter dispatch from Teheran says that Russian forces entered Ispahan, the old capital of Persia, on March 19.

WILL ACCEPT PROPOSAL BY CARRANZA

United States to Make Protocol With Mexico Concerning Villa Pursuit.

To Avoid Any Danger of Misunderstanding or Conflict.

Nature of Co-operation of Troops to Be Clearly Defined.

Washington, March 21.—President Wilson and his cabinet today decided to accept a proposal for a protocol between the United States and the de facto government for co-operation in pursuit of Gen. Villa and his outlaws.

Gen. Carranza's ambassador here and state department officials will discuss the protocol further. It is expected it would be put in final form in a few days and signed.

It also was decided at today's cabinet meeting that word should be sent late today to Gen. Carranza that the request of the United States to use the Mexican railroad does not include the transportation of troops, but only shipment of supplies to the American troops in Mexico.

It was indicated that the proposed protocol would be so comprehensive as to include all questions which might arise in connection with the joint pursuit of Villa by the American and Carranza forces.

Acting Secretary Polk, Secretary Daniels, Attorney General Gregory and Postmaster General Burleson remained in conference with the president after the other cabinet members had left.

The de facto government of Mexico proposed to the United States the draft-

U. S. AVIATOR GETS BAD FALL

Lieut. Bowen Sustains Broken Nose and Other Slight Injuries.

Columbus, N. M., March 21, by wireless from Field Army.—An aeroplane, one of six to arrive today, was partially wrecked in a fifty-foot fall. The pilot, Lieut. T. S. Bowen, was injured, but not fatally.

Lieut. Bowen sustained a broken nose and other slight injuries.

Lieut. Bowen was attempting to take the air under difficulties. The wind was high and showed a tendency to whirl. Several attempts of the aviators to fly had been frustrated previously by the wind conditions. Finally Bowen went up, but when fifty feet in the air his plane took a dip and plunged almost straight to the ground.

ALMOST IMPOSSIBLE FOR U. S. SOLDIERS TO CAPTURE HIM THERE

Reports From Namiquipa Say Villa Was Badly Worsted in Engagement With Col. Cano and Fled.

American Aviators, Eight in Number, Are on Scouting Expedition to Try to Locate Bandits Trying to Escape.

El Paso, Tex., March 21.—Aviators of the United States army were reported today searching the almost blind trails leading to the passes in the Sierra Madre mountains, where the bandit, Villa, may seek to escape after his defeat by the Carranza forces yesterday at Namiquipa. Details of the fight, in which Col. Cano, with about 900 Carranza troops took part, were still lacking, but reports have it that Villa was badly worsted and that he fled, leaving his dead and wounded behind.

Capt. B. D. Foulois is in charge of the seven birdmen selected for the task of scouting for Villa, who, after his fight with Col. Cano, is expected to scatter his bandits rather than risk an engagement with the American troops, who are said to bar his way to the north.

Impossible to Capture Him.

Army officers agree that if Villa breaks up his command into small bands and turns to the Sierra Madre as a hiding place it will be well nigh impossible to capture him. Villa spent his early days as an outlaw in these mountains, through the passes of which an army and its transports may not move. It takes ten to twelve days to negotiate these tortuous passes into the Sonora district.

Villa probably will not go into the Sonora country, where he is hated and feared because of his raids, but Mexicans here believe he will hide himself away in the mountains until the American troops have given up the chase. Mexican Consul Garcia in El Paso says that Villa would enjoy nothing better than to lead the American troops into a wild chase into these mountains and then laugh at them and their efforts to find him.

Keen Interest in Fight.

San Antonio, Tex., March 21.—Keen interest was shown by officers at army headquarters here today in every rumor concerning the fighting between the forces of Francisco Villa and the Carranza troops near Namiquipa, towards which American troops advanced last night. The outcome of the engagement had not been reported by Gen. Pershing and Gen. Funston expected to get his first news from Mexican sources. The latest official reports showed the three detachments of Gen. Pershing's force riding hard into the south. The prospects for at Amendment to Army Bill Places Him in Control of Reserve.

Also Has Authority to Increase Army Without Consulting Congress.

Washington, March 21.—The house today continued work on the Hay army reorganization bill, with about two-thirds of the measure remaining to be disposed of. Among the sections awaiting consideration were those relating to the national guard, the industrial reserve and that providing for a nitrate plant.

The first action of the house today was to adopt without a debate an amendment to give the president absolute control over the reserve of 60,000 men.

The bill originally provided that authority must be granted by congress before the reservists could be mobilized. An amendment offered by Representative Kahn of the committee

VILLA A BANDIT, SAYS FORMER SUPPORTER

No Longer Leader of Constitutionalist Forces, Declares Gen. Angeles.

El Paso, Tex., March 21.—Gen. Felipe Angeles, former military adviser to Francisco Villa, today came out of a long retirement to explain how, in his opinion, Francisco Villa, instead of being leader of the Constitutionalist cause, has fallen to the status of a hunted bandit.

Gen. Angeles charged that "Villa, like Carranza, aspired to be a dictator," and that this, and not the battles he lost, caused his friends to forsake him.

The general was the last of Villa's prominent supporters to quit him. He now lives on a modest vegetable ranch and dairy near El Paso.

"The Carranzistas, the Villastas, and the Zapatistas are all my enemies," said the general. "I have put aside war and politics.

"Villa gained power because of his wonderful energy and his personal magnetism. He had driving power. Also he could be free and generous.

"There seems to be an impression that Villa assured obedience by inspiring fear. This is unjust.

"As a commander Villa had but one plan of battle—to drive forward. He knew nothing of military strategy and his advisers supplied it. He lost his strategy when he lost his advisers."

SUMMARY OF THE WAR NEWS

Today's Berlin announcement on the German drive in the Avocourt sector reports the storming of all the French fortified positions in and near Avocourt woods. The ground was won by Bavarian regiments and Wurttemburg landwehr. In making their substantial gains the Germans took more than 2,500 prisoners and quantities of war material, while the French added materially to their casualties in fruitless counter-attacks.

On the northern end of the line in the east the Russians are extending their battle front, attacking along the Dvina line from the Riga district down to the lake region south of Dvinsk.

The Russian assaults were repelled, Berlin declares, the attacking forces suffering heavy losses. The German war office admits a withdrawal at only one point, where a narrow salient south of Lake Narocz was abandoned to escape the encircling fire of the Russians.

Sir Edward Grey, the British foreign secretary, announced that Belgium had been notified by the allies that when the time came she would be invited to join in the peace negotiations.

A news agency dispatch from Teheran reports the occupation of Ispahan, one of the most important cities of Persia, 218 miles southeast of Teheran, by the Russians.

The Russians have won an important success in Southeastern Galicia, where Vienna admits that the Austrian bridgehead at Uscieczko, on the Dniester, about forty miles northwest of Czernowitz has been evacuated under the heavy Russian pressure.

The Austrian force there was trapped, but cut its way through Uscieczko which the Russians held and joined other Austrian forces near Znieczczyky further south on the Dniester.

The Italians have resumed heavy attacks at the Tolmino bridgehead, Vienna reporting the repulse of assaults against Mrzlivrh and Krn, with losses to the Italians of machine guns and numbers of men taken prisoner. The Austrians themselves captured a position at Romson and made additionnl captures there. At the Gorizia bridgehead, where there has been intense artillery fire the Austrians ejected the Italians from a trench.

A skirmish between four British and three German torpedo boat destroyers occurred yesterday off the Belgian coast. The London official account says the German destroyers turned as the British sighted and ran for Zeebrugge, the British craft pursuing and shots being exchanged in a running fight. Two of the German boats were hit, the statement says. Four men on the British destroyers were wounded.

The German version of the engagement declares that it was broken off by the British, who steamed away at full speed after they had received several direct hits, and that the Germans suffered only unimportant damage.

Rioting has occurred at Tullamore, Ireland, where Sinn Fein rioters fired on the police, three of whom were wounded. Conditions in some parts of Ireland have recently been reported disturbed by the carrying on of a vigorous campaign against recruiting.

KAUPPI'S RECORD ON ROAD WORK

Road work that has been completed through the efforts of County Commissioner Charles Kauppi in the Fifth district is reviewed in a report furnished yesterday by E. K. Coe, county engineer of roads. During the three years the commissioner has built 123 miles of new road, regraded 56½ miles of old road and graveled 56¾ miles of roadway.

In addition, he is credited with having built five steel bridges, three concrete bridges, sixteen wooden bridges, three steel beam bridges, and thirty steel bridges on county ditch roads.

Among the longer stretches of roadway built by the commissioner in his district are: Miller Trunk, 12½ miles; Agnew, 9 miles; Cotton, 7 miles; Swan

CHARLES KAUPPI.

Lake, 6½ miles; West Kelsey, 6 miles; Blackwood road, Harris road, Stevens road, 5 miles each; Hodgson, Eklund, 4 miles each, and about twenty other roads of from a half mile to three and a half miles each.

The largest regrading job was that of the Swan Lake road, which was improved in that manner for twelve miles. Other big jobs were: Midway-Pike Lake, 6 miles; Industrial, 4 miles; Maple Grove, 4 miles; state road No. 2, 4 miles; Savanna, 3 miles, and several others of from one to two and a half miles.

More than half of the work of graveling went on the Miller Trunk road. This was graveled for a distance of twenty-seven miles. The other roads range from three-quarters of a mile to four and one-half miles.

The commissioner this year has planned to spend about $120,000 for building and rebuilding roads in this section of the county. Much of this money will be spent on roads leading directly into West Duluth, such as the Getchell road, Thomson road and the state highways.

TELLS STORY OF SHOOTING

Max Hammons, Accused of Saari Murder, on Witness Stand.

Says Hastings Fired Fatal Shot Despite Efforts to Restrain Him.

Max Hammons, 20-year-old boy jointly charged with Michael F. Hastings for the murder of William Saari near Brookston on Oct. 26 last, told his story to a district court jury this morning.

It was as expected. Hammons admitted everything except that he did the shooting or had any intention of holding up Saari and his companion, William Niemi, who came through the experience alive and was able to tell a story which will send one and perhaps both of the men to the penitentiary for life.

Hammons admitted that he was with Hastings and that they had talked of "holding up" Saari and Niemi, whom the state claims they followed three miles out of Brookston on a tote road, where the shooting took place. Hammons said he tried to discourage Hastings from attempting to hold up the two men. When questioned further by County Attorney Greene, he was asked why he tried to discourage Hastings. To this Hammons replied that it was because he considered the consequences of a prison term and also that he was of the opinion that Saari and Niemi did not have enough money on them to repay them for the trouble of robbing them.

Tried to Prevent Shooting.

Hammons also admitted under cross-examination that he and Hastings followed the two men for more than a half mile after they had discussed the proposition of holding up Saari and Niemi and that suddenly Hastings pulled a gun and began firing. Hammons declares that he then pulled at Hastings' arm in an endeavor to restrain him. After the shooting, he ran. Hastings followed. They were caught in the woods near Brookston.

Hammons lost his temper while being cross-examined by County Attorney Greene.

"You asked me that question once before and I answered it," he snapped at the prosecutor on one occasion.

Judge Cant interrupted and admonished Hammons not to answer the questions in that manner.

Hammons was reluctant about telling about his past. He said that his relatives lived in Dawson, Okla., but that he had not been there for four or five years. His father is dead and he has a step-father by the name of John Wright, he said. Two brothers reside in Joplin, Mo., he said, but has not heard from them for about two years. He said that he had not written to his mother for more than four years.

Hammons said that he attended the exposition at San Francisco last year and that he met Hastings in Dakota last fall before the pair came to Brookston. Hammons also stated that he was a member of the I. W. W., having purchased a membership card for $2 and paid dues for two months in the organization.

The closing arguments are being made this afternoon and it is expected that the jury will take the case before court adjourns this afternoon.

STEVENS IS STILL AHEAD

Leads Larson With Five Counties Yet to Be Heard From.

Big Discrepancy Between Figures By Wire and Official Returns.

St. Paul, Minn., March 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Former Congressman Stevens, of St. Paul, it is believed today, will finish a winner in the contest for one of the four places for Republican delegate-at-large. With only five counties missing from the recent presidential primary, Mr. Stevens continued to lead in the returns received.

At noon the count for fourth place was as follows: F. C. Stevens, 24,214; Larson, 23,589; Manahan, 23,525. Larson and Manahan are running neck and neck, and much interest is being shown in the outcome.

Discrepancy in Returns.

There is a great discrepancy between returns received by wire and those taken from the official returns as filed with Secretary of State Schmahl. This has caused inquiry on the part of friends of some of the candidates, who are by no means satisfied with the returns, and they may take it upon themselves to delve into the matter, according to reports today.

The figures on Democratic delegates-at-large have not been compiled today. The secretary of state says the figures probably will be available tomorrow afternoon. Just is in fifth place, about 700 ahead of Weiss, who is approximately 2,000 ahead of Wessel. The five counties missing are: Aitkin, Cass, Itasca, Chippewa and Koochiching.

BACKING HIM OUT.

London Globe: Sir Herbert Tree's wit is well known among his friends, and they tell some very good stories about his funny remarks at rehearsals.

Once during the rehearsal of a certain play Sir Herbert asked a very young and by no means brilliant actor who fancied himself greatly to "step back a little." The actor did so and Tree went on rehearsing. A little later the famous manager repeated his request, and the youth obeyed again.

Shortly after Tree once more asked him to "step a little farther back."

"But if I do," complained the youthful one, ruefully, "I shall be completely off the stage."

"Yes," answered Tree, quietly, "that's right!"

IS CANDIDATE FOR SENATOR

Eberhart Announces Himself in Race for National Upper House.

His Vote in Presidential Primaries Prompts Him to Enter Early.

St. Paul, Minn., March 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Former Governor A. O. Eberhart is formally a candidate for the Republican nomination for United States senator in the June primaries. He issued his announcement today.

That the former governor has been a candidate has been known for months, but up to now he has never publicly said so.

The formal announcement is issued on the heels of the presidential primary and as a result of his showing in that election. Mr. Eberhart's entrance to the primary as a candidate for delegate-at-large to the Republican national convention was in the nature of a trial heat, and the fact that he obtained the largest vote of anybody on the list, receiving an overwhelming majority over any of the other candidates, has given him the cue to strike while the iron is hot; hence the announcement, just one week after the primary race.

Typical of the Candidate.

The former governor's platform, as outlined in the announcement, is regarded as typical. It is frank without being definite, and promises further discussion in the future of the subjects he mentions, which are the tariff, preparedness, neutrality, economy, efficiency and prosperity, and the Philippines.

In his mention of the latter subject, Mr. Eberhart shrewdly indorses the position of Senator Knute Nelson, probably the strongest man in the state today, and who added to his laurels within the present month by his patriotic support of the president in the vote on the submarine matter.

Mr. Eberhart's announcement follows:

"Having been honored by the people of Minnesota as few others, I have hesitated to seek further distinction, but my friends throughout the state point to the presidential primaries, in which every county in the state has given me such a splendid indorsement, as indicating the sentiment of the people of Minnesota in regard to my candidacy for United States senator, and in response thereto I have decided to file as a candidate for that office, subject to the Republican primaries in June.

Points to Record.

"My twelve years of public service, over five of which were as governor of the state, has given the people intimate knowledge of my fitness for the position to which I frankly aspire. My record is before them, and upon that record of service I base my candidacy, which I hope and believe will meet with their approval. In it there is nothing to conceal, magnify or explain.

"Among the specific acts which entitle my candidacy to consideration by the people of Minnesota, I wish to refer to chapter 176 of the general laws of 1905, which gave the railroad and warehouse commission absolute control over railroad rates; chapter 177 of the same general laws, which forever abolished in this state the old system of railroad rebates; and chapter 163 thereof, which established the state highway commission. The agricultural, industrial and social center work of my administration as governor is known and recognized by every state in the union, and the favorable publicity given to our state, its people and institutions throughout the nation during that time is well known. My appointments, perhaps the best test of a public officer, have been uniformly approved by the people. The movement to reorganize the administration of state affairs along lines of greater efficiency and economy is here to stay, and will succeed as soon as the people of the state have realized its importance.

"Regarding my stand on important national questions, I believe the people should be frankly informed, and I have never hesitated to take them into my confidence nor feared to stand by what I judged to be right.

Tariff and Preparedness.

"The tariff.—I am for America only, and stand for the adequate protection of the American laborer, the American farmer and the American business man, such protection to be enforced by a protective tariff, which shall equal the difference in cost of production here and abroad. In order to enact such a tariff and keep it forever from partisan politics, there should be established a permanent tariff commission, such commission to be given all necessary funds and authority.

"Preparedness.—I stand for adequate, defensive preparedness, to which proper military training, a strong navy and modern coast defenses are essential, in order to safeguard our country against foreign invasion, but I do not favor a large standing army or any other form of militarism.

"Neutrality.—In all our relations with every warring nation, I believe our country should observe a strict and impartial neutrality.

"Economy.—In the interest of economy I favor a complete budget system for making appropriations. The old pork barrel methods should be abolished.

Domestic and Foreign Policies.

"Efficiency and Prosperity.—One of the greatest problems of our nation is adequate agricultural, industrial and commercial preparedness, and the establishment of social centers in rural communities and cities alike, to insure the greatest possible development and best use of our resources as well as the greatest happiness and prosperity to all our people. I pledge myself to use every possible effort in securing for the whole nation the legislation which, during the past six years, has made Minnesota the leading state of the Union in agricultural, industrial and social development.

"The Philippines.—In regard to our policy in the Philippines, I indorse the position of our senior senator, Knute Nelson, believing that we should retain these islands until their people are fit for self-government.

"I shall take occasion, as the campaign progresses, to further discuss these and other important issues.

"To maintain the high standing of Minnesota in the councils of our nation and to render the greatest possible service to the people of the state, which has so signally honored me, shall be my ambition, and to that end I pledge my best efforts."

CITY EMPLOYS SPECIAL AID

Crassweller Will Assist Samuelson in Presenting Referendum Case.

Latter Protests the Payment of $250 for "Unnecessary Assistance."

Despite the objections of City Attorney Samuelson, the city commissioners yesterday afternoon authorized the employment of Frank Crassweller as special counsel, at a salary of $250, to represent the city in appealing the armory referendum case to the supreme court.

According to a resolution adopted by the commissioners, the city will pay Mr. Crassweller $250 for his services, a similar amount having been raised by subscription among opponents of the armory sale, and those who want a ruling on the referendum feature of the charter, while the municipality will bear all court costs, fees, the cost of printing the various briefs and the railroad and transportation expenses of the special counsel and the city attorney.

"I am well able to handle this case in behalf of the city," said City Attorney Samuelson, when Mayor Prince introduced the resolution authorizing the employment of Mr. Crassweller. "However, I have no objection to having another man assist in presenting the case to the supreme court, if some people feel that I am not disinterested enough. But I do object to having the city pay several hundred dollars for this special counsel when I am fully capable of presenting the matter myself. It is an unjust expense to the municipality, in my opinion."

"Personally," said Mayor Prince, "I don't think this appeal will avail anything, nor do I think that the city attorney is incapable of handling the case himself. But there has been a demand for special counsel, and I feel that the best way to satisfy all concerned is by hiring Mr. Crassweller."

A communication to the council, asking that Mr. Crassweller be hired as special counsel, was presented to City Clerk Borgen before the meeting. It is signed by eleven members of the charter commission. The signers are W. E. McEwen, T. T. Hudson, H. H. Phelps, John G. Williams, T. W. Hugo, H. C. Strong, J. H. Crowley, Thomas Olafson, M. B. Cullum, S. A. Foster and Charles F. Macdonald.

AGAIN URGES CO-OPERATION

Dr. Guild Says Churches Should Work Together in Combating Evil.

Federated Council Speaker Gives Address at Church Banquet.

"Real Tasks for Real Men" was the subject of an address given last evening at the Men's Interchurch council supper at the First Presbyterian church by Rev. Roy B. Guild of New York, executive secretary of the Federated Council of the Churches of Christ in America, who was a guest of honor at the dinner. The affair was attended by 168 men of various churches throughout the city.

Rev. Mr. Guild spoke on the co-operation of churches, urging team play, regardless of difference in creeds, in handling questions of immorality, intemperance and kindred evils. Among other things he said:

"The real task of every church in this city today is for the men of the church to make Duluth the ideal city for their children. This interchurch activity will not hinder the growth of the organic unit, but on the other hand will develop it, by making Christianity a more vital issue, and by eliminating much of the wasteful competition of today.

"Religion and government are inter related," said the speaker, "and the members of the church can do much to improve civic conditions without necessarily becoming political factotums." The civic action work by the combined churchmen of Pittsburgh was outlined by the speaker as an instance.

Enemies of Good Government.

"This league realizes that good government suffers most from the citizen who does not vote, seconded by him who is misled. This league has organized, therefore, down through districts and congregations to the individual voter to see that he is registered, that he is thoroughly informed as to the issues at stake, and that he casts his vote.

"In the fight of morality against organized vice, the Men's Federation of Louisville, Ky., is doing splendid work. This league has been in existence five years and represents 103 churches out of a possible 115 in that city. It is the medium through which the church expresses its protest against the immoral and unlawful conditions in the city, and has to its credit the appointment of a vice commission in the city."

The speaker declared that overlapping and duplication are prevented by the Federated council and that also investments in new church properties were safeguarded. He also spoke of the problems of co-ordinating the work of the great number of boys' organizations which are often unrelated and seemingly undesirous of co-operating and preventing junior bodies of the churches from hindering the development of the community ideal.

At a short business session of the Interchurch council the nominating committee reported candidates for the various offices for the ensuing year. An election will take place one month from last night. The list of candidates follows: President, W. L. Smithies; first vice president, W. J. McCabe; second vice president, Rev. J. J. Daniels; treasurer, A. C. La Duc; executive-secretary, B. C. Wade.

Executive committee—C. A. Duncan, J. H. Cook, W. L. Smithies, B. A. Wheeler, J. W. Walker, W. B. Patten, Frank Crassweller, W. S. Moore, W H. Hoyt and J. J. Moe.

COPPER MINES CAN'T FILL ORDERS

Demand Too Insistent to Permit of Any Surplus Remaining.

The demand for copper metal is reported to be exceeding the capacities of the mines, and as a consequence, strenuous efforts are being made to increase productions at all the mining camps.

Quotations are being firmly held at the high levels reached a few weeks ago—28½ cents a pound for spot, 27½ cents for June and July, and 27 cents for August delivery. Making deliveries is said to be giving producers more concern than effecting sales. Consumers are clamoring to have their shipments rushed, with the result that the metal is going direct from the furnaces into consumption leaving no chance for accumulation in any quarter.

Foreign advices are to the effect that the copper situation in Europe is very tight, as evidenced in recent advances on the London market. A development reported in that connection is the difficulty being experienced in obtaining steamer space to transport the metal.

A factor that has imparted strength to the undertone of the copper market is a report to the effect that orders for munitions involving a large tonnage of copper are to be placed in this country shortly. So tight is the market that a prominent wire manufacturing concern is reported to be experiencing extreme difficulty in closing contracts for 1,500,000 tons of metal for delivery during the first half of the year. It is believed that the order will have to be divided among several producers.

These conditions in the trade are being reflected in current quotations in mining stocks at Boston and New York. Advances have been the rule during the past week on expectations that the dividends will be increased on a number of stocks in which the next quarterly declarations will be due shortly.

BRIDGE OF NATURAL ROCK OVER TISCHER'S CREEK WILL PROVIDE ROADWAY AND CARRY WATER SUPPLY MAIN PROPOSED BRIDGE OVER TISCHER'S CREEK AND PLANS FOR WINDING ROADWAY.

Construction of a bridge out of the natural colored rock over Tischer's creek and the opening up of a roadway across the 100-foot ravine, was authorized by the city commissioners yesterday afternoon. An ordinance appropriating $9,000 for the improvement was introduced by Commissioner Merritt, while the manager of the water and light department was authorized to advertise for bids on building the bridge.

East First street now ends at this side of the ravine. Tischer's creek runs between Thirty-second and Thirty-third avenues east and it is the aim of Manager Reed to have the bridge connect First street by means of winding roadways on both sides of the proposed bridge.

The native rock along the ravine will be used in constructing the bridge, Manager Reed said this morning. Plans have been completed by Morell & Nicholls of Minneapolis, prominent landscape architects, and preparations for the work are being made by Chief Engineer Kelly of the water and light department. A 36-inch main, the chief supply pipe for the city, will replace the present pipe, which crosses the ravine on a wooden trestle. The new pipe will cross the stream by being built inside of the bridge.

As soon as the bridge is finished and the roadway blasted, the plans will be turned over the park department, so that trees and shrubbery can be planted. Winding stairs will lead down both sides of the ravine to the bridge.

Bids have been advertised for, and it is expected that active construction work will begin early in May.

JOINS HANDS WITH FORESTRY WORKERS

Sportsmen Seeking to Conserve Game, Adopt Official Publication.

Officials of the Minnesota Game Protective league have completed negotiations to make "North Woods," the publication of the Minnesota Forestry association, the official organ of the former body.

James A. Lawrie, vice president of the state league and secretary of the Duluth branch, has written an appeal to members of the organization, urging them to assist in making the official publication a success. Mr. Lawrie's letter to members of the league throughout the state follows:

"The Minnesota Game Protective league is an organization of sportsmen formed for the purpose of protecting, conserving and encouraging the propagation of wild life in Minnesota. The members of this state organization are members of local organizations all over the state. Men who are keenly, actively and intelligently sportsmen, who realize that it is now up to them to thoroughly unite and organize a force to combat the elements that are now trending rapidly toward such a decimation of all wild life as seriously threatens the continuance of their sport and recreation.

"Every man of them knows full well that without forest shelters we cannot keep and protect our wild life and he wants both for many years to come. Every man of them is also willing and anxious to help the cause of forestry that it in turn may help him, and what is more natural that in seeking a medium of communication between individuals of like desires the sportsmen should turn to their forestry friends who already possess such a medium and ask to share in the benefits to be derived from its existence?

"To the association it means an increased audience, to the league it means a neat monthly publication wherein all the local hunting gossip, so dear to the sportsman's heart, may become the property of the whole league."

Eminent Physicians Failed in Kidney Trouble

I wish to inform you of the great benefit I have derived from the use of Swamp-Root. I had been a sufferer for more than three years from Kidney and Liver trouble and was almost constantly treated by the most eminent physicians, who could only give me temporary relief. I could hardly get from one room to the other without help, and had been in bed five days when I began the use of Swamp-Root. Inside of twenty-four hours I could see some benefit. I continued to use Swamp-Root until I had used two bottles when I really felt that my old trouble was completely cured; and I am positive that any person suffering with kidney or liver trouble can be cured by the use of this preparation. I am 50 years of age and in good health. It has been fourteen years since I had this trouble and I do not know how to express myself as strongly as I desire in favor of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. I am sure that it saved my life, and that my health is due to this remedy. I heartily recommend it to every sufferer of kidney trouble.

PREDICTS CHAUTAUQUA WILL BE BIG THIS YEAR

E. W. GILBERTSON.

Devils Lake, N. D., March 21.—(Special to The Herald)—The secretary of the North Dakota Chautauqua association, E. W. It will soon be announced.

SUPERIOR

Primaries on in Superior.

Primary election day in Superior is drawing out a large number of voters. The contest for the nomination for commissionership between four candidates is resulting in the large vote being cast. The registration today for the spring election is expected to be the heaviest ever listed in the city, owing to the "wet" and "dry" issues.

Birdhouse Prize Winners.

Prize winners in the "birdhouse" contest between boys of Superior schools were announced by the judges last evening. There were 125 entries, six boys being awarded first prizes of $5 each, eight second prizes of $1 each and nine third prizes of 50 cents each. The judges were Prof. T. J. McCarthy of the Superior normal school, S. George Stevens of Duluth, Dr. George H. Conklin and Fred B. Jerrard.

PETITION IS GROWING

Firemen Report Fully 8,000 Signers for Initiative Measure.

Declare Statements of City Commissioners Tend to Mislead Public.

Duluth firemen, who have been working for the double platoon system by the circulation of an initiative petition, have met with remarkable success in their efforts to secure signatures. This morning firemen stated to The Herald that fully 8,000 names had already been secured, which is far more than is needed to make the petition legal. More Duluthians, however, are offering to sign the document to insure better conditions for firemen, who are now putting in twenty-four hours daily except for one day in the week.

Have Presented Case.

Firemen today denied the report that they had not presented their case to the city commission. A petition asking for better conditions was presented to the safety commissioner some time ago, they said, but it was ignored. The firemen also claim that other statements made by city commissioners are misleading, and a body of the petitioners made the following statement today:

"The readers of The Herald should note that the firemen are not asking for any changes this year as the department fund is already fixed—but for 1917. Only thirty additional men are needed at a salary of $870, which would mean but $26,100 for the first year. About $1,500 more would be necessary for 1918 and an additional $1,500 for 1919. After these thirty men had served three years, no extra equipment nor houses would be required, but the department would be improved in every way.

"Where does Mr. Voss get his figures?

Twin City Conditions.

"The St. Paul and Minneapolis departments are giving 'better offs' and more pay than the Duluth men are getting, and there the men are trying to get the double platoon system. All the firemen ask is a square deal from the commissioners and the people. Some of the interviews given in the papers have been very misleading. Attention is directed to the number of calls said to have been six times as great in Minneapolis as in Duluth. The number last year was only four times as great, there being 2,225 calls with 393 men against 512 alarms in Duluth with only ninety-five men.

"First grade firemen in Minneapolis get $1,152 a year while in Duluth they get but $1,050 a year.

"Nothing would please the Duluth firemen better than to have the city commission and the public get complete information as to the conditions of the men working here as compared to conditions elsewhere. The commissioners and public will then get a better idea of the justice of this petition."

Want Humane Conditions.

The firemen have had drawn up an initiative petition, which is in the form of an ordinance. They maintain that a man can bring up a family properly and be on duty at a fire hall twenty-four hours daily with but one day a week off. The petition follows:

"To the city council of the city of Duluth—

"We, the undersigned, who have each stated opposite his signature appended hereto his place of residence and street number, being duly qualified electors of the city of Duluth, Minnesota, hereby propose an ordinance as follows:

"'An Ordinance to Limit the Hours of Service at Stations of Employes of the Fire Department of the City of Duluth.

"'The City of Duluth does ordain:

"'Section 1. No member of the fire department of the city of Duluth shall be compelled or require dto be on duty more than twelve (12) hours in any one day, except days for changing from the day shift to the night shift, and no member of said fire department shall be subject to call, or perform any duties in said department out of his regular hours, as defined in this section. Provided, however, that the director of public safety may establish such rules as may be necessary to call upon all members of the fire department in cases of great conflagrations, or unusual fire or fires, and in such cases, the chief of the fire department may require each and every member of the department to assist in the protection of life and property, notwithstanding said member, or fireman, has been relieved from duty under the provisions of this ordinance. Provided, further, that none of the provisions of this ordinance shall be construed to apply to any vacation now, or hereafter granted to any fireman or firemen by the city of Duluth.

"'Section 2. All ordinances or parts of ordinances inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

"'Section 3. This ordinance shall take effect on and after Jan. 1, 1917.'

"And request that said ordinance be submitted forthwith to a vote of the people at a special election in accordance with the provisions of Section 51, Chapter 7 of the Charter of the City of Duluth."

What is Home Without an Heir!

This is a subject that has a place in all minds in all times. And it naturally directs thought as to the comfort of the mother during that wonderful period of expectancy. Mothers who know recommend "Mother's Friend." It is an external remedy for the stretching muscles, enables them to expand without undue strain, assists the organs to crowd against nerves, to pull at ligaments to thus avoid pain.

Thus restful days are assured, peaceful nights are experienced, morning sickness, headache, apprehension and other distresses are among the various things which women everywhere relate they entirely escaped by using "Mother's Friend. ARMOR PLATE BILL IS BEFORE SENATE

Washington, March 21.—Debate on the bill for government manufacture of armor-plate was continued in the senate today under an agreement whereby voting on amendments was to begin at 4 o'clock this afternoon. Passage of the measure by a large majority substantially as reported was confidently predicted by Democratic leaders.

Senator Oliver, Republican of Pennsylvania, in whose state all three of the armor-plate plants are located, declared he never had known a bill seriously proposed with so little reason and justification.

"The result of a careful investigation just concluded is astounding," said he. "I honestly believe there is no foundation in fact in the belief that the government has not bought armor-plate at fair and reasonable prices and I defy anyone to prove to the contrary."

SALARY GOES WITH OFFICE

Not Payable to Usurper District Court Judges Hold.

City "Stuck" in Metcalfe Case—Bearing on Windom Suit.

Salaries annexed to a public office are incidental to the title of the office and not to its occupation and exercise.

Duluth district court judges unanimously agree that this is the law of the commonwealth and in their opinion handed down yesterday afternoon they reverse Municipal Judge W. H. Smallwood, who interpreted the statutes otherwise in a suit brought by R. N. Metcalfe against the city of Duluth to recover salary as health inspector.

Judge Smallwood held that Mr. Metcalfe's claim for $150 salary for the months of April and May, 1915, was invalid. The case was appealed to the district court and was heard en banc. The higher tribunal unanimously overrules Judge Smallwood and gives Mr. Metcalfe judgment against the city.

Bears On Own Case.

Curious as it may seem, the decision overruling Judge Smallwood in the Metcalfe case may control a suit in which Judge Smallwood himself is attempting to collect salary from the city. This case is now pending before the district court and is an action in which Former Judge W. L. Windom is also asserting a claim for salary against the city. The salary claims grow out of the municipal judgeship election squabble. Both judges who served at intervals at various times between the election in April until the supreme court finally decided the case late in the fall, are pressing their claims for salaries.

In the Metcalfe case, in which the principle of law is stated, the district court, among other things, holds as follows: "Minnesota has taken her place with those states that hold that the salary annexed to a public office is incident to the title of the office and not to its occupation and exercise, nor to the usurpation or colorable succession of it."

The Metcalfe Case.

Mr. Metcalfe was employed as health inspector at a salary of $75 under Dr. H. E. Webster, health commissioner. When Dr. Webster was succeeded by Dr. E. W. Fahey, Mr. Metcalfe was arbitrarily dismissed from service and M. J. Segal appointed in his place. Mr. Metcalfe, however, protested against being dismissed without cause and took the matter up with the civil service commission which reinstated him a few weeks later. He afterwards resigned.

At the time of his discharge, Mr. Metcalfe had about $75 coming in salary and he was out of the office for about one month. The city offered him the $75 salary but he sued for $150 and refused to take a cent less. The city refused to pay him for the month he was out of the office, inasmuch as they had paid it over to Mr. Segal. The city took the position that if Mr. Segal was not entitled the money, he was the proper party for Mr. Metcalfe to sue.

"Under such a state of facts," the court holds, "all the authorities agree that the plaintiff would be entitled to judgment for his salary during the period he was illegally deprived of the opportunity to perform the duties of his office."

The opinion is signed by Judges Ensign, Cant, Dancer and Fesler.

ARMY RECRUITING OFFICE OPENED HERE

Three Officers Are Expected to Work This Territory.

Two more United States army recruiting officers are expected to come to Duluth about April 1 to assist Corporal Morkowsky, who is now at the head of the new office at 218 West Superior street, opposite the Grand theater. The head of the new office has been authorized to spare no labor in securing as many men as possible for the army here.

Uncle Sam is hurrying recruiting because of the Mexican situation, and the army will be increased to full strength, 100,000 men and officers.

The United States government also authorized Corporal Morkowsky to look over the territory in this district and determine what other points were available for successful recruiting stations. Officer Morkowsky has recommended that the Fargo office be reopened, and that new offices be established at Superior, La Crosse and Ashland, Wis., and at points on the Mesaba range.

It is expected that more men will be in the cities in a few days, as the logging camps are breaking up, and the warm weather always brings out a number of men from winter employment.

How to Safely Peel Your Face

If you wear an aged, discolored or weather-beaten complexion, the most sensible thing to do is to remove it—rather than patch it over or "doctor" it with cosmetics. The only way to really remove the complexion—aside from resorting to an expensive and painful surgical operation—is by means of ordinary mercolized wax. Spread the wax over the face at night, as you would cold cream; wash it off in the morning. This gradually peels off the lifeless and the half-dead outer skin, in minute particles—gradually the fresh young skin beneath beams forth. Then you have a clear, velvety, healthy-hued complexion such as no unnatural method can possibly produce. Freckles, blotches, pimples—all surface defects due to weather, ill-health or the ravages of time, of course, disappear with the discarded skin. Ask the druggist for an ounce of mercolized wax; you won't need more.

If you wear wrinkles or crowsfeet, the best thing to do is to bathe your face in a harmless lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. Nothing else will so surely erase the unwelcome lines. —Advertisement.

Ailments of Men Happily Overcome

SUCCESSFULLY TRIED BY MANY.

Undoubtedly the following suggestion will work wonders for that great class of men who, through dissipation of their natural strength, find themselves in their "second childhood" long before the three score and ten allotted to life's pleasures and enjoyments, are reached.

It is presumed to be infallible, and highly efficient in quickly restoring in "nervous exhaustion," weak vitality, melancholia and the functions.

By taking it at home no man need be the wiser as to another's short-comings, and expensive fees are avoided.

Lack of poise and equilibrium in men is a constant source of embarrassment even when the public least suspects it. For the benefit of those who want a restoration to full, bounding health, and all the happiness accompanying it, let it be stated that the prescription calls only for three-grain Cadomene tablets, in sealed tubes with full directions for self-administration. The tablets contain no opiates or habit-forming drugs, so a physician's prescription is not necessary. Well-stocked pharmacies supply these tablets, which possess the most wonderful tonic—invigorating powers imaginable. The effect of their use is soon apparent in new strength and nerve force.—Advertisement.

EXTENSIVE SALES OF NORTH DAKOTA LANDS

Nearly Half a Million Realized By Five County Sales.

Fargo, N. D., March 21.—Nearly half a million dollars was realized for state educational institutions and public schools by the series of five land sales held in the Red river valley recently under the direction of Frank S. Henry, state land commissioner.

No better evidence of North Dakota prosperity has ever been presented.

There were but a few remaining parcels of school land to be offered in the counties. A large number of people were present at all the places, especially Cass, Richland and Sargent. At Sargent county the crowd could hardly get into the courthouse. The bidding on most of the pieces was spirited. These sales are considered by the land department as being exceptionally good.

The sales in five counties follow:

	Acreage Sold.	Tot. Val.	Aver. Val.
Cass	3,992.87	$142,710.00	$35.7134
Walsh	1,272.67	32,242.10	26.20
Steele	1,760.00	64,360.00	36.56
Richland	6,288.76	147,243.45	23.43
Sargent	3,431.52	96,454.25	28.10

WILL REPLACE OLD BRIDGES

Council Takes Steps to Make Fills Under Decaying Structures.

Civil Service System in Effect; No More Saloons at Gary.

Preliminary steps for making fills to replace old wooden bridges during this year were taken by the city commissioners yesterday afternoon, when easements for slopes or retaining walls were designated along several highways.

Commissioner Farrell, works head, explained that condemnation proceedings will be instituted to learn the damages to private property in each instance. The fills will encroach on private property.

The easements were ordered designated along the following points: Seventeenth avenue east, between Seventh and Eighth streets; Ninth street and First avenue west; Eighth street, between First and Second avenues west; Grand avenue, between Seventy-first and Seventy-second avenues; East Tenth street, between Fourth and Sixth avenues; Wallace avenue and Woodland avenues, between St. Marie and Bruce streets; Forty-third avenue east, between Lombard street and the alley north; Eighth street, between Twenty-second and Twenty-fifth avenues west.

City Auditor Campbell and City Treasurer McLean were authorized to employ a special clerk jointly at a salary of $65 a month, from time to time during this year.

The election payroll, amounting to $1,384, was allowed and ordered paid.

Mayor Prince's ordinance classifying the city's civil service system, and Commissioner Merritt's measures appropriating 3,000 for hauling pipe and $2,000 for the purchase of another consignment of cast iron pipe, were passed. First reading was given the ordinances appropriating $868 for printing the annual reports, $126 for the purchase of police caps and $196 for the purchase of filing cases for the municipal court.

As forecasted in The Herald last evening, the council rejected the applications of Lubratovich & Danculovich and Henry C. Mason for saloon license transfers to New Duluth. The application of Andrew Meyer for a transfer of O. M. Johnson's license at 628 West Superior street was laid over a week, while Richard Sneasby and Erick Nelson were granted renewals of their licenses at 220 East Superior street and 611 West Superior street, respectively. The application of Joseph Remmell for a transfer of M. Caron's license at 701 West Superior street to 417 West Superior street was granted by a vote of 4 to 1, Commissioner Farrell dissenting.

pellations to which the chancellor would be forced to reply, and have chosen to clothe their proposals in the form of resolutions which, unless they are made urgent measures, will take their place in the regular order of resolutions. So many other important resolutions have precedence that discussion of the submarine proposals in this event would be postponed indefinitely. In any case the chancellor scarcely will speak upon the subject matter of the resolutions unless he is compelled to do so.

Composed of Two Elements.

The movement which found expression in the resolutions is composed of two constituent elements. First, there is the large body of popular opinion which, honestly interested in the submarine weapon, desires that it may have an opportunity to display its efficacy unhampered by political restriction. This element generally is unaware of the political motives which play a part in the movement. Second, there are those who are now and long have been desirous of having another chancellor—one who would permit discussion of peace terms, the projects of the annexationists and the sharpening of the submarine campaign regardless of political dangers.

most violent artillery and infantry fire. It was not until 5 o'clock in the afternoon that the commanding officer, Col. Pflanckh, determined to evacuate the destroyed fortifications.

"Smaller detachments and the wounded men reached the south bank of the Dniester in boats. Soon, however, it was necessary to abandon the transports under the concentric fire of the enemy. There remained for our brave troops, composed of Emperor's Dragoons and sappers, only one way to escape capture. They were under the necessity of cutting a way through Usciecko, which was strongly occupied by the enemy, to our troops ensconed on the heights north of Zale Szczyky.

"The march directly through the enemy's position succeeded. Under cover of the night Col. Pflanckh led his heroic troops to our advanced posts northwest of Zale Szczky where he arrived early Monday morning.

"The battle for the bridge fortifications at Usciecko will remain for all time a glorious page in the annals of our army."

dun sector west of the Meuse last night. The war office announced today that the Germans had gained no success except that they obtained a slight footing southeast of Malancourt wood. East of the Meuse the night was calm.

The text of the statement follows:

"In Belgium a reconnoissance on the part of the enemy which took place along our lines to the north of Pont Roesinghe was at once driven back by a counter-attack.

"In the Argonne district our artillery has been very active along the southern boundary of the Cheppy wood.

"West of the River Meuse the Germans several times last night renewed their attacks against our front extending from Avocourt to Malancourt where the bombardment by shells of large caliber continued without interruption. The attacks of the enemy here were accompanied by throwing of flaming liquid by detachments of men carrying special machines for this purpose.

"In spite of the heavy losses inflicted by our fire the enemy was able to take possession, after hand to hand fighting, of the southeastern part of Malancourt wood, known as the Avocourt wood, which we occupied. All the efforts of the Germans to march out from the Avocourt wood resulted in failure.

"The night passed quietly on other sectors in the Verdun region."

Germans Take 2,500 Prisoners.

Berlin, March 21, via London, 3:55 p. m.—French positions northeast of Avocourt were captured by the Germans, who took 2,500 prisoners, the war office announced today.

WHAT A BOY SHOULD DO TO BE EFFICIENT PHYSICALLY, MENTALLY AND MORALLY

Is your son physically, mentally and morally efficient?

If he is, according to a standard efficiency test prepared by a committee of 100 boys' department Y. M. C. A. secretaries and physical directors, he should be able to:

Push up from the floor from five to fifteen times, keeping his body rigid, and with only his toes and hands touching.

Do a standing broad jump of five feet ten inches.

Do a running broad jump of eight feet.

Swim any stroke.

Go a mile in twelve minutes, alternately walking and running.

Name and describe fifteen varieties of growing vegetables and fifteen flowers.

Make some article of handicraft involving at least ten hours' work.

Earn at least $1 and save it.

Know first aid principles.

Build a fire in the open, and know how to take care of it.

Name the books of the Bible.

Recite the Ten Commandments.

These and many other tests are included in the list. Duluth has one boy who has qualified and ninety-nine who are trying to qualify.

Lloyd Auxer, who has been a member of the boys' department for the last five years and, who this year will graduate from the Central high school, is the first to win out in the efficiency test, and is now entitled to wear the efficiency medal. To pass the test a boy must qualify in ten events in the physical department. If he gets 70 per cent he gets the first physical degree. When he gets 70 per cent in the educational test he gets the educational degree and when he gets 70 per cent in the religious test he gets the religious degree. Auxer out of a possible 1,000 points, scored 99 per cent in his physical test, 98 2-10 in his religious test, and 88 in his educational test.

LLOYD AUXER,
First Duluth Boy to Pass Efficiency Test.

It takes at least three months to win the first degree.

The medals will be presented on the night of the annual banquet, April 14.

WILL ACCEPT PROPOSAL BY CARRANZA

ing of a protocol, under which American and Mexican troops may cooperate in running to earth Francisco Villa and his bandits, without danger of misunderstanding or conflict. The terms of such a formal convention would be designed to meet all questions which may arise in the future, setting forth the rights of the American expeditionary forces now in pursuit of the bandit chieftain, and the nature of the co-operation expected from the troops of the Carranza government.

The proposal for the protocol, which, it is planned to have remain in force until Villa is captured, came from Mr. Arredondo, and was a direct result of the request of the United States for permission to use the railway between El Paso and Casas Grandes for the shipment of supplies to the American expeditionary forces. Mr. Arredondo is understood to have received instructions from Carranza to discuss the request with the state department, and to propose the agreement by which a complete understanding will be had by both governments.

Use of Railroads Separate Matter.

While the convention will provide for all matters such as the use of Mexican railroads by American troops, the specific request for permission to ship supplies from El Paso, will be disposed of separately.

After his conference with Mr. Polk, Arredondo started to prepare a tentative draft of the agreement, which will be submitted to Gen. Carranza as soon as an agreement on details is reached with the state department.

Every effort will be made to expedite preparation of the document, the representatives of both governments realizing that haste is essential in the campaign against Villa. As far as the shipment of supplies from El Paso is concerned, the state department is inclined to regard such an arrangements as being purely a commercial proposition.

Would Use Tracks Only.

Officials fail to see why there should be any objection to such shipments. It is not planned to use the rolling stock of the Mexican road, merely the tracks. Officials hold that the United States asked of the defacto government in this instance considerably less than the latter asked when permission was desired to transport troops through American territory some time ago. Gen. Carranza's attention also has been called to the fact that had the United States declined to comply with the request Carranza troops would not now occupy the advantageous positions they are holding in Northern Mexico.

The United States, it is understood, is prepared to make every possible concession to the de facto government, it being felt that as American troops are operating on Mexican soil, the de facto government is entitled to the greatest possible consideration. It is the desire of officials that nothing be done which could in the slightest way tend to embarrass the de facto government or bring about adverse feeling of any kind.

$100 REWARD, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. MIGHT HAVE BEEN FEINT corps assaulted the eastern stronghold.

"The reinforcing of the troops on the right bank of the Meuse before Verdun with new contingents numbering 250,000 and the bringing up of all needed supplies and ammunition had been provided for in every detail early in February and it worked out to perfection as the battle developed; but at the moment the German guns, massed in unprecedented numbers, opened fire on the morning of Feb. 21 the French lines there were held only by the covering troops stationed there for months. It was the same divisions that stood the first shock that defended the ground foot by foot, retarding the advance of the Germans and ploughing wide furrows in their ranks before each position, and finally by order, holding the line of Douaumont-Bras until reinforcements came up.

Issue Then Certain.

"The issue of the battle was then certain to the defenders. The rush for Verdun was not only anticipated by the general staff, but on analysis appears clearly logical in spite of critics who characterize it as paradoxical. The opportunity to impose battle on an adversary with a river at his back and with a single line of railway communication exposed to artillery fire was sufficient to tempt the Germans whose preparations were long deliberated upon and methodically carried out."

COMMITTEE FAILS TO SELECT CHAIRMAN

Temporary Presiding Officer of G. O. P. Convention Unchosen.

Chicago, March 21.—The sub-committee on arrangements of the Republican national committee adjourned today without taking action on the election of a temporary chairman for the national convention here next June. The subcommittee will meet again at the call of the chair about the middle of April.

When the committee adjourned the three candidates most favored appeared to be Senator Warren G. Harding, Ohio, Philader C. Knox, Pennsylvania, and Congressman James R. Mann, Illinois.

The committee agreed on the re-election of Lafayette R. Gleason of New York for secretary to serve at the next convention but formal election was postponed until the next meeting.

William F. Stone of Baltimore was elected sergeant at arms for the June convention. This will be the Fourth Republican national convention in which Mr. Stone has served in that capacity.

AUTHORITY IN PRESIDENT

and accepted by Chairman Hay, puts reservists under the orders of the secretary of war to be sent to any point when the call to the colors goes out.

Important Addition to Bill.

The amendment is the most important addition to the bill yet made. As the measure now stands the president would have authority without consulting congress to increase the army from 140,000 fighting troops to 175,000 and also to summon to the colors the 60,000 reservists, which the bill contemplates will be provided within four years.

The house rejected a proposal by Representative Anthony, Republican, of Kansas, to recruit an additional infantry regiment in Porto Rico for service in the Panama canal zone or elsewhere.

Mr. Kahn then proposed as an amendment a provision in the senate bill that while the enlistment period should remain fixed three years with the colors and four years in reserve, commanding officers might discharge peculiarly efficient men into the reserve after one year of training and that any well-trained man could go into the reserve on his own application at the end of two years active service.

The amendment was defeated 113 to 108.

Carried in New Form.

Encouraged by the narrow margin which defeated the Kahn amendment, Representative Gardner re-offered the first proposition of that amendment in new language. It was carried 128 to 117, being the first defeat of Chairman Hay during consideration of the bill.

The amendment as agreed to provides that soldiers may be discharged into the reserve at the end of one years service with the colors on approval of their commanding officers.

Chairman Hay argued that the effect of the provision was to reduce the term of enlistment with the colors to such a degree that the efficiency that the army as a whole would be impaired. Representative Gardner contended that it would encourage enlistment and tend to build up quickly a well trained reserve since no man discharged into the reserve under the provision could re-enlist in the army until he had completed six years in the reserve.

VILLA DEFEATED

least one of them to get into contact with Villa appeared good.

Along the line of communication and at Casas Grandes enough troops have been held to furnish a supporting force in a short time for whichever one of three gets into the fight should support be necessary. Here it was believed likely that by daylight the aeroplanes would be above Villa and would be able to keep Gen. Pershing informed of his new route if he manages to extricate himself from his encounter with the Carranza soldiers.

Failure to secure immediate permission to send supplies over the Northwestern railway caused headquarters today to continue to route supplies to Columbus for transportation to Casas Grandes by automobile trucks.

Failure to hear from Gen. Pershing sharpened interest at Gen. Funston's headquarters today, but did not arouse anxiety. It was pointed out that the cavalry detachments last night reported moving along three trails south of Casas Grandes were out of communication other than that maintained by the men of the signal corps and that Gen. Pershing himself probably would not receive the reports of those in command until after considerable delay.

Await News of Battle.

El Paso, Tex., March 21.—Further news of the battle reported to have been waged late yesterday near Namiquipa between Carranza troops and a force of bandits led by Francisco Villa was being impatiently awaited along the border today. A strong Carranza force has been stationed at Namiquipa, forming one of the chain of defenses which the de facto government has thrown across Southern Guerrero.

News of the battle was received first by Gen. Gavira, the Carranza commander at Juarez. Gavira's dispatches did not state the number of Villa men engaged but Col. Cano, commanding but Carranza troops, is said to have had a force of 900.

Washington Has No Report.

Washington, March 21.—War department dispatches today contained no reports on fighting between Carranza troops and the Villa band mentioned in last night's border dispatches. A report from Brig.-Gen. Pershing forwarded by Maj.-Gen. Funston said the Carranza troops and civilians encountered by the punitive expedition had been friendly and that the Mormon colony at Casas Grandes hailed the American columns as rescuers. War department reports made no mention of gatherings of Carranza troops along the border and spoke of no uneasiness.

Schools Closed at Fabens.

El Paso, Tex., March 21.—The school has been closed at Fabens, a border town thirty miles to the east of El Paso and all American civilians have been requested to leave by American military authorities, according to telephone messages received here today by H. D. Camp, Fabens' school trustee. Fabens is opposite the Mexican village of Guadalupe. American troops have arrived there and the officers are now quartered in the residences of citizens.

Rout Band of Villistas.

Torreon, Mex., March 21.—Government troops have routed a band of Villistas at Trinidad, killing eighteen men and capturing sixteen saddle horses. They pursued the bandits as far as Jimulco.

Gen. Francisco Gonzales is awaiting further reinforcements which will enable him to protect the railway against raiders.

ALL IS QUIET ON TURKISH FRONT

Situation Unchanged According to Reports From Constantinople.

Constantinople, March 21, via London.—An official statement given out by the Turkish war department says:

"Irak front: The situation is unchanged.

"Caucasian front: There is no important news to report.

"Dardanelles: On the afternoon of March 19 a torpedo boat and a cruiser shelled the neighborhood of Seddul-Bahr and Teke Burnu. The bombardment was unsuccessful and the ships retired.

"Yemen front: A British division with two machine guns advanced in the direction of El Salle, north of Sheik Hosman and was attacked by our troops, which were sent out against it. The enemy fled toward Sheik Hosman."

More Pay For Window Washers.

Des Moines, Iowa, March 21.—Women who wash car windows in Des Moines are to receive $2.30 a day henceforth. An agreement between the local street car company and its employes, whereby the latter were granted substantially increased wages, was announced today. Labor leaders insisted upon special provision for the window washers, who heretofore have been getting $1.50 a day.

Indoor Life Makes Fat

TRY OIL OF KOREIN TO KEEP WEIGHT DOWN, OR TO REDUCE SUPERFLUOUS FAT.

People who are confined within doors and who are deprived of fresh, invigorating air and exercise must take precaution to guard against over stoutness, as fat acquired by indoor life is unhealthy and a danger to the vital organs of the body. Lack of exercise in the fresh air is said to weaken the oxygen-carrying power of the blood, so that it is unable to produce strong muscles and vitality and the formation of unsightly and unhealthy fat is the result.

If you are 15 or 20 pounds above normal weight you are daily drawing on your reserve strength and are constantly lowering your vitality by carrying this excess burden. Any persons who are satisfied in their own mind that they are too stout are advised to go to Boyce Drug store, 331 West Superior St., or any good druggist and get a box of oil of korein capsules, and take one after each meal and one just before retiring at night.

Even a few days' treatment has been reported to show a noticeable reduction in weight, improved digestion and a return of the old energy; footsteps become lighter and the skin less flabby in appearance as superfluous fat disappears.

Oil of korein is inexpensive, cannot injure, and helps the digestion. Any person who wants to reduce 15 or 20 pounds is advised to give this treatment a trial.—Advertisement.

Biggest Orchestra That Has Ever Visited Duluth

Letters and telegrams are flying back and forth making final arrangements for the appearance here March 28 of the New York Symphony orchestra.

It is the largest orchestra in point of numbers that has ever been brought to Duluth, larger than the Minneapolis symphony, and when they arrive here at 2:05 p. m. next Tuesday there will be three or four large drays to meet—not them—but their instruments. It will look more like May 1, municipal moving day, than March 28.

The seat sale at Smith & Allen's is progressing rapidly and it is assured that Duluth will greet the orchestra's appearance here with an audience of the proportions they have been getting all along their tour so far.

When the orchestra closed its New York season the time-worn phrase that it would close in a blaze of glory was never more correctly applied. Madame Schumann-Heink was the soloist for the last pair of concerts in Aeolian hall, March 3 and 5, and the direction included in its announcements the need of reserving seats early, all of which was a warning which came too late as there was not a seat left for either concert.

Professor Maria Sanford Lecturing in California

Prof. Maria L. Sanford, formerly of the University of Minnesota, but now on a lecture tour, has won great praise in California, where she has spoken since late in January on Kipling, Mark Twain and "The Beauties of the Bible," and has given illustrated lectures on Paris, Venice and other cities.

The following comment, made by a Eureka paper, shows that instead of being called 80 years old, Prof. Sanford should be called 80 years young: "She is a woman who, despite the snowy whiteness of her hair and advanced years, talks as interestingly as one who has just attained the prime of life. Her conversation scintillates with fresh, vigorous ideas, and in her one discovers a woman who seems to have made the world her textbook, absorbed its wealth of problems and prepared them for presentation."

Efficient Housekeeping

By Henriette D Grauel

In the Days of '49

A WORKMAN purchased a pair of overalls in a downtown store yesterday and paid sixty-five cents for them. "That is the way it is with everything," he said. "I am getting better wages than I ever did, but all things have advanced in price. I never paid but forty-five cents for bluejeans before."

There has been so much talk about the high cost of living during the past years of plenty that the public has lost sympathy with housekeepers' woes. Now the rise in foods, in domestics, drugs and all necessities is marked. Those who have complained with their larders full and their tables overburdened with unneeded food feel that they have not words to voice the situation with. It is the old story of the child who cried for food when his mouth was full.

Since so much is written about the high cost of food perhaps a perusal of the prices of other days may prove interesting. Here is a copy of the bill of fare from El Dorado hotel, Goldville, Colo., 1849. From it you see what the miners had to eat, and what they had to put up for it.

Questions and Answers.

Please tell me of something harmless with which to color butter.—Farm woman.

Reply—Tumeric does this and is harmless. Buy it from druggist and to one part of the powder add five parts of grain alcohol. Keep corked for a week, then pour off the alcohol. Put as much of tumeric as will lie on the point of a penknife into a churnful of milk or cream before churning. It makes winter butter a lovely bright color.

I have an imported cuckoo clock that no longer strikes. Can this, in your opinion, be repaired this side the water?—Inquirer.

Reply—The sound in cuckoo clocks is caused by small bellows connected with two pipes like organ pipes. I should not hesitate to intrust the clock to a reliable clock-maker. If the bellows are worn through he will be able to buy new parts.

Eastern Woman Went West to Shed Her Light---Stayed to Learn Something

Mrs. Mildred F. Wasson, who has returned East after a fourteen years' residence in Colorado, says in the last issue of the Woman's Journal that she has been asked countless times what she thought of woman suffrage as worked out in that state. "I'd as soon ask an Esquimo how he liked the Northern Lights," she says. "Both are natural improvements on the face of nature, which, we, the Esquimo and I, take for granted. The Northern Lights had been in operation for some time when the Esquimo came to Alaska—and woman suffrage, when I came to Colorado."

Her Change of Mind.

Mrs. Wasson tells how she set out on a forced pilgrimage to Colorado, thinking that she would mingle with the Western women with noble impartiality and draw them out, letting them glimpse through her the glories, culture, refinement of the East. She hoped she might find some women who had been East with whom she could converse upon common ground.

She had hardly been in Colorado long enough to unpack her suit case when a woman called to invite her to luncheon, which, she said, proved to be her undoing and her making.

"I believe they asked me if I liked their country, not if I thought I could stand to honor it with my presence. I gushed and enthused. I mustn't let them think me condescending, patronizing. I must guard against that!" she writes.

Stumped by Single Tax.

"Then the hostess said:

"'By the way, girls, I want you all to come here next Tuesday morning. Mrs. Wells is going to talk on Single Tax. The question must be settled for good and all this time, and it's up to us to do it.'

"'Single Tax?' I appealed to my soup. I prayed that they wouldn't humiliate me by asking me to talk! I was afraid someone would ask me to talk about Single Tax. How could I? I didn't know anything about Single Tax. I must look that up! I'd be ashamed to ask anyone. Every time I thought someone was going to ask me a question, I put something in my mouth. No one seemed to ask questions. Each girl seemed feverishly anxious to express her opinion, and all seemed very much absorbed in this meaningless subject.

"Single tax was dropped. I ceased eating. I tried to appear just a bit loftier than single tax.

"Good heavens! What were they talking about now?

"Someone was saying something about local option. Then someone else said:

"'It must be state-wide or not at all. Final, radical measures for a great evil. Nothing half way.'

"I'd rather by far have had them discussing people I didn't know and scandals I couldn't appreciate. I wouldn't be expected to. I wouldn't then be in mortal fear that someone would ask me something.

Candidate for Sheriff.

"And then a serious little blond asked if anyone knew anything about Johnson, who was running for sheriff, and the hostess said she did. And turning to the newcomer from the East, said: 'I'm sorry you haven't been here long enough to register. We need the support of every sober-minded and clear-thinking woman in town.'

"Regarding the would-be sheriff, the hostess said:

"'I make it a point to know about these people. Hudson is away so much, now in Wyoming, now in Paris, I have to tell him for whom to vote when he comes home on the eve of election. He's so busy grubbing around after oil wells that he really hasn't time to look into things here in his own town. And since I have to stay at home with Willy anyway, I attend to that end.'"

The Easterner lived through the luncheon and was able to breathe normally when trumps and honors took the place of politics, but she went home with a resolution not to be so embarrassingly ignorant at the next one.

"And now I am in the East again," she writes, "and a bit startled to find the same old fight going on—the same ardent, unselfish workers charging the same insurmountable wall of prejudice, willful deafness and ridiculous blindness—while the lawmakers, the vote-casters and the vote-givers hide behind that wall stuffing their ears with cotton lest they hear the insistent knockings of the West and the present against the wall builded about 1620, along a certain well-known shore."

Yellow Puff Brags Too Much

AFTER Yellow Puff's narrow escape from freezing to death in the snow, he was very careful where he went and what he did—for a few days. But as time went by and nothing happened to frighten him again, he began to look upon his escape as a wonderful adventure, rather than a foolish act of disobedience. And how he did brag! The other chicks could hardly stand his airs and boastful talk.

"How silly of you all to stay here in this stupid old barn all the time!" he exclaimed to Downy White one cold morning. "You stay right near your mother as though you never intended to grow up! Now I am not such a baby—no, sir! I go wherever I wish to in the barn, and I even explore the big out-of-door world! I'm not such a baby as you!"

Downy White hung his head and looked very forlorn.

"Yes, I know you are braver than I am, Yellow Puff," he admitted. "I am not brave at all. I like to stay here near my mother because I know that I am safe here. I wish I was brave and venturesome as you are."

Now, an answer of that sort was exactly what Yellow Puff hoped to get. He puffed out his pretty downy feathers and held his head higher than ever before.

"If you would only follow my good example, Downy White, you would get over being such a coward. Come on and I'll take you out into the outdoors now, and then you will get over your fear."

Downy White shivered and then he twisted his courage up to the highest point possible and said, real quickly (before he would have a chance to change his mind, you see!), "All right, Yellow Puff. You take me out, and I'll try to be as brave as you were!"

Now, that was more than Yellow Puff had bargained for. He liked to talk; and he was quite ready to tell anything wonderful about the out-of-doors that he should happen to think of. But back in his mind he still remembered the terrible cold and the fright he had had—and he didn't intend to repeat the experience. If he had guessed that Downy White would really be willing to go with him, he would never have suggested the trip—you may be sure of that!

"I'm not such a baby as you!"

But he couldn't for the life of him think of any way to get out of taking the trip out of doors, now that Downy White really wanted to go! For a minute he was quite panic-stricken, then he said hastily, "Dear me, Downy White, I wouldn't think of taking you out of doors this cold weather! If anything should happen to you, our mother would never forgive me! If you want to go, you will have to go alone!"

Tommy Tittle-mouse, who had been listening from a crack in the wall, chuckled to himself and then said aloud, "Good enough, Yellow Puff; you got out of that scrape, but be careful about your bragging in the future!"

Peggy Peabody's Observations

Devotion of Dogs

The love and fidelity of a collie dog saved the lives of a family of twelve the other night. That very night at the dog show I saw one of these beautiful collies sit for nearly an hour with her head turned in the direction that her mistress had taken. Though hundreds of people passed and repassed her as she thus sat watching there was not one to whom she would even give a glance. When her mistress did appear the collie was the first to spy her. Her eyes dilated and her whole attitude was one of such joyful expectancy and welcome that only the most callous could fail to be moved by this steadfast love and devotion.

Later that evening while passing the public library, I beheld another dog watching and waiting patiently in the cold outside, for a master or a mistress. His eyes were glued upon the door as though he feared that whoever he was waiting for might slip out unobserved unless he kept strict watch.

I am not very well acquainted with the various breeds of dogs, though I have always found something to admire in all that I have seen. I once owned a collie, however, and from the first day she singled me out as a friend to the day of her death she was a most affectionate, gentle, intelligent companion to me and the members of my family. She was always happy and light-hearted herself, always ready for a walk or to sit at my feet as fancy dictated and a true woman in many instincts.

I always believed that this pet of mine knew the purport of every word spoken to her and much that was said to others. If any one was scolded she made an effort to comfort them. She disliked a harsh voice and would sink away from the sound of one as though she had her own way of making you understand things and if her actions did not once inform you, she had a way of sitting down in front of you and looking at you with her pleading eyes until you were forced against your will to follow her and adjust whatever had disturbed her.

She seemed more like a human being to me than any of the other animals we ever owned. Perhaps collies are not more intelligent and affectionate than other dogs, but they seem to have wonderful powers of understanding and a sympathy that far exceeds in tenderness sometimes that offered by human kind. The love that dog gave me is something I shall never forget.

Matinee Musicale Closes Its Season With Singing of "Undine"

The last program for this season given by the Matinee Musicale this afternoon at the Methodist church featured "Undine," a lyric tone poem for women's voices, by Harriet Ware, the verse by Edwin Markham.

"Undine" is extremely modern in construction, the close intervals and modern harmonies both in the choral and solo parts making it an extremely difficult subject to work with, and the Matinee Musicale is to be congratulated upon its success in giving such an ambitious work with rather limited forces.

"Undine" was given in New York recently under the personal direction of Harriet Ware with a chorus of 300 voices and the accompaniment of a full orchestra.

The orchestra could not be used here, but a very lovely organ and violin accompaniment was arranged by Faith Helen Rogers, who directed the work.

The entire treatment of Mr. Markham's verse is admirably suited to a musical setting and the interpretation was given with exquisite coloring, many of its beauties being charmingly disclosed through the rippling accompaniment most effectively brought out by Mrs. Dworshak at the piano.

Mrs. Duxbury sang the part of Undine with artistic appreciation and understanding, some of the mezzo tones being especially beautiful.

Mr. Koneczny sang the tenor solos with sincerity and feeling, the whole presentation being remarkably free from a monotony so often encountered in subjects taken from the classics.

The chorus showed evidences of their careful training by their ever ready response to the leader's slightest hint and should feel extremely gratified at the finished product of their patience and labor. Many have expressed the wish that "Undine" may be repeated soon. Those in the chorus were:

SIDE TALKS

When Publicity Helped

HONOR to whom honor is due. I always loved that phrase. It has a wonderful ring to it. And I thought of it the other day when I heard the story of a certain charity.

It was a charity for sick babies. I won't tell you its name for certain reasons. It was founded on this wise. An item was published in a newspaper suggesting the work, and the public immediately became so much interested that money poured in and the work began. It was a picturesque charity and the newspapers always gave plenty of space to pictures and stories about the pathetic little wisps of humanity whom it served. And the money rolled in and the charity, small at first, grew into a great and wonderful institution.

Then there came a day when the original founder withdrew from the work and a new set of men took hold of it. "There has been too much publicity, too many pathetic stories," said these men. "We don't want that sort of thing. We will appeal to the public in a sensible, dignified way. We won't permit this newspaper sensationalism."

And They Ran $5,000 Behind.

They kept to that program for a season, and in that season they ran $5,000 behind.

The next year they went back to the old way with a new respect for newspapers.

You can't reach the average man's pocket through his brain, you've got to get at it through his heart.

"That's the lesson these "high-brow" directors learned, and it was taught them by an agency they had rather despised—the daily newspaper.

They Withhold Harmless News.

A great many people, though they are themselves newspaper readers (and who is not?), for some reason like to cry down newspaper publicity. They are unwilling to give the newspaper reporter news which there is no reason he should not have, and they are horrified at the bare idea of having their pictures in the paper.

Now there are undoubtedly many things published in newspapers (some newspapers) which could quite as well be left out. But even in these cases one must remember that the deterrent effect of the fear of such publicity must be a force for the good. Also, one should consider that the newspapers wouldn't print such matter unless people showed that they wanted to read it.

But, putting this question aside, there is no doubt that the newspapers are a tremendous force for good, and that they deserve more honor than they get from a certain class of people.

The Newspaper Is Your Servitor.

If you want your newspaper to be different, do your part by writing a letter of commendation to the editor when he prints the kind of news of which you approve. He wants to give the public what the public wants. Let him know what you, as part of that public, like.

And when, as in the course of human events, he undoubtedly will, a reporter has cause to call on you, give him all the news you reasonably can, and if it's a question of a picture remember that you like to see the pictures of interesting people, and if the public has a right to be interested in you, give him the picture. It won't hurt you, and it will help him.

Yes, I know you think I'm prejudiced because I used to be a newspaper reporter myself. Not only that, but I'm also prejudiced on the side of common sense and justice.

Shakespeare Ter-Centenary.

The Woman's club of Minneapolis is making elaborate preparations for the program which will be given April 24 to open the Shakespeare ter-centenary revel week. Hardin Craig will give an original research lecture on Shakespeare's use of prose and rhythm, Prof. James Davies of the University of Minnesota will speak of his lyrics and Mrs. Carlyle Scott will tell of the musical instruments that were in use in Shakespeare's time.

MORE LUXURIES ARE SHUT OUT OF ENGLAND

London, March 21.—Further restrictions on the importation of luxuries were imposed today. At a meeting of the privy council, King George signed a proclamation prohibiting the bringing in of automobiles, motorcycles, various musical instruments, such as player pianos and phonographs and spirits and other strong drink with the exception of brandy and rum.

"Request" Program Announced; "Peer Gynt" Suite Most Popular

The request numbers for the final concert by the Duluth orchestra at the new armory next Sunday have been arranged and show an interesting diversity of taste which will go towards making up one of the best balanced programs of the season.

The "Peer Gynt" suite No. 1 was far ahead in point of general popularity, with "Valse Triete" of Sibelius a close second, and Dvorak's "New World Symphony" third on the list.

Other numbers will be the overture to "William Tell" (Rossini); "Entrance March of the Bojaren" (Halversen); the sixth Hungarian rhapsody (Liszt); and March Slav of Tschaikowsky.

Mrs. Jay Finkelson will be the soloist, her number being "Zigunerweisen," by Sarasate.

There were requests for the "Blue Danube," "Semper Fidelis," "Old Folks at Home," "Tannhauser," "The Rustic Symphony," "Unfinished Symphony," "Sakuntala" overture and others, but those which claimed first places fortunately make up a better balanced program, it is believed.

Friday afternoon the Duluth orchestra will give a free concert for children at the high school. Mr. Bradbury will give short talks illustrating the different numbers to be presented and explaining some of the various instruments used in the orchestra.

The request program follows in full:

Overture to "William Tell".....Rossini
"Einszugsmarsch der Bojaren"..... ..... Halversen
"Valse Triste" .....Sibelius
Violin solo—"Ziguenerweisen".Sarasate
Mrs. Jay Finkelson.
Sixth Hungarian Rhapsody.....Liszt
"Peer Gynt" Suite No. 1.....Grieg

HELEN WARE IN FAMOUS ROMANCE

Photoplay From "That Lass o' Lowrie's" at Orpheum-Strand.

Most Duluthians have at some time read "That Lass o' Lowrie's," Frances Hodgson Burnett's famous novel. It has for years been recognized as one of the most interesting of love stories.

Yesterday, audiences at the Orpheum-Strand theater had an opportunity to see this story portrayed on the screen, with Helen Ware in the principal role. The photoplay is entitled "Secret Love" but it follows Mrs. Burnett's story closely.

The novel lends itself particularly well to motion pictures, for it has plenty of action, a picturesque locale, and a well defined and thrilling plot. The fact that Miss Helen Ware is featured in the company that produced it, is evidence of the efforts the producers made to give it an adequate presentation. Miss Ware is perhaps the most famous of present day emotional actresses, having made her reputation in "Within the Law" and "Paid in Full."

The story of "Secret Love" is laid in a small Lancashire village, in the mining district of England. "Old Man" Lowrie is known as the village bully, and his infractions of the safety rules laid down by the company, cause much trouble at the mines. The chief engineer finally takes matters into his own hands and subdues the bully in a fistic encounter. Meanwhile a love affair develops between Joan, the daughter of the old man, and the engineer. The bully becomes embittered by his defeat, and tries to wreck his vengeance on all mankind. The troubles of "that lass" accumulate as she tries to restrain her father from wild schemes of vengeance, knowing that to disclose her love for the engineer would result in a wild outburst from her father. Miss Ware makes the part of the "Lass" a most appealing one, and the photoplay as a whole is a charming story, charmingly told. Some of the English scenes are most picturesque, and the big audiences which witnessed the presentation yesterday were warmly appreciative.

"Secret Love" will continue until Thursday night and will be followed by Madame Sarah Bernhardt in another Bluebird feature play.

FRENCH DANCER AT GRAND.

Mlle. Verna Mersereau Offers Series of Egyptian Dances.

The big act in the new show at the Grand theater for the first half of the week is that of Mlle. Verna Mersereau, the French danseuse, who gyrates and gambols through a half dozen Terpsichorean exhibitions representative of the Land of the Nile, and entitled "An Romance of Old Egypt." The act consists of a number of dances, carrying out the plot of a well defined story. The numbers include "The Dance of Devotion," "Victory," "Vengeance," "Death," and others. Mlle. Mersereau is a remarkably attractive young woman and is a graceful dancer. Her first costume consists of a silken veil, wound about her body. She then appears in a loose, clinging Grecian costume. The attractiveness of the act is enhanced by elaborate stage setting and brilliant lighting effects.

Lamb's Manikins, a clever act well known to Duluth theater-goers, is bigger and better than ever this year. A large number of manikins, including Indians, dolls, teddy bears, and skeletons, appear on a miniature stage and do all sorts of stunts as they are worked by wires from back of the stage.

The Avonda Prince Trio with xylophones and accordions offer a program of popular and classic numbers that are all well received. Carter and Waters burlesque woman's suffrage in an act entitled "The Hunger Strike."

Joseph Kilgore in the stellar role of "Miss Warren's Brother," heads a strong cast of entertainers in a three-reel photodrama. Rose Melville as Sis Hopkins is seen in the second installment of comedies "She Came, She Saw, She Conquered." A clever Biograph comedy completes the show.

tion of Daniel Frohman. Tomorrow at the Lyric this talented actress will come in "Out of the Drifts," an Alpine story, in which Miss Clark is seen as Elsie, a little Swiss shepherdess who innocently falls under the spell of a roue. Rudolph (J. W. Johnston), an Alpine guide long in love with Elsie, secures his chance to send the unprincipled admirer who would elope with her over a precipice by cutting a rope that holds him. Elsie finds her lover, nurses him back to health, when a snow avalanche sweeps down upon her cottage. Other thrilling incidents help to make the story and picture almost appealing.

The second release of the Burton Holmes travel pictures will appear also tomorrow and Thursday at the Lyric. This noted traveler is seen at the Grand Canyon this week.

Today and tonight Viola Horner will be seen in "The Marble Heart."

tunity this season of seeing charming Billie Burke in her first motion picture play—"Peggy." The hundreds who saw the pictures when it was at the Rex March 6-7, would form an enthusiastic little army of boosters for the star and her play, if she needed any help at all to draw a house, which Billie Burke does not need.

The play is largely laid in Scotland, where a dashing American girl goes to visit her dour Scottish uncle and guardian, and where she sets the village in an uproar by her pranks—wearing pajamas, overalls and a man's suit in public.

"Hell's Hinges," the drama in which William S. Hart is starred, will come to the Rex for three days beginning Thursday. It is a Western picture of a new type.

In this five-part Metro wonderplay, Miss Snow has full opportunity to display her versatility, which has made her such a favorite with motion picture fans.

The management of the Zelda announces the engagement of May Robson, in her comedy, "A Night Out," which will show here for three days commencing with Wednesday matinee.

This picture is said to be a clever comedy, with May Robson in the part of the grandmother who goes out for a good "time." Duluthians will remember the story from Miss Robson's appearance here in the play on which it is based.

WISCONSIN MAN'S ECCENTRIC WILL

Fences Must Be Kept in Repair and Dust Remain on Windowsills.

Fond du Lac, Wis., March 21.—The will of the late Columbus Smith, who owns real estate here valued at more than $77,000, was filed for probate here today, and directs among other things that all fences on the estate be kept in repair and that the dust remain undisturbed on all windowsills of the home.

It also provides that after the death of his wife, who is named as the principal beneficiary, the entire estate is to be used for the establishment of a "comfortable asylum for good old Christian women not addicted to drink and of American parentage."

Men were originally included in the asylum plan but were cut off by a codicil.

The document also provides that a nephew of the testator is to receive $200 when he and his wife shall buy a horse or colt and then are to receive $100 to invest in a good cow and ten sheep and $75 with which to buy a suit of clothes for the nephew.

CANADA'S LOYALTY IS NOT ABATED

Sending Men and Ready to Send More for Empire.

Recruiting Canadian soldiers for the great war in Europe is at its greatest point of activity in the dominion according to the statement made here today by William Johnson, district claim agent of the Canadian Northern in Winnipeg, and a former attorney of this city.

"Recently a canvass was made of the city of Winnipeg to ascertain the number of men eligible for service who have not as yet enlisted, and it was found that there were about 4,000 such men," said Mr. Johnson. "Every effort will be made to procure the enlistment of these men, who are single in most instances. As there are some 17,000 recruits being drilled in Winnipeg, you can readily see that the Canadian people have not lost a whit of their enthusiasm for the cause of the allies, nor have they abated in the least in their desire to send as many men as possible to the front."

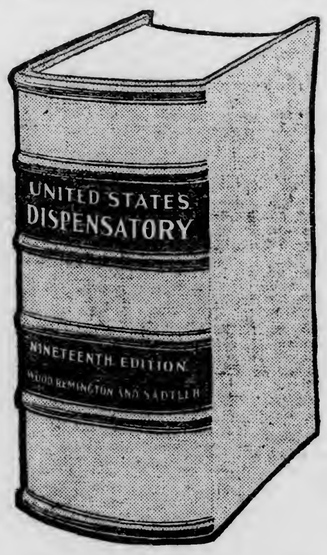
An interesting piece of information conveyed by the former Duluthian, was the statement that an aviation corps will be organized this spring with about 100 men. Lectures have been given during the winter months by experts and as soon as the weather moderates practical lessons will be given in operating flying machines.

"Troops are being sent to Europe at intervals," said Mr. Johnson. "A big consignment of men will leave early in the spring. There is great confidence among the Canadian people that the allies will win, or there is a feeling, rather, in some quarters that the allies must win. Euthusiasm for the cause was intense at the start of the war; now it is grim, determined and relentless. The people have come to a greater realization of the terribleness of the conflict and what great efforts it will require upon the part of the allies. But, from what I have observed, the realization of all this has resulted in a greater determination to help the mother country. If Winnipeg can be taken as a criterion, the Dominion of Canada is going to make an effort to send every eligible man to the front, should the war continue long enough."

Coffee Facts

Read what the 19th edition United States Dispensatory (page 253), the guiding authority for chemists, druggists, and physicians, says about the drug, caffeine, of which there is about 2½ grains in the average cup of coffee:

"Given in large dose to the lower animals, caffeine produces hurried respiration, restlessness, slightly lowered, followed by a markedly elevated temperature, tetanic and clonic convulsions, progressive paralysis, and finally death from paralytic arrest of respiration."



Although man is stronger and more resistant, it is well-known scientific fact that caffeine, in coffee, is the frequent cause of headache, nervousness, biliousness, heart flutter and many other ills.

Not at one large dose, but by little doses repeated regularly does this subtle, habit-forming drug get in its work, and, sooner or later, many coffee drinkers suffer.

Before that time comes, suppose you make a personal test—quit coffee ten days and use

LAND GRANTS ARE EXPLAINED BY LIND

Former Governor Appears Before Committee of House.

From The Herald Washington Bureau.

Washington, March 21.—Before the house committee on public land today Former Governor John Lind told his connection with the Oregon and California land grants. He said that he had bought land in Oregon in 1905 for about $25,000 and sold it to C. A. Smith of Minneapolis in 1910 for $100,000. Smith paid him $40,000 in cash and gave two notes for $30,000 each, which are still unpaid.

Governor Lind denounced as false statements that he had had a conference with the attorney general relative to the pending legislation. He said that Smith had assigned the contracts he held for the purchase of Oregon and California lands to him (Lind) as security for the unpaid notes.

The bill under consideration validates the contracts held by Mr. Lind and others. Mr. Lind declared that Mr. Smith was an innocent purchaser and the bill should be passed in justice to those who had bought the lands in good faith.

Washing Won't Rid Head Of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces or ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.—Advertisement.

DUTCH PEOPLE NOT SATISFIED

Statement of Germany Does Not Appease Anger for Loss of Ships.

The Hague, Netherlands, March 21, via London.—The official German declaration that no German submarine was responsible for the destruction of the Dutch steamship Tubantia has failed to satisfy the Dutch people and press, whose resentment has grown into bitter anger since receipt of the news that other ships have been sunk, supposedly by torpedoes.

The question of the utmost importance to all neutrals, the Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant says, is whether shipping in entirety is to be placed outside the community of nations as possessing no rights whatever. This newspaper urges combined neutral action—a line of argument also taken by the Vaderland and the Nieuwe Courant of The Hague.

The Amsterdam Handelsblad asserts that President Wilson should take the lead to protect civilization against the new form of submarine warfare.

SINN FEIN RIOTERS FIRE ON THE POLICE

Trouble Breaks Out at Tullamarc, Ireland; Three Persons Wounded.

London, March 21.—Sinn Fein rioters fired on the police last night. Three of the police were wounded.

The rioting occurred at Tullamore, King's county, Ireland. A police sergeant was wounded seriously, and a county inspector and a district inspector received slight wounds.

Tullamore is a town of about 5,000 inhabitants, fifty-eight miles west of Dublin. It has a considerable trade in agricultural produce.

There have been intimations of disturbed conditions in some parts of Ireland in several recent dispatches. On March 14 the police of Cork raided the residences of the principal officials of the Sinn Fein party and seized arms and documents.

The London Post last week said the situation in Ireland was serious on account of the activity of the Sinn Fein society. It asserted a vigorous campaign against recruiting was being carried out without serious hindrance in the west and south, and that several persons had been indicted and tried, but had been acquitted.

RUSS CONCENTRATING IN SOUTHERN POLAND

TODAY IN HISTORY.

General Joseph E. Johnston died, 1891.

Born in Virginia Feb. 3, 1807; was graduated from West Point class of 1829, a classmate of Robert E. Lee; served in Black Hawk and Seminole wars and in Mexican war, and was brevetted colonel for gallant conduct. In charge of western river improvement, 1853-1855; lieutenant-colonel of cavalry, 1855; quartermaster general, United States army, 1860. Resigned April 21, 1861, and was made one of the first five Confederate brigadier-generals. With Beauregard, won the first battle of Bull Run. Badly beaten in West and South by Grant and Sherman with forces much larger, though Grant testified that "Joe Johnston gave me more anxiety than any of the others," and an English military observer ranked him at the head of American commanders. Became congressman in 1876, and United States commissioner of railroads, 1885.

READING (available in Duluth public library)—R. M. Hughes, "General Johnston" (pleasantly written, its high appreciation of the great Confederate general does not prevent a candid treatment of the parts of his career more or less in controversy); General Joseph E. Johnston, "Narrative of Military Operations" ("an earnest, almost passionate defense of himself before the Southern people from the charge of having caused or contributed to their defeat").

A FLAW IN THE PRIMARY AND HOW TO FIX IT.

One hears a good deal of complaint of the primary system. Most of it is from politicians and others who like the old "organization" system which trailed along with the convention plan and pretty generally went down with it. Some of this criticism, though, goes to the heart of things by pointing out that the human product of the primary is inferior in quality; and there seems to be something to that.

Though it should be said that if the human product of the primary system is of a lower caliber than the human product of the convention system, pretty generally it is trying in its humble way to do what the people want done, while the product of the convention was too often trying to do what Jim Hill or Morgan or Mark Hanna wanted done. Between the two, give us the inferior primary product, which is loyal, every time.

But there is no reason why the human product of the primary—that is, of course, the public officials resulting from it—should remain inferior. The reason for its inferiority is easily located, and can be cured as easily.

The trouble goes back to the material offered the voters at the primary election. If in a given primary election the only candidates offered are Mr. A. Mutt, Mr. P. Nutt, Mr. B. Dubb and Mr. T. Nitt, averaging about thirty per cent of efficiency out of a possible hundred, and if the result of the primary makes Mr. A. Mutt the party candidate, there is bitter complaint of the primary product; yet Mutt may be and doubtless is the best of the four. Not often are good men beaten in the primary; the trouble is that so few good men are offered in the primary. The fault in the above case is not with the people, nor with the primary system, but with the poor field of candidates offered.

The trouble is that the primary system requires the candidate to take the initiative in his candidacy—to be or seem to be self-seeking. Lots of people who might be good officials won't do that; and while the instinct of reluctance to seek public honor is bad for government, it is not unadmirable. Not all people have that reluctance, so we do get some very good men out of the primary system. But, on the whole, people seeking office will not be so good as people drafted into office.

For instance, there is Mr. Kellogg. Mr. Kellogg refused to become a seeker for office, though he clearly wanted to run for United States senator. But when a supporter got some newspaper men to sign a petition asking him to run, he did run. It was only the semblance of a public demand that he run, the signing editors numbering only seventy out of seven hundred, but it sufficed.

That incident points the way to an amendment to the primary law that would enormously improve it without affecting its spirit in the slightest degree. There is nothing new in it. The Herald has suggested it frequently. It is practical, simple, can be objectionable to nobody, and yet it would greatly improve the workings of the primary and the quality of public service.

Let an amendment to the primary law be adopted authorizing the initiation of a candidacy for office by petition. For instance, let it be provided that if five hundred or a thousand or five thousand qualified voters sign a petition to put the name of John Smith on the primary ballot as a Republican candidate for governor, the name shall go on unless John Smith formally declines to become a candidate. That, if John Smith stands for modest excellence and availability, will make it possible to get him for candidate where, if it depended upon his announcing his desire for office, you couldn't get him in a thousand years. It would leave the primary still open to candidates who wished to initiate their own candidacies, having no such scruples or modesties.

Why not adopt this amendment? For one thing sure, it would make it possible to improve the caliber of the legislature and the congressional representation, neither of which is by any means up to what it ought to be. It could do no possible harm, and we believe that it would do a great deal of good. Why not try it, anyway?

He's a slow-poke indeed who hasn't prophesied the early need of rubber footwear.

EVIL ADVISERS.

If the president is at all bothered by the problem of his duty in Mexico, he might pause and listen awhile to the Republican and Bull Moose newspapers that are screaming at him with fish-wife vituperation, conceiving it their patriotic duty, in a year when a president is to be elected, to denounce everything he does, to advocate everything he does not and cannot do, and to attempt everything imaginable to hamper and defeat him. This, no matter how delicate the task or how disastrous a false step may be.

Just now the Chicago Tribune and the Duluth News Tribune are urging that the whole national guard be mobilized on the Mexican frontier ready for business.

Of course, coming at a time when the president is with difficulty making the distracted and suspicious Mexicans believe that the expedition into Mexico is simply for the capture of a murderous brigand who is as big a nuisance to Mexico as he is to us, such a demonstration would bring all this diplomacy to naught, and hurry on events that would make intervention, pacification by force, conquest and all an inevitable sequence.

And that, more or less secretly, is what these partisan fish-wives who are shrilly shouting their fool advice into the president's ears are after. Like Villa, their Mexican prototype, they are willing to bring the whole house down about their ears to put over a political coup.

On the other hand, if, as seems certain, the president knows exactly what he is about and is determined to do it, he will shut his ears to this raucous outcry and plow ahead.

And those who believe that the president is right in letting Mexico work out its destiny—the only way men or nations can ever get anywhere and stay there; who realize that the Villa expedition is an unfortunate necessity to be done as quickly as possible and there ended; and who believe that the whole Mexican race is not worth the thousands of American lives and the millions of American money that would be spilled if these political Able Editors have their way—these also will shut their ears to silly clamor born of campaign year hysteria and callow militaristic junkerism, and will support the president earnestly in his wise and right course.

The time is ripe for a new set of silly sayings about "the Villa in the mountains."

CONGRESS AND YOU.

The average caliber in the American congress seems to be at a low ebb—has been indeed, tending that way for years.

Small-bore political polyfoxing, pork-barrel chicanery, the policy of anything to put the other party in a hole, the low cunning of demagogic appeals to racial and other prejudices, party above country, one's own political welfare higher than either—these seem to be the characteristic congressional motives and tactics in these recent days.

And whose is the fault? America's! Yours, discontented citizen. A self-governing country gets a public service that typifies its public thinking. Abuse of the pitiful littleness of congress is waste words, waste breath. The people elected this congress and its predecessors, and will elect its successors. What they chose, they got. What spirit they had to put into congress is found there. They have thought little of fundamental things, given little attention to fundamental requirements, and so they have got—are getting—little.

Nor is it a party matter. This shameful incompetence and unworthiness is bi-partisan. Your Democrats playing peanut politics with sacred things are balanced by Republicans playing peanut politics with sacred things.

When the American people think deeper of public issues and try harder to reject quackeries and shams, with their quacks and demagogues, then congress will be a better congress. What is in that portion of the American mind that is grudged to public affairs will always be found faithfully reflected in the congress of the United States.

One voter who is determined hereafter to be less easily fooled, less gullible, less prone to accept party labels as covering everything, more vigorously determined to see the right and sincere course and to take it, puts the Republic just that far ahead toward the goal, and makes littleness in public life just that far gone toward extinction. The responsibility and the duty are individual—yours.

Remember the time when the papers used to run the full texts of neutrality proclamations?

Under the ruling that a well dressed man must spend at least two thousand dollars a year on his wardrobe, a lot of us might as well quit altogether right away.

Some say congress may not adjourn, but just keep plugging along up to the beginning of the next session. That scheme must have originated with some member who "dassent" go back home since the Gore-McLemore resolutions were voted on.

The New York Democrats

By Savoyard.

Washington, March 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Democratic state convention of New York was held March 1, and it was the most harmonious affair of the kind that has been pulled off in the Empire state by either party since the Civil war. The business of the convention was transacted in a space of time less than twenty minutes, and the keynote by Martin Glynn was a triumphant, crushing and conclusive reply to the much-heralded keynote lately delivered by Elihu Root. There was no discordant voice. The enthusiasm was unbounded and the support of President Wilson enthusiastic.

There has not been a day since the Civil war that the Empire state was not Democratic when the party was united, and Tilden and Cleveland carried the state more than once when there was discord in the ranks. It has not always been the case that the vote of New York was decisive of a presidential election. It was not till 1828 that New York chose presidential electors by popular vote, since when New York has never failed to pick a winner except in 1856, when she supported Fremont, and in 1868, when her vote was cast for Seymour. Tilden carried New York in 1876, and Tilden was elected, and counted out.

In 1884 Cleveland carried New York, though Blaine got a majority of the Tammany vote. The 50,000 mugwumps saved the Democratic ticket that year. In 1892, when the Democrats were united, Cleveland carried New York by a plurality of 45,418; but he would have been elected even had New York's vote been cast for Harrison. That year Tammany worked for the Democratic ticket as Tammany never worked for any ticket before or since, and thereby hangs a tale.

In the national convention New York's vote had been thrown against the nomination of Cleveland, and Bourke Cockran, the greatest of Tammany orators, made a magnificent speech in laudation of David B. Hill and condemnatory of Cleveland. After the nomination William C. Whitney brought Cleveland and Richard Croker, the Tammany boss, together at his residence. Shrewd as he was, Whitney did not think Cleveland could be elected without New York, and he did not believe he could carry New York without the aid of Dick Croker. The latter was inclined to be domineering, and when he met Cleveland at Whitney's he made certain demands as the price of his support. Cleveland heard him through and then raised his arm aloft, clinched his fist, bringing it down on the table with terrific force, and exclaimed, "I'll be damned if I'll do any such thing!" Then, glaring across the table with thunder on his brow and rage on his tongue, he laid the law down after this fashion: "Look you, Croker, I think New York necessary to Democratic success; I don't believe we can carry New York without your active assistance. I shall write the national committee abdicating the nomination and let them name a man you will support. There is nothing else to do."

And then the boss hauled in his horns; he pleaded and begged and promised. Cleveland knew that his word was better than the average man's bond and the difference was then and there composed. Tammany spread itself from that moment and there was thenceforth no doubt of the result. And Tammany got no pie.

But the Democratic party with fatuous folly refused to support the Democratic president because he insisted on preserving the public credit, and the party was hopelessly discredited for sixteen years, during which there was an alliance in the Empire state between Tammany and the G. O. P. Boss Platt and Boss Croker were at a perfect understanding and so continued until the Progressive Republicans disrupted their party and Woodrow Wilson was elected president in 1912.

Tammany has been away from the public crib in the big city a good while and is chastened. Politics has changed, and Tammany, never a fool, has found out that decency has come in fashion. Hence Tammany is resolved to be decent and to that end the tiger is become an enthusiastic Wilson Democrat. "Many a full sack comes from a crooked row," and it is confidently expected that Tammany will do yeoman service in the cause of Democracy and good government in November. There is nothing else for it to do.

New York city pays the bulk of the state's taxes and contains a majority of the state's population, yet under a tyrannical and rascally gerrymander "up state" has a majority in both branches of the state legislature. The only way to correct this patent injustice is to support the Democratic party. It is to the interest of every citizen of the big town to do so, for that is the only way the metropolis will ever be emancipated from the iron rule of the cormorants at Albany.

Last year the Republicans made a new state Constitution that fastened the "up state" oligarchy on the government for twenty years. The city got a whack at it, and though it was the statecraft of Elihu Root, the thing was beaten at the polls by a majority exceeding half a million.

This year Tammany and tens of thousands of other citizens of the big town will be fighting against an odious and galling political slavery, and even if the Republicans were united—and they are not—the chances are the Democrats will sweep New York.

Rippling Rhymes

Population.

Prune Center is a hustling town. For liveliness it has renown. The leading boosters stand and crow, "Just watch our population grow!" All new arrivals have their charms; they're welcomed there with open arms. All sorts of cheap and worthless lads, the deadbeats from the other grads, the loafers who, for vagrant ways, have drawn ten dollars or ten days, who'll work the town for grub and coal—just so they swell the census roll, they're welcomed with a hip-hooray, and told to camp right down and stay. If I were owner of a town, and wished to give it high renown, I'd see that no one settled there without a record clean and fair. I'd have a censor in each street, the new-arriving gents to meet, and he would warn the worthless skate to turn around and pull his freight. You don't invite the worthless dub to seek your home and eat your grub. Then why invite him to your town, and beg that he will settle down?

War and the Children of Paris

Herbert Adams Gibbons in the Century Magazine.

We climb the steps of the parterre and walk along the alleys of the Observatoire on our homeward way. Everywhere the children have organized themselves into armies. Big trees are fortresses. It is possible, even inside the iron gates, to storm redoubts and trenches. For workmen have been laying a gas main from the Rue de Vaugirard to the Boul' Miche'. Mercifully they are doing it slowly. The opportunity is splendid; real trenches are at hand.

Near the upper gate a group of older boys (older means from 10 to 13) are gathered around a veteran of 1870, who tracing the battlefield with a cane in the sand, explains the campaign in the Argonne. Another veteran drills seriously every day the younger boys from the Lycee Montaigne. Convalescent soldiers join in the training of the next generation.

Girls have their prominent and essential place in the play armies. The wee women of France are not shelved by the masculine sex. Equality begins in the nursery. Jumping ropes and hoops have been laid aside for happier days. Even diabolo is losing ground. Tennis rackets gather dust on the upper shelf of the hall closet. Dolls are wounded soldiers, and doll carriages, if used at all, are ambulances.

Like their older sisters, the little girls of the Luxembourg have enlisted for Red Cross duty, and follow the armies to give first aid on the battlefield. Park benches are improvised hospitals. Set forth on them, bottles, cotton and bandages show their stern reality of the play. The nurses wear the regulation headgear, with the cross upon the forehead. Smaller boys, who can be bossed, are impressed into service as stretcher bearers.

The children reflect the spirit of the nation and the work of the nation. The war has first place in the minds of all, it has first place in the efforts of all. Is not play at its best an imitation of what the grownups are thinking and doing?

And in the Luxembourg the other side of the war is revealed to one at every turn. War means glory and immortality only to poets and orators; to the rest of the world it means suffering and death.

Soldiers there are a-plenty. But by far the greater number in uniform are wounded and convalescents. In every allee one meets the maimed on crutches; or the blind, who are learning with hesitating footsteps a new dependence on cane or loving arm. As they pass, the chere blesses (dear wounded ones), the children pause in their play and salute them silently.

Tear-filled eyes and lips that have scant respite from quivering bear witness to the children's knowledge of what war means. They are not allowed to idealize war as they would instinctively do; in the enthusiasm of earnest play the glory of war should be uppermost. But then the chere blesses pass, and pain, none the less intense because it cannot be analyzed by them, grips little hearts.

Mr. M'Cumber's Joy

New York World: After the United States senate had voted unanimously in favor of the house bill authorizing the recruiting of the regular army to a war basis, Mr. McCumber of North Dakota congratulated himself and his associates:

> I am glad we had the opportunity of a yea-and-nay vote on this question, to show that while we will do all we can to preserve the peace of the country with other nations, when conditions do arise and it becomes necessary to uphold our rights, then congress stands as a single man undivided in defense of the rights of American citizens.

Eleven days before, when the Gore resolution gave the senate an opportunity to uphold our rights as against the kaiser, did the senate "stand as a single man undivided in defense of the rights of American citizens"? It did not. Fourteen members of that body "stood as a single man undivided" in defense of the right of Germany to make ducks and drakes of international law regardless of pledges or of American rights, and Mr. McCumber was one of them.

Just a Moment

Daily Strength and Cheer.

Compiled by John G. Quinlus, the Sunshine Man.

"He blesseth the habitation of the just."—Prov. iii, 33.

He fears the Lord, and therefore he comes under the divine protection even as to the roof which covers himself and his family. His home is an abode of love, a school of holy training, and a place of heavenly light. In it there is a family altar where the name of the Lord is daily had in reverence. Therefore the Lord blesses his habitation. It may be a humble cottage or a lordly mansion; but the Lord's blessing comes because of the character of the inhabitant, and not because of the size of the dwelling.

That house is most blest in which the master and mistress are God-fearing people; but a son or daughter or even a servant may bring a blessing on a whole household. The Lord often preserves, prospers, and provides for a family for the sake of one or two in it, who are "just" persons in his esteem, because his grace has made them so. Beloved, let us have Jesus for our constant guest, even as the sisters of Bethany had, and then we shall be blessed, indeed.

Let us look to it that in all things we are just—in our trade, in our judgment of others, in our treatment of neighbors, and in our own personal character. A just God cannot bless unjust transactions.—C. H. Spurgeon.

May I so yield to Thee, as Thou wrestlest with and overcomest my proud nature, that I may be enabled to prevail with God and man.—F. B. Meyer.

The President's "Reds."

Emporia Gazette: Newton D. Baker, secretary of war, advocating government ownership of armament and munition plants—steel mills, powder mills and the like; Louis D. Brandeis for the supreme court, advocate of the labor side of scores of controversies; Carl Vrooman—formerly of Emporia—a social Democrat, assistant secretary of agriculture; Louis D. Post, foremost leader of the single-taxers, at the head of an important bureau in the department of labor; Frederick C. Howe, exponent of German Socialism, and single-tax author, collector of the port of New York—what a group of men who, twenty years ago, would have been known as "red-mouthed Socialists"—what a group of reds the president is gathering about him!

Is it any wonder that the conservative who believes that this world is good enough as it is should long to go back to the good old days of Hanna, when business men ran the business of this country? The old-fashioned type of "substantial business man," who was regarded as the ideal office-holder, for which every president used to strive, has passed out of public life. The type the presidents and governors are looking after is the thoughtful radical who is trying to blaze new trails ahead into legitimate change and progress toward a more equitable distribution of the common wealth of all the people.

Political Straws in the Minnesota Breezes

Campaign Subjects Discussed by Minnesota Editors.

There's Something Shady doing in national politics this year. Any doubters of this statement are referred to the Melrose Beacon, which says: "Republicans with presidential ambitions are keeping it dark in the hope that they'll eventually prove the much sought dark horse."

A Straw

that's worthy of more than passing notice is this, from the Republican Milaca Times: "Many voters took a Democratic primary ballot because they wanted to register their choice for President Wilson."

And If Anybody Doubts

the application of the above, let the Chisholm Tribune-Herald clear up the subject, which it does very neatly thus: "The way Minnesota Republicans crowded the polls last Tuesday to vote for Wilson looks like they are trying to kid Woodrow into thinking he will have no opposition."

The Position of T. R.

in Minnesota is pretty well indicated by various papers, but one of the unkindest cuts of all is this from the Le Sueur News: "We fail to reconcile opposition to a second term for Wilson with a merry acceptance of a third term for Roosevelt."

There's a Reason, of course, for the Roosevelt candidacy, and the Donnelly Star has found it: "The reason Roosevelt is a possible candidate is that there are a whole lot of people in the country who want to see the Republican party back in power at any price. Roosevelt would have been the Republican nominee in the last election, except that Taft had the organization, being president at the time, and all the postmasters and other plum holders at his command. The people who caused Taft's nomination are out of their jobs now. They would welcome Roosevelt or Root or the devil himself for a chance to get another drag at the pork barrel. In spite of his rocket rise and rocket fall, Roosevelt is the strongest candidate of the lot right now."

But Even Hopes for the Trough fail to enthuse some people for the sachem of Oyster Bay, for the St. Cloud Journal-Press opines that: "Judging by the primary election returns, any good Republican candidate for president—with the possible exception of Roosevelt—would have a tremendous majority over Woodrow Wilson in Stearns county."

Another Interesting Deduction

is found in this from Wheelock's Fergus Falls Weekly: "Among all the candidates for delegates from Minnesota to the Republican national convention, not one was found by the St. Paul Volkszeitung to be in favor of Roosevelt for first, second or third choice. And Roosevelt carried Minnesota in 1912."

The Conclusion of the Whole Matter is pretty well stated by the Sandstone Courier, which says: "'Terrible Teddy,' the trust buster and Republican party splitter, is again in the field with presidential aspirations, and may again succeed in putting that party in second place, as he did four years ago. The trusts may want this fire eater for a leader, but the common people want a man for president who is not quite so radical as this same fourflusher."

"Petty Political Retailers"

The New Republic: Rarely has a great nation seized an occasion to betray with so much innocent helplessness so many humiliating weaknesses as has ours. During the last ten days Americans have watched the two major branches of the government engaged in an altercation at a moment when a complete understanding and cordial cooperation between them were supremely necessary. They have watched a crushing demonstration of the inadequacy of either of the two national parties to supply the country with a responsible national government.

They have watched a president who was pledged to work loyally with congress forced by congressional invasion of his own prerogatives to place the most drastic and dangerous constraint upon congressional action. They have watched congress wince and cringe under the challenge. They have watched the senate shirk in a cowardly spirit and by means of a despicable subterfuge its plain duty either of frankly supporting the president or of accepting the consequences of a refusal. They have watched the house postpone the day of making a peculiarly critical and momentous decision—one which the whole country was waiting breathless to hear—so that the congressmen from Indiana could dodge a vote until after the holding of their local primaries.

The result of it all will be to undermine still further popular confidence in congress.

The majority of congressmen are dealing with questions which involve peace and war, the honorable reputation of the nation, its ability to make hereafter its necessary contribution to the civilization of the world in the same spirit and according to the same standards that would determine their vote upon a pension or a river and harbor bill. They exhibit themselves as petty political retailers.

The Two Mysteries.

We know not what it is, dear, this sleep so deep and still;
The folded hands, the awful calm, the cheek
so pale and chill;
The lids that will not lift again, though we may call and call;
The strange, white solitude of peace that settles over all.

We know not what it means, dear, this desolate heart pain;
This dread to take our daily way, and walk
in it again;
We know not to what other sphere the loved
who leave us go,
Nor why we're left to wonder still, nor why
we do not know.

But this we know: Our loved and dead, if they should come this day—
Should come and ask us, "What is life?"— not one of us could say,
Life is a mystery as deep as ever death can be;
Yet, oh how dear it is to us, this life we live and see!

Then might they say—these vanished ones
—blessed is the thought,
"So death is sweet to us, beloved! though we may show you naught;
We may not to the quick reveal the mystery of death—
Ye cannot tell us, if ye would, the mystery of breath."

The child who enters life comes not with knowledge or intent,
So those who enter death must go as little children sent.
Nothing is known. But I believe that God is overhead;
And as life is to the living, so death is to the dead.

The Railroad Strike

Editorial in the Emporia Gazette.

This country is in grave danger of a railroad strike of even more serious dimensions than the terrible A. R. U. strike of 1894. The railroad employes—chiefly trainmen—are asking their employers for an eight-hour day, with time and a half for overtime. The railroad employers are replying that this means that the employes will get $100,000,000 a year by this rise. This $100,000,000 will go to 400,000 men, which is slightly less than $20 a month rise for each man as the railroads figure it.

The eight-hour day is not a new demand in industry. And in the railroad business the public has a right to demand fresh men on the job all the time. Now, of course, editors don't know much. They have no way of looking into the grindstone of high finance. Yet practically every editor in this country who employs a dozen men or more, employs men on an eight-hour schedule and gives them time and a half and often double time for their overtime work. We editors have been able to run along doing business on an eight-hour shift. We have been able to ride home in jitneys and go to the movies, and take a trip once a year on the covered cars, and have chicken and mashed potatoes on Sundays. We are not, of course, captains of high finance; but an overdraft and a past due note and a bill from a paper company look just as bad to the average editor as either of these pests looks to a railroad. We editors have adjusted ourselves to civilization; we have divided such part of our profits with labor as the sense of justice of the times seemed to demand.

Now, these few remarks are preliminary to the strike. We hope it will not come. The power to declare civil war—and that is what the strike means—should not be in the hands of a few labor leaders, and a few railroad presidents. The public has a right, paramount to the rights of either side or to the rights of both sides to this controversy. It would seem that the public's interest is the most important interest to be considered. So when the railroad boys in their emotional moments begin tipping over cars and dynamiting junction frogs, and burning terminals, we shall soak the boys with what laguage we may be able at the moment to command. Likewise, when the railroad presidents get out their blacklist and tie it into the situation, we shall poke them with whatever cold steel of reproach we may have about. So both sides will hate us, and each side will think that the other has bought us.

But here and now, before the trouble starts, it may be well to set down the calm conviction that in asking for an eight-hour day and time and a half for overtime, the railroad boys are not going further than the spirit of civilization in these times will justify them in going. And in closing let us say this: In every depot in this part of the country, in the freight houses and on various platforms around the yards, is nailed up a placard posted by "the company" that declares "one-half of every dollar earned by the railroads goes to labor," or words of that import. Well—if only half the railroad earnings go to labor, then the other half of the earnings goes to those who draw interest, reap dividends and make profits, but who do no railroad labor at all. And those who do not labor are not as decently clad in garments of righteousness as they should be, when they bring on a civil war to prevent those who do labor from cutting their hours of labor down to the hour schedule generally accepted in civilization today as fair and equitable.

Roosevelt Interpreted.

Boston Post: Col. Roosevelt in his latest statement declaring that he does not wish the Republican nomination for the presidency, but that there is no other man fit for it save himself, and that if the country is "heroic" it will take him, has something to say about the "infamy" shown and practiced by the administration.

The "infamy" which this ex-president of the United States so tastefully attributes to the president of the United States consists, as he shows further along in his latest diatribe, in lack of "action," that is to say, in failing to go to war with Germany.

The Roosevelt issue is becoming clearer. All who believe that peace with honor is "infamy" will hope to see the third term seeker a stampede candidate at Chicago.

A RALLYING CALL IS SENT TO SUFFRAGISTS

To the Editor of The Herald:

An exceptional victory has just been won by the suffragists in the judiciary committee of the national house of representatives. Action on the national suffrage amendment which was to have been deferred until Dec. 14 will be taken March 28.

The strength of the suffrage sentiment was responsible for the change of attitude in the judiciary committee. That strength is great enough to win a favorable report by the judiciary committee. It needs only to be expressed.

Letters and telegrams should be sent at once to the members of the judiciary committee, at the house of representatives, Washington, D. C. The member of this committee from Minnesota is Representative Volstead. Your very truly, MARY M'COY.

WANTS STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSION ABOLISHED

To the Editor of The Herald:

In The Herald under date of March 13, we read with various emotions the statement of George W. Cooley, state highway engineer and secretary of the highway commission, concerning the movement to abolish said commission.

We cannot understand why any "bridge trust" should be active in working against the highway commission. In Itasca county, according to the statement of one of its commissioners, errors were made by the state engineering department which increased the cost of the work over $40,000. It does not seem probable that the so-called "bridge trust" should find objection to errors which must obviously increase the earnings of the contractor. We suppose that this unnecessary expenditure is what the state engineer, Mr. Cooley, means when he speaks of "reducing the cost of work in the communities interested."

No doubt the highway commission can convince the people—at least to the satisfaction of the commissioners themselves—that the "bridge trust" can corrupt and blind some 8,000 county and township officials with greater ease than three commissioners, acting without salary and who are responsible only to the political power from whom they receive their appointment. Of course the taxpayers are supposed to willingly acknowledge that they are incapable of spending intelligently the money which they raise by taxing themselves.

Automobile roads running parallel with the railways are very nice for tourists and those on pleasure bent—a luxury which is very well when conditions warrant such large expenditures of public money for the benefit of a few. But when the highway commission advises the county boards that the entire appropriation shall be spent on certain stated automobile roads, while roads through rural communities which traverse nearly the entire width of the county do not get one cent of such appropriation, then it is high time that the taxpayer and the voter should inquire as to the reason why.

All the newspapers of the state devote columns and columns in high sounding language purporting to "boost" for the various agricultural communities. In this connection they often emphasize the need of good roads to secure quick and thorough agricultural development.

We are in hearty accord with the movement for good roads. But—and newspaper editors please read, ponder and investigate—how large a per cent of rural traffic is carried on upon roads running near to and parallel with the railways? The percentage of such traffic is too small to be seriously considered. Where then is the wisdom or justice in the practice of the highway commission in spending nearly the entire state appropriation for automobile roads as described with the pretext of building good roads for rural development? Perhaps Engineer Cooley, et al., can explain this matter, but we are from Missouri.

The small town merchants are loud in their complaints against the home trade. Here is some advice for the mercha its who have the interest of the surrounding rural communities at heart: Give your support to the movement to abolish the tyrannical highway commission, acting evidently more in the interest of automobile associations than in the interests of the taxpayer, and let the county and township manage their own affairs, with the right to decide how and where to spend their own money. In this way you will secure the good will of the farmers on whom you depend for your business prosperity, for it is the only thing that will secure the maximum of good roads for rural communities.

The rural communities have become thoroughly aroused by the very unjust encroachment upon their rights on the part of highway commissioners, acting under laws drafted by politicians for political purposes. Men who are seeking seats in the next legislature have need to study this highway commission farce, for unless we are very much mistaken, few rural communities will support any candidate who will not pledge himself to vote for the abolition of the highway commission without any compromise whatsoever. Yours for Home Rule, C. A. SWANSON.

URGES SUPPORT FOR THE BURNETT MEASURE

To the Editor of The Herald:

I was much interested in an editorial in Friday's Herald on the Burnett immigration bill, in which it seems to be unduly criticized. I would like to ask a few questions and express an opinion on the subject. If the editor has not read the bill, I have a copy which I would be glad to lend him. It is stated that Roosevelt vetoed the bill when it came before him. I think the editor must be mistaken on this point. The bill is very liberal, even with the literacy test included, as provision is made for those fleeing from religious persecution, and for the aged and dependent members of families already here. I would be the last to refuse a worthy man a refuge on our shores, but would ask if there is any doubt in the mind of anyone as to the need of a restrictive immigration law. Let me put it this way: Is it right to ask a guest into our home if we cannot care for him?

Is it right for us to admit vast numbers of foreigners to our country if we cannot make Americans of them?

Is it not a farce to pass a tariff law to protect American labor from the pauper labor of Europe, and then bring this very same labor here to compete with us and to build up great foreign colonies in all our industrial centers?

There are among us at the present time great numbers of people who have no conception of American life or ideals, and the melting pot is certainly being overworked. Everyone will agree that unrestricted immigration is a danger to our land, and that it is not only unfair to those who were born here and to those who have come to us already from across the sea, but it is also unfair to the immigrant himself, who is brought here to be exploited by unscrupulous men of his own race.

The time has come for a restrictive measure of some kind. This great war in Europe may cease as suddenly as it began. Its close may or may not let loose a great flood of immigration. But we should be prepared for it.

The Burnett bill may not be all perfection, but it is the only measure of its kind which has any chance of passage at this session of congress. We need a law of this kind, and need it now if we are to have a better America. If the Dillingham bill or any other that can be brought out would be any better, let it be done; but let us have the Burnett bill and have it now.

Some organizations have sent in protests against the bill, but did so, I fully believe, under a misapprehension as to its provisions. When it is properly called to their attention I think every patriotic and loyal citizen who wants to see the American standard of living maintained will get behind the Burnett bill and ask his congressman to support it. Yours truly,

A. H. DAVENPORT,

"NATIONS ARE HUMAN, NOT HYENAS," IS ARGUED

To the Editor of The Herald:

Your gentle correspondent at Schroeder implies that I have been talking nonsense, and very likely I have. It depends on something else for which I do not know the answer. Perhaps the lady from Schroeder can tell us.

If the nations are and always must be hyenas toward one another, what I have said is rank nonsense. There is no help then but for each to sleep with one eye open, be ever prepared for attack and keep itself fit for battle every hour of every day—until in a moment of weakness or an instant off guard, it goes down destroyed tooth and nail.

But if nations are made up of human beings, subject to the laws that govern the conduct of human beings, then the nations of the earth are about to put an end to war.

Individuals put an end to private warfare when they had to live together in the clan. Clans put an end to clan battles when they came to live together in the tribe. Tribes put an end to tribal warfare when they came to live together in the nation. And now groups of nations are approaching one another to suppress the anarchy of nations.

All through history, as far as we can trace history, civilization has been overcoming anarchy. Human nature has been asserting itself. Man, being a social creature, has contrived the way of living together in peace as fast as new groups of men came to live together in one society. And now all the world is one society, it follows, if history is true, that the society of nations must find a way to suppress anarchy. If human nature is human nature still, the next business of humanity is to overcome war between nations.

According to the hyena theory of nations, there is no escape from a condition in which war is the normal state of nations and nations are restrained from war only by fear.

According to the human theory, order is the normal condition of society, and the family of nations must find some way of establishing order.

It is not possible to prove either theory. It is necessary to believe in one or the other. The unpractical people are those who believe that nations are humankind, yet act on the theory that they are hyenas.

The human being theory of nations does not suppose that all violence will instantly come to an end. It does not so work out in the city or village. It does assume that the reign of law is the normal condition and violence the abnormal. It assumes that we are going to live together under the law, settle our differences by orderly means, and take some sort of public action to squelch the marauder and the insane.

When society is organized on those lines among nations as it now is among states and cities, we shall still need some forces to meet violence when it occurs. Count up the robber nations—and remember that a robber cannot live among his victims nor victimize those among whom he lives—count up the robber nations and provide what force is needed to restrain their violence. Count up the insane nations, or reckon what proportion of the nations are likely to go insane, and provide force enough for their restraint.

And the organization for all this? That is your question. It is enough for the present to know that public opinion of every sort always finds means to express itself and enforce its decisions. When the public opinion of nations agrees that war is anarchy, that for one nation to set up its will as final against the world is disloyalty, that a war of aggression is piracy and that the assertion of national rights which cannot be maintained before a court of nations is insanity—never fear but that public opinion will make itself felt.

COUNTY RELEASES PRISONER KOBRON

Complaining Witness in Assault Case Disappears; Habeas Corpus Needless.

In district court, late yesterday afternoon, County Attorney Greene moved for the dismissal of the proceedings pending against John Kobron, who has been in the county jail since Jan. 21 on an assault charge. The motion was granted by Judge Cant.

Earlier in the day Kobron, through his attorneys, McCoy & Hanson, sued out a writ of habeas corpus, claiming that he was illegally imprisoned at the jail inasmuch as he had been bound over to the March grand jury and that the county attorney had failed to present his case to the inquisitorial body for investigation. County Attorney Greene explained to the court that John Roscoe, the complaining witness in the case, had disappeared.

Kobron was arrested for making an alleged assault on Roscoe in a saloon at 429 West Michigan street and was held in jail in default of $200 bail.

C. H. S. DEBATERS IN LAST CONTEST

Will Meet Grand Rapids Friday Night; Successful Season.

The Central high school debating team will hold its last contest of the season next Friday night at Grand Rapids, when the high school trio of that place will be met. This debate was originally set for last Friday night, but due to many conflicting dates it was postponed.

The local trio of debaters has made a good record this season. They have met with only one defeat, that at the hands of the Minneapolis East high school team, one of the best in the state, two weeks ago. The team is composed of Jacob Garon, Emanuel Cook and Max Goldberg, and they have made a big name for themselves and their school.

The question next Friday will be the state league topic, "Resolved, That the army and navy of the United States are inadequate and should be increased." The local men will argue the affirmative.

NEBRASKAN CALLS W. J. BRYAN A LIAR

Lincoln, Neb., March 21.—A wordy dispute between William Jennings Bryan, former secretary of state, and John G. Maher, a local politician, in which the lie was passed to Mr. Bryan in a hotel lobby, enlivened the informal meetings previous to the prohibition mass meeting here last night.

The dispute arose over a question of Mr. Maher as to whether one of the speakers was getting paid for his services. Mr. Bryan interposed the remark that Maher's motives were mercenary. This provoked the retort and Mr. Maher followed it up with other charges.

SUGGESTS TRAINING CAMP IN NORTHERN MINNESOTA

Militia Inspection Officer Would Teach Business Men Soldier's Duties.

Suggests That Another Plattsburg Be Located on Some Northern Lake.

Military training for Duluth business men, in a civilian's camp patterned after the Plattsburg, N. Y., Chicago and San Francisco civilian camps, may be available this summer.

Infantry officers of the United States army and local militia men are unanimously in favor of the establishment of a camp near some lake in Northern Minnesota, where business men can go for a month and play the war game under regular army men.

Capt. Charles A. Danforth, U. S. A., who is here inspecting militia companies before making his annual report to the Federal government on the ranking, efficiency and equipment of Minnesota's National Guard, today expressed himself as enthusiastic over the possibilities of such a camp, if it could be established successfully.

"I was assigned to the Chicago civilians' camp last summer," he said, "and it was remarkable the way the men took up the work. The average age was between 35 and 40 years, and many of them were prominent in business life.

"To see millionaires fall out of rank and take fatigue duty assignments without a sign of a complaint, and even cheerfully, was a revelation. It was the best kind of training in the world, and at the end of the month they could go through the hardest kind of maneuvers, in heavy marching order, and come back to camp whistling."

Approves Plan.

Col. F. E. Resche of the Third Regiment, M. N. G., also approved the plan, and declared that it would work wonders for the average business man, who was a real patriot, and who was willing to leave his desk for several weeks in order to qualify as a man of military worth.

"In recruiting National Guard companies or regiments, or in obtaining men for work of this kind," said Capt. Danforth, "it is the smaller cities which respond the best. The distractions of a large city make it difficult to arouse interest."

"It is a newspaper fight so far," said Capt. Danforth, in referring to the present Mexican embroglio. "Little, if any, authentic news can be obtained on the Mexican border, or from the U. S. troops, and correspondents are compelled to resort to rumors, and hearsay reports.

"At Vera Cruz there were seventy correspondents, representing press association and newspapers, and news was so scarce that they made life miserable for everyone they could reach."

Capt. Danforth inspected "E" company, one of the three companies of the Third regiment belonging to Duluth, at the National Guard armory last night.

"A" company, the regimental band, the headquarters company, and the supply company, will be inspected tonight, and "C" company will be reviewed tomorrow night.

From Duluth Capt. Danforth will go to Hibbing and Eveleth, and then on to companies in the central and southern portions of the state, winding up his work at Crookston on the last of the month.

"Minnesota's militia ranks up well," he said, "although it is hard to classify any particular company, because there is such a wide range." His reports, which are kept secret, are forwarded to the war department.

NIGHT PUPILS TO GRADUATE

Friday Evening 421 Will Finish Courses in Public Schools.

Most Successful Year on Record; Seeking Out Foreign Born.

"Graduation" exercises for 421 students who entered public night school classes on Oct. 4 will be held Friday evening. There will be no closing ceremony, according to W. H. Schilling, assistant superintendent of city schools, who has been in charge of the night work.

"The enrollment was approximately 15 per cent greater than last year," said Mr. Schilling, "and it has been the most successful year on record. There were 291 students enrolled at Central high school; sixty-three at the Monroe school, Twenty-sixth avenue west and First street; twenty-four at the Irving Junior high, Fifty-sixth avenue west and Nicollet street, and forty-three at the Stowe school in New Duluth."

Night schools will be made one of the most important divisions of public school activity next year, if plans being formulated by Mr. Schilling are carried out. By co-operating with the naturalization bureau of the United States department of labor, which furnishes names and addresses of all newly-arrived foreigners, and with the aid of foreign-language publications and foreign societies of Duluth, Mr. Schilling expects to get a record attendance.

Anxious to Help.

"I have been studying the night school systems used at Cleveland, Detroit and New York," he said, "and am trying to devise a plan which will insure a large attendance of foreigners. We are particularly anxious to have steel plant laborers, who are newcomers, join our classes, so that we can help them prepare for naturalization."

Of the 421 students, 285 were enrolled in language classes which are designed for persons who speak English poorly, or not at all. Of these, 168 were enrolled at Central high, fifty-seven at the Monroe, seventeen at the Irving and forty-three at the Stowe.

In addition to the classes for foreigners, eighty-five attended a commercial course of bookkeeping, stenography and typewriting; fourteen, a class in sewing and domestic training, and twenty-four, a class in seventh and eighth grade work for "permit" students.

BEGIN PREPARATIONS FOR JUNIOR-SENIOR BALL

At a meeting of the members of the junior class yesterday afternoon at Central high school, George Lawson and Gladys Anderson were selected to head the class committee in making arrangements for the big annual junior-senior ball to be held in June at the local institution.

The Junior-Senior ball is one of the most important social events at Central high school during the year and is annually attended by a large crowd. It is given in the form of a farewell to the seniors by the juniors and of an appreciation of the friendship shown to the younger class by the fourth year students.

The seniors will choose their representatives at the next regular meeting of the class. The committees will then get together to make the arrangements for the affair.

Four Midshipmen Dismissed.

Washington, March 21.—Four midshipmen were ordered dismissed from the Annapolis academy yesterday for intoxication and misconduct in shielding intoxicated fellow students from detection. Secretary Daniels declined to divulge the names.

An Ideal Remedy for Nursing Mothers

Compound of Simple Laxative Herbs Safe for Baby and Mother.

Constipation is a condition that affects the old, young and middle-aged, and most people at one time or another need help in regulating the action of the bowels. Harsh cathartics and purgatives should not be employed to relieve constipation, as their effect is only temporary while they shock the system unnecessarily.

A remedy that can be used with perfect safety for the tiniest babe and that is equally effective for the strongest constitution is found in the combination of simple laxative herbs known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and sold in drug stores everywhere for fifty cents a bottle. This is an ideal household remedy and should be in every family medicine chest.

Mrs. F. I. Barsolow, 18 Leslie St., Holyoke, Mass., wrote to Dr. Caldwell, "Syrup Pepsin certainly is fine. I gave it to my baby, Evelyn, and also took it myself. It is the only medicine I have been able to take without affecting baby in the nursing.

EVELYN BARSOLOW

I have used it for all four children and it is fine; they like it and ask for it."

A trial bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can be obtained, free of charge, by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 454 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

COUNCIL HOLDS ITS LONGEST MEETING

Chamber Crowded With Visitors; Session From 3 to 6:15 p. m.

City commissioners yesterday afternoon held the longest council session since commission government went into effect three years ago.

Beginning at 3 o'clock, the commissioners held continuous session until 6:15, when Mayor Prince called for a motion to adjourn.

When the meeting opened at 3 o'clock the council chamber was filled to its capacity, many standing in the rear and along the aisles, and when motion for adjournment was taken, there was nobody present, with the exception of the commissioners, City Attorney Samuelson, the newspaper representatives and the janitor, who was waiting to lock up.

The first delegation heard by the council was from the West end in connection with the proposed improvement of West First street. After the contract was awarded to Rogers & McLean, a large number left the chambers, giving those in the rear an opportunity to obtain seats. Then followed the discussion on awarding the East Superior street job, more than an hour being consumed by the speakers. When the council ordered all bids rejected, a large number left the room, after which persons gradually left the chambers until the assembly room was entirely deserted.

Other delegations heard yesterday were from Park Point in connection with the extension of the Minnesota avenue pavement, and one from the West Duluth Commercial club asking the commissioners to order the vacation of Roosevelt street and the condemnation of property for the establishment of a central park in that end of the city.

"Next week I'm going to bring some lunch along," said Commissioner Silberstein when the meeting was adjourned.

"Good idea," added Commissioner Farrell. "We might adjourn at 5 o'clock until after dinner."

Doctor Says Nuxated Iron Will Increase Strength of Delicate People 200% in Ten Days

In many instances—Persons have suffered untold agony for years doctoring for nervous weakness, stomach, liver or kidney disease or some other ailment when their real trouble was lack of iron in the blood.—How to tell.

New York, N. Y.—In a recent discourse, Dr. E. Sauer, Specialist of this city said: If you were to make an actual blood test on all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the exceedingly large number who lack iron and who are ill for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied all their multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue and therefore nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. Your food merely passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and nerve starvation, people become generally weakened, nervous and all run down and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at night, others are slepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless, but all lack physical power and endurance. In such cases, it is worse than foolishness to take stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your fagging vital powers for the moment, maybe at the expense of your life later on. No matter what any one tells you, if you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test. See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the time double, and even triple their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of their symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form, and this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by new remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like good old iron to put color in your cheeks and good sound, healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener and the best blood builder in the world. The only trouble was that the old forms of inorganic iron like tinctures of iron, iron acetate, etc., often ruined people's teeth, upset their stomachs and were not assimilated and for these reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of the newer forms of organic iron all this has been overcome. Nuxated Iron for example, is pleasant to take, does not injure the teeth and is almost immediately beneficial.

NOTE—The manufacturers of Nuxated Iron have such unbounded confidence in its potency that they authorize the announcement that they will forfeit $100.00 to any Charitable Institution if they cannot take any man or woman under sixty who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. Also they will refund your money in any case in which Nuxated Iron does not at least double your strength in ten days' time. It is dispensed in this city by Boyce Drug store.

LONG PAVING FIGHT ENDED

Brick Provided for First Street Job in Contract Just Let.

Rogers & McLean Will Do Work for Sum of $63,257.20.

Rogers & McLean were yesterday afternoon awarded the contract to improve First street, from Twentieth to Thirtieth avenue west, with a brick pavement, on their bid of $63,257.20.

This settles a paving controversy that began two years ago, when property owners first petitioned the city council for the improvement of the roadway. At that time a majority of the owners filed a remonstrance petition against the pavement and plans were halted for the year. The same situation arose last year, but the city commissioners promised to include the improvement in the 1916 paving program and to place it among the first ordered this year.

About two months ago the street was ordered paved and shortly after bids were opened. Immediately there arose another controversy over the selection of material, some of the owners favoring brick and others urging the selection of creosoted blocks. A meeting of the owners was called and blocks were chosen. Shortly after a petition was circulated in favor of brick and when presented to the commissioners three weeks ago was signed by a large majority of the owners. This started another fight, which was finally settled yesterday afternoon with the awarding of the contract to Rogers & McLean, low bidders for a brick pavement.

Last week Commissioner Farrell introduced a resolution awarding the contract to D. H. Clough on his bid for a creosoted block pavement, but a delegation of property owners protested and on motion of Mayor Prince, the measure was amended, giving the contract to Rogers & McLean. It was agreed that the thirty-eight owners, who appealed from their assessments, should withdraw their appeals during the week, before the council would adopt the resolution. At the meeting yesterday City Attorney Samuelson announced that the appeals had been withdrawn and Mayor Prince moved the adoption of the amended resolution. It was adopted by a vote of 3 to 2, Commissioners Farrell and Merritt dissenting.

Several delegations were present at the meeting yesterday, various materials and widths being urged by the speakers. Those who addressed the commissioners were John Jenswold, Jr., George M. Jensen, A. Pearson, John H. Brigham and E. P. Alexander.

POSTPONE CAR COMEDY.

Entertainment By Street Railway Employes Put Over to Next Month.

The ladies' night entertainment, which the employes' association of the Duluth Street Railway company planned to give tomorrow evening, has been postponed until early in April. Action to that effect was taken last night following a rehearsal of the play which is to be one of the principal features of the program.

The play is a travesty on a day's work on a street car and is entirely original with the carmen. All of the comedy, conscious and otherwise that takes place on a car during a day is being arranged and rehearsed. A miniature street car has already been built in the clubroom in which to stage the skit.

Plans for at least one special car will be made during this week to take employes of the company and their families to Superior to attend an entertainment to be given by the Superior employes of the company on March 29.

HIS SELF CONTROL BRINGS NICE REWARD

Hudson, Wis., March 21.—On the showing that he had not smoked cigarettes nor drank intoxicating liquors up to the time he was 25, Lucien T. GARDEN WORK IS ABOUT DUE Homecroft Idea More Popular in Duluth Than Ever This Year.

Time to Think of Seeds—Soil Preparation Comes Next.

Although many indications point to a late spring in Duluth this year, householders throughout the city have already begun to take an active interest in planning for their flower beds and back yard vegetable gardens. Soon the snow will disappear and then signs of garden preparations and lawn-making will be unmistakable.

Everybody who owned a back yard last year seems to want a garden, and the homecroft idea, for which Duluth is famous, is expected to interest even more residents this year than last. Few who have tried homecrofting ever abandon their garden plots because they have learned that it is one solution of the problem of the high cost of living, and pays in pleasure and health as well. Naturally neighbors profit by their experience and make garden plots of their own.

Seed Supply.

After the snow is gone, the yards will be raked and cleaned, grass plots burned over and garden spots spaded. The first matter of importance for the gardener is his seed supply. Too much care can not be exercised in the selection. Poor seeds never bring satisfactory results, and the amateur should be guided by the advice of some successful gardener in this locality. The home gardener should first determine what varieties to plant and then carefully select his seeds. Good seeds usually cost little more than those of poor quality, and they are worth many times more than the slight difference in cost.

Preparing Soil.

The treatment of the soil is another important factor in the making of the home garden. In cases where a garden has been cropped for several seasons without the aid of fertilizers, its yielding capacity has necessarily been lessened to some extent. The surest method for rejuvenating the soil under such circumstances is the application of a liberal amount of well rotted stable manure thoroughly plowed or spaded under.

If impossible to get good stable manure, commercial fertilizer should be used, but it is more difficult to get as good results with it. For a garden, 25 by 50 feet, 100 pounds of the following mixture will generally insure satisfactory results when thoroughly mixed with the top soil after spading: Four parts of nitrate of soda, eight parts of muriate of potash and ten parts of crushed phosphate rock or acid phosphate.

Suggestions For Amateur.

Early annuals and vegetable seed may be sown now and later transplanted to cold frames.

Early sown celery may be transplanted into flats as soon as large enough to handle.

If the snow is settling down on the perennial bed, it is a good plan to loosen it as much as possible. A heavy coating of ice and snow over the plants is apt to smother them.

To get a good garden crop one must have good seed, good soil and good cultivation.

Sow a few nasturtiums, sweet peas and asters early and transplant to the open ground when warm enough.

Do not plant seeds too deep. Small seed should be just barely covered. A piece of paper, a wet cloth, or even shaded glass, may be put over the pot or box to keep in the moisture.

Go over the bulb stock in the cellar and note its condition. The newer forms of dahlia and canna are much harder to keep than were the old ones. Breeding seems to have weakened them very materially.

Plant a few aquilegia or columbine now. They come in a great variety of color and make a fine showing in the garden. Sown now, some flowers may be obtained this year.

There is no plant that will lend itself to more uses than the lilac. There are many forms and colors which make excellent single plants, groups, screens or hedges. A little pruning and plenty of plant food will cause them to blossom profusely nearly every year.

UTILITY EMPLOYES ASK WAGE INCREASE

Eighteen Men Declare "H. C. of L." Makes Raise Imperative.

Eighteen laborers of the water and light department yesterday afternoon petitioned the city commissioners for a wage increase of 5 cents an hour.

Asserting that the present "high cost of living" makes it impossible for them to live on their present wages, the eighteen employes ask that their wages be increased from 30 to 35 cents an hour.

"Necessities of life now cost more than formerly," state the petitioners, "and it is absolutely necessary that the increase be granted, in order that we may live within our means."

The petition was filed with City Clerk Borgen shortly before the meeting and was read during the council session. No action was taken by the commissioners, but the petition was referred to Commissioner Merritt, head of the water and light department. An investigation will be made, it was announced, and if conditions warrant the increase requested by the laborers, it will be granted in the near future.

This Lady Was Convinced After the First Washing!

NORTHERN ELECTRICAL CO.

Gentlemen:—I cannot find words to express what a labor saving invention the "EDEN" washer is and can thoroughly recommend it to anyone. It ought to be one of the first things in furnishing a home where a wife is to do her own work.

In all the 24 years that I have been keeping house, I could not be convinced to buy a washing machine until I had the "EDEN" sent on trial, and it did not take me long to decide as the first washing proved to me that it was by far the most useful thing I could invest the money in. I can do my washing now in a half a day that I usually had to spend two days at, as the "EDEN" machine requires no boiling or rubbing and I feel as good when I am through with my day's washing as when I started it.

MONTANA WOMAN WOULD USE SALT TO HASTEN OPENING OF LAKE NAVIGATION

Common salt to hasten the opening of navigation on Lake Superior.

This is the latest suggestion on solving the problem confronting shippers all along the Great Lakes.

The suggestion comes from a woman reader of The Herald living at Corvallis, Mont., who sent a letter to Mayor Prince yesterday, explaining her plan to expedite lake shipping. Here is her letter:

"Mayor Prince: I notice in The Duluth Herald an account about the ice being so thick that it will cause a great delay in opening navigation.

"I would suggest that common coarse salt be sown along a channel about the width of a boat. It would melt the ice in a few days, as salt water never freezes, but will thaw through the hardest ice.

"Salt is cheap, and I believe that you will be satisfied after trying the plan. The cost will be much less than the loss sustained by shippers in waiting two months for the opening of navigation at this time of the year. I am a former Duluth woman and know all about the existing conditions in your city.

"Please don't laugh at this suggestion until you try it. I first tried it as an experiment and found it perfectly satisfactory. The salt will leave the ice in such shape that a boat could plow right through it."

Question—Who will pay for the salt and who will do the sowing?

JITNEY FLOCK APPEARS AS THE FIRST OF THE HARBINGERS OF GENTLE SPRING

Jitneys this morning ushered in the first day of spring.

March 21 is the official "opening day" of spring and with the arrival of the season came a "flock of jitneys" this morning. The jitneys are here before the robins and to many they are becoming the real harbingers of spring.

Many jitneys are in operation today and it is expected that the business will flourish steadily from now on until cold weather arrives next winter.

Only seventeen jitney drivers are operating under licenses granted by the city commissioners last summer and fall. These do not expire until May 1, according to the jitney ordinance, which is now before the supreme court. If the ordinance is declared legal then the police will renew their campaign to arrest all drivers operating without a license. A decision is expected before April 1, according to the city attorney.

Jitney drivers who have licenses follow: Arthur Anderson, Evald Anderson, O. W. Carlson, H. N. De Salr, B. Erickson, Jonn Helin, E. H. Hawley, Gilbert Iverson, Alfred Langi, Frank Paquette, J. O. Rennings, M. M. Smith, George St. George, Oscar Swanson, George Vukovitch, Fred Wise, Sr., and A. W. Youngkvist.

How to Heal Skin-Disease

A Baltimore doctor suggests this simple, but reliable and inexpensive home treatment for people suffering with eczema, ringworm, rashes and similar itching, burning skin troubles.

At any reliable druggist's get a jar of resinol ointment and a cake of resinol soap. These are not at all expensive. With the resinol soap and warm water bathe the affected parts thoroughly, until they are free from crusts and the skin is softened. Dry very gently, spread on a thin layer of the resinol ointment, and cover with a light bandage—if necessary to protect the clothing. This should be done twice a day. Usually the distressing itching and burning stop with the first treatment, and the skin soon becomes clear and healthy again. Sample free, Dept. 1-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

HELD THRONG TO COUNT CHANGE.

Boston Herald: A humorist with a $10 bill blocked one of the three entrances to the East Boston tunnel at Devonshire for exactly fifteen minutes one day recently between 5 and 6 o'clock in the afternoon.

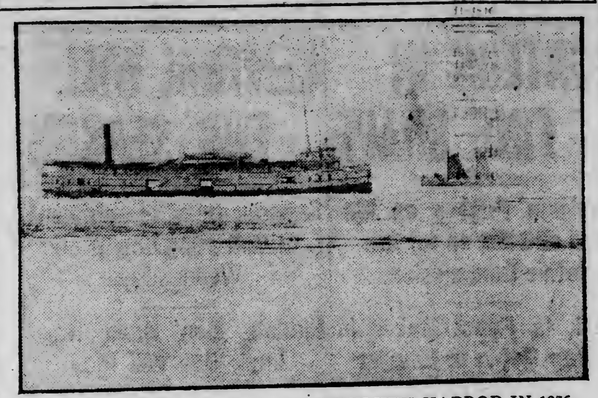
When the man tendered his $10 bill the cashier handed him the change in small coins, largely pennies, wrapped in small rolls of 50 to 100 each. This was a fatal error on the part of the cashier. Had small bills been returned the incident might have closed right there. But the tender of coins in wrappers gave the man his opportunity.

He carefully unrolled each lot, counted every penny and joked with the throng stalled behind him. To add to the discomfiture of the cashier, he insisted that several pennies in the rolls be exchanged for other pennies, on the ground that the original coins were worn and unacceptable.

This delayed at least 1,000 persons in their contemplated passage through the turnstile. Those nearest the window saw the humor of the situation. Those in the rear gave vent to remarks which were more emphatic than polite.

Kaiser Wilhelm once confessed that he owned 18,099 neckties.

OLD RESIDENT RECALLS HEAVY SNOWFALL OF PIONEER DAYS



ICE-BOUND STEAMER OUTSIDE DULUTH HARBOR IN 1876.

SNOW BANKS ON LAKE AVENUE IN 1876.

The heavy snowfall during this winter is causing older residents of Duluth to recall other winters when the snow was piled high in the streets.

E. A. Schulze has sent The Herald two photographs, one taken during the winter of 1875 and 1876, showing the high snow embankments on Lake avenue near the place where Thomas Trevillion's grocery store now stands. At that time says Mr. Schulze it was a frame building used for a boarding house owned by Jake Leidel. The railroad track crossed the avenue at that point. The frame structure of which only the roof can be seen, south of the Mammoth saloon, was a general store at that time, owned by Henry Truelsen, former mayor of Duluth.

The other picture represents a scene outside Duluth harbor, June 9, 1876, following the severe winter. The steamer at a distance was the Manistee, plying between Duluth, Bayfield, Hancock, Ashland, Houghton and Chicago.

Mrs. G. A. Schulze and Mrs. Ernest Wieland, old residents of this city, were among the Duluth passengers ice-bound at the time this picture was taken.

PICKS POCKETS OF FRIEND; ARRESTED

Gust Carlson Too Solicitous for Friend's Welfare; Case Dismissed.

Charles Aho, 920 Mesaba avenue, is not an Irishman, but that didn't prevent him from celebrating the 17th of March.

The fun waxed fast and furious for a time, if the police version of the affair is correct, and finally Gust Carlson, an acquaintance, became afraid that Aho would spend all his money.

Accordingly, he gently picked Aho's pockets of $94, police said, and put it away for safe keeping. When Aho began to look for his $94, he was unable to find it.

Carlson gave him $45, but kept the rest, police said, and after several threats, Aho told his troubles to Patrolman Kreager, who arrested Carlson.

A charge of second degree grand larceny was lodged against Carlson, but when jail bars loomed up before him, he decided to return the rest of the money, and called Aho to police headquarters, where he turned over the remaining $49.

Aho apparently was satisfied with that solution of the problem, and so yesterday afternoon, when Carlson's case was called, Assistant County Attorney R. M. Funck moved for dismissal.

WISCONSIN LOOKS GOOD NOW.

Jake Britz Charged With Passing Forged Check Here.

Jake Britz is a native of Wisconsin, but he always has liked Minnesota, and particularly Duluth. Now that is all changed.

Britz recently forged a check for $12, signing the name of M. Rucklin, 1920 West Superior street, according to police. He cashed the paper at the saloon of Anton Nelson, 1524 West Superior street, and took the next car for Superior.

Wisconsin police found him in due time, and he agreed to come back to face a charge of passing a worthless check, an offense calling for not more than a work farm sentence.

Before Judge W. H. Smallwood late yesterday, he was bound over to the grand jury in $300 bail on a forgery charge, and Britz wishes that he had stayed in Wisconsin.

HAS PAINFUL REMINDER.

Bruno Salo Can't Forget St. Patrick's Day; Assailant Arrested.

Bruno Salo of Winton, Minn., will always remember St. Patrick's day, for he carries a cross-shaped scar on one cheek as a memento of an encounter with John Erickson, lumberjack.

Erickson went on a rampage on the evening of the 17th, and, rushing from a St. Croix avenue saloon, attacked Salo, who happened to be the first pedestrian he met.

He carved a ragged cross on Salo's cheek and cut a slice from the end of his nose.

In municipal court yesterday afternoon Judge W. H. Smallwood held Erickson to the grand jury in $500 bail after Dr. J. A. McCuen testified that Salo was seriously injured.

GAME LAW WAS NOT VIOLATED BY THOMPSON

When the case of State vs. Capt. Horace H. Thompson, diver, was called in municipal court today Assistant County Attorney Richard M. Funck moved to dismiss the charge of violating the game law.

The marine man was arrested when game wardens overheard his son talking about the venison they had enjoyed out of season, and later he was released to appear this morning.

He explained that the deer had been killed by wolves and that he had found half a carcass, which had not been spoiled. After pleading not guilty, he demanded a jury trial. The dismissal obviated that, however.

A MEDICINE OF MERIT

The great sale of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound all over this land is the result of genuine merit. The reason is that this good old-fashioned root and herb medicine actually helps those suffering from the ailments peculiar to women. If it did not, would not the women of America have found it out in forty years, so that few of them would buy?

Lime-Loss in Tuberculosis

"In the Journal of the American Medical Association (January 17, 1914) was the following:

"It has been many times stated that in tuberculosis or in the pretuberculosis stage an increased amount of calcium (lime) is lost both in the urine and feces. In fact, a demineralization has been thought to be a forerunner of the development of tuberculosis."

If tuberculosis is due to lime loss, the success of Eckman's Alterative in its treatment may be due, in part, to its content of a lime salt so combined with other valuable ingredients as to be easily assimilated.

Always we have urged consumptives to attend strictly to matters of food, but often some effective remedial agent is needed. In many cases of apparent recovery Eckman's Alterative seems to have supplied this need. It contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, so is safe to try. From your druggist or direct.

JIMMY CLABBY TAUGHT GIBBONS MUCH OF GAME

After Getting a Real Lacing Mike Absorbed Some of the Fine Points of His Conqueror and Kept Right on Improving; Frank Gotch Will Be Right Before He Meets Stecher.

BY BRUCE.

SOME persons are of the opinion that Mike Gibbons wants to retire from the fight game. We asked Mike. He replied. This is what he said: "Not while there is a lot of money in it." J. P. Morgan have a listen. Other persons have an idea that Mike is going back. Inquiry. "I have never fought so well in my life." This from Tommy: "Take it from me, Mike never was so good."

What does Mike think of Eddie McGoorty? Great hitter: one of the best of them all. Of Jimmy Clabby? One of the greatest of them all, and one of the nerviest. Declares Clabby was one of the greatest of all modern boxers.

How about Packey McFarland? You would think naturally that Mike would have a good opinion of Packey. He has—outside the ring.

"If an amateur had done some of the things Packey did the night he fought me, you would have said he was terrible. But McFarland gets away with everything. He must have been better once. That night I could not see him. I was awfully bad. If I was right, honestly I think I could give it to him good. But at that, Packey is one smart fellow; if you want to see his class, just look up the people he tags with."

What or who started Gibbons on the road to fame? Jimmy Clabby, Gibbons admits, gave him his greatest lesson and taught him more of the game than any other one man. Also, it might be stated, Clabby gave the Phantom one of his worst beatings in their first meeting in St. Paul.

"I knew nothing about boxing then. I had a left hand, but I didn't possess even the faintest conception of its uses. Clabby had a great left and he was one of the first to smear me up with a loop-the-loop punch. He did it plenty. I took a sweet beating and that set me to thinking. Right there was where I learned to study the boxing game and try to figure out ways to avoid being mauled. I think I have succeeded fairly well."

Ask Gibbons if Soldier Bartfield knocked him down. If you do, you'll get an intimate and decidedly uncomplimentary view of Bartfield. From Gibbons, with high indignation: "A big tramp."

Like most great men, for this boy is decidedly great in his chosen line, Mike is ready and willing to give credit where he believes credit is due. There is the Clabby case, for instance, and also McGoorty. But Bartfield, the man Dan McKetrick played up because he wandered through ten rounds with Mike. Gibbons declares is overrated, a fellow he fought with one hand and then nearly put him away.

"I started out to be a clever boxer. The last year I have developed into a fighter. I have found that I can stand up with these sluggers and take all they have and then give them more in return. Smith was rated as a slugger. He hurt me once. I hurt him more than he hurt me. I was willing to stand and exchange wallops with Smith, the man the critics declared might put me away. That's the answer. Today I believe I could go out and box more cleverly than any of the others; but I am fighting them and beating them at a game the public has recently given me credit for. I am Gibbons the fighter, which is more than merely Gibbons the boxer."

Will Mike Gibbons quit when he feels himself going back? John L. Sullivan didn't. Neither did Bob Fitzsimmons. The same goes for Bat Nelson, Jimmy Britt, Billy Papke, Young Corbett and a host of others.

"I think I will," is the answer of Gibbons. Will he? Hope is the strongest thing in life. If a man isn't as good as he was, he hopes he is and then gets to believing he is. It's been the history of all champions. But, come to think of it, Gibbons will have to retreat quite a ways down the path of deterioration before he will surrender his title to any of the present contenders.

The Case of Gotch.

IN the very prime of his career, could Frank Gotch have beaten Joe Stecher? From Iowa, 10,000 "yeses:" reverberating from the lank grass land of Nebraska, "No!"

Personally we're awfully interested in the case of Frank Gotch. He's a wonderful fellow. Frank has been one of the greatest athletes of all time, and one of the most interesting, because he has real brains and consequently real opinions and real force.

Here is the question: How much is the world's title worth to this Iowa land owner? It will have to be worth at least $40,000. But, at that, we have a sneaking hunch that Frank Gotch values the title of the world's greatest wrestler more than all the purses all the promoters would offer. That's the reason we believe Gotch will be reasonably right, or will believe he is at least, before he will consent to a match with this wonderful kid from Dodge, Neb.

Gotch is going to meet some of the toughest men in the game before he tackles Stecher. If right down in his heart this great fellow learns that he is not the great wrestler of old, why then he may refuse to meet Stecher: but, if Frank finds he is the great champion of the past, and his recent matches show the Humboldt man in grand form, why then America is going to see perhaps its greatest match—the greatest match because it will be a contest between two Americans—and two of the greatest of all time.

BOWLERS SLOWING UP.

Toledo Tournament Fails to Show Much in Star Work.

Toledo, Ohio, March 21.—Seventeen 1,100 counts were made in the two-man event of the American Bowling congress tournament here yesterday, without a single mark seriously threatening the high total of Thoma and Marino, who have 1279.

The individual event was almost as slow, eleven 600 counts appearing. The best mark was the 667 of E. G. Shepherd of Kansas City, who ran into a tie at sixth place with William Dreher of Rockford, Ill. Few of the men in action had ability to overhaul the leaders.

The two-man work was even slower in spite of the class of the men engaged. Troch and Jess of Milwaukee topped the event with 1182.

The Commodore Barry Council Knights of Columbus of Chicago, rolled into first place on the late shift of the American Bowling congress tournament here last night with a score of 2905, beating the Elks of Columbus by ten pins. The final game was 1009, other games being 986 and 960.

FRED BEELL WINS TWICE

Marshfield Wonder Throws Two Men; Is After Stecher Match.

Ashland, Wis., March 21.—Fred Beell made a sensational comeback here Saturday night, defeating two opponents in jig time and displaying all his old time form and wonderful speed. Paul Schultz of Chicago, the huge German heavyweight, who towered over the diminutive Beell some ten inches and made the little Badger look like a mere boy in size, was defeated by the Marshfield streak in twelve minutes, Beell toying with his huge opponent.

Sanders of Ashland, a big heavyweight, was then taken on by Beell and handily beaten in seven minutes.

Beell beat Schultz in practically the same time it required Joe Stecher to turn the trick.

Stecher Must Show Him.

Fans here were surprised by the remarkable form displayed by Beell. The little fellow, once the greatest wrestler in the world for his weight and inches, moved around with all his old time speed and appeared to be in excellent condition. Beell announced after he had downed his second opponent that he was after a meeting with Joe Stecher.

"I am going back to the farm and put in several weeks more of training," said Beell. "That will put me right for Stecher. If that fellow can put his scissors hold on me, then I believe he is the greatest wrestler in the world. But I want to be shown."

BASEBALL

Hot Springs, Ark., March 21.—Fred Clarke, former manager of the Pittsburgh Nationals, joined the Pirate crew in spring training quarters here yesterday.

"I just came down to train a little myself," said Clarke.

He denied that his presence at this time had any further significance than he had gotten used to coming to Hot Springs at the training season.

Both the Pittsburghs and the world's champion Boston Americans had busy practice periods yesterday. The Bostons have not yet heard from either Speaker or Joe Wood.

New York, March 21.—Club owners of the International Baseball league met here yesterday and ratified the 1916 playing schedule without change. The season will open April 26, with Buffalo playing at Richmond and Montreal at Baltimore. On April 27 Toronto will open at Newark and Rochester at Providence. The sale of the Jersey City franchise to James R. Price and Fred Tenney and its transfer to Newark were ratified.

New Haven, Conn., March 21.—John B. McLean, former catcher on the Cincinnati and New York National league clubs, has acquired the franchise of the New Haven club of the Eastern Baseball league, according to the Evening Register. The price paid is given as $9,000.

Tampa, Fla., March 21.—Finals yesterday: Chicago Nationals, 2, 5, 1; Philadelphia Nationals, 6, 11, 0. Batteries—Hendrix, Seaton and Archer; Mayer, Demaree and Adams.

White Shades Matt Wells.

Cincinnati, Ohio, March 21.—Harder punching and a strong rally in the closing rounds, earned a shade for Charley White of Chicago, over Matt Wells, the English lightweight, in a ten-round no-decision bout here last night, according to the sporting writers at the ringside.

Kentucky Harness Meets.

Louisville, Ky., March 21.—Sixty-two days of racing for Kentucky tracks was provided by the Kentucky State Racing commission at its first meeting of the year here. Lexington was awarded 12 days, April 27 to May 10; Churchill Downs, 13 days, May 13 to (Derby day) to May 27; Douglass Park, 13 days, May 29 to June 12; Latonia, 24 days, June 14 to July 17.

FIGHTERS IN FINE SHAPE

Physician Passes on Willard and Moran for Athlethic Commission.

Frank Is Peace-Maker in Scrap Between Lawyer and McKetrick.

New York, March 20.—In order to allay the effects of some adverse reports as to the physical condition of Jess Willard and Frank Moran, who are to meet in a ten-round bout here next Saturday evening, Chairman F. A. Wenck, of the New York state athletic commission had Dr. Joseph M. Creamer, the commission's supervising physician, examine both men. Dr. Creamer in his statement says in part:

"When I examined Willard some weeks ago, I had doubts as to whether the champion could get fit for a hard battle in so short a time. I am satisfied Willard is ready right now to go ten rounds at top speed with Moran or anybody else, and that his condition is a tribute to his training methods, despite any criticism to the contrary.

"Moran was bristling with vigor and ready to fight when he returned here from Saratoga two weeks ago. If possible he is even better today than he was then. Frank is hard as iron and is very confident of success. Both men are in prime condition."

Have "Private Scrap."

Moran did only light road work yesterday and then came to the city from Westchester. He spent the forenoon in the city court where he won a legal battle. Dan McKetrick, Moran's former manager, sued him for $1,462 he claimed to have advanced Moran before his fight with Jack Johnson at Paris, in 1914. Moran did not fight the claim but said the money was to have been paid out of the Paris purse. That money, Moran testified, is tied up by the moratorium in France on account of the war. The jury decided in Moran's favor.

Both parties met later in a restaurant. Moran's counsel, Frank O'Neill, former chairman of the state athletic commission, after a heated exchange of words with McKetrick, struck the latter on the jaw. Then Harry Pollak, manager of Freddie Welsh, the world's lightweight champion, took McKetrick's part and landed a right smash on O'Neill's mouth, cutting the lawyer's lip. Moran took no part in the fray, but acted as peace-maker and separated the combatants. He induced O'Neill to leave the restaurant.

Letup in Work.

Moran will resume his training today, but for the remainder of the week he will confine himself to only light work on the road, and in the gymnasium.

Champion Willard and his trainers decided to omit the early morning runs this week and yesterday the Kansan only took a brief walk. During the afternoon Willard, at his training quarters, went through setting up and bending exercises. Then he boxed three rounds with George Rodel and an equal number with Jack Hemple. He next took on Monahan for two rounds, in the last of which Monahan landed a hard left just back of Willard's right temple and raised a lump there. Former Champion Jim Corbett, who was at the ringside, said: "Hello, Jess: what happened? How did you get that lump there?"

Willard laughed as he replied:

"Oh, that's nothing; I must have run into a flying club."

Corbett was the center of an interested gathering of pugilists who watched the big fellow go through his work. Among these experts were "Philadelphia Jack" O'Brien, George Chip, George Munroe, Leach Cross, Freddie Welsh and Billy Depoe.

Corbett and O'Brien, as well as all the others, commented in favorable terms on the champion's speed and ability. Corbett said he believed Willard would win; O'Brien said the champion would outpoint Moran, but all agreed that the bout ought to be a hard one.

SCHEDULE IS ADOPTED

Northern League Baseball Playing Season Will Open May 4.

John Burmeister Predicts the Greatest Year in Circuit's History.

Little outside of modifying and ratifying the 1916 Northern league baseball schedule, was done at yesterday's meeting of the merry magnates. The schedule was adopted, a decision reached that will advance the club salary limit from $1,400 to $1,600, Fort William came into the fold, and John Burmeister ended the meeting by declaring that the coming season would prove the greatest in the history of the league.

Dr. D. N. Mitchell made the prediction that Fort William would lead the league in the matter of turnstile count. Burmeister declared his belief that Duluth would have one of the best years in it's history.

Charles Brautigan was in attendance at the meeting. The former Appleton, Wis., manager talked with the magnates. It is believed that Brautigan will today sign a contract to manage the Superior ball club during the 1916 season.

As previously stated, the schedule calls for the opening of the season on May 4 and its termination on Sept. 4. Following are the opening dates:

Duluth at Superior, May 4.
Superior at Duluth, May 5.
Fort William at Virginia, May 4.
Winnipeg at Fargo, May 4.
Fargo at Winnipeg, May 8.
Virginia at Fort William, May 8.

World's Title Tourney.

Chicago, March 21.—The board of control of the Western Skating association at a meeting here last night decided to hold a world's championship rolling skating tournament in this city, April 11 to 16.

CENTRAL WILL END SEASON

Superior Quint Is Confident of Defeating Locals on Wednesday.

Blake's Men Have Hard Luck But Will Play Strong Game.

The local Central high school basket ball quint will draw the curtain on its 1915 season tomorrow afternoon in the home gymnasium when the crack Superior Central five is met. The schedule had called for the game being played Friday, but due to conflicting dates, it was set for Wednesday afternoon.

The quint from across the bay made a wonderful showing in the Wisconsin state tournament, and is coming here tomorrow confident of wiping up the floor with the local aggregation. The Superior basket ball teams have met with several consecutive defeats at the hands of Duluth fives in the last several years, and they possess a burning desire to put over a victory to cover up the many humiliations. They were defeated in the first game of the season with the Duluth team several weeks ago, but their team at that time was not at its full strength, and they believe they will be able to get revenge tomorrow.

Coach Blake has experienced some hard luck with his players in the last two weeks, and they are not as strong as the first time they met Superior. The men have been working hard during the last few days, and they believe that they will be able to give the Purple and White athletes as good a game as the former one. This is the closing and most important game of the season, and the Duluthians are especially desirous of ending their season with a victory.

The Denfeld game last week was held in the afternoon, and a good crowd of students was on hand. The same plan will be carried out tomorrow, and the contest will begin at 3:30 o'clock. It is expected that the largest crowd of the season will be on hand. The Superior quint will be accompanied by a big delegation of rooters and an attempt will be made to get out a large crowd of Red and White supporters. The lineups of the two teams will be as follows:

Duluth Central—		Superior Central
Mason	f	Duff
Karon	f	(Capt.) Bradley
Fee	f
Goging (Capt.)	c	Nelson
Rosenberg	g	Fowler
Shaw	g	Kelley

BIG MEN SORELY NEEDED FOR BOAT CLUB CREWS

Ned Ten Eyck's "Dope" Books Show But Little "Beef" in the Rowing Squad—Like Jimmy, Ned Knows His Business and Has Little Use for Theory—Was the Greatest Amateur Sculler of Them All.

BY BRUCE.

Ned Ten Eyck was turning the pages of his "dope" book. "Well, now here you can see," he began. "Look at these weights. Most of the candidates are down around the 140-pound mark. Here's a big fellow, weighs 171 pounds, and here is another fellow weighing 168; but for the most part, as you can see by these weights, the boys are rather light. We've got to have some heavy men."

There are some ninety candidates out for places on the Duluth Boat club crews. The work of getting the squad members in shape has swung into real training. Go up to the rowing room in the Y. M. C. A. building and you will gain a clear and concise idea of the labor connected with turning out American championship oarsmen.

Yesterday afternoon the square and immensely powerful form of the greatest amateur oarsman that ever sat in a shell, could be seen moving up and down the rowing room, stopping here to speak to a man pulling on one of the rowing machine sweeps, or adjusting the screws, or showing a man his crude faults. The man was Ned Ten Eyck, Henley Diamond sculls winner, and the man who at the present time is working a squad of rowing candidates into championship form.

More Beef Is Needed.

"I've seen lots of big, strapping fellows on the streets," said Ten Eyck, "and their very appearance has made me want to go out with a gun and drag them into the training room. We sure do need some big men. If Duluth is going to win this year, and it's a cinch we're going to make a great try—why, some more big men will have to come out and try for places in the boats."

This fellow is a true Ten Eyck. He was the greatest amateur oarsman who ever pulled away from a stake boat. That statement is rather relative, perhaps, but the truth of it is admitted on so many sides and by so many authorities, that it has come to be almost universally accepted.

"Do you know that I weighed 228 pounds the last year I started to row," said Ned Ten Eyck. "Figure it out yourself. Wouldn't you have quit? Say, I would go out and row before breakfast and then get on the scales. I would weigh 223 pounds. I would have some breakfast and then come back after a while and weigh again before I went out. I would be back at 228. For about three weeks I could not shake any weight. Finally I got down to about 182 pounds. But it was an awful fight. Then Dad asked me if I was going to quit rowing. I said it was the surest thing he knew. We issued a challenge to anyone in the world; it was never accepted, and I quit shell racing forever."

Was Never Beaten.

At a comparatively young age and in the very height of his prime, after a sensational racing career, one that brought glory and honor to his native land, Ned Ten Eyck quit racing with the wonderful record of never having been beaten.

Meeting and talking with this huge fellow, you would never gain the idea from him just how good he was. To gain this knowledge, to come to a full appreciation of what a wonderful sculler he was, it will be necessary for you to go back over the amateur records and dope, and then it will dawn on you that Duluth is harboring in her midst surely the greatest amateur of all time and perhaps the greatest sculler of the last three decadee.

Coaching Methods Similar.

Ned looks like Jim in many ways. The similarity between the two famous sons of a famous father does not cease at this point. Ned's coaching methods are like those that have made James E. Ten Eyck one of the greatest coaches in the land. Both men are quiet. They both impress you with the thought that they surely know their business. Like Jim, Ned declares that there is but one way to row—"the right way."

Some coaches have theories; in fact, they theorize to the extent that it becomes an obsession with them and they build a system around their pet theory. Ned and Jim were raised in a shell by a father who rowed for a living. Theory with both of these boys consists only in believing that the fastest and best conditioned crew will win a boat race 99 times out of 100 starts.

Ned Has Scored Hit.

It isn't at all necessary to state how popular "young" Jim Ten Eyck is around here. Ned is going to be just as popular. He has all the ways and manners of Jim and then a distinct and compelling personality of his own. To meet this chap is to like and believe in him. If Jim Ten Eyck is confronted with one of the greatest rowing tasks of his career this season, he has associated with him a man who is going to lessen the load considerably.

But, as Ned said yesterday, material is needed to work with. Duluth has been hankering for a national regatta of its own these last few years. Now it has it. If the boat club—and that means the city—is going to make a great success of the regatta—and that means winning in the end—some real oarsmen will be needed. Right now the club stands in dire need of a lot of junior candidates. It's up to employers, to business men just as well as boat club men to unite in an effort to secure these men. Spirit must be shown at this time. The appeal should be a broad one—one that touches the patriotism of every Duluthian. Give Jim and Ned Ten Eyck men and they will surely do their part of the work of making another wonderful showing; but without men and without enthusiam, Duluth can never even approach the unprecedented showing made last year in Springfield.

SENIOR-FACULTY NINES WILL PLAY

Annual Indoor Baseball Game at Central Being Arranged.

The Central high school senior and faculty indoor baseball teams will clash in their annual battle at a date to be decided upon some time next week.

Willard Thorp, president of the senior class, in chapel challenged the faculty nine to a game and the defi was immediately accepted by P. F. Phillips. The game will be held some time next week. The battle is an annual affair at Central and is one of the biggest athletic events at the local institution. The 1913 seniors are the only under-grads to have taken the measure of the pedagogues at baseball, but the 1916 players will make a big attempt to turn the tide of defeat this year. Last year the teachers, after a bad start, finally found themselves and walked all over the 1915 team.

The seniors this year have elected "Babe" Mason as captain of the team and they will work hard to turn the trick on the pedagogues. Candidates for both nines have been practicing for some time and the game is expected to be a good one.

COAST HOCKEY TEAM DEFEATS MONTREAL SEPTET.

Montreal, Que., March 21.—The Portland, Or., hockey team defeated the Canadians last night in the first game of the 1916 series for the Stanley cup and the hockey championship of the world by a score of 2 to 0.

DETROITER POCKET BILLIARD CHAMP

Referee Charges One Game Is Fixed; Blankenship Makes Good Record.

Chicago, March 21.—W. E. Blankenship of Detroit last night won the pocket billiard tournament by defeating Ralph Greenleaf, 16 years old, of Monmouth, Ill., 100 to 72, in twenty-two innings. Blankenship made a high run of 36 and Greenleaf 23. The winner captured ten games and lost two.

A bit of a sensation was caused at the tournament in the afternoon when Referee Martin Fey declared off all bets on the outcome of the match between George Clark of Brooklyn and Bennie Allen of Kansas City. He charged that Clark was not doing his best, though the Brooklyn man, early in the game had scored a high run of 43. With the score 89 to 88 in Clark's favor he missed a shot that looked easy and left a set-up. Allen missed after a short run, and Clark missed after making two. Fey then stated that bets were off. Allen declared to the spectators he knew nothing of the match being fixed and said he considered the charge an injustice to Clark. Clark said nothing. The Kansas City player then ran out winning 100 to 91, in twenty-one innings. The result wound up their part in the meet, Allen's final standing being five won and seven lost and Clark's seven won and five lost.

Edward I. Ralph, Trenton, N. J., defeated Frank Taberski, Schenectady, 100 to 53 in thirty-five innings. Ralph had the high run at 19.

CHEMISTS DECIDE COURT DISPUTE

Declare Timber Deed Had Not Been Tampered With as Charged.

Chemical experiments performed on a timber deed which was introduced in evidence in a case pending before Judge Cant in district court to determine whether disputed portions of the document were forgeries, have resulted in an opinion from the chemists that the paper had not been tampered with.

The experiments were performed by C. A. Graves and Walter H. Benson.

The case was one in which William McKay petitioned the court for an order restraining J. W. Burguson from removing timber from the plaintiff's land. Burguson defended his action and produced a timber deed showing that the privilege of removing the timber was for five years and that the time had not elapsed.

McKay then claimed that the word "five" in the deed had originally been "three" and that there had been a chemical erasure and a substitution. Chemists were called in and the document was magnified five times and a photograph taken under the influence of ultra violet rays and a double filter. The tests showed no traces of chemical or mechanical erasures.

Judge Cant refused the injunction.

Castor Oil Fetichism

WILLIAM BRADY M.D.

There are still many old-fashioned people, not sharing our point of view upon the matter, who are doing some active propaganda work these days in behalf of castor oil. We quote from a "reprint" of a bona fide contribution to a professional periodical the following characteristic gems of logic:

"Contributing causes of suicide are melancholia and pessimism, and is (sic) prevented in a measure by the use of oleum ricini (castor oil."

But would suicide be prevented in a human being by the use of castor oil—or would it tend to produce more pessimism?

"• • • thus relieving systemic stagnation (whatever that may be), and producing true vigor with the pink of youth on the cheeks and thus clarifying the skin."

With both subjective and objective experience in the use of castor oil, we must say we have never noticed any pronounced vigor or pink of youth attributable to the medicine. As for clarifying the skin, we have never tried it on the skin, but it is excellent for clearing up the front yard—you threaten to administer a dose to a refractory youth and the yard looks just as clean as a whistle when you get home that evening.

"The putrefactive changes of different kinds of foods," continues the same writer—he is a dentist, it is fair to say—"create different kinds of bacteria (which will be startling news to scientists), which are thrown off by the circulation, and attacks (sic) the weakest point of resistance," etc.

Well, anyway, the literature sounds impressive to the layman who isn't too critical or "pessimistic."

The use of castor oil, not by physicians but by the laity, is utterly indefensible and unnecessary, or even injurious in nine out of ten cases. As a mere physic there is no more logical ground for the use of castor oil than the excerpts above quoted.

Reasons why castor oil is objectionable are many. First, it is such a horrid dose to take. However, some people do not mind taking it. Second, it always exerts a secondary binding effect upon the bowel, and therefore every dose creates a demand for more physic. Third, it has been scientifically determined that castor oil, like calomel, will cause the appearance of red blood corpuscles in the stools, which would seem to indicate that the stuff is not quite so soothing and healing as its advocates would have us believe. Because it is an oil, and apparently bland, is no criterion; croton oil and oil of turpentine (spirits of turpentine) are oils, but by no means bland in effect.

Aromatic syrup of rhubarb (U. S. P.), phenolphthalein, senna and figs, cascara, milk of magnesia, solution of citrate of magnesia and compound licorice powder will accomplish everything castor oil could be expected to do, including the pink of youth on the victim's countenance.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Manifold Uses of Calomel.

We no longer feel the same confidence in our family factor, writes a plain country woman. He prescribed one-tenth grain of calomel for our 2-year-old baby.

Answer—Well, that was a rather small dose, but mercury is nevertheless a very valuable remedy with manifold uses, and perhaps your doctor knows more than you or we about the baby's needs. A colleague prescribed castor oil for our baby, and you bet we gave it.

TAKE CREAM OF BUSINESS

Iron and Steel Companies Able to Choose Between Orders.

Quotations in Many Products Advanced; Earnings Break Records.

Optimism is the keynote in all branches of the iron and steel trade. The leading plants are recorded to be so loaded up with orders that they are accepting only the cream of the business being offered.

Quotations were advanced in another long list of products during the past week and many articles are now selling at record high prices. Plates, for example, are quoted at $3 per 100 pounds, compared with the previous high of $2.85 made in 1899. Bars are $2.75 per 100 pounds, compared with their previous high mark of $2.40 made in 1892, and beams are $2.50 per 100 pounds, as against a top figure of $2.25 also made in the same year. Another advance in sheets and all wire products is expected within the next few days. Tinplate for domestic delivery is still $8 a ton below the previous high mark set in 1900.

Prosperity General.

Under present conditions in the industry, steel manufacturers are in the midst of a period of prosperity such as has never before been witnessed in this country. Earnings of the various companies are conceded to be exceeding the most sanguine expectations of a few months ago. In the opinion of experts, net profits of the United States Steel corporation for the quarter ending July 1, next, will reach $75,000,000. The corporation is said to have very little available capacity left for the balance of the year, so that an enormous income is regarded as assured.

The statement is made that the recently organized Midvale Steel & Ordnance company is earning at the rate of $30 or more a share for its common stock and it is known that the Bethlehem Steel company's earnings are extraordinarily heavy.

$70,000,000 Russian Contract.

In the way of war business, it has been announced that the Submarine Boat corporation has signed a contract with the Russian government for the building of submarines to cost approximately $70,000,000. These boats are to be built in Russian shipyards under the license of the American company under a royalty-commission basis of 7½ per cent on their cost. This royalty will amount to $5,250,000, and it is guaranteed to the boat company by the National City bank of New York.

Orders for railroad equipment are also increasing in face of the high cost of materials and the fact that the roads are not buying any more cars for locomotives than they are absolutely forced to. It is estimated that orders placed during March will reach 16,000 cars and 600 locomotives compared with 12,500 cars and 465 locomotives ordered during February. Some of the Northwest roads are reported to be in the market for equipment and it is expected that some interesting news regarding the placing of orders will come out shortly.

Uncle Sam seems to be directing considerable attention to agriculture and to preparedness just now. Almost every civil service examination includes tests in subjects pertaining to one or both of these departments. April 4—Assistant biologist, $2,000 a year.

April 12 and 13—Scientific assistant in dairy manufacturing, $1,200 a year; computer and estimator, supervising architect's office, treasury department, $1,600 a year.

ENGLISH LOOK ON AMERICA AS HEAVEN

Discharged Youthful Soldier Writes Friend Living in Duluth.

"By comparison, you're in heaven," wrote an old "pal" of John Golden, an employe of the Commercial club, from England.

Mr. Golden is a young Englishman, and has just received a letter from a former schoolmate, Tom Bennett, who has just been discharged from the Royal Marines, as disabled for duty after a year in the Dardanelles. In writing, Bennett said that he and three chums enlisted in the Royal Marines and were among the first 200 who landed at the Dardanelles, but were soon sent to Port Said. Later they were returned to the Gallipoli peninsula and landed with two Scotch regiments, under fire. They were driven into the water after fighting for twenty-nine and a half hours, and managed to get on board the battleship Goliath, which was sunk later.

Bennett, who was a lance corporal, is only 21 years of age and is not only disabled from active service but is in bad condition for any service. He is cheerful, however, and seems to feel that he will come out all right. He is sick chiefly from the effects of intestinal fever, which has affected his head and well as leaving him in bad shape internally.

He wrote to his friend, Golden, saying that many wish they were in America, and that he sincerely wishes it.

"You don't know how well off you are, Jack," he wrote. "By comparison you are in heaven. I can't tell you much in this letter, for news must be curtailed because of the war; but if I could talk to you, I could tell you a lot about conditions."

Nujol
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
THE PURE WHITE MINERAL OIL
Approved by: Harvey W. Wiley, Director Good Housekeeping Bureau of Foods, Sanitation and Health.

CHEER UP—BRIGHTEN UP!

ANY doctor will tell you that "the blues" is frequently a symptom of constipation and its attendant evil, auto-intoxication. Take care of constipation and "the blues" will take care of itself.

But laxatives and cathartics won't cure constipation. In fact the indiscriminate drugging of the system with such remedies only aggravates the condition and tends to make constipation chronic.

Because of the evident dangers of the laxative habit, physicians everywhere are advocating the use of Nujol, a pure white mineral oil, which does not drug or physic but which acts as an intestinal lubricant.

Nujol softens the contents of the intestines and lubricates the entire tract, so promoting normal evacuations. It is purely mechanical in its action, and is not absorbed into the system. Consequently it is not habit forming and may be taken in any quantity without harm.

Write for booklet, "The Rational Treatment of Constipation." If your druggist cannot supply you, we will send you a pint bottle of Nujol prepaid to any point in the United States on receipt of 75c—money order or stamps.

FARRELL WILL ASK NEW BIDS

All Proposals for Paving East Superior Street Are Rejected.

Opinion of City Attorney Causes New Turn in Dispute.

All bids for paving Superior street from Sixteenth to Twenty-third avenue east were thrown out by the city commissioners yesterday afternoon.

This followed a heated dispute over the selection of a contractor, and with the action taken yesterday Commissioner Farrell will advertise for new bids. A resolution rejecting all bids was introduced by Commissioner Voss and adopted by the unanimous vote of the commission.

As announced in The Herald last evening, the city attorney declared that all the bids were illegal because the contractors failed to state the name of the material selected, the source and the company supplying it in submitting their proposals. An opinion to this effect from City Attorney Samuelson was read by City Clerk Borgen, and after an hour's discussion on the subject, during which time talks were made by Charles O. Baldwin, attorney for E. A. Dahl; Harry Davis, representative of the Barber Asphalt company; A. J. Leahy, vice president of the General Contracting Company of Minneapolis; Thomas S. Wood and E. P. Alexander, East Superior street property owners; E. A. Dahl, contractor, who submitted the lowest bid on the proposed improvement; J. W. Preston, an associate of Mr. Dahl, and J. H. Whitely, another property owner, all the bids were ordered rejected.

History of Dispute.

When bids were opened several weeks ago on paving East Superior street, it was found that E. A. Dahl submitted the lowest proposal for an asphalt pavement, being about $1,900 below the bid of the General Contracting Company of Minneapolis. The latter's offer was $49,473 for a Trinidad Lake asphalt, supplied by its only manufacturer, the Barber Asphalt company of Philadelphia. Mr. Dahl did not specify what asphalt he would use, but later wrote to Commissioner Farrell, declaring that Trinidad Lake asphalt would be supplied.

Shortly after, Harry Davis, representative of the Barber company, announced that his company would not furnish Trinidad Lake asphalt to Mr. Dahl, claiming that he did not have the proper equipment or experience to lay it. As a result, the works head decided to give the contract to the Minneapolis company, as East Superior street owners voted in favor of Trinidad Lake asphalt.

Last week, when Commissioner Farrell introduced a resolution awarding the contract to the Minneapolis company, Attorney Baldwin appeared in behalf of Mr. Dahl and threatened court action if the local man was refused the contract, as his bid was about $1,900 below the former company.

On Saturday morning the commissioners held a conference, at which time City Attorney Samuelson submitted an oral opinion to the effect that Mr. Dahl's bid was illegal. The attorney was instructed to prepare a written opinion for the council meeting yesterday, and on examining the proposals discovered that the bid presented by the Minneapolis company was also illegal. Both contractors failed to comply with the specifications, he said.

As a result, the commissioners unanimously adopted the resolution rejecting all bids, this authority being given the council in considering any proposal submitted to the city. Commissioner Farrell announced after the meeting that new bids will be advertised for immediately.

MILWAUKEE HOLDS PRIMARY ELECTION

Candidates for Mayor and Other Municipal Offices Being Chosen.

Milwaukee, Wis., March 21.—A primary election is being held in Milwaukee today for the nomination of candidates for mayor, treasurer, comptroller, justice of the peace, constable, alderman-at-large and local aldermen from the several wards.

In the city, Democrats and Republicans are combining as non-partisan, the Social Democratic party having a separate list of candidates. Mayor G. A. Bading and Joseph A. Carney are the non-partisan contestants for the nomination for mayor, while Daniel Hoan is being voted for by the Socialists for the nomination of chief executive of the city.

The successful nominees will go before the people at the election on April 4, when also a successor will be elected in place of Justice W. H. Timlin of the supreme court.

Five different bond issues for Milwaukee will be voted on April 4. Women will be entitled to vote on school bonds. Because of the different kinds of elections it has been decided to use paper ballots, five in number. No voting machines are being used today nor will they be used on April 4.

Delegates to national party conventions also will be elected April 4. Two sets of delegates have been placed in the field by Republicans of Wisconsin—Senator La Follette's slate and the ticket which has the backing and indorsement of the Republican state conference held in Madison. The latter candidates would go to the national gathering, if elected, as non-instructed delegates, while the La Follette delegates, if successful, would be subject to the directions of the senior senator. On the preferential ballot in Wisconsin for president will appear the names of Woodrow Wilson, Democrat, and R. M. La Follette, Republican.

The list of Democratic candidates to the national convention, which were ratified at a state conference, has no opposition among the district delegates but four delegates-at-large are to be chosen from a list of five recommended.

A judge of the superior court of Douglas county will be elected on April 4. Municipal judges will be elected in these counties: Bayfield, Brown, Dane, Douglas, Marathon and Oneida. County judges will be elected in Green Lake, Kowaunee, Pierce and Polk counties.

Electors in Manitowoc and Sheboygan counties on the same day will name a successor to Judge Michael Kirwan of the Fourth judicial district.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

SAYS GRADING IS NOT FAIR

Polk County Farm and Seed Expert Agrees With President E. F. Ladd.

Says Agitation for Change in Grain Grading May Be Election Issue.

Crookston, Minn., March 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Agitation in connection with the claim that the present system of grading wheat is not equitable, because it is not based on the milling value of wheat, the percentage of flour the various grades of wheat will make, and the value of the flour so produced, has been revived on a wholesale scale as the result of copies of Bulletin No. 114, issued by the North Dakota Experimental station at Fargo, as compiled by President E. F. Ladd of the North Dakota Agricultural college, which treats of "The Chemical and Physical Constants for Wheat and Mill Products."

The figures given cover a period of eight years, 1907-1914 inclusive, and tests were made covering samples of wheat of all grades from No. 1 hard to rejected. The value of the flour, bran, shorts and screenings from a bushel of No. 1 hard, based on average market quotations, is shown to be but very little more than the value of the flour, bran, shorts and screenings from a bushel of rejected wheat, with even less difference in value between No. 1 hard and No. 1 northern and intermediate grades.

Joseph Ball, affiliated with the Polk County Pure Seed association, and a well known figure in connection with the better farming movement and agricultural education generally, studied the bulletin thoroughly and is convinced that something is wrong. He is now busy starting a general agitation, with the result that a political issue is going to be made of the wheat grading question in the coming legislative session, in the Red River Valley counties, with efforts to make the issue statewide.

BEAUTIFUL HAIR, THICK, WAVY, FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Draw a moist cloth through hair and double its beauty at once.

Save your hair! Dandruff disappears and hair stops coming out.

Immediate?—Yes! Certain?—that's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after an application of Danderine. Also try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil, and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair. A delightful surprise awaits those whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few week's use, when you see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow, long, strong and beautiful.

You can surely have pretty, charming, lustrous hair, and lots of it, if you will just get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it as directed.—Advertisement.

BALMY WEATHER IS FAST CUTTING SNOW

North Central North Getting Rid of Much of "Beautiful."

Starkweather, N. D., March 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Two days of balmy weather has transformed North Central North Dakota. Millions of tons of snow have faded away with the result that sloughs are filling up. That an enormous hay crop is guaranteed by unusual water in the lowlands is the general belief. North Dakota still depends, to a very large extent, upon wild grasses for hay. Lakes of this section, which during the past several years have suffered from a constant decline in water level, will be filled several feet, some predicting that the old level will be reached.

SPEED DEMON IS HEAVILY FINED

Legless La Crosse Man Punished for Reckless Driving.

La Crosse, Wis., March 21.—"Happy" Si Green, legless speed demon, was fined $300 and sentenced to serve sixty days in the county jail by Judge Brindley Monday afternoon, after a jury had returned a verdict of guilty. Green was convicted of driving an automobile recklessly on Main street, breaking a big plate glass store window in his trip through the town.

The defendant at once instructed his attorney, A. T. Holmes, to set in motion the machinery of the law in an effort to appeal the case and to get him out of jail on a bond.

The fine is the largest one of its kind ever assessed in the La Crosse county court, but it is not the maximum. The limit is $500. Judge Brindley announced that he was inclined not to fine the young man the maximum amount because of some mitigating circumstances in his favor.

The trial was heard by a crowded courtroom.

KAPLAN PLANS BUILDING.

Former Duluthian to Erect Substantial Bemidji Structure.

Bemidji, Minn., March 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—The construction of a modern two-story glass block to be used as a department store by Morris Kaplan, formerly of Duluth, will begin soon. The building will be erected on the site of the old Rex hotel building on Minnesota avenue and Second street. The Rex hotel, which was a three-story brick building, was destroyed by fire three years ago and since then the ruins have remained, although on several occasions it has been suggested that they be removed. Mr. Kaplan will own the building and he has already purchased the site. The dimensions of the building will be 140 by 50 feet and will include a full basement besides the two glass stories. The entire building will be used for store purposes, and Mr. Kaplan believes that he will also have to erect another warehouse in addition to the ones he is now using in the near future. The contract for the building will be let in about two weeks.

"Charming Simplicity Marks Inexpensive Beach Dresses in Favor at Palm Beach"

So says Women's Wear.

Continuing, it says, Even the wealthiest women wear dainty inexpensive frocks of handkerchief linen, marquisette, voile or dimity—some combining two colors of plain voile.

Broad striped voiles with skirt yokes showing solid colors and plaits which spring below the hips to show the stripes. Fischus of organdy or mull trimmed with plaitings are also new ideas.

A Striking Model

One of the prettiest frocks of the season boasts of two colors of voile in its make-up. The upper part of the skirt is cut as a deep yoke with four white and deep tabs, front, sides and back. The deep hem is of Holland blue and falls with many ripples at the hem.

An old-fashioned waist of white has a round neck with circular piece of blue, two inches wide to finish. This fastens with one white covered button at the neck, slightly to the left side. The long flowing sleeves have a band of the blue to finish. The waist line is followed by a large cable cord covered in blue, ending in a half dozen ball tassels made of the same and attached on linen threads.

Another Suggestion

Broad stripes are exceptionally smart with skirts plaited and held to form a solid color yoke. The skirt plaits spring below the hips showing the under stripe.

SPRING TONICS

By DR. SAMUEL G. DIXON, Commissioner of Health for Pennsylvania.

With the honk of the wild geese flying northward the patent medicine and home remedy manufacturers seem inspired anew and there follows a wave of spring tonic advertisements.

The tonic which the vast majority of individuals need at this period of the year is fresh air, exercise and a simpler diet. Owing to weather conditions many of our activities are restricted in the winter time. There is also a tendency to eat excessively of meat and fatty foods. As a result when the spring arrives with its warm days many of us are like a furnace that has been so choked with fuel that it doesn't draw well.

You cannot buy relief from these conditions at a dollar a bottle. Medicine will not make up for over eating and under exercise. The high death rate which almost invariably prevails at this season of the year from pneumonia, tuberculosis and other respiratory diseases is largely due to the reduced physical resistance of individuals, which makes them particularly sensitive when the sudden changes of temperature occur which are common at this time of the year. Old people are susceptible as they are housed more closely during the winter time than young folks.

Let your spring tonic prescription read something as follows:

1—Eat meat but once a day and sparingly.

2—Those not under the doctor's care should take a glass of water before retiring for the night and one an hour before breakfast.

3—Get all the fresh air possible.

4—Sleep with your windows open.

5—See that your clothing is heavy enough to protect you against sudden changes of weather.

6—Walk in the open air five or six miles a day.

The Berlin Red Cross society has established many eating rooms in which dinners may be obtained for very little money. At the outbreak of the war 20,000 persons ate in these halls daily, but that number has now been reduced to about 1,500.

BUILDING UP STOCK MARKET

Large Interests Committed to Constructive Side of Business.

Financiers Regard America's Present Export Supremacy as Permanent.

Eastern brokers are of the opinion that the large interests of the country are heavily committed to the constructive side of the stock markets and are using their influence to advance quotations above their present levels.

That the industrial companies are at present showing the largest earnings in their histories and that they have orders standing on their books sufficient to assure operations on a capacity basis for several months ahead, is being taken into considerations. It is believed that if the campaign for preparedness, as outlined by the administration at Washington, is carried out, such concerns as the Bethlehem and Crucible steel corporations, and the Baldwin and American locomotive companies will be kept busy for some time to come in taking care of government orders in addition to those coming from the allies for munitions.

Good Time for Profit Taking.

Concerning the outlook, Benskorf, Lyon & Co., New York brokers, make the following comment in their financial letter of recent date:

"The technical condition of the stock market and manipulative influences may have a temporary effect on values for a time but ultimately the value of a stock reches a level to correspond proportiontely to the earning of that issue. Assuming this conclusion is correct, as it always has been in the past, the industrial issues of this country should all sell very much higher than the quotations recorded at the present time. Past performances have taught us that after all sharp upturns of several points, prices usually recede at least part of the advance attained. This being the usual procedure of Wall street manipulation, it might be prudent from a speculative point of view to take profits on at least a portion of your holdings with the idea of repurchasing them at lower figures. By following this rule you are always prepared to take advantage of any sharp recession in values, caused either by manipulation or unfavorable developments.

America Supreme.

"The same great eagerness for progress that built up Great Britain's foreign trade two centuries ago is sweeping through this country now. The great European war has done much to develop and expand our trade with the nations of the entire world. The United States has been the country that not only possessed the resources but has grasped the opportunity with the same energy that has been responsible for the wonderful development in America during the last fifty years. We have now demonstrated to all other nations our ability to supply them with their necessities for maintenance and development and the advantage we have gained while Europe has been engaged in war will be maintained. It places us as the foremost export country of the world. It will give us in the future, a market for our products throughout the entire universe and will stimulate an increased production in the United States of our farm and manufactured products, greater by far than we have ever had. This is one of the most important factors in the entire situation and one which will have a lasting influence on the expansion and development of our resources in the future for many years to come."

SOME HAVE IT THRUST ON 'EM.

Philadelphia Public Ledger: "You remember selling me some hair restorer when I called the other day to get shaved, you hoary-headed old thief?" roared the indignant customer. "You sold it under false pretenses, sir. You said it would restore my head to its original condition."

"Well, didn't it work?" asked the barber.

Work? No. It's taken off what little hair I used to have, and I am as bald as the pavement now."

"That's quite right, sir. No false pretense about that. I said it would restore your head to its original condition, and you know, sir, most of us are born bald."

The Treatment of Influenza or La Grippe

It is quite refreshing these days to read of a clearly defined treatment for Influenza or La Grippe. In an article in the "Lancet-Clinic," Dr. James Bell, of New York City, says he is convinced that too much medication is both unnecessary and injurious.

When called to a case of la grippe, the patient is usually seen when the fever is present, as the chill which occasionally ushers in the disease, has practically passed away. Dr. Bell then orders that the bowels be opened freely with salts, "Actolds" or citrate of magnesia. For the high fever, severe headache, pain and general soreness, one anti-kamnia tablet every three hours is quickly followed by complete relief. Ask for A-K Tablets. They are also unexcelled for headache, neuralgia and all pains.

ON THE IRON RANGES

TWO HARBORS NEW DOCK TO BE FINE

Two Harbors, Minn., March 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—The work on the new steel and concrete ore dock No. 2, being constructed for the Iron Range Railroad company, is progressing very rapidly since the favorable weather set in. The old ore dock No. 2, which had to be torn down in order to make room for the new dock, is razed with the exception of the foundation, which will be taken out later. The new dock will be the largest of any of the Iron Range docks. It will have 228 pockets, with a total storage capacity of 70,000 tons. There will be no wood in the dock proper, it being constructed entirely of steel and concrete, and will cost approximately $1,500,000. It will be equipped with electric spout hoists, will have the latest designed doors and will be one of the best designed ore docks in the world. The concrete foundation and timber approach is being constructed by Barnett & Record company, and the steel work will be done by the American Bridge company.

Completed By Fall.

It is expected that the new dock will be entirely completed next fall and the dock will be in use for a short period during the latter part of the 1916 ore shipping season.

The work on the reconstruction of ore dock No. 6 is being pushed with all possible speed in order that it will be ready for use as soon as the ore season opens up. The work is being done by the American Bridge company, which has a large crew of iron workers employed on the job. An early opening of navigation is expected this spring, and the Iron Range is anxious to have all its equipment in shape.

SALOON REDUCTION MEETING IS FUTILE

Practically Nothing Accomplished Beyond Starting Referendum Talk.

Virginia, Minn., March 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—Chestnut street property owners were in the majority at a meeting of saloon keepers called at the city hall yesterday afternoon by Alderman E. F. Murray to discuss the pending city ordinance limiting the number of licensed saloons in this city to twenty-five. Only five of Virginia's forty-eight saloon keepers attended the meeting. Alderman Murray was freely grilled, openly told that he was a knocker and the meeting accomplished nothing toward an intelligent decision of the purpose for which it was called.

The property owners were represented by Attorney M. H. McMahon who said the proposition to reduce the number of saloons to twenty-five had nothing to recommend it as either an economic or a moral issue, that there would be just as much drunkenness with twenty-five saloons as with forty-eight, which disposed of the moral phase of the issue and that the argument that it would decrease the price of rents in the business district was not worthy of serious consideration.

Four Saloons Making Anything.

Sixtus Lindahl, a saloon keeper, said that of the city's forty-eight saloons, only four were making money; twenty were making a living, and twenty-four running behind. He declared he favored the reduction. Duncan Robertson, another saloon keeper, stated that he favored the proposed ordinance because "there were too many saloons in Virginia to make a living." Some property owners worked on Alderman Murray before the meeting was called to order and heckled him while it was in progress. There was considerable heat at the adjournment and it was freely declared at the adjournment by those interested in the success of the ordinance that the brewing companies had "packed" it in their interests. During the course of the debate it was developed that one brewing company had more than $4,000 due from six saloon keepers on the street which it could not collect, while another retail liquor dealer, who went out of business last week, had been unable to discharge an obligation of more than $300 to one brewing concern.

S. N. Jerreisati, a local business man, advocated that the whole question be submitted to the people. He openly expressed his sympathy for the retail liquor dealers, who, he said, were placed between upper and nether millstones. Sixtus Lindahl's attention was called to the fact that adjoining his place of business there was now one empty store building. Lindahl retorted with the statement that the landlord was offering to rent it for $50 a month, while for his saloon business he demanded $150.

Louis Osborne said he would vote to see Virginia dry tomorrow, but was opposed to cutting the licenses to twenty-five. He did not think such a course would accomplish anything worth while in solving the real problem.

Referendum Talk Rife.

Talk of a referendum election on the question is rife, and it is very probable one will be held and that the basis will be ten saloons instead of twenty-five as is proposed by Alderman Murray's ordinance. The present agitation has had the effect of making the whole question of saloon regulation a very live local issue.

Robert Thorpe, a local saloon keeper, advocated strict law enforcement and the elimination of the blind pigs as the way to begin the regulation of the saloon business. Attorney Louis Osborne stated in the meeting that a friend of his had recently informed him that he had no trouble in getting all he wanted to drink in Virginia on Sunday. He was of the opinion the lid was not very firmly affixed, he said.

Talk of a referendum on the whole question is rife over the city, some bitterness is being developed in the fight and it seems certain it will be an issue before the people of the city in a short time.

BOAT SITUATION CHIEF PROBLEM

With Plenty of Vessels Carrying Ore, Hibbing Will Boom.

Hibbing, Minn., March 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—If plenty of boats are available for hauling ore after the shipping season begins, about April 15, local mining men predict this will be the banner shipping year from the Hibbing district. It is feared, however, that many boats, instead of hauling ore from the start will be used for grain until July 1.

One independent mining company operating in this district turned down a 300,000-ton order for ore at very attractive figures because of the shortage of boats.

With the exception of the boat situation the outlook for the coming season has never been brighter.

Look for Record Breaker.

With proper hauling facilities the output from the Hibbing mines, according to indications would exceed the largest in the village's history. In spite of existing conditions it is believed that the shipments this coming season will equal those of 1911, Hibbing's "fat" year.

Crews at all of the mines in this district are being increased each week now. When navigation opens at least 1,000 more men will be employed by the several operators in this alone.

CLINTON FARMERS' CLUB MEETING

Eveleth People Attend and Pertinent Subjects Are Discussed.

Eveleth, Minn., March 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—A meeting of the Clinton Farmers' club Sunday afternoon at the Finnish hall four miles west of Iron Junction, was attended by members of the club and their families to the number of forty and by County Agricultural Agent Larson and several Evelethians.

Mr. Larson talked on the needs of a new country, touching especially on the importance of livestock as a means of livelihood for the settlers, its value in "civilizing" the soil and in making Minnesota farms perpetual producers; the importance of rotation of crops and advised three-year rotation of clover, roots and grain for this section.

C. B. Hoel, cashier of the Miners National bank of Eveleth, outlined a plan which he has under consideration for assisting the settlers in stocking their places with dairy cows.

L. O. Magee of the Eveleth News informed the club that the Eveleth Commercial club is planning a farmers' day bigger and better than the one held last fall for the coming season and that the Eveleth creamery will be in a position to receive cream in a few weeks.

Solomon Sax of Eveleth, owner of a farm two miles from the hall, spoke on the necessity of better draining in the section, the value of the telephone in rural communities, the importance of establishing a credit at the banks by doing business through the banks.

Coffee and cake were served by the ladies of the club.

NO DECISION AS TO VIRGINIA SCHOOL

Virginia, Minn., March 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—The board of education, after three hours' deliberation, last night failed to reach a choice in its selection of plans for additions to the city's present school housing facilities. After discussion extending over the greater part of the meeting the board adopted a resolution asking State Inspector of School Buildings S. A. Challman to meet with the board next Monday evening and go over the plans with the members. Challman is the man who declared the third floor of the Roosevelt was unfit for school purposes and whose decision has caused the members much perplexity in deciding the best course to pursue. It is probable some definite decision will be reached regarding the new school building at the meeting of the board which he attends.

Gilbert, Minn., March 21.—The new village hall is rapidly nearing completion, the remaining work being the finishing of interior decorations. The council will meet April 4 and arrange for the formal dedication of the structure. The annual appointments will then be made. As Dr. Barrett was re-elected village president and Trustee Mike Kohler continues in office, it is not anticipated there will be many changes in appointments.

EARLY CLOSING IDEA GROWS IN HIBBING

Hibbing, Minn., March 21.—Local furniture dealers have practically reached an agreement to observe the 6 o'clock closing order and will close every evening in the week with the exception of Saturday and from the 12th to the 20th of each month at 6:30 o'clock.

It is expected that the campaign started by the Commercial club to have merchants comply with the closing order will be soon bearing fruit and within a few weeks clerks will have an opportunity of having their evenings to themselves.

LOGGING TRAIN OFF TRACK AT CHISHOLM

Engine and Seven Cars of Swan Lake Logging Company Ditched.

Chisholm, Minn., March 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—A train without air equipment and a railroad frog choked with ice caused a serious wreck on the Swan River Logging company's line, where the tracks cross First avenue on the north side of the village, about 8:30 o'clock a. m. Monday.

The train, consisting of locomotive No. 10 and fifty trucks loaded with logs, in charge of Henry Shores, conductor, was entering the village and had slowed down on the grade expecting to make the usual stop at First avenue. When crossing at Ash street the pony trucks of the locomotive jumped the rails and the momentum of the moving train accelerated by the heavy load and the grade made it impossible with no air equipment, except that on the locomotive, to bring the train under control. Midway between Ash street and First avenue, where a spur branches off from the main line, the drivers of the locomotive left the rails and pushed onward by the weight of the train behind it, the locomotive skidded the bank of the cut for a distance of about 150 feet until the cut was cleared when the locomotive turned over on its side and seven of the loaded cars plied up around it.

Engineer Sticks to Post.

It is considered a miracle that the train crew, who waited until the cut was cleared before jumping, were not killed or seriously injured. James Miller, engineer, is credited with remaining at his post until the locomotive turned over.

Officials of the logging company at the local office refused to talk about the wreck and W. C. Smith, general manager, referred to the accident as a "common occurrence" in railroading.

The accident, which temporarily ties up traffic on the logging line, it is expected, will seriously delay the operations of the crews in the camps.

Virginia basket ball fans are confident the local five has a fine chance to win the state championship. Heritage, Iver Frasa, W. H. Eaton, Andrew Hawkinson, H. J. Scharr, Otto A. Stangel, Harry Gillispie and Andrew Nordstadt. The Virginia Commercial club interested itself in getting up the party. The special car will bear an exhibit of pictures of Virginia schools and public buildings and will be elaborately placarded with advertising matter about Virginia. Interest in the city is keen in the outcome of the state championship games at Northfield and it is generally believed the local quint will be one of the strongest contenders at Northfield and has a fine chance to bring home the state championship banner.

What Thin Folks Should Do To Gain Weight

Good Advice for Thin, Undeveloped Men and Women.

Thousands of people suffer from excessive thinness, weak nerves and feeble stomach who, having tried advertised flesh-makers, food-fads, physical culture stunts and rub-on creams, resign themselves to life-long skinniness and think nothing will make them fat. Yet their case is not hopeless. A recently discovered combination of assimilative agents has made fat grow after years of thinness, and it is also unequaled, judging from reports, for repairing the waste of sickness or faulty digestion and for strengthening the nerves. This remarkable preparation is called Sargol. Six strength-giving, fat-producing assimilative elements of acknowledged merit have been combined in this preparation, which is endorsed and used by prominent people everywhere. It is absolutely harmless, inexpensive and efficient.

A few weeks' systematic use of Sargol should go far to produce flesh and strength by correcting faults of digestion and by supplying nourishing fats to the blood. If not, every druggist who sells it is authorized to return the purchase price. Increased nourishment is obtained from the food eaten, and the additional fats that thin people need are thus provided. Boyce Drug store and other leading druggists supply Sargol and say there is a large demand for it.

While this new preparation has from reports given splendid results as a nerve tonic and vitalizer, its use is not recommended to nervous people unless they wish to gain at least ten pounds of flesh.

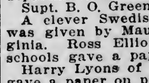
SNOW



The weather man said "partly cloudy" in his prediction. He apparently could have gone the whole way, so far as conditions this morning are concerned. That it is warmer is true, and the melting is still in progress, for which thanks be. The disappearance of the snow and ice is a consummation devoutly to be wished, and it cannot go too fast for Duluthians. Considerable damage was done yesterday. Duluthians would even gracefully stand the affliction of rain to add to the slop, if it would only wash the snow and ice away.

A year ago today was beautiful. The sun rose this morning at 6:07 and will set this evening at 6:23, giving twelve hours and sixteen minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"The barometric depression overlying the Rocky mountains has caused snow or rain in the Northwest and in districts west of the Rocky mountains. Rather general precipitation (mostly snow) occurred during Monday or last night from the Mississippi valley eastward to the Atlantic coast. Temperatures have fallen over Manitoba, Eastern North Dakota and west of the Rocky mountains, elsewhere the temperature has generally risen."

CONTRACTS TO LAY WALKS

Proposals for 119 Cement and Fifty-Three Plank Jobs Considered.

Hilliard and Nyhus Given Work; Minnesota Avenue Ordered Paved.

Three contracts for laying 119 cement and 53 plank walks during 1916 were considered by the city commissioners yesterday afternoon.

E. F. Hilliard was awarded the contract to lay the cement walks east of Twelfth avenue west and on Park Point on his bid of $11,320, and H. O. Nyhus the contract to lay the cement walks west of Twelfth avenue on his bid of $5,496.50. A resolution awarding Mr. Nyhus the contract to lay all the planks in the city on his bid of $12,934, was introduced by Commissioner Farrell and will come up for action at the meeting next Monday. The sidewalks to be laid this year were designated by the commissioners two weeks ago.

Minnesota avenue was ordered paved from the end of the present pavement at Thirty-eighth to the end of the car line at Forty-third street. The roadway will be improved with concrete to a width of twenty-one feet between Thirty-eighth and Thirty-ninth avenues and fifteen feet the remainder of the distance, the engineer's estimate being $11,821. A delegation from the Park Point Improvement club protested against a 15-foot pavement, urging that the road be improved to a width of 30 feet, but Commissioner Farrell explained that part of the street is under water and that the construction of a breakwater at a heavy expense would be necessary to prevent the water from washing a wider pavement.

Gas and water extensions were ordered in Piedmont avenue, from Forrest avenue to Bay View terrace, while petitions were presented to the commissioners for sanitary sewers in Livingston street, from Ladd's court to the south line of Waverly Park; in Ninety-seventh avenue west, from Prescott street to Perry street; in Ninety-fifth avenue west, from Perry street to Goodhue street; in Fourth alley, from Twenty-ninth avenue east to lot 6, block 3, Sterling division, and in Victoria street, from Columbus avenue, to lot 15, block 4, Brookline division.

The street railway company was authorized to haul 250 cubic yards of ice and snow from Superior street on their bid of 38 cents a yard.

C. O. White & Co., were awarded the contract to haul pipe for the water and light department on their bid of $2,615.

CLOQUET'S SNOW IS RAPIDLY DISAPPEARING

Cloquet, Minn., March 21.—(Special to The Herald.)—As a result of the thaw yesterday water flowed down the temporary gutters which the city made in the immense snow banks and the sewer pipes were unable to carry the large volume of water that came to them in many places.

Anticipating trouble if the snow went rapidly, Street Commissioner Archie Campbell, has had extra men opening up the gutters for some time past, and several miles of preparation has been accomplished, which gave them material aid in the handling of the water yesterday. With two or three days more thawing, sleighing on the main streets will be a thing of the past, for this season, as the long sustained cold weather, has left the dirt of several months on top of the snow, and heavy hauling now is done with difficulty.

NORTH DAKOTANS IN PRIMARY ELECTION

Casting Ballots to Elect Delegates to Each National Convention.

Fargo, N. D., March 21.—North Dakota voters today cast their ballots in the state presidential preference primary to elect six delegates each to the Republican national convention in Chicago and the Democratic national convention in St. Louis. Although lacking in the interest aroused by the La Follette-Roosevelt fight in North Dakota four years ago, it was indicated that a fairly representative vote would be polled in today's primary election.

The Non-partisan league, a voting organization of farmers, has indorsed the Democratic candidates whom they announced are pledged to no presidential candidate and ten Republicans who are pledged to United States Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin. Nearly all the candidates indorsed are mentioned as active in the affairs of the Equity Co-operative association.

WHEAT WEAK AT THE CLOSE

Market Declines at Finish on Realizing Sales By Traders.

Flaxseed Slumps Sharply With Persistent Selling; Crushers Holding Back.

Duluth Board of Trade, March 21.—The market was weak at the close on a wave of realizing sales. Durum held strong, however, on reported export inquiry.

May wheat closed ⅜c off and July ½c off.

May durum closed 1⅜c up, and July ⅝c up.

Oats closed unchanged at 40¾@41⅜c for on the track; rye unchanged at 88@90c, and barley unchanged at from 61c to 69c for on the track.

At Winipeg, May oats closed ¼c off at 42⅞c bid.

At St. Louis, May wheat closed at $1.06, and July at $1.05.

At Kansas City, May wheat closed at $1.01¼, and July at $1.01⅞.

Puts on Minneapolis May wheat closed at $1.08¾ asked, and calls at $1.11⅝ bid.

The wheat market was a nervous proposition today. After selling off over 1c around the opening, owing to the failure of Liverpool to follow yesterday's advances in the American markets, marked strength developed on the appearance of bullish crop reports from over the winter wheat territory. It appeared to be the general opinion of experts that the winter crop is starting in with a very poor promise and that the abandoned acreage will be larger than in any year since 1912, when the soft wheat crop was largely a failure.

Reports also came along to the effect that export sales were put through of about 1,400,000 bu of spring wheat during the last couple days. Operators were interested in advices that the boat rate on wheat from the Atlantic seaboard to the Bristol channel has been reduced 7½c during the past week and it is predicted that further reductions will be reported.

While receipts at Duluth are running light at present, owing to routings this way not being encouraged as a result of the rapid filling up of the elevators, arrivals on the other Northwest markets are heavier. At Minneapolis today wheat receipts came to 376 cars against 178 last year. At Winnipeg they had 1,119 cars against 280 last year and at Chicago there were 591 cars, compared with 169 a year ago. Receipts of bonded grain at this point are, however, being well maintained, 152 cars of wheat being reported today. With the assurance of more cars to move grain east, elevator men are sanguine of being able to handle a fair tonnage of Canadian grain during the next couple of weeks.

Wheat was in demand by millers on the local market today and the cash basis was unchanged at from ½c under to 2c over the May price. Cash No. 1 durum sold at ½c under May.

May wheat opened 1⅛c off at $1.10½ and advanced to $1.12⅛ at the noon hour. The opening figures were the lowest of the session. July opened ⅝c off at $1.11½ and advanced 1c.

Durum was strong with rumors of export inquiry current. May durum opened ⅝c off at $1.05 and advanced to $1.07¼. July opened ½c off at $1.05½ and advanced to $1.08.

Flaxseed Slumps.

Flaxseed was again weak, with crushers holding back awaiting the unfolding of market conditions. Reports from London to the affect that dealers there are fearing demoralization in the oil trade were given some consideration. The reduction in the ocean freight rates from Argentina and predictions of larger shipments from there here, was a factor.

There were attempts to liquidate during the session and with crushers only buying at the low spots the market sagged steadily.

May flax opened ½c off at $2.27, and closed 2½c off at $2.25. July opened ½c off at $2.27, and closed 2⅜c off at $2.24⅜.

At Winnipeg, May flax closed 3¾c off at $2.03.

At Buenos Aires, flax closed 1⅛c at $2.66⅛.

MARKET GOSSIP.

B. W. Snow has issued a moderately bullish crop statement in which he says: "Taking winter wheat as a whole, it is too early to make definite figures of either acreage loss, or of condition, but there is ample evidence that the crop will start with poor promise and that the abandoned acreage will be larger than in any year since 1912, when the soft wheat crop was largely a failure."

At Minneapolis, there was no change in cash wheat. Good blue stem wheat was in ready demand, while lower grades were rather hard to sell. Blue stem No. 1 northern sold ½c to 4½c over May, and velvet chaff at ½c to 1c over. Flour trade was rather light. Open orders totaled well, but shipping directions held moderate.

World's visible supply estimate—Wheat, today, 237,114,000 bu, last year, 150,146,000 bu, increase, 2,622,000 bu; corn supplies increased 1,194,000 bu, and oats increased 336,000 bu in the week.

* * *

Regarding flaxseed, Broomhall cabled: "Buenos Aires closed easy and Rosario weak with good export demand. London was easy with demand apathetic as crushers are withholding owing to uneasiness in oil. India is offering freely and lower."

* * *

Foreign crop summary—

Russia—It is cold. Acreage is reduced with growth thin. Stocks are light.

Argentina—Weather is unfavorable. Receipts are moderate and shipments disappointing.

Australia—Weather is fine. Receipts are fair. Stocks are accumulating slowly. Government has agreed to advance an additional 6d to farmers to induce freer offers.

France—About 1,500,000 acres was not planted to winter wheat in the autumn and owing to lack of seed the spring area will suffer.

India—Weather is favorable for harvesting.

Russells' News, New York, said: "Large government buyers were in the market early for wheat, but it was said that the early declines did not extend far enough to permit of business. There was decidedly less foreign buying of wheat futures this morning."

* * *

European visible wheat, 81,600,000 bu against 75,288,000 bu last week. Argentine freight rate to Liverpool is 120 shillings, or a decline of 17s since Friday.

* * *

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool: "Wheat market was very steady at the opening, being influenced by Chicago, but it later eased with free local offers. Spot market was dull, unchanged with the demand quiet. Cargo market was weak, winters, 1 shilling lower; Manitobas, 1s 3d, and Plates, 6d lower. Increase in the visible and decline in Argentine freights with expectations of continued liberal arrivals, caused pressure. Traders are nervous."

* * *

A New York wire said: "The export business in wheat last Saturday and yesterday was of large volume, the total amounting to 1,400,000 bu, including about 1,000,000 bu durum wheat at the opening of navigation for the Dutch government. The reported sale of a line of flour was thought to be partly a confusion with the report that bids would be opened today by the Dutch government for 150,000 barrels off flour."

Regarding the above, Duluth grain men deny any knowledge of recent sales of durum to go from here. Sales may, however, have been made from stocks at Buffalo.

A. Robbie, manager of the Cavalier Milling company, Cavalier, N. D., was a visitor on the Duluth board of trade today. He said that large quantities of wheat are still held by farmers in Western North Dakota and that on account of bad roads deliveries cannot be expected to any extent until after spring seeding has been completed. In the Red River valley farmers were favored with good weather last fall, and were able to complete their plowing. In the western portions of North Dakota and through Montana, very little fall plowing was done, and prospects now are for a considerable reduction in the acreage sown to wheat this spring.

"We had more snow in our part of the country than in several years, and as it is hanging on, farm work is likely to be backward this spring," said Mr. Robbie. He averred that North Dakota farmers are now going in extensively for stock and hog raising and with the good prices being obtained, they are generally getting into a strong financial position.

CHICAGO MARKET.

Chicago, March 21.—Wheat underwent a fresh decline today, influenced to a considerable degree by a decided increase in the European visible supply total. Lower freight rates on the ocean, both from the United States and from Argentina, counted also against the bulls. In addition there were reports from Missouri telling of fields greening up that heretofore were in doubtful condition. Opening prices ranged from ¾c to 1⅛c lower, with May at $1.08⅛@1.09 and July at $1.07@1.07⅝, but were followed by a slight rally.

Later a temporary upturn took place, aided by a better inquiry for export wheat, and by statements that domestic winter wheat would start this season with poor promise and that abandoned acreage would be larger than in any year since 1912. The close nevertheless was weak, ¼ to ⅜@⅛c net lower, with May $1.08⅞@1.09 and July, $1.07¾@1.07⅞.

Corn showed weakness in sympathy with wheat. Besides the bears made much of the fact that the stock of corn in Chicago is now more than 10,000,000 bu. After opening ¼c off to ⅛c up, the market sagged moderately all around.

The market subsequently hardened as a result of gossip that the Dutch government was bidding for corn at the United States seaboard. The close was unsettled at ⅛ to ¼@⅜c net advance.

Oats gave way like other cereals. There were predictions that the acreage of oats this season would be largely increased.

Higher prices on hogs tended to lift provisions. The market appeared further to be responsive to the record-breaking advance in the value of cottonseed oil.

Wheat—No. 2 red, $1.12½; No. 3 red, $1.06¾@1.09¾; No. 2 hard, nominal; No. 3 hard, $1.05@1.09⅝. Corn—No. 2 yellow, 76½@77½c; No. 4 yellow, 69½@71c; No. 4 white, 70½c. WAR SHARES HAVE DECLINE

Prices Start With Recoveries But Crumble in Final Hour.

Trading Stagnant in the Afternoon and Close Is Heavy.

New York, March 21.—Stocks made general and very substantial recoveries at today's opening from the weakness of yesterday's close. War issues, which suffered most at that time in connection with peace rumors, scored initial gains of 1 to 2 points, in some instances recording greater gains. Initial offerings of Crucible Steel, Westinghouse, Baldwin Locomotive, Anaconda Copper and Mexican Petroleum were in blocks of 1,000 to 1,500 shares, these being freely absorbed. Allied specialties, including Industrial Alcohol, Mercantile preferred, American Smelting and American Zinc rose 1½ to 4 points. Rails were firm but inactive.

Profit-taking exercised the usual effect in the stock market today, munitions and semi-war shares yielding one to two points, and Bethlehem Steel losing 15 at 505. Dealings diminished materially and before the mid-day the market was undergoing a process of assimilation. United States Steel and Marine preferred were among the prominent stocks that more than maintained early levels and with Crucible, the Locomotives, Westinghouse and Mexican Petroleum, made up the bulk of the forenoon's operations. Weakness of German exchange at the new low rate of 71 7-16 and strength of Anglo-French 5s were accepted as significant of foreign conditions. Bonds were irregular.

Trading became stagnant in the afternoon with no marked change of prices except in Tennessee Copper. That stock fell almost 4 points on reports of the destruction of one of the company's principal plants.

War shares crumbled again in the final hour with declines in representative issues. The close was heavy.

CRUDE OIL AT HIGHEST

New Record Made for Steady Quotation; Brief Rise in 1895.

Climb Since Last August Is Phenomenal; Greatest Production Known.

Quotations in Pennsylvania crude oil at $2.60 a barrel are now the highest in more than twenty years. Oil sold at $2.65 on April 18, 1895, but its price dropped 25 cents the following day so that the present figure as a steady proposition, is the highest on record.

The climb in the crude oil market since last August is regarded in trade circles as the most phenomenal ever seen. The first general advance of 10 cents a barrel in Eastern crude oil occurred on Aug. 13, with Pennsylvania going to $1.45. Kansas and Oklahoma producers then led the way with an adv
